Wets and Drys Both Oppose State Beer Bill

"Analysis of the vote which sent Governor Horner's beer tax bill down to defeat in the house last week shows that the governor, himself, 'was to blame' according to his opponents. "Even the democrats would not grant his demand for greater political power over the beer traffic than was ever demanded by any previous governor, even in the days when the liquor interests had a powerful voice in government," they added.

Both the Association Opposed to Prohibition and the Anti-Saloon League characterized the Horner beer bill as a "vicious piece of legislation."

Early in the debate over the beer bill the governor's spokesmen said he wanted "a hammer which he could hold over the heads of all beer sellers." That was enough to damn the bill. While Gov. Horner said he wanted the "hammer" to enforce regulations, the representatives were quick to see that the same "hammer" could be used to knock every beer seller into line at election time.

Gov. Horner's absolute refusal to permit a local option clause to be written into the bill and the high tax he demanded were also contributing factors which made it possible for the republicans, led by Hops, Schnackenberg, McCarthy, Leroy Green and Lyons, to be assisted by a few democrats, to administer a crushing rebuke to the governor.
