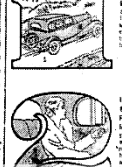
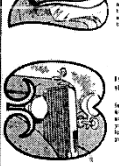
Five points of satisfaction quickly explain
Why Pontiac Outsells
all other cars in its price range



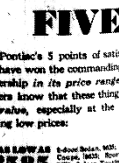
1 Its Straight Eight Engine Develops 77 horsepower—Smooth, effortless, so fast miles per hour.



2 Its Fisher Body and Fisher Ventilation—supreme safety and comfort—unequaled by individually built fine cars directly.

3 Its Up-to-the-Minute Style is skillfully creative—as surmounting and as lasting as fine clothes.

4 Its Ample Size and Weight mean greater safety, smoother roadability—long Buick wheelbase gives you plenty of room, the comfortable arm-chair performance.



5 Its Speed Intelligent as we use the word, it means quick acceleration to 50 miles an hour in 10 gallon—not two Pontiac owners.

If you pay even as much as Pontiac's low prices, be sure that you—

Close-Up Movies Shown Bird Club Members of Golden Eagles in Wild

The public lecture and motion picture program of the Barrington Field Club at the Methodist church Friday evening, was well attended and proved a delight to all.

The speaker of the evening, A. M. Brooks, of the Chicago academy of science, was introduced by the president, Mrs. Robert Work. Mr. Brooks gave a very fine resume of motion pictures of "In the Haunts of the Golden Eagle," nature pictures taken in cooperation with the assistance of the rangers of the Colorado Natural History museum in Denver. The photographing of the golden eagle at home, illustrates the difficulties encountered in such work.

The pictures are unique since they show first and only motion pictures secured of the golden eagle in its habitat. The nest was near the top of a tall cliff on one of the buttes of the western Colorado, those strange prehistoric islands found in some of the western states. To secure the pictures, a cameraman wear the tog of a cowboy had to be chosen and a rock like fortress built to conceal the camera from all sides and then so, the trifling whir of the camera and sight of the tiny lens, presumably expected, was sufficient to frighten the birds away. Much patience was spent by each of the two men in this rock hound, during the days and nights they were forced together at each visit to the nest.

A number of species of birds were photographed some almost as noble and as the eagles; such as the osprey, fallcon and ferruginous roughlegged hawk, neither scared by motion pictures nor cameras previously. In the scenery, too, are the mountain plateau and the McCown's sonsgsut, a cousin-like bird of the western highlands and the far north. Other birds worthy of special note, though not quite as stalwart, are the great horned owl, song-eared owl, sparrow hawk hunting and the ringnaun, a western cousin of the great blue sometimes loudly called crane, but hardly boast, and perhaps as much respected as any of the birds, his grotesque cousin, the prairie raptor.

The program opened with music: "Song of the Desert" sung by J. F. Shepherd, "Beauvais" by George Cameron, and a trio from Saint Saens "Samson and Delilah," sung in the original French by Miss Blanche Prye and the above gentlemen. This bit of grand opera in the original was an honor to be something of a novelty for Barrington and it proved to be just the touch to make the evening unforgettable to lovers of fine music. Mrs. Prye played the piano program.

Scouts Start Campaign of Season's Activity in Northwest District

The council of the boy scouts of the Northwest Suburban council, as published in the Chicago Herald Examiner, I read: "As long as there remains a single boy scout outside of the wholesome influence of scouting, it is the privilege and responsibility of every scout, every parent, yes every citizen, to do his part that the boy scout program may be extended further, and more and more attractive to all boys and become still more effective in the lives of those men of tomorrow. Let us all enter this season with a determination to make more men and more boys happy boys, more scouts and more and above all scouts, and secure the satisfaction of playing a game that is more fascinating than any sport known to man, the game of scouting as a leader of boys."

Working in sympathy with this goal the first fall meeting of the executive board of the council will be held Friday at 8 p. m. in dinner and luncheon of the Des Plaines State bank building. Because of the impossibility of a big meeting, it is hoped that every member will attend. One of the major issues for discussion will be the
