LAKE ZURICH REVIEW

Creditors of Lake County May Have to Wait for Money

Supervisors Lay Blame of Financial Condition of Townships

Employes in county offices without earning power probably will receive their back pay or part of it, accruing since September 1, about Christmas time, and general creditors of the county, waiting for their money since August, will probably not be able to collect until March 1, according to the recent announcement of several county officials. About half of the county employes are not paid, those in offices where fees are charged having been paid out of the fee earnings.

Blame for the financial position of the county is laid on the townships. The townships have not paid the bills to the county hospital and poor farm, a total amount of $142,000 due the county.

Supervisors, it was learned, are in favor of going into court and getting judgments against the townships. With judgments pending it will be possible to enforce the collection of a tax to take up the arrearage, officials say.

Warrants Not Enough

It had been promised among a number of county board members that the borrowing of $250,000 on tax anticipation warrants would take up the unpaid bills. This is not true, according to County Treasurer Jay B. Morse, County Clerk Low A. Hendee and County Auditor Robert Pearsall.

This $250,000 will be dumped in against the overdraft, a deficit that has been running annually for more than 15 years. It will take approximately $57,000 in addition to pick up the overdraft, according to the figures in the budget as of September 1.

Morse had an excess of earnings for his office of $110,000 last year. If his earnings continue to run the same, officials will dip into his earnings to pick up the overdraft and use the remainder, approximately $53,000, in an effort to carry the payrolls of employes in non-fee offices, such as the state's attorney, county school superintendent, board of review, county hospital, poor farm, judges and jurors.

14,000 Requests for Donations Sent Out in Lake Seal Drive

The annual Christmas seal sale of Lake county started Wednesday with the mailing of 14,000 requests for donations by Miss Mary Rendall, executive secretary, who reports that 12,000 of the letters carry the usual plea for a $2 donation while 2000 special letters addressed to wealthy residents, clubs, and other organizations ask for more substantial donations. This is 2000 less letters than were sent out last year.

The money received through the sale of Christmas seals each year provides for all of the work done by the T. B. association in prevention of the disease, providing clinics, and health programs in the rural and village schools.

Ela High School Boys Win Prizes at Huntley

Chester Schwerman, Norman Nehmer, Roy Prouty and Roy Schwerman were among the boys from Ela township high school who won prizes at the vocational poultry show for section two of Illinois, held at Huntley Saturday. All are students of agriculture at Lake Zurich. About 600 birds were entered in the show, section two of Illinois including five counties, Lake, McHenry, Boone, DeKalb, and Kane.

Chester Schwerman can boast that his Leghorn flock produces the first prize dozen eggs of the show. These eggs weighed almost 30 ounces per dozen which is high above the average. They were also uniform in shape size and color. Chester also won with his birds. His Leghorn pullet placed third and his hen third. He also won several other prizes with his Leghorns and White Rocks.

Norman Nehmer exhibited the first prize Leghorn Cock and first prize Wyandotte pullet. His Wyandotte hen placed third and his cockrel fifth.

Roy Prouty showed the second prize pen of Wyandottes, fourth prize cockrel, and fifth prize pullet.

Robert Schwerman took sixth place with his pen of young Leghorns and other smaller prizes. The other boys won smaller prizes worthy of mention.

The boys are now preparing for their annual judging contest which is held early in December.

Feature "Broadway to Hollywood" at Catlow Nov. 26-27

Lionel Barrymore in "One Man's Journey" Here Thanksgiving Day

"Too Much Harmony," Bing Crosby's new musical film is finishing its run at the Catlow theatre, Barrington, Friday night of this week. Because of the extra day's showing for this feature, the 6th chapter of the Buck Jones serial will be shown Saturday night at the special rate announced for this Western chapter picture. On the same program will be shown Wallace Ollard's, "Charlie Chan's Greatest Case," and Harry Langdon in "The Hitch Hiker."

Sunday and Monday's offering, "Broadway to Hollywood," comes direct from the first-run theatres to the surprise hit of the season. It has a musical background with a great group of stars among whom are Jimmy Durante, Jackie Cooper, Madge Evans, Frank Morgan, May Robson and Russ Columbo. A Clark and McCullough comedy, Mickey Mouse cartoon, News and community singing are added attractions for this program.

Tuesday, bargain night for next week, will bring Loretta Young and Victor Jory in "The Devil's Lake." This will be followed by a special Thanksgiving Day program to be shown on Wednesday and Thursday, with matinee Thursday, Thanksgiving Day. The feature for this bill will be Lionel Barrymore in "One Man's Journey." Barrymore plays the role of Eli Watt, the country doctor who considers himself a failure. Reward and recognition are his at the close of his career, as the surprising and heart-touching climax will reveal. "Santa's Workshop," a silly symphony in color will be an added attraction on this bill.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—A pretty young woman finds herself in a taxicab in New York with a strange man who addresses her endearingly and speaks of "an awful shock." When he leaves her for a moment at a drug store she drives on, for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, still wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. From the evidence of her clothing and wedding ring, inscribed "H. L. V. to D. M. May 19, 1932," she concludes she is married to a wealthy man. At the Biltmore she meets a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to Reno for a divorce, if she can get the money. The woman vanishes with the nameless girl's purse, and $900.

CHAPTER II—An elderly woman, Mrs. Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mr. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris, still bewildered, is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT

Doris called herself a fool. Fate had taken her kindly into a safe haven where she could rest and be well treated until her memory returned. But she had not been satisfied. Why hadn't she been content with Mrs. Du Val in the country? She tried to think back to the impulse that had led her to this place where girls looked at her with stricken pitying eyes and pushed her into dark closets. She felt that if she ever got back to the country, she would never make any effort to leave again.

After what seemed a very long time she turned the handle of the door and looked out. The small reception room was empty. Evidently the salesgirl had left it so, that she might get away.

And outside sitting placidly in her limousine was Mrs. Du Val.

Doris stood in the center of the room hesitating. Try as she would she could not summon her resolution to go on. Out in the car lay sanity, rest, peace. If she went in again and looked up that salesgirl she did not know what would happen, but she could feel the terror the girl had spread like a contagion.

Doris knew that she was being cowardly but she could not help herself. Then she remembered that the salesgirl had used the word Du Val—or at least she had said it so quickly that Val something was all Doris heard. But it must be Du Val. What else could it be? And after all that was all she had come to find. Some proof that she belonged to the Du Vals. And that one word of the salesgirl's should be enough.

She ducked out of the door and fixed breathlessly to the curb, got inside quickly and sank down in the soft cushions.

"I was beginning to worry," said Mrs. Du Val. "I did promise Rocky not to let you get out of my sight."

As the car rolled up the avenue Doris pondered this. Did Rocky know of her danger whatever it was, and had he left these strange injunctions about her for her own safety?

Her mind went over and over the incident. "Miss," the girl had started to say, as if she had known Doris best for a long time as Miss somebody. Then she had remembered, corrected herself and said Mrs.—Mrs. what? Oh it must have been Du Val, but in the excitement of the moment it had been said so quickly that Doris could not be quite as sure as she would have liked.

She was pale, and exhausted from the fright. Mrs. Du Val was quick to notice this.

"Doris, the trip into town is a mistake. You could not stand the dentist, could you, today?"

Doris looked at her thankfully. "Whatever happens I'll always love you and be grateful to you," she said.

"Such thoughts!"

"I mean it. You have been wonderful to me."

"Whatever happens,' she says! You must not worry so. You are going to be all right."

Doris looked anxiously at Mrs. Du Val. What did she mean by that? She spoke as if she knew of the strange thing that was hanging over her. Surely she could not have known that a salesgirl would push her into a closet and call her a poor child.

Doris found herself falling back on her old vow: tomorrow she would remember. She had had a shock today—that ought to bring memory back.

Oscar met them in front of the house as on the night of Doris' arrival. He was delighted at their return. His first words were: "I have good news for you. Tonight there will be a stadium broadcast. It is very good. Do you like to listen to Beethoven, Doris?"

Doris said she did. Mrs. Du Val looked pleased.

Doris felt unreasonably happy. Here she was secure and loved. The salesgirl had called her by name, so she could be sure she was all right. It must be that Rocky's concern sprung from something she had done in her past to alienate his love. But she would win it back. In the future she would be a model wife.
