LAKE ZURICH REVIEW

Postmasters May Fill Out Terms, Simpson Opinion

Congressman Reports on Administration's Intentions on Refilling Offices

Postmasters in the county whose terms are unexpired will be permitted to complete their terms before being replaced under the contemplated civil service plan of filling these offices, in the opinion of Congressman James Simpson Jr. of the tenth congressional district who made a survey of the intentions of the administration relative to postmaster jobs. A letter from the congressman states:

"As I have received many communications from various constituents interceding in behalf of the postmaster or another throughout my district, I believe that perhaps the people of the tenth congressional district will be interested in knowing the situation with regard to these postmasters.

"Due to the interest indicated above, I recently made a trip to Washington, at which time I visited with Senator James Hamilton Lewis seeking his attitude and policy as far as it concerned the tenth congressional district.

"Senator Lewis informed me that his understanding was that the administration's policy still goes towards the direction of having all postmasters put under civil service, and that in the future the offices would be filled through civil service examinations.

"Of course, this measure has not yet been passed by congress and although the senator did say that he intended to oppose the proposition, he did not commit himself as far as my constituents were concerned.

"I then visited the officials of the post office department and they informed me that the civil service method was a contemplated policy and that legislation along this line would be introduced at the next session of congress, and that the present policy of the department indicated that it intended to permit all postmasters whose terms are unexpired to fill out their terms before replacing them, unless they should be removed for cause."

1933 Far From Depression Year for Cupid's Bow

Lake County Clerk Issues 539 More Licenses Than in Preceding Year

The year 1933 was a banner year for Dan Cupid's heart-splicing archery antics according to figures from the office of Lew A. Hendee, Lake county clerk, which shows that there were 539 more licenses issued in 1933 than in 1932 and 225 more than during the previous year. The mark set this year exceeded that of any year since the beginning of economic reverses in 1929.

From Dec. 1, 1932 to Dec. 1, 1933 there were 5431 marriage licenses issued by County Clerk Hendee, as compared to 4892 for the same period last year and 5206 the year previous.

The marked increase in the work of Dan Cupid came during the Century of Progress in Chicago, when couples of all ages and from nearly every state in the union came to Waukegan to get married.

From the time the World's fair was opened on May 27 to November 12, when it was closed, there were 3209 marriage licenses issued by the county clerk's office compared with 2156 issued during the same period in 1932.

The last half of November of this year showed a considerable drop in the number of applications for marriage licenses, according to the records. Likewise during the first half of the year, that is from Dec. 1, 1932 to June 1, 1933, there was a total of 2166 licenses issued.

Fox River Grove

Music Tournament

The music tournament held at the Cary school auditorium Friday evening and sponsored by the extension department of the University of Illinois was won by the Dunham Home Bureau unit. Five towns were represented, the following taking part: the Algonquin Woman's club, the Civic Choral club of Fox River Grove, the Richmond Civic club, Chemung church, and the Dunham Home Bureau unit. In addition to the singing there were several dramatic numbers and music by the Harvard Community orchestra. The Proscenium players of Fox River Grove, under the direction of Hazel Black Cherny, presented a comedy, "The Smiths at Home," and "Tony and Marjooch," an Italian sketch, was presented by Frances and Francine Perenchio of Dunham.

Honor Roll

Fox River Grove is represented by thirteen honor students at the Community high school. They are Gladys Sellar, Virginia Havlic, Angeline Vinicky, Sylvia Ouil, Robert Bartel, Ruth Dulisky, Irene Dolezal, Marie Cerny, Edna Dedic, Elizabeth Hudek Oldrich Kadlec, Mildred Rozha and Mildred Vokac.

Mr. Barta Killed

Grovers were shocked to hear of the tragic death of Mr. Barta, father of Mrs. John Putta, who was killed when a bridge collapsed at Berwyn. He was 69 years old.

The Proscenium players of Fox River Grove will present the play "Ambition" at a dramatic contest at the Woodstock opera house next Friday night.

At the last meeting of the P.-T. A. it was decided to appoint Mrs. F. Nagel, V. Ueeny, B. Kralik and Mrs. Charles Erickson for the Christmas arrangement committee of the Grove school.

Open Bids for 47 Large NRA Projects

Bids on 47 NRA projects, comprising the fifth and largest supervised by Illinois under the terms of the public works section of the national industrial recovery act, will be opened on December 13.

Including the cost of cement, the projects will cost an estimated $2,350,000. There are 38 paving jobs and 9 bridge jobs. The paving projects call for the improvement of 78.87 miles of highways.

"Conforming to wishes of Gov. Horner, the highway department is rushing NRA projects into construction so that the maximum amount of labor work may be provided for the unemployed," Director Kingery said. The projects in the December 13 letting will put about 5000 skilled and unskilled men to work.

"The department now is engaged in preparing projects for the March letting, which will be held during the latter part of December. Announcement of the exact date will be made in the near future.

MILLER BROS. FUN & FACTS

VOL. 5 Barrington, Illinois, Thursday, December 7, 1933 NO. 49

Let's give the Ela over at the post office a break this year and do our Christmas shopping early.

The government is setting the example. Millions are being spent in public works. We can help locally by buying the things we need.

A sign on a hot dog stand in Burlington, Ia., reads: "Fido's Place. Come In and Gnaw!"

Have you purchased your ticket for "Childhood of Hiawatha," a cantata presented by the Junior High glee clubs at the school auditorium on Friday night, Dec. 8? Better do it now. It's going to be a fine play; and adults tickets only 10c; kiddies 5c.

We have some of those strong sturdy dairy pails. Prices are reasonable.

Just 17 days till Christmas left in which to finish the installments on last Christmas' gifts.

We wouldn't mind men wearing their B.V.D's all winter if they didn't go around boasting about it.

A galvanized basket will eliminate fire danger in your furnace room. Keep the the ashes in it. We have a good strong basket at the very low price of $1.60.

"Don't you know," cried the motor cop after the accident, "that you should always give a woman driver half the road?" "I always do," explained the unfortunate man, "when I can find out which side she wants."

One of our hobbies is our Meyers Pumps; and why not? We have been selling them for years and they always give satisfaction. If you need a pump, buy a Myers.

Just for fun, we're starting a little game this week. We're selecting at random an auto license number. First one is No. 202-818. If it's your number, report it at once. We have a present for you.

"Oh, I think your sermons are wonderful," said the gushing spinster to the new minister. "I never knew what sin was until you came."

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—A pretty young woman finds herself in a taxicab in New York with a strange woman who addresses her endearingly and speaks of "an awful shock." When he leaves her for a moment at a drug store she drives on, for she fears him. She stops at the Biltmore, still wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. From the evidence of her clothing and wedding ring, inscribed "H. L. V. to D. M. May 19, 1932," she concludes she is married to a wealthy man. At the Biltmore the same man and a young woman who speaks of her desire to go to Reno for a divorce, if she can get the money. The woman vanishes with the nameless girl's purse, and $900.

CHAPTER II.—An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, cordially greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris, still bewildered, is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot remember having married him.

CHAPTER III.—Doris, discovering a trademark in her clothing, visits a New York store, and is astounded when a saleswoman insists she hide from observation. She goes back to the Du Val's, more mystified than ever. Rocky returns, to discover the deception.

NINTH INSTALLMENT

"You can't—you can't talk to me like that." Her voice wavered. Her eyes were starry with frustration that was near to tears.

"I can't?" he jeered. "I come back to my home, expecting to find my wife here as she said she would be, and I find instead someone else masquerading in front of my innocent parents. Who the h—l do you think you are to play a trick like that on my mother?"

She looked at him steadily. She was stone cold, paralyzed with embarrassment; unable to think, unable to speak.

"Nervy, aren't you?" His mouth twitched slightly as he looked down at her. For a minute something kinder—almost admiration maybe—swept over his features. But it passed grimly. "Well, in your business you gotta be, I guess. That's all right. But sometimes the nervest thing you can do is to tell the truth. I'm warning you. What happened? Why did she send you here?"

Her fingers passed diffidently over the soft brown waves of her hair. It was an unconsciously helpless gesture. She sat down in a chair facing him dumbly. "I don't know what you mean," she said. "No one sent me here. Your mother brought me here."

Her perplexity seemed to have a hypnotic effect. For a minute Rocky looked dumbly back at her. But the fires of righteous indignation put him back on his guard. "Yes. Mother did bring you here."—His voice was kinder as he spoke of his mother—you're right about that. But that's not what worries me." His face came closer again, half menacingly. "I want to know how you happen to be in Doris' place?"

In Doris' place! So there was a Doris. She was not Doris then? She looked up at the young man with tortured eyes. She moistened her lips.

He looked slightly shaken by her evident agony. Then he quickly hardened. "Come on. No baby doll on the witness stand business. I want to know—"

"Who I am?" Doris finished it questioningly.

He waved a hand. "Never mind that. I know d—n well who you are. I want—"

"Who am I?" said Doris joyfully.

He clucked angrily. "You know d—n well what I meant. I meant you were a friend of Doris'. Doris didn't want to come to the country, so she pawned you off on my parents." A hurt movement clenched his jaw sharply. "She'll find out—" He turned his face away, so that she saw the lines of determination written on his profile. A pang struck her. He loved this other girl. This Doris. He looked back with new contempt in his eyes. "You women are all alike. You'll do anything for money. Let me tell you one thing. Doris promised you some dough for this, no doubt. Well, you won't get a cent. Not a cent."

Doris rose. She put her hands in the air in exasperation. "I don't know your Doris, I tell you. I don't know her!"

"Then how did you get here?"

Doris collapsed. She sat down on the edge of the bed. Again suspicion seemed about to conquer him. "I know I think I'll hand you over to the police!"

Doris breathed deeply. Was all this finally to end in the police court?

His mocking smile came again. "She registers terror!" he said unpleasantly. "Very good. Lifelike. Go to the head of the class." He sat down beside her. "Come on, Baby, come clean! What's the story?"

She did not answer. She was thinking suddenly of Mrs. Du Val. "Your mother?" she said anxiously.

"What about my mother?" But now his face showed slight signs of sympathy—a sympathy not for her. "I can't bear to have her know. What will she think?"

"You should" that
