SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In concern over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of his wealthy friend, Crandall White, Aaron Glanzer engages Motherwell, private investigator, to find her. A note from the missing woman warns her husband not to call in the police, saying she "hoped to come back."

CHAPTER II.—Mrs. White is younger than her husband, and his devotion has been the talk of New York. Her leaving him is unexplainable. She is known to have with her a remarkable jewel, the "Medusa's Head," but her maid, Coggeshall, thinks she had little else of value. Glanzer and Motherwell consider the idea of kidnapping but there has been a demand for ransom.

"What?" Motherwell exclaimed, "what a wonder! It's jade!"

"It's only equal to it in Peking, I believe," said Glanzer. "I gave it to her as a wedding gift. She took an absurd fancy to it and always wore it—called it her lucky piece."

"This doesn't look as if she'd been spirited away for her jewelry, does it, sir?"

"No," said Glanzer quietly. "Didn't she wear more than that, usually?"

"Always, when I have seen her."

"What, for instance?"

"Her betrothal ring—a large black pearl set in diamonds; a small triple string of pearls, usually; a sapphire link bracelet, perhaps. The Medusa she wore as a brooch, either at her neck or sometimes as a pendant to the pearls. But she always wore it."

Motherwell considered a moment. "Her maid said nothing more?"

"Oh, yes. She went directly to White the next morning and asked if her mistress didn't want her. He said he understood not, but would make sure. This morning she asked if the clothes were satisfactory and if there was any message for her. He said yes, of course, and that there was none. This noon she called me up here about five and asked if any message had been sent her from Mrs. White. I said not that I knew of."

"I'm sure she'll send if she requires you, Coggeshall," I told her, and she answered rather dispiritedly. "Yes, sir, I suppose so."

"She's English, I suppose?"

"An extremely high-class woman for that position. She is devoted to Celia and earns, I imagine, all of her undoubtedly high wages."

Mr. Motherwell looked into the fire in silence, and his host forbore to break it. At last he spoke.

"I'm afraid you'll find yourself leaning on a broken reed, Mr. Glanzer," he said slowly. "If I was one of those Johnnies in a book, now, I'd have taken a lot of notes and asked a few piercing questions, and dashed off and arrested somebody—Mr. White, for choice. But the only thing I can do is to wait until something strikes me. This is really very difficult, you know. I'm afraid I think it looks rather bad for Mr. White, sir."

Glanzer groaned. "Don't!" he said, and went on after a moment. "On the contrary, Motherwell," he said, "you impress me very much. Very much indeed. But I am a little surprised that you don't notice one thing—I thought you would have."

"In the letter, you mean?"

"Yes."

"What thing, sir?"

"Why, this odd sentence," said Mr. Glanzer. "Poor White and I have worn our brains out over it."

"You might read the sentence," suggested Motherwell.

Mr. Glanzer took the letter and read.

"I told him that I tell you know I love you. Told whom? Poor Crandall thinks her brain was upset."

"But you think she simply made a slip, in her excitement?" said Motherwell quietly.

The older man gasped slightly. "You—it's hard to conceal one's feelings from you, my clever young friend," he said. "I suppose that's what I meant, yes, but anyway, what does it mean?"

"I told him that I (would) tell you?"

"Forgetting that Crandall knows of no 'him'?"

"Oh, no, I shouldn't say so."

"But you did notice it? You think you understand it, perhaps?"

"Why yes, I think it could be explained," said Motherwell absently. "Then, perhaps you'd—" Mr. Glanzer's tone was almost imperceptibly edged. He was very tired.

The young man blinked and apologized with his whole mobile face.

"Please excuse me," he cried. "I got thinking—you know," he explained. "I read that part of the letter a little differently. If you will hand it to me—"

He took it, laid it on the arm of his chair, and bent over it, as if writing.

"I am quite well—no one is hurting me—" here he flung back angrily over his shoulder.

"I told him that, I tell you," then again writing. "You know I love you!"

"Doesn't that make sense, sir? She did tell him that before, you know!"

Mr. Glanzer started.

"For heaven's sake!" he murmured, "for heaven's sake!"

"There's one you left out, but she thought it was the 'you' of the sentence that was coming, you see. And in her excitement, she wrote it all down, just as she said it. At least, that's the way it seems to me."

"You mean that you think somebody really was there—"

"Why, naturally. Somebody who was hurrying her along, too. She must have written like lightning. Never dotted an 'I'. And scared to death, I'm afraid."

"Never Dotted an 'I' And Scared to Death, I'm Afraid!"

"You can suggest nothing?"

"I can suggest one or two things. I don't mean that I think this lady couldn't be found. I think she's too beautiful and too young and has too many perfectly obvious reasons for getting back—if she can—not to be found, ultimately. But it looks to me as if she was afraid she couldn't see her way to getting back—very soon—to put it mildly. You can't get around that. And what staggers me is the short—the terribly short time at our disposal, Mr. Glanzer. You can't lose one of the loveliest and richest young women in the country in broad daylight in New York and expect to get away with it very long, can you? People, even if they are reducing their weight, can still write to their friends. How long can you fool the servants? What are you going to say? What's become of her? Everybody will want to know."

"She should have thought of that," said Mr. Glanzer in a low voice. "What can Crandall do?"

"Of course," Motherwell went on, apparently not noticing this bitter reply, "of course Mr. White can say that she has been obliged to be put temporarily—"

"I suggested that, but he turned on me and refused pointblank," said Glanzer. "He said she would never forgive him."

"Well, then, what does he want to do?"

"He wants you to find her," said the Jeweler. Motherwell laughed angrily.

"Because I'm not the police, I suppose?"

"Just so."

"You don't think that's rather a quibble?"

"We think it's a pretty near thing," the older man admitted, "but we also think that she ought to be very glad of that 'quibble,' Mr. Motherwell, in case she wants to come back, and that she can hardly blame us, legally speaking, in case—"

"In case she doesn't? So he doesn't quite believe in her, either? Is that it?"

"He is only human," said Mr. Glanzer, "and he is fifty-four, and she is barely thirty. Do you believe in her, Mr. Motherwell?"

"I don't know," said Motherwell, "but I'll go back tomorrow morning and try to find her!"

CHAPTER III

BRIGHT and early on Saturday morning, a dark, distinguished gentleman, evidently quite at home in the White household, escorted by the old gold velvet of the much photographed stairway a slender, bearded young man in heavy shell glasses, and a worn, soft, felt hat. In Mrs. White's little sitting room they were met by her maid, a severe Englishwoman of middle age.

"Good day, Coggeshall, good news from Mrs. White, I hope," the friend of the family asked kindly.

"Indeed, Mr. Glanzer, I've had just no news at all from Mrs. White," she returned.

"Well, well, I expect Mr. White will bring us plenty, when he gets back."

"To speak by Mr. White's voice on the telephone, Mr. Glanzer, when last I heard it at eight o'clock this very morning, he'll not be leaving his bed, if he's wise!" the woman retorted triumphantly. "He's sent for Hollis already."

"Ah, well, a man under the weather needs his valet, really, more than ever, you know, Coggeshall!"

"And how about a woman, sir?"

"Well, well—"

Mr. Glanzer looked drawn and preoccupied.

"I want to take all Mrs. White's jewels and have them gone over thoroughly," Coggeshall, he said. "They shouldn't be left here—with both of them away, anyway. She keeps too much here. If you will give me the keys—or it's a combination, isn't it? my young man here will list them and give you a receipt."

"It's a key and a combination, sir, and Mrs. White keeps the key, always. You'll have to get it from her," said the woman.

"Hasn't Mr. White a key?"

"He had, sir, but Mrs. White mislaid her key, and was alarmed some one should find it, and had it changed, and the combination, too. There only came back one, and she was vexed at the forgetting to order the two, but only last Wednesday (the day she left, sir) she mentioned to me that she could not seem to remember about ordering that duplicate key. So I am inclined to doubt he has one, Mr. Glanzer."

"Then in case of a fire, the safe would have to be taken out bodily? No one but Mrs. White could get at it?"

"It looks so, sir," said the woman quietly.

"This is idiotic," the Jeweler declared, and seizing the telephone he called up his establishment angrily, and demanded that the best "safeman" in the place be sent up to him immediately. Popping, he paced out into the hall to wait and the young man was left alone with the maid.

Getting out a pencil, he began to sharpen it carefully, his eye on his job.

"I'm sorry to hear Mrs. White is so ill," he said quietly.

"I don't know that she's so ill," the woman returned briefly.

"Ah, I am glad to hear it," he said lightly. "You'd be the one to know, of course!"

She glanced at him suspiciously, but he was evidently barely interested. His ingenious flattery came just at the right moment.

"There's more than you thinking that, young man," she announced bitterly, "but it seems I'm not the one, after all. It's not that I mind a lady's talking out, just as she is, and dressed more for what you might call—walking in the country on a rainy day, than for New York. But to be told to pack a bag with simple things—pah! What are sim-

Fat Girls! Here's A Tip for You

All over the world, Kruschen Salt is appealing to girls and women who strive for an attractive, slim figure that cannot fail to attract attention.

Here's the recipe that banishes fat and brings into blossom all the natural attractiveness that every woman possesses and does it SAFELY and HARMLESSLY.

In the morning, take one half teaspoon of Kruschen Salt in a glass of hot water before breakfast—eat out on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar.

It's the little daily dose that takes off the fat, and "brings" the chert feeling of energetic activity that is reflected in bright eyes, clear skin, cheerful vivacity and charming figure.

But be sure for your health's sake that you get Kruschen. A bottle that lasts 4 weeks contains 112 capsules, always get Kruschen from the Drug Co. and money back if not satisfied with results after first bottle.

Time to Plan a BUDGET

THIS is a good time for young people to plan a budget. Unless there is a determined effort to live within one's means and save something too—independence never comes.

Barrington Woman's Club

The next meeting of the Study class will be held Thursday, Jan. 28 at 2:30 p. m. in the public library. Mrs. Helen Roeding will review "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," a play by Rudolf Besier.

A total of $100 was raised for the Scholarship Loan committee through the presentation of the benefit movie, "Delicious." About 850 tickets were sold.

The regular meeting of the club was held Wednesday, Jan. 20. The speaker for the afternoon was Dr. Charles Obermeyer, a brilliant philosopher and psychologist, who among other things possesses an extensive knowledge of both ancient and modern literature. He has achieved an unusual success, building for himself, through his fine platform work and his gift of genius combined with real scholarship, a following which is most unusual in its enthusiasm.

Dr. Obermeyer is a son of the Yeldt and during 1919-1921 served as a professor of Dutch at the University of South Africa. He took his Ph.D. at London university following which he began his lecture career in England. For the past three years he has been lecturing on the American platform.

abstract and has nothing to do with life," Dr. Obermeyer said in his lecture, "but the fact is it has everything to do with life, it is vital. "Philosophic thinkers effect situations or conditions of the times. They think out the problems. What the world suffers from today is too little thinking with the sword. When we are tied in a knot, instead of untangling it by thinking ourselves out of the situation, we cut it with a sword in the Alexandrian way. In other words we resort to war."

An important item of business which was brought up at the club meeting was the report of the representative of the Woman's club on the Barrington Relief committee. The Relief committee present the following plan: that a committee of six club women be appointed representing the six churches of this community and these committee members, in turn, ask for other women helpers from the churches as deemed necessary. The duties of this committee would be to establish a sort of industrial bureau of exchange working in conjunction with the Relief committee.

The Barrington Relief committee is asking the Woman's club to sponsor this movement in appointing a sub-committee to work out these plans in connection with the work of the Relief committee and hopes for the support of every club member as well as the entire community.

When Better Automobiles are Built, Buick Will Build Them—Product of General Motors

Almost $700 less for a Buick Four-Door Sedan in 1932 than in 1922! And the new Buick Four-Door Sedan, listing at $995, is a Straight Eight with Wizard Control and scores of important advancements. Here is a record of value-giving that the motor industry, represented by Buick, has actually achieved. And here is how the motoring public has rewarded Buick for the achievement. Today, as a result of Buick's policy of giving greater and greater value, America is awarding Buick more than three-to-one preference over all other eights in its price class. The reason will be instantly apparent to you when you note the value-leadership of the new Buick Eight for 1932 with Wizard Control. Twenty-six models, priced from $935 to $2055, f. o. b. Dairy Cattle in County Show Healthy Condition

Lake county dairy cattle rated among the healthiest of cattle in 10 counties which make up the Chicago area, during the last half of 1931, it was revealed in a recent report from the office of Stuart E. Pierson, director of the state department of agriculture. Less than one-half of one per cent of all cows tested for tuberculosis were found reactors. Only one county had a lower percentage, and that was Will.

The report also shows that only one per cent of all the cattle tested for tuberculosis in the entire state of Illinois during the last half of 1931 were found diseased.

D. W. Robison, superintendent of the division of animal industry, through which the bovine tuberculosis eradication service is performed, pronounced a condition of the dairy herds of Illinois at the year-end, the best on record in relation to this disease.

The tests performed since July 1, totaled 626,345, and of that number only 6,288 were found tuberculous and were condemned and slaughtered. The tests embodied in the list were made in herds on farms in every Illinois county of the state, and include many initial tests as well as re-inspections in the areas that had previously attained accreditation.

The report goes on to show that in the Chicago milk production area, wherein the disease in former years, has exacted its greatest toll, has also declined remarkably during the past six months.

In the 10 counties that make up the Chicago area, the proportion of infection, during the last half of 1931, was found to be a little less than half as prevalent as it was during the preceding year. During the fiscal year that ended June 30 last, three per cent of the cattle tested in that section were diseased. Between July 1 and December 31, 167,848 head were tested and 2,421 or about 1.44 per cent reacted.

The number tested and the number that reacted in each of the ten counties of the Chicago area, during the last half of 1931, are listed as follows:

| County | Tested | Reactors |
|-----------|---------|----------|
| Boone | 18,737 | 545 |
| Cook | 11,250 | 146 |
| DeKalb | 16,610 | 140 |
| DuPage | 9,456 | 127 |
| Kane | 20,217 | 258 |
| Lake | 12,868 | 56 |
| McHenry | 30,508 | 415 |
| Ogle | 16,478 | 337 |
| Winnebago | 17,654 | 384 |
| Will | 14,063 | 23 |
| Totals | 167,848 | 2,421 |

Lake County Ranks Fifth for Auto License Tolls

Lake county attained fifth rank among counties of the state for the total of automobile license fees paid to the state. Lake county automobile owners paid a total of $333,410.

St. Clair county led all other counties with the exception of Cook county for the amount paid, this county turning in $389,239 into the state treasury last year.

Peoria county was second with $382,500; Kane third with $373,972; Winnebago fourth with $359,448, and Madison county trailed Lake county for sixth place with $347,122. The sum of $125,586 was collected in McHenry county.

Cook county paid $8,542,415 or almost half of the total collected from the entire state.

Secretary of State Stratton has turned the county totals over to the finance department where they will be used to figure the amount each county will receive as its share of the gas tax. The motor fuel law provides that one cent of the tax shall be apportioned to the several counties in proportion to the amount of automobile license fees each pays.

The automobile department of the secretary's office collected $15,426,496 in license fees last year and this money has been turned into the state treasury to be used for road building enactments of the General Assembly.

Lake County Property Value High in Comparison

Valuation of personal property in Lake county was higher than the average assessments in the rest of the state, outside of Cook county, because of the newer and better improvements, state statistics showing the comparative valuations reveal.

Horses had an average valuation of $39.26 in Lake county, as compared to $32.38 in other sections of the state, because of the breeding of blooded animals for racing and horse-back riding purposes. Sheep and hogs are assessed less in Lake county, while steam engines are valued five times as much in Lake county as in other communities.

The comparative values of personal property in 1931 in the rest of the state and Lake county, are as follows:

| | State | Lake County |
|----------------------|---------|-------------|
| Horses | $32.38 | $39.26 |
| Cattle | 23.50 | 20.12 |
| Sheep | 3.18 | 3.02 |
| Hogs | 5.93 | 5.64 |
| Steam engines, etc. | 285.51 | 1,402.75 |
| Fire & burglar safes | 28.05 | 38.81 |
| Carriages & wagons | 15.14 | 15.24 |
| Automobiles | 96.53 | 105.69 |
| Watches, clocks | 7.29 | 19.55 |
| Pianos | 29.62 | 36.59 |

Romance Comes to Mattie Lou

By CHARLES S. REID

MATTIE LOU ARVEY was looking her prettiest, which was very pretty indeed, as she appeared in her new pink chambray dress which she had made herself, for Mattie Lou was an exceptional seamstress for her eighteen years. Old Tench Arvey owned a small store at the flag station of "Arvey" on the Saddle-back mountain. Tench was a sawmill logger, and his daughter, Mattie Lou, kept the store and the post office. Once each day a small sack of mail was taken off, and one delivered to the train going up the mountain.

It was said that the construction engineers of the railroad had made an error in their calculations when the roadbed was laid out up the mountain, and had allowed the road to be graded to a percentage of incline almost twice as heavy as had been intended. Accordingly trains stopped at Arvey, on flag, only on the way down. They dared not come to a stop going up, as it would have been next to impossible for them to get going again toward the top of the mountain on such a grade. Passengers going north were compelled to board the south-bound train, and catch an up-bound one at a junction at the foot of the mountain. The mail bags were delivered to the trains from an arm which had been prepared near the track.

Mattie Lou had to climb a small ladder in order to hang the mail bag upon the arm from which it might be swept by the hook at the car door.

She had been standing on this ladder, two rungs from the ground, when romance came for her that day, four months before. It was the morning when the new mail clerk had gone up the mountain on his first run on that division. He was a young fellow, with laughing blue eyes, and crinkly brown hair. He had been looking ahead from the car doorway when he espied Mattie Lou. Squatting on the doorplate, he had swung down upon the lever of the mail hook as the train rolled by Mattie Lou's ladder; and he had cried almost in the girl's ear:

"Gee, but you are a peach of a girl!"

Then he had waved back at her, as the train slowly climbed the grade beyond. Since that morning Mattie Lou had been dreaming, although she knew there was little chance of realization.

Once he had dropped at her feet by the railroad track a large box of candy. Mattie Lou had never tasted any candy that had been half so delicious. The second day following this she had tied a bouquet of mountain wild flowers to the mail sack which she hung on the arm. And this time the mail clerk had kissed her hand towards Mattie Lou, as the train climbed the grade; and his eyes had seemed to be laughing with unusual happiness. At another time he had dropped off a whole box of oranges, with a card attached.

"To Miss Postmistress," the card had said, "from Joe Perry, the mail clerk."

The train on which he made his return trip always went down at midnight, so Mattie Lou never had seen him, except on a moving train. His days up the road were Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Today was Friday. Mattie Lou had done her hair after a most bewitching fashion, and had tied a ribbon about her neck. Also, she had gathered a large bouquet of the choicest wild azaleas from the mountainside and had tied them to the mail bag. Then she had sneaked herself a little way up the track, so that she might see Joe Perry in the moment after he had caught the flowers.

Presently the long station signal fell upon her ears, and her heart leaped for joy. Slowly the locomotive labored up the track with its train. As the mail car rounded a little curve just below the station, a head and shoulders were thrust from the doorway. Instantly Mattie Lou sprang to her feet. The man in the mail car was not Joe Perry, but a big, middle-aged man with whiskers on his face.

Like the wind Mattie Lou flew to the ladder. Scrambling quickly upward she snatched the flowers from the mail bag just as the hook caught it. With the azaleas caught to her bosom she ran back to the fallen tree trunk, where she sat down again.

A moment later something happened. Two cool hands had slipped about Mattie Lou's face from behind her head, and had covered her eyes. She arose with a bound, and wheeled about. When her eyes cleared from the tears she brushed away, she saw standing before her Joe Perry, with his laughing blue eyes.

"I just couldn't stand it any longer, little Wildflower; so I got a substitute for my run, and instead of the usual mail bag, I have dropped myself off here just to tell you how much I love you. In fact, I have come for you. So let's go and talk to dad about it."

Mattie Lou gazed into Joe's honest laughing eyes for a long moment; then, as the azaleas fell and were scattered about her feet, she went to his outstretched arms, and was his outstretched arms.

Aged Woman Injured

Mrs. C. F. Warner, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. E. H. Adams, 540 S. Cook street, suffered a painful injury Sunday morning while visiting at the home of another daughter, Mrs. F. Gilbert of Crystal Lake. She fell hitting her head on a sharp piece of furniture which cut a deep gash in her forehead. A physician was called to dress the wound. Mrs. Warner is seventy-five years old.

An Experiment In Advertising

Twelve nationally known corporations reduced their advertising appropriations from 15 to 100 per cent in 1930. Thirteen made reductions of less than 15 per cent. And fifty-two increased their appropriations.

F. A. Fall, writing in the Outlook and Independent, tells what happened:

The net profit of the twelve declined 41.2 per cent; those of the thirteen fell 13.2 while those of the fifty-two declined only 9.6 per cent.

UNCLE SAM IN BUSINESS

Because of the apathy of business men and others who should be alert to the menace of governmental interference with private enterprises, a small but aggressive minority in congress is making progress in its attempt to socialize all American industries.

These advocates of government operation of business and industry have already placed severe burdens upon private enterprises through excessive regulation, as a first step toward their goal. In order to further harass these enterprises a multitude of government bureaus, commissions, boards and other agencies have been set up, with their army of political job holders to inspect, investigate and intimidate.

If these tactics shall succeed in destroying private business, the road to government operation and socialism will be open. This, of course, is the ultimate object of the whole scheme. And if it succeeds we shall all be slaves to an all-powerful political machine like that which is enslaving the people of Russia today.

Experience has demonstrated that governmental conduct of business is inefficient or wasteful, or both. Our experiment with government operation of the railroads during and after the war is an example. Our post office department now shows a yearly deficit of $150,000,000. We have squandered $250,000,000 or more through the government's excursion into the cotton and wheat markets. We have wasted many millions in reclamation schemes for the purpose of bringing more land under cultivation to increase the agricultural surplus. We have borne enormous losses in the shipping business. And so on.

The tragic aspect of all this is that the consequences of these follies must be borne by the taxpayers, whose private businesses have been injured and in some cases virtually destroyed by the federal government. Socialistic experiments in many of the individual states have had the same inevitable results.

It is time that every citizen who believes in the encouragement of private enterprise and individual effort should protest against the encroachments of government in business. The place to protest is at the ballot box. Relegate the socialistic politicians to private life and keep them there.—Marcey B. Darnall, Herald, Florence, Ala.

HELP FIGHT TUBERCULOSIS!

"I have something for you, Miss Hendrickson," said a patient sick with tuberculosis, "someone gave me a birthday present and I want to give this money to you for the Tuberculosis association that it may help some child in this county."

"It is such statements and letters as this that make the care of tuberculosis patients worth while," says Miss Hendrickson, executive secretary of the Lake County Tuberculosis association.

There are many patients who know what they must go through to get well who are willing to donate their small amounts to help someone else. In visiting another patient she said, "If they only knew what it was to lay in bed for a year or so helpless to do anything but wait patiently, there would be no trouble in selling seals. Five dollars or five hundred dollars would be given cheerfully if it would help prevent someone from having tuberculosis."

Ten thousand letters will soon be received by the people in Lake county urging them to send in their contributions. The money derived from the Christmas seals is the only money that the Lake County Tuberculosis association has to help those sick with tuberculosis. In Lake county there are some four hundred patients who are suffering from this great white plague. Those who haven't sent in their money for this year's Christmas seals are still privileged to do so. Your contributions will help to continue the work of this association throughout the year. It will take the combined efforts of every citizen and organization in this county to keep this work going throughout the coming year.

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

There is always more or less worry connected with money. Those of us who do not have it worry about getting it, and those of us who have it are often put to a great deal of worrying in hanging on to it. In addition to this little worry is brought on by the desire to make a jittney grow where only a penny grew before. It seems as though poets and philosophers have conspired to bring money into disrepute, so anxious are they to tell us that the mere possession of it is a great burden.

In more recent times there has come to us the warning that money carries germs. Germ experts even went so far as to demonstrate that a bank clerk's occupation was particularly hazardous because he handles so much money. But now this dread has been dispelled. After exhaustive investigation on the subject of money as germ carriers two Illinois University experts assure us that this danger has been greatly exaggerated. It seems that the materials or metals from which coins are made act as destroyers of bacteria.

This relieves us of the worry connected with the handling of money. The next thing for some expert to do is to tell us how we may be relieved of our worries in trying to get hold of it.

The American Federation of Labor finds the business state of mind has improved. The Federation's review of conditions met re-enforcement for its conclusions in a $30,000,000 favorable trade balance for the United States in October and assertions by legislators returning to the capital that business is on the upgrade.

The Coal Stripping company is proving the equivalent of a small factory in benefits for Murphysboro. About 77 men are employed and most of them live in Murphysboro. Forces at the operation are working in three 8-hour shifts, day and night.

The production of tomato juice is developing into an industry of great size. The industry affords employment by giving work to the farmers, the carriers, for workmen in the factory, and for the manufacturers of containers and packages in which the products are shipped.

PROSPERITY NEWS

In March the Illinois Central will put underway at LaSalle a $400,000 program of re-construction on its bridge over the Illinois river. About 13 months will be required to complete the project and approximately 50 men will be employed.

The Sunshine Valley Canning company has embarked on a plan to sell 200 ten-acre farms in the vicinity of Genoa where a factory will be located to care for the produce raised.

Fifty-five men have been put to work by the Mattson relief committee. Eighteen have been assigned jobs in Lytle park, eight to jobs on the Bennett school grounds, three or four on work on the high school grounds, and the remainder to work connected with the street department.

The Chicago Great Western has returned 500 to its shops at Oelwein, Ia., for a period of not less than three months.

At Brighton, the section men on the Alton railroad have gone back to full time. Since the first of October they have been working but four days per week.

About 40 Mattson employees of the bridge and building department of the Big Four railroad have returned to work following a layoff of nearly a month.

The Western Cartridge plant of East Alton will follow its usual program and will increase its force gradually during the year. Employees of the company living in East Alton, who have not been working steadily will probably be given preference.

Seven building permits totaling $5,175 have been issued during the last two weeks in Aurora.

With the re-opening of the locomotive shops in Bloomington on January 4, 650 men were returned to work. The plant will operate four days per week.

In Chicago work has started on the $22,000,000 post-office and on the first unit of the huge office building to be erected by the Marshall Field estate, which, when completed, will cost close to $20,000,000.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

By National Editorial Association
(Special to The Review)

CONGRESS deserves credit that emergency legislation so essential to national welfare has been enacted with a reasonable minimum of partisan wrangling and a pleasing display of speed. With a few minor exceptions the senate and house have cleared the calendars of urgent measures without undue demand that their partisan stamps should be imprinted thereon. The glory-grabbing will come later with the inauguration of the presidential campaign. Even its severe critics have admitted that the national legislature snapped out of its customary axe-grinding and dilatory tactics in a honest political effort to bring about a restoration of normal or at least better economic conditions.

RELATIVELY PROMPT enactment of relief measures bears a mute testimonial to the disciplinary effect of deplorable unemployment conditions and suffering in each congressional district. The congress is by no means free of troubles for the all-important appropriation bills are under preparation. The executive branch and the legislative body are desirous of passing the buck in forcing drastic economies in governmental expenditures. It is in this tug-of-war where political factors will play a heavy role.

The flat declaration of legislators in charge of appropriation measured that they propose to share the estimates of departmental officials, means obligatory savings in federal costs. The tax recommendations of the treasury department have brought joy to hotel-keepers as hundreds of organizations are sending their missions of protest to the capitol. The influx of visitors means that the hearings on tax measures will be prolonged as the suggestions for increases will affect millions as the advances will cover bank checks, radio sets, automobiles and letters, also other articles sent through the mails. The problem of fixing tax rates in a time of depression is not enviable even to hard-boiled politicians.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT in this day of cynicism, but there is one member of congress who has been so loyal to his principles that he has not voted on any important measure in three years! England's prime minister of Victorian days, Disraeli, told an unbelieving world that "principle is ever my motto, not expediency." Now comes Henry St. George Tucker, a Democrat from Lexington, Va., with the declaration, "I have not voted for anything for several years—the rule of my public life has been never to vote for any bill that is not recognized in some power, express or implied, in the constitution." The inquiry now turns to the thousands of bills passed without St. George Tucker's vote—does he regard them all as unconstitutional? Mr. Tucker is 70 years of age and has been in congress several terms.

AT THE DATE for the meeting at Kansas to discuss the subject of reparations draws nearer the subject grows in intensity among our international experts in the senate. This conference will technically be concerned with reparations, but the two issues have linked together for so long that it is difficult to dissociate them in discussions. The nations will talk reparations, but their minds will be principally on the war debts.

MANY SCHEMES for solving the debt problem have been advanced. The French are credited with the idea of turning over the German railway bonds to the United States in return for a reduction or cancellation of their war debts, but a great majority of our financial experts believe such a procedure would end with the American taxpayer holding the bag. A short time ago some members of congress were blatantly advocating that foreign debtors cede to the United States their insular possessions and recent trouble in the Philippines and Hawaii seem to have dampened the zeal of these legislators for acquisition and the opinion prevails that more insular possessions would mean added burdens.

THE TARIFF ADJUSTMENT now pending is strictly a party program with the democrats' voting strength mustered in full force in the house. In the senate, tariff changes will not be as easy for the republicans there have a super majority. It is predicted that the progressives on the republican side of the senate will support house tariff bills and thus insure their passage. The tax revision bill before the house committee on ways and means will provide radio sets and higher rates on incomes. There is a chance that a sales tax may gain the house support but the proposition is not so strong in the senate. The senate is devoting more time to international affairs while awaiting measures which must have their origin in the house of representatives.

Exempt Unemployment Insurance

Amendment to the federal revenue act to exempt from taxation money set aside by corporations for unemployment reserve funds will be recommended by the special committee of the senate which is studying unemployment insurance, according to oral statements January 5 by the three members of the committee. It is possible also, according to the chairman, Senator Hebert, republican, of Rhode Island, that the committee will recommend that the various state enactments to make unemployment insurance compulsory. Senator Glenn, republican, of Illinois, also stated that such recommendation probably would be made.

Wandering From This to That

Opera Dates

The twenty-first season of opera by Chicago's resident lyric organization is drawing to a close. The Civic Opera will give its final six performances during the week opening January 25 and closing January 30, after which the company goes to Boston for a guest engagement of two weeks.

The week opens January 25 with a performance of La Gioconda which will have one change of cast. Charles Marshall replaces Antonio Cortis in the principal tenor role.

The season's third Carmen will again bring Conchita Supervia before the Chicago public as a guest artist and Leola Turner remains in the cast as Micaela, but both the principal tenor and baritone assignments are changed. Antonio Cortis will sing the role of Don Jose and Cesare Formichi that of Escamillo. Maestro Cooper conducts. Thursday night will mark Claudia Muzio's farewell for the season.

Monday, Jan. 25—at 8—La Gioconda (In Italian). Opera in four acts by Ponchielli. With Rosa Rella, Cyrena Van Gordon, Sonia Sharnova, Charles Marshall, Cesare Formichi, Chas. Barone, Ballet—Dance of the Hops. Conductor, Emil Cooper.

Tuesday, Jan. 26—at 7:45—Die Meistersinger (In German). Opera in three acts by Wagner. With Lotte Lehmann, Sonia Sharnova, Rene Malson, Oscar Colcaire, Hans Hermann Nissen, Edward Habich, Alexander Kipnis, Robert Ringling and others. Conductor, Egon Pollak.

Conchita Supervia in "Carmen"
Wednesday, Jan. 27—at 8—Carmen (In French). Opera in four acts by Georges Bizet. With Conchita Supervia, Leola Turner, Antonio Cortis, Cesare Formichi and others. Ballet. Conductor, Emil Cooper.

Thursday, Jan. 28—at 8—La Traviata (In Italian). Opera in four acts by Verdi. With Claudia Muzio, Tito Schipa, Victor Damiani and others. Ballet. Conductor, Roberto Moranzoni.

Saturday, Jan. 30—at 2—Lohengrin (In German). Opera in three acts by Wagner. With Lotte Lehmann, Maria Oleskiewicz, Rene Malson, Hans Hermann Nissen, Edward Habich, Alexander Kipnis. Conductor, Egon Pollak.

Saturday, Jan. 30—at 8—(Poppa! pieces)—Martha (In Italian). Opera in four acts by von Flotow. With Leola Turner, Cor Glade, Tito Schipa, Virgilio Lazari, Salvatore Baccanelli and others. Conductor, Frank St. Legor.

Would Admit Husbands

Forty witnesses appeared Jan. 14 before the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization to advocate enactment of legislation embracing a bill (H. R. 5589) which would exempt the husbands of American citizens from the immigration quota.

Several women's organizations were represented at the hearing, including the Y. W. C. A.

Meanwhile the Secretary of Labor, William N. Doak, announced orally that some 25 women, delegates of the New York branch of the Citizens Wives Association, had called on Jan. 13 to solicit his support in obtaining the admittance of their husbands to the United States. The association, he said, is composed of American born or American naturalized women whose husbands are aliens.

Home Relief

The proposal for creation of a Federal home loan bank system, as recommended by the President and embodied in bills pending in congress, received the unanimous support of those testifying, Jan. 14, before a subcommittee on banking and currency.

"I am not speaking for builders or for banks," said a supporter. "I am speaking in support of the bill from the standpoint of the relief it will afford to thousands upon thousands of small home owners who have been trying to pay for their homes by monthly payments."

Airports Increase

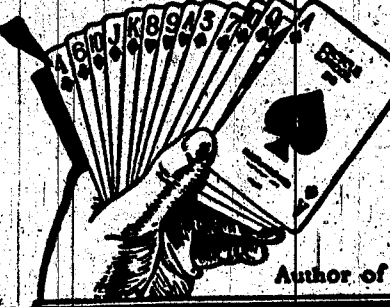

Commercial builders of airports were the most important factors in the increase during 1931 of the country's airports and landing fields from 1,782 to 2,009, a net gain of 227, according to an announcement of Jan. 14 by the Aeronautics Branch of the Department of Commerce.

Commercial, private fields increased by 19 per cent between Jan. 1, 1931, and Jan. 1, 1932, and numbered 979 on the latter date, while municipal airports grew in number by 15 per cent to reach 630, according to supplementary statistics made available at the end of the calendar year, while hunting licenses expired at the mid-

The mid-winter meeting of the state extension committee will be held in Chicago, January 10-13. Headquarters will be at the Stevens Hotel. The program includes attendance at one of the performances of the Chicago Civic Opera company in the new Civic Opera house. A visit will be made to the studio of Nellie V. Walker to see her sketch-model of the proposed monument to mark the site of Old Salem, near Petersburg, for six years the home of Abraham Lincoln.

Senator Otis F. Glenn has been informed by the federal war department that the Illinois waterway, extending from Lake Michigan to Ulen, Illinois, will be completed by October 15, 1932. The Illinois waterway would complete the deep waterway from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico begun in 1909 by the state and was taken over by the federal government in 1930.

Fishing license blanks for 1932 are being mailed out by the department of conservation to county, city, and village clerks. Fishing licenses expire at the end of the calendar year, while hunting licenses expire at the mid-

How to play Bridge AUCTION and CONTRACT

ARTICLE No. 12

Many times in this series of articles the writer has warned players against over-bidding where the situation did not justify it. In other words, don't overbid unless the possible gain is fairly equal to the possible loss. The usual way for the thoughtful player to make this mistake is to bid a minor suit, clubs or diamonds, when the bidding indicates that he has no chance for game. Why take a chance of only making three or four odd in clubs or diamonds when if you are doubled, you may lose a big penalty?

A score less than game is only of value about once in fifteen deals; so it is a good rule never to bid to make a score less than game if there is any risk attached. There is practically nothing to gain by the bid and so much to lose. One very good player at one of the local clubs seems to have a weak-bid in this kind of bid with hearts on sight, for example, he held the following hand, A-10 in the diagram:

Hearts—A, 10, 5
Clubs—K, 9, 8, 5
Diamonds—K, 10, 9
Spades—K

No score, first game. Z dealt and bid one diamond, A one spade and Y foregoing hand?

Auction Bidding: B should bid one spade and then, if overbid by partner or opponents, should bid the heart suit.

Example Hand No. 2
Hearts—A, 10, 5
Clubs—K, 9, 8, 5
Diamonds—K, 10, 9
Spades—K

No score, rubber game. At Auction, Z dealt and bid one no trump, A passed, Y bid two hearts and B and Z passed. At this point A thoughtlessly decided to bid three clubs. The bidding should have indicated that he had no possible chance for game. Z's no trump bid, Y's two-heart bid and B's pass were all indicators that Y Z held the best combined hands. For that reason A couldn't hope to score game. On the other hand, he had a good chance to save game. His hand would probably be worth three tricks with hearts as trumps so that if his partner could take but one trick he would save the game.

A, however, thought of none of these very evident facts and bid three clubs, which Y doubled and defeated by 400 points. If Y Z had played the hand at hearts, they could have scored only three odd. A's bid had taken two heart tricks, and A would have taken two odd. A's bid in this instance cost 400 points when he should have known beforehand that he had no chance for game and a fair chance to save game. Beware of such bids, and of any bids

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win four of the five tricks against A's five? Solution: Z should lead the ace of spades and discard the ace of hearts from his hand. He should then lead the deuce of hearts and let A win the trick with the trey. On this trick Y should discard the ace of diamonds. A is now in the lead and must lead a diamond. No matter what cards A and B play, Z must now win the balance of the tricks.

It is an easy problem and unusual only because of Y's discard of his two aces.

Explorers Have Mapped Out Old Mother Earth

Are there any more great rivers left anywhere on the globe for man to explore? Only a little more than fifty years ago bold adventurers of a half dozen nations were plunging into the depths of Africa, not to be heard from again for months and years, and perhaps never to emerge at all. Burton and Speke, Grant and Baker, Stanley, Kandi and Baumann, and a hundred more were seeking to find the source of the Nile. Conversely, others were trying to unravel the puzzle of the Lualaba, the mighty river which flowed in central Africa, going nobody knew whither. It was Stanley who revealed the unsuspected magnitude of that river system and succeeded after almost incredible hardships in following it to its mouth. It and the Congo were one, but the Congo then had been traced only a hundred miles inland from the Atlantic. But after all is said, what marvel can compare with the wonder of the Mississippi as it carried Marquette below the mouth of the Ohio and La Salle all the way to the Gulf? A few more years and men will be longing for new planets to explore.

Alleges Distemper Is Spread by Human Race

When a man bites a dog—But, according to a report of Dr. Charles Nicolle to the French Academy of Science, man is biting the dog rather seriously—by serving as a reservoir for the dreaded distemper which kills puppies. Doctor Nicolle found that serum from the blood of human beings inoculated with the distemper virus produced the disease in puppies, while man was immune. Animals serve as carriers for numerous human diseases—rats for bubonic plague, cattle for tuberculosis, etc. This is one of the first cases on record where it is shown that man may be the carrier of an animal disease. Doctor Nicolle interprets his findings as showing that the human race was subject to the distemper virus long before the canines and through the ages developed immunity to it. Now man contracts the disease only in such an attenuated form that there are no recognizable symptoms. The dog has not had time to develop this natural immunity.

Odd German Superstition
There is a German superstition that a knife should not be left edge upward, because God and the spirits dwell there, or because it will cut the face of God and the angels.

Weather Lore

People began "speaking of the weather" a long time ago. The first scientific treatise on the weather, says the United States weather bureau, was written by Aristotle more than 300 years before the Christian era. The weather bureau library, which is the largest meteorological collection in the world, has a big book on the weather by Albertus Magnus, printed in 1404, and a facsimile of a weather journal kept by Rev. William Merle of England, who recorded the weather day by day from 1387 to 1344. The first weather records in America, so far as known, were kept by Rev. Johann Campanius, who recorded the weather each day in the colony of New Sweden near the present site of Wilmington, Del., for the years 1644 and 1645.

Roman Colosseum

The great amphitheater at Rome known as the colosseum consisted originally of three arched stories of stone and an upper gallery of wood. The upper gallery was later rebuilt of stone. It was elliptical in plan with its long axis 615 feet and its short axis 510 feet. The arena was 281 feet long and 177 feet wide. The seating capacity of the colosseum was probably between 40,000 and 50,000, although some authorities put the figure as high as 70,000. Though it was the largest of the Roman arenas, it has been exceeded in size by more than one modern amphitheater.

Old Washington Churches

The oldest church in the city of Washington is Christ church (Protestant Episcopal), located on G street S. E., between Sixth and Seventh streets. It was erected in 1705.

Another old church is St. John's (Episcopal), on the northwest corner of H and Sixteenth streets, built in 1814. This church is locally referred to as the "Church of State." Here a pew is reserved for the President of the United States.

VOLUME 47, NUMBER 4

First National in Sound Condition M.H. Karker Sta

Institution Completely Liquid Large Cash Reserves on Hand

To the depositors of the First National Bank of Barrington: Inquiries have been made of the strength and ownership of the First National Bank of Barrington. The First National Bank of Barrington is a sound institution. It has been in business since 1888 and has a long record of successful operation. It is a member of the Federal Reserve System and is a member of the Illinois State Bank and Trust Association. It has a large and varied business, and its assets are well diversified. It is a safe and sound institution, and its depositors are well protected.

I have been kept in close touch with the operations of the bank over two years and know the bank is thoroughly sound in the best financial condition in its history. It has ample reserves, guarantees and is the local depository of the First National Bank of Chicago. Its management and operating personnel is of high character and of a high grade ability and integrity. I have confidence in the present and future stability and strength of your bank. M. H. KARKER, President First National Bank of Chicago

Now is the time for people of Barrington to keep their feet on ground and their heads up. In the last 24 hours, Barrington has experienced a condition of affairs which affected communities without causing any lasting harm.

A bank has been turned over to state auditor for examination and judgment. The depositors should lose much if any of their money, regardless of what action may be taken for the bank.

In the meantime, Barrington is open to have a good sound opinion for business and in a good condition. The First National Bank, according to its December call statement had cash on hand, due from banks, and marketable securities totaling $374,030.17. This is equivalent to more than 60 per cent of total deposits in the bank on date.

Three Blocks Are Re-Subdivided for Assessing Purpose

Several Property Owners Over Assessed, Discover

Approval was granted by the large board of trustees to rectify a portion of the old village plat in lots 5, 6, 15, lying along E. Russell street upon petition of the property owners concerned, at the regular meeting Monday night. The re-subdivision of this plat will correct an error of assessment of property owners who have existed since the plat was originally laid out. The petition was sent to the board by R. G. Phelan who discovered the error through assessment records, and A. W. He Cook county surveyor.

Several of the property owners the blocks rectified have been assessed for more frontage than their plots occupy. For example, it pointed out that W. N. Sears had been assessed for 77 feet front whereas his property occupies 72 feet and 1/2. Ray L. Frye had been assessed for 130 feet when he had only been assessed for 125 feet. Many other property owners had similarly over-assessed; it was pointed out.

Property owners affected by the liberation of these three blocks are Ray L. Frye, Grace Canon, Mr. R. Hawley, Mattilda Dorvald, Mrs. Sears, Alvin Wirsing, Edward J. Alvin P. Pahlke, and James J. Singer.

Release of Easement Granted
A release of easement in a portion of a subdivision of Barrington, east of the village near the N. West highway, was granted by

J. and A. Sales and Service Company
The J. & A. Sales and Service Company closed on Tuesday last week under the liquidation and discount under the bulk sales plan to its creditors, according to J. A. Grueninger, proprietor.
Mr. Grueninger has obtained a petition with Stover and Co. of Chicago, district distributor of 1000 cases, with no market for its business, he decided to liquidate the business.
Mr. Grueninger has been in business in Barrington for several years and has operated a business success here. Slow collections and credit line led to Mr. Grueninger's decision.
