Palatine Bank Is Re-Opened After 5-Day Moratorium

Success in Neighboring Village Is Brought by Mass Confidence

While Barrington has been smoothing out a troubled situation, Palatine has met a similar one, has faced it squarely, and has come out of it full of confidence and ready to continue business in a normal way.

With heavy withdrawals from the Palatine banks making some currency stop necessary, the leaders of the community met Thursday night and decided to call a five day business holiday. That went into effect Friday. During that time, the two banks were examined, the Palatine State bank was found to be solvent, and the depositors of both institutions were easily prevailed upon to stand squarely behind the State Bank when it reopened. It was decided to liquidate the other bank.

Following is an account of the situation as printed in a special issue of the Palatine Enterprise:

The five day moratorium proclaimed for Palatine last Friday at midnight by President Ottendorf, was ended Tuesday night by another proclamation by the village president with two days yet to go.

The wonderful response on the part of the people of Palatine and the surrounding country to the plan for confidence and support of the local institution has proved to the satisfaction of all that the crisis has ended and that business may be resumed with confidence in our local institution greater than any ever shown before.

The State Bank of Palatine will open as usual this morning, assured by their large army of depositors and by the general public of staunch cooperation.

Never has Palatine rallied in a more splendid fashion in a crisis and the fact the State Bank can continue in business with the full approval and cooperation of the banking authorities speaks worlds for the conduct of this institution and for the support given it by the general public. Every one is tired and worn out from the crisis of the last ten days and many of our bank officials have aged years in that short time. All of those officials are deeply moved and profoundly appreciative of the marvelous cooperation given them by the people of Palatine and the fifteen teams of the "flying squadron" who went out to solicit pledges are happy at the result and have a huge renewed faith in the people of their community.

Probably one of the most pleased given in Palatine at the successful outcome of the confidence drive is T. C. Hart, the man who organized and led the reconstruction program as chairman of the citizens committee. All Mr. Hart would say last night was, "I told you Palatine would do it."

BARRINGTON REVIEW

BARRINGTON, ILLINOIS, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1932 $2.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE, SINGLE COPIES, FIVE CENTS

Many Wandering Job Seekers Find Lodging Each Night Beside Warm Hearth in Barrington Jail Room

Salesmen, skilled laborers, clerical men, and unskilled workers, are among the endless chain of men who drift through Barrington, asking for a place, or a quarter, or a sandwich and a cup of coffee, to keep from starving by day and who sleep in the heated and not uncomfortable village jail room by night.

Here today, gone tomorrow, seldom remaining in Barrington for two days at a time, these unemployed, and in many cases destitute wanderers—push on and on, looking for that elusive job.

The village jail harbors a different class of humanity this winter than it has in previous winters.

"Very few real 'boes' travel through Barrington this winter," E. W. Bunde, police chief, said. "Those professional bums have hit for the south. The men we get this year are men, boys of the great army of unemployed."

Early this week a young fellow stopped at the jail for lodging. He recognized him as one who had been here three weeks ago. He told me he had come from Detroit, Mich., on his way to Port Arthur, Wis., where he had been told there was a big building ready for construction. He had expected to get work there. When he found no building work, he started back. During five weeks on the road, the young fellow had worked one hour for a total of 50 cents.

The jail room is arranged with the story in the center and bunks or benches around the wall. Wherever up blankets or mattresses are provided for the itinerant guests, there is plenty of coal on hand, and the men keep the fire blazing during the night. They are able to keep warm. Few nights go by without men taking free lodging here. The record number for one night is nine.

Last Month Was Warmest January, Records Reveal

While the month of January this year appeared to be unusually mild, the average temperature was not much warmer than during the corresponding month last year, according to records compiled by John O. Laux, official U. S. weather recorder of Waukegan.

The mean or average temperature last month was 31.6 degrees, while for the same month last year it was 20.4. The maximum temperature last month was 55 degrees on the 13th. In January of last year the warmest day was the 24th, when the thermometer registered 47 degrees.

The coldest day last month was the 31st when the mercury dropped to two below zero. In January of last year the coldest day was recorded on the 21st with three below zero.

The total snowfall last month was 2.1 inches as compared to 6.1 inches in January of last year. The total precipitation last month was 2.67 inches as compared to .69 inches a year ago.

The past month, according to Laux, was the warmest January on record, the mean temperature averaging about 10 degrees above the average for January.

Local Teachers to Receive Part Cash, Remainder Scrip

Local Situation Better Than in Other Cook County School Districts

Barrington public school teachers will receive part of their remaining salaries for the school year 1931-32 in cash but will have to accept teachers scrip for the remainder according to the present outlook.

A representative of The Review learned from Eran S. Saulton, superintendent of the public schools, that the Cook county tax money and the money raised on sale of Lake county anticipation warrants would have been almost sufficient for payment of the teachers' salaries for the remainder of the present school year, had there not been a pressing bond issue payment which could not be postponed.

There is still a balance in the school treasury. The teachers received their January salaries in cash. They may have to take their February salaries in scrip or part cash-part scrip. And that will go for the remainder of the school term.

The point of hope on the horizon is the re-organized Cook county assessment machinery which is still an unknown quantity but which it has been generally hoped will facilitate the tax collecting program in the county.

"Our chief cause for worry is not the balance of this school year," Mr. Saulton said. "We will get along, and the teachers will receive enough of their salaries due in cash so that they will be able to manage. Our chief concern is for the next school year. Unless the re-organizing plan in Cook county is successful, we will run into real difficulties by next fall."

The situation to-date in Barrington is better than in other Cook county villages and school districts. Teachers in many school districts have not received any cash payments during the present school year. This probably is not much solace to teachers who have contracted to teach for certain salaries and who gauge their expenditures on the salaries which they are supposed to receive. "But no one in Barrington is to blame for the county tax situation."

Confidence in Barrington Urged at Civic Meeting

Confidence in Barrington, confidence in the business institutions and people of Barrington was expressed at a meeting of the Barrington Civic league last Friday night.

The meeting, which was held in the school house, was attended by representatives of the various civic clubs of the village, among those who spoke were Hugh Calkins, president of the organization, N. O. Plagge, Rev. Philip Beuscher, Rev. C. R. Drusell, J. C. Cadwallader, F. C. Fleming, and M. H. Schreiber.

Keeping a level head and refraining from strong personal feelings were topics of advice touched on by the speakers.

Daily Inspection Is Made of Forest Preserve Streams

Because the streams of the forest preserves are so contaminated through pollution, daily search is being made by chemists and engineers from the state sanitary water board and the forest preserves district to ascertain the location of such sources and the degree of pollution.

The search is being made at the investigation of the clean streams advisory committee, started by Emmett Wheelan, president of the forest preserve commissioners with the idea of cleaning up the streams in so far as sound engineering and economic permit to restore water free from pollution conserving for the people their health and safety, recreation spaces, water transportation, aquatic life, property values and agricultural uses.

The streams under survey are Salt Creek, Des Plaines, Chicago and Calumet rivers and their tributaries. The engineers and chemists are covering every inch of both shores of these streams on foot so that no source of pollution will escape their notice. This far more than 500 miles have been thus covered and amazing results are shown. Sources of pollution are enumerated in the many thousands. These sources are field, road, golf drains, private, septic, sanitary stumps and industrial sewers, overflows, treatment works and abandoned outlets.

Meetings are held each two weeks by the clean streams advisory committee and work is planned and started. Correction of present sewage systems in towns, cities and villages bordering these streams will stop the greatest sources of pollution. Plans are under way toward this correction.

Members of the committee are: George A. Hughes, Riverside, ch. C. E. Christopher, River Forest; Charles Stewart, Des Plaines; Robert Wagner, Chicago; Dr. R. P. Blodgett, Chicago Heights; Carl M. Reheims, Chicago; Charles G. Sauer, municipal superintendent of the forest preserve district is secretary.

Boy Scout Movement Brought to This Country Through "Good Turn" of Unknown Boy in London

The Boy Scouts of America organization is approaching its twenty-second anniversary which will be celebrated on February 8 as part of the local Boy Scout week. This celebration again calls attention to the fact that a good turn performed by an unknown boy scout was responsible for bringing the scout movement to American soil.

The boy scout movement celebrates its birthday each year on February 8 for on that day in 1910, the late William D. Boyce, Chicago publisher, and two friends incorporated the Boy Scouts of America in Washington, D. C., thereby formally launching the movement in America.

The story of the good turn performed by the London boy scout which led to the beginning of scouting in America, was related many times by Mr. Boyce before his death a few years ago. As he told the incident, he had left his hotel in London to transact some business and was caught in the grip of one of the dense, heavy fogs which are characteristic of London in winter. He was trying to find his way and asked, "May I be of service to you?" Mr. Boyce told the boy where he wished to go and the lad, saluting, said, "Come with me, sir," and led him to his destination.

Movies of Scout Jamboree Will Be Shown at Meeting

Programs Completed for Parents' Night and Cub Pack Installation

Movies of the International Scout jamboree held in London in 1930 and of the Northwest suburban summer camp at Camp O-Da-Ko-To, in Wisconsin, will be shown at the parents' night program of the boy scouts next Monday evening, Feb. 8. The program will be held in the show room of the Standard Motor Co. garage, N. Cook and Railroad streets.

This will be the second event of National scout foundation week. At 10:30 a. m. Sunday, the members of troops 10 and 21 will attend scout service at St. Paul's church. On Friday evening, an installation program will be held at the high school gymnasium for the new cub pack.

The meeting Monday evening will open with demonstrations by the scouts. These will include first aid demonstrations, making fire without matches, etc. The address of the evening will be given by C. O. Nimitz of Des Plaines, scout executive of the Northwest suburban council. The moving picture program will be started early enough to be completed before 9:15 o'clock. At that time, the radio will be turned on, and a New York boy scout, the son of Chief Scout Executive James E. West, will lead the scouts all over the country in a recitation of their oath. The Barrington boys will repeat the oath with Scout West, as will the boys in thousands of other troops in a nation wide radio hookup.

Installation of cub pack 102, in the high school gymnasium, will be attended by the scouts of troops 10 and 21, the parents and friends of the youngsters in the pack and by officers of the American Legion which is sponsoring the pack. Installation cards will be given to 18 scouts, and the pack charter will be presented. No boys under 12 years of age who are not candidates for the pack will be admitted. The Legion men who will take part in the program are A. W. Davy, Noel Stanner, and George Whitehead. O. I. Baird, cub master, and the following eagle scouts will assist in the program: Robert Ulbrich, Paul Conn, Harold Calkins, and Earl Eiters.

The story of the good turn performed by the London boy scout which led to the beginning of scouting in America, was related many times by Mr. Boyce before his death a few years ago. As he told the incident, he had left his hotel in London to transact some business and was caught in the grip of one of the dense, heavy fogs which are characteristic of London in winter. He was trying to find his way and asked, "May I be of service to you?" Mr. Boyce told the boy where he wished to go and the lad, saluting, said, "Come with me, sir," and led him to his destination.

Boy Scout Movement Brought to This Country Through "Good Turn" of Unknown Boy in London

The Boy Scouts of America organization is approaching its twenty-second anniversary which will be celebrated on February 8 as part of the local Boy Scout week. This celebration again calls attention to the fact that a good turn performed by an unknown boy scout was responsible for bringing the scout movement to American soil.

The boy scout movement celebrates its birthday each year on February 8 for on that day in 1910, the late William D. Boyce, Chicago publisher, and two friends incorporated the Boy Scouts of America in Washington, D. C., thereby formally launching the movement in America.

1931 Barrington School Rate Will Be Cut 65 Cents

Savings Effected to Trim Current Expenses and Slow Up Debt Retirement

Economies in teaching, in building work, and in administration, and a less ambitious plan of debt retirement have been put into the Barrington public school program with the result that the 1931 school tax rate has been cut from $3.31 on each $100 of assessed valuation to a yet undetermined figure between $2.60 and $2.70.

The 1931 rate for Lake county Barrington has been announced as $3.31. This will be reduced as per the new schedule. The Cook county Barrington rate for 1931 will of course be similar, but the Cook county rate, probably will not be announced for several months.

With a reduction of from $0 to 70 cents in the school tax rate, the village of Barrington, total tax will decline to a point comparable with that of other villages in the northern Cook and southern Lake county districts.

Enrollment High

Several miscellaneous school savings have been effected. Several expenses will be avoided if possible. One expense, which the school board faces is the cost of installing a new boiler in the school. The old boiler is nearly worn out. Insurance inspectors who examined the unit last summer notified the board of education that the boiler would have to be replaced during the summer of 1932. If insurance rates were to remain as at present, because of the boiler, the boiler has had to be replaced in the summer of 1932. The boiler has had to be replaced in the summer of 1932. The boiler has had to be replaced in the summer of 1932.

Although school expenses have been trimmed in several channels, no savings can be made by reduction in size of faculty, Mr. Smith said, as the total school enrollment is almost as large as ever, and the size of the faculty must be in proportion to the enrollment.

An increase in high school enrollment practically offsets any decrease in grade school enrollment with the result that no reduction in faculty can be made.

The month of January enrollments for three years are as follows:

Grades	1929-30	1930-31	1931-32
Kindergarten	30	4	30

Candidates Make Announcements as District Changes

Church Out, Simpson Remains in Campaign for 10th Dist. Congressman

Now that the new thirteenth congressional district has been eliminated definitely by a supreme court decision, it is interesting to follow the course taken by candidates for congressmen from what would have been the new district.

Ralph Church and James Simpson, Jr., prominent candidates early in the congressional race, have announced their decisions based on the change of district.

Mr. Church stated: Immediately after the passage of the reapportionment bill last June, I announced my candidacy for congress from the new Thirteenth district. Since the recent supreme court decision declaring the reapportionment unconstitutional, I have been strongly urged to continue the race in the tenth district—but I am forced to admit that I can not take the time and strength necessary to wage a congressional campaign in the large territory now added to my district without neglect of that legislative work which is my first duty.

The Day of the Prize Award

By JACK WOODFORD

IT HAD been only dire necessity that had made Ellen enter her name and supply her photograph for the beauty contest that was being held by the Metropolitan Pickle company.

It was the only large firm in the small southern town where she lived, and it had come to the conclusion that a beauty contest would be an excellent advertising scheme. People thought pickles were funny; they could not, somehow, associate the thought, for instance, in their minds of a pretty girl eating a pickle.

So, just as the manufacturers of glasses had popularized glasses for ladies by advertising through the pictures of beautiful ladies wearing them, the Metropolitan Pickle company intended to popularize pickles by advertising through pictures of beauty contest winners eating them.

The first prize was one thousand dollars. To Ellen, one thousand dollars would mean everything in the world. She was just eighteen and her brother had recently injured himself so that he could not work for several years at least. A thousand dollars would carry them over until she could find a job, give up school and start earning enough to keep the wolf from the door until her brother got back again. Their father was dead; her mother carried on in their small cottage, keeping chickens to help out and raising much of the truck vegetables that they ate.

With some trepidation Ellen visited the offices of the Metropolitan Pickle company and was interviewed by Walter Thornton, son of the owner. The interview was not painful, as Ellen had anticipated. Walter Thornton was about twenty-five. He had deep gray eyes, and soft, shiny black hair. He was tall and strong looking; Ellen remembered having read in the papers some time before that he had carried off football honors at the state university. In finishing up the interview after he had accepted her picture and registration he said:

"It is rather unusual, Miss Winslow, for a young lady of your type to enter such a contest. You come, do you not, from one of the finest old families down this way?"

"I know," Ellen added, "but in this generation the Winslows will have to say goodbye to pride. Grim necessity is the dictator now."

"Too darn bad," he said, after she had outlined her reasons for entering the contest. He added: "You're the last registrant I'm going to see today. I'm worn out gubbing with them. They all claim they're the most beautiful girls in town. It's so unique to have had an application from a girl who doesn't vociferously insist that she's the prettiest in town."

"I wouldn't consider that fair," Ellen told him. "Since you are the final judge, I oughtn't to try to influence your decision."

"Would that prevent your riding home with me," he asked.

Arriving at her home, Walter surprisingly accepted her perfunctory invitation to come in for a moment. He went in and soon, southern fashion, he was talking to her mother about relationships and people in town they both knew.

He went into the room where Bob, Ellen's brother, lay sick and talked to him awhile. When he had come out he said to Ellen:

"I'd like to give you a job; but you see, the terms of the contest are that no entrants shall be employed by the Metropolitan Pickle company. However, since you're looking for a job, suppose you ride into town with me tomorrow, and I'll send you around to a place or two; after first phoning, to see if I can't find you a position."

Ellen rode in with him the following morning; but, oddly enough, she was not employed at any of the places where he took her to go.

"That's strange," he remarked over the phone; "let's get together, over luncheon, and see what's wrong." They did. And, that night, he drove her home again.

It became increasingly evident to Ellen that she would probably win the prize. That Walter had come to think a lot of her was patent; and she knew that she admired him, could have loved him had she let herself—because he was a millionaire in his own right.

And then came the great day of the prize announcements. Ellen rose early to get the morning paper. She had not won first prize; nor second prize, nor third prize, nor even honorable mention! Her name appeared nowhere at all, in the prize announcements.

That afternoon, on the way home from work, Walter dropped in. Ellen received him coolly. He was hurt. Dropping all preliminaries he said, huskily:

"Ellen, dear, don't you understand—I'm wild about you. I want you for my wife. And do you think, for heaven's sake, that I wanted a picture of my possible future wife appearing everywhere eating a pickle?" Ellen could not help herself. She laughed hysterically and then she cried. At was in Walter's arms, and before the rush of his words of love, all the alarms of the past weeks faded into nothingness.

Your 1932 Advertising Dollar Will Bring Better Results than in Any Time During the Last Two Years

Advertising Is Your Best Bet

A National Survey conducted under the direction of the Advertising Federation of America revealed that a check-up of 102 large companies showed that, "Those firms which increased their advertising in 1930 over 1929 made a 58 per cent better profit comparison than those which decreased it—the same firms increased their lead still further in 1931."

Gilbert T. Hodges, president of the organization, pointed out that a recent analysis of 70 cities, conducted by the organization, found that appreciable business recovery has been under way for some months where the newspaper advertising had been the heaviest.

President Hodges added that the survey shows a growing confidence in 1932 merchandising possibilities. The survey indicates that the 1932 advertising dollar will bring better results than at any time during the last two years.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In concern over the disappearance of the young and beautiful wife of his wealthy friend, Crandall White, Aaron Glanzner engages Motherwell, private investigator, to find her. A note from the missing woman warns her husband not to call in the police, saying she "hoped to come back."

CHAPTER II.—Mrs. White is younger than her husband, and his devotion has been the talk of New York. Her leaving him is unexplainable. She is known to have with her a remarkable jewel, the "Medusa's Head," but her maid, Coggeshall, thinks she had little else of value. Glanzner and Motherwell consider the idea of kidnapping, but there has been no demand for ransom.

CHAPTER III.—It is found that Mrs. White has all her jewelry with her. Coggeshall talks mysteriously of her mistress being "worried," but insists she knows nothing of her whereabouts.

At the corner he caught up with the errand boy, still loitering along with his hat box.

"Where'd she go?" he asked, passing him and stopping to light a cigarette.

"Wentzel's, second floor back," the boy answered. "She made a row in there and cried, coming out. Talked to herself."

"Keep right after her, Bill," and ran easily up the steps the woman had just come down.

The second floor office at the back announced itself as devoted to the interests of P. Wentzel, consulting chemist. Analyses of every description. Appointments at convenience.

Mr. Motherwell rang and entered. A bored young man, obviously American, sat at a crowded roll-top desk, near a telephone. As Motherwell entered he was explaining somewhat irritably by means of this instrument that while he would take any amount of messages, and was there absolutely for that purpose, in fact, he could make no appointments whatever.

"Professor out?" said Motherwell lightly, glancing at the diplomas.

"You've hit it!" returned the youth. "Any message? He'll look in any time, I guess."

"As when?" Motherwell inquired.

"I wanted to see him, if I could. My specimens—"

"Nothing doing," said the youth flatly. "It's no good asking me, because I don't know a thing about 'em. I can take a message, and you can leave your number, if you like. You'll think I made specimens. All that work's done in the laboratory. There's nothing here. How can I tell who was here, when?"

"Ah," said Motherwell sympathetically. "I suppose they do worry you. And women don't always understand—"

"There you said it!" the youth burst out. "Women! Just had one in here. Lord, I thought she'd knife me! She and her messages. Wouldn't I give 'em to her if I had 'em? What's Mrs. Gray to me—or Mrs. Pink or Mrs. Blue? You'd think the professor ran a post office!"

"Oh, well," Motherwell remarked pacifically, "you know women do leave messages for each other."

"I see old Wentzel taking 'em, too!" said the youth scornfully, and accepted an excellent cigarette.

"Nothing else to do of course—and him called up by the Rockefeller push and the P. and S. and all the big bugs! Why, I'm worn out with it! Look at that table there," and he pointed to a heap of bundles and bottles on a heavy table by the door.

"All left to be called for—boys and messengers paying over it, to get 'em back, if the professor can't get 'em immediately!"

"Very well," I tell 'em, 'prove up on it and take it away, if that's the idea! You can't see him. Give me a voucher and get out.' Some of 'em aren't even tagged—look at that thing!"

He pointed to a good-sized box wrapped in purple paper. Motherwell stared at it. Half the wrapper had been torn off—and the torn piece he had seen the night before, blattered and scribbled, in Mr. Glanzner's olive, blue-veined hand.

"For the love of Mike, that's mine!" he said excitedly, "that's my specimen! Do you mean to say the professor hasn't touched it?"

The youth shrugged his shoulders elaborately.

"There you are!" he said, "as bad as the rest! Now, what's your trouble? Where's your receipt? Want it back?"

"Receipt?" Motherwell cried in vexation. "Why should I have a receipt? We were to go over it together. I can't wait a minute. We must have the report today!"

The youth picked up the box, balanced it scornfully.

"Not even an address!" he said. "That's a neat looking package, isn't it? That's a nice responsibility! What's it a specimen of? Lead? What's your name, anyhow?"

"My name is Wells," said Motherwell, his eyes snapping, "and it's a piece of onyx. It's from Glanzner and Company. Call Mr. Glanzner right up and get it O. K'd, if you want, but for heaven's sake give it to me—I must get somebody else to test it, that's all."

The youth whistled.

"Well, you can search me!" he said doubtfully. "Let's have a look at it. Glanzner, you say?"

He took out a pocket knife, poked through the tissue wrapping, and disclosed a veined, milky chunk of onyx, with a gold rim just edging out.

"I guess you win," he said, "give me a receipt for it, will you? There can't be two of 'em. And the name again, will you?"

Motherwell wrote, and thrust the box under his arm carelessly.

"Where is this laboratory?" he asked suddenly. "I'd like to have a try at the professor, myself."

"I'll bet you would!" the youth agreed sardonically. "But you won't! Nor anybody else. He's not to be disturbed, he isn't."

Motherwell sighed.

"Oh, well, all right," he said. Then his face lightened. "Hasn't he got an assistant or something?" he asked hopefully. "Couldn't I see him?"

"You mean Doctor Schaffner?"

"Dark," said Motherwell suggestively, "with a beard."

"Lord, no! This one's sandy-haired and a little moustache. He's working with him now. A lot of people want him, too. I'll tell you, Schaffner's got a dinner date at Brucce's—know that Italian place? You might catch him there. Try it, anyhow."

"Thanks, I will," said Motherwell. He went slowly down the stairs.

"Now, why did Coggeshall lie about that paperweight?" he asked sorry at the taxicab he sat in. "Did she come for it? Then why not ask for it, outright. Or was she looking for the Medusa? Or did she throw the Medusa away, herself? Nonsense: the woman who stole it threw it away. And kept the rest of course. She didn't dare keep it—knew it would be identified. Because Coggeshall is shielded by her madam—she'd keep the Medusa, if anything. Didn't even ask for her—unless madam called herself Mrs. Gray. But if Coggeshall knew that name, then she knew the whole plan from the beginning, and lied all along. Besides, that woman in the cab wasn't young. Did they fool her on the jewels, and give her only the Medusa?"

"Well, here's the paperweight and there's where she went, anyway. Now let's look up Old Prezzels!"

Sitting an hour later in his club in front of a chop and a baked apple he was called to the telephone booth and surprised to find himself talking to Mr. Glanzner himself. No, he had not gone to his old friends, who had begged him to stay in New York. The doctor was with him, and a nurse. Had Mr. Motherwell any further ideas as to the business they had been discussing?

Mr. Motherwell had, and would send Mr. Wells around to see him shortly.

And soon the young man with his bag and shell-rimmed spectacles was in the library of Mr. Glanzner's city house, and the torn box was on Mr. Glanzner's knees, and the Medusa in his olive hand.

"You know, you're rather extraordinary, Motherwell," said the jeweler.

"Only lucky, sir," the young man answered frankly, "really. A child would have followed up that ad in the Herald. The rest just broke my way."

"I was told that things often broke your way," said Mr. Glanzner. "It seems they do. Who is this Wentzel?"

"Perfectly all right, sir, as far as I can find. He's a Swiss. Alsatian. Stands very high. He's a member of the Chemical Engineers' club and has lectured at Columbia. Has a laboratory in Jersey. They've got his whole record."

"You're sure she went there?"

"Here's the onyx thing Coggeshall tied up, sir. The paper fits absolutely. I think she wrote it there."

"And left this for Coggeshall?"

"Probably. Only she seemed to want a message, not a package. Didn't even take it."

"You think she was Mrs. Gray?"

Motherwell shrugged. "Maybe. But who is the older woman? She's the one we want, sir. She didn't get enough pay, you see. And she was alone. Mrs. White was with someone—some one who was hurrying her."

"And telling her what to say, you think?"

"Absolutely, sir. And making her go."

"You still stick to that, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, I do."

"And yet, Motherwell, what was the hurry? The jewels were all out of the way, before a very quiet, plain dress was arranged; a taxicab was called, not to use her own car. What is there sudden in all that?"

"Something turned up," said Motherwell.

"Or somebody," said the jeweler. Motherwell turned on him impatiently.

"There you are, sir!" he cried, "there you are! You see, you've got this all clear in your mind—I know you can't help it, but you have. And you can't really think, you see. You've got a complete picture."

"What do you mean?" the older man asked shortly.

Motherwell sighed impatiently.

"See here," he said. "Here's a girl. Married at what—twenty-two—twenty-one? That's near enough. All accounted for since then, and, perhaps, from when she got to Paris. Perhaps before. But a lot can happen to a girl before she's twenty-one. Suppose it's happened, happened and forgotten."

"Now, here she is, happy and secure. Brilliantly secure. Everything going her way. And then—the old story. It turns up. Or, of course, he turns up. A lover? Perhaps. A husband? Maybe. Maybe she thought he was dead. Maybe—in prison. Oh, yes—it happens, you know!"

"Now, in that case, it's blackmail, or it's just plain principle—principle and conscience—or it's sheer funk. Of course, everything she has shell give up. But maybe that's not enough. Maybe he just wants her, and there's no bribe at all."

The jeweler's mobile face stopped him. "I tell you, yes!" the young man cried, "men are that way about women! It's happened! Anyway, she went. And didn't want to. Because she hoped to come back. That is, according to you, she wants to eat her cake and have it, too! And all you want to know, now, is how much he'll take? Isn't that so?"

Glanzner threw up his hands.

"I'm afraid it is," he said softly. "I'm afraid it is! And can you see any other picture, you extraordinary boy?"

"I can't see any picture at all," said Motherwell slowly, "none at all. There's one, the obvious one. And of course it may be the actual one. You think Coggeshall knows all about it. Now, I don't. I think she knows something, a little, a lead, a clue. But she's afraid to tell it. Why? I think she had no idea that her mistress had gone. I think she hasn't any idea where she has gone, but believes she can find something out from Wentzel. I believe if she knew, she'd tell me."

Mr. Glanzner shook his head.

"Well," he said heavily, "my head is too old a head to make a new picture, perhaps. But Clella would never have parted willingly with this," and he stared, half bitterly, half delightedly, at the frozen smile on the wonderful lips encircled by the tiny tossing serpents. "Whoever took that from her, took the thing she loved the best. Motherwell!"

He sighed.

"I'll put this away," he added and opened the box. Lifting out the heavy, opalescent half-globe of onyx, he shook it free from the tissue wrappings.

"I gave her that last Christmas," he said. "See, the frame has slipped."

He gathered up a handful of paper from the bottom of the box and stared questioningly at the young man.

"What's this?" he asked and shook it free.

A dark blue flash from the paper, and as something slipped from his hand he seized another roll of it and shook it out. A three-strand pearl necklace fell on his lap.

"What?" cried Motherwell, and falling on the rest they unrolled them: cool emerald and bleeding ruby, and lace work of platinum and spray of icy diamonds.

The great jeweler stared at him, pearls in his limp hand, a collar of rubies trailing on his trouser leg.

"And I left them in the check-room at the club!" the young man gasped.

"And she left them in a half-wrapped pasteboard box, on an office table!" said Mr. Glanzner slowly. "Poor Crandall! My poor old boy!"

Eastern Nations First in Use of "Fireworks"

The origin of "fireworks" is unknown, but the art was early practiced in the East. Although Chinese compositions (known as Greek fire) were used in European warfare before gunpowder had become known among the western nations, fireworks, in the modern sense of the word, became known to them about the middle of the fourteenth century and record is found of their having been used as an accessory of public pageantry in the year 1588. The early development of fireworks in Europe was due to the Florentines. Fireworks have been associated with the Fourth of July from the beginning. At the time of the signing of the Declaration of Independence John Adams, in a letter to his wife said: "It (Independence day) ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with shows, games, sports, gun salutes, bonfires and illuminations from one end of the continent to the other from this time forward for evermore."

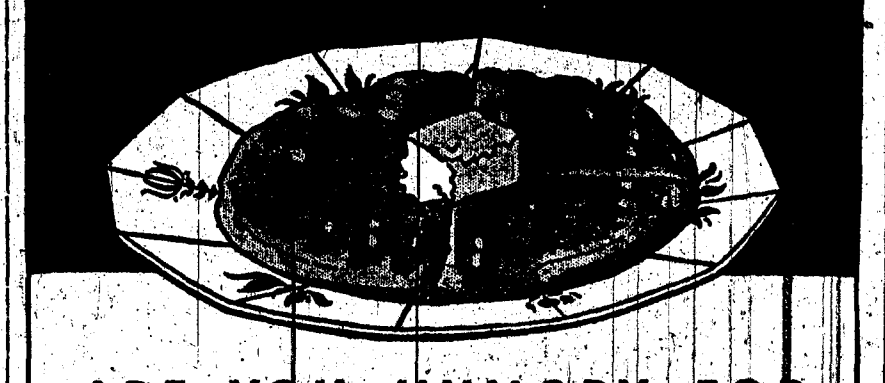

Between, Nihi-Novgorod and Mother Volga are little Russian villages which should never be missed by those fortunate enough to visit Russia. Some of them, where wood carving is the home indoor occupation, or where the Russians used to be painted, are veritable museums of quaint carvings: vases, flower stands, snuff boxes, tartar boots and home utensils are now decorated instead of icons, but after you have passed a few scenic garden encircled homes, with lanterns in the windows, you have one more old and wrong idea of Russia and its people.

The New 1932 CHRYSLER Challenges

With These Great Engineering Features

FLOATING POWER

The greatest engineering development of modern time. Revolutionary in principle—sensational in results. Completely wipes out power tremor from both frame and body. Yields a smoothness that is impossible to describe. There's nothing like it—nothing nearly like it.

AUTOMATIC CLUTCH

Completely Automatic—makes driving easy for everybody. Your left foot is perfectly idle; you don't have to touch the clutch pedal even when starting from a standstill, or when changing gears, and that includes reverse.

SILENT GEAR-SELECTOR

It isn't gear-shifting in a Chrysler engine any more—it's gear-selecting. You move the lever freely into place in any direction, at any speed, or when reversing, without using the clutch—the gears cannot clash.

FREE WHEELING

Chrysler Free Wheeling is an entirely separate unit. When you are free-wheeling in a Chrysler the gears are at a complete standstill, disconnected from both engine and rear wheels.

HYDRAULIC BRAKES

Chrysler Hydraulic Brakes excel because they are simpler, have fewer parts, never need lubrication and are always equalized. Quicker, safer stops. Once you drive with Chrysler Hydraulic brakes, you'll never want to go back to any other kind.

DOUBLE-DROP GIRDER-TRUSS FRAME

Chrysler engineers have developed a frame of entirely new design, Double-Drop for safety and modern appearance; incorporating two extra steel members, giving two-fold support and strength. The result is multiplied strength and a stable, distortion-proof foundation for the body.

OILITE SQUEAK-PROOF SPRING

An entirely new patented spring construction. Cannot squeak under any conditions. Never needs lubrication. Spring leaves are separated by discs of Oilite, a metal containing its own lubrication. No interleaf friction. Standard on all new Eights.

ALL-STEEL BODY

Today's traffic conditions demand safety in a motor car body. Chrysler steel bodies are of all steel construction rigidly reinforced and welded into one piece.

EFFORTLESS STEERING

The New Chrysler steers with a touch. Less effort in driving. Less effort in parking. Fully protected from road shocks.

Drive one of these New Chryslers and learn what a truly modern car is.

How Warriors Unearthed

Some of the graves of the Huns, who ravaged southern Europe during the first few centuries of the Christian era, are being unearthed in the province of Mongolia. The finds include a Chinese and a Grecoian. Among all the tombs containing the ornaments, tapestries, weapons or idols. The remains of the Mongolian princes were preserved, only the hair of the dead. Approximately 150 of the Huns' graves were located by the expedition which proceeded from Urumchi, northwest Mongolia, to the Gobi Desert. The tombs lay in subterranean passages constructed of stones and had ridged many of them but while taking much of the treasure they destroyed the rest.

To Ireland for Sunsets

Sunset scenes from the west coast of Ireland are accounted famous in the world, not only to the Irish, but by American tourists who cannot help adding to the glory of the scene by imagining the loneliness in the heart of the Green West. Stand on the strand at Barmore, the pretty little village near Murrisk, and watch the sun slipping down to rest behind Achill, with all the tumbling sea adobe at their summits with the borrowed light, and you will add to the Irish know how to arrange their sunsets. At such an hour the sun tomorrow and dead yesterday are all in oblivion.—Exchange.

Barrington Woman's Club

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," a play by Rudolph Besant was reviewed by Mrs. Helen Bousing Thursday at the January meeting of the study class. The play, Mrs. Bousing explained, is based on the romance of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning and the scene is laid in London in 1845 and takes place at the Barrett's home at 50 Wimpole street. As a background for her review Mrs. Bousing read a few verses from the poems of both Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning.

The play opens with a description of Elizabeth's room which is really a bed-sitting room to which she has been confined for several years due to her failing health. She is admired by her younger brothers and sisters and is served by her faithful maid, Wilton, who also takes care of her dog, Flush.

The correspondence of Elizabeth and Browning begins through a reciprocal appreciation of their poetry. Browning feels that he knows her through her verses. Even before he meets her he writes that he loves her poems with all his heart and that he loves her too. The love he has life and energy to give her. His first visit leaves her breathless as he is so ardent. After this she has a new interest in life and slowly regains her strength. This scene of Browning's first visit with Elizabeth is said to be the most beautiful scene of the year. These months later Browning tells Elizabeth that he loves her and makes her realize that she loves him. They are married secretly and she returns home to prepare for the trip to Italy with her husband. Several days later she departs for Italy leaving a letter for each member of the family. In the last scene the brothers and sisters read their letters and the last to read is Mr. Barrett. As he reads there is silence and nothing but the fury of his thickened breathing shows his emotion. Finally he speaks, demanding that Elizabeth's dog be destroyed and that Elizabeth's maid be killed. Mr. Barrett's face becomes once more a still white mask and he tears the letter into little pieces as the curtain falls.

The dominating character of the father is well brought out in the play. Mr. Browning calls Elizabeth's father a petty tyrant and given to gross bullying and he can't understand a devotion like that which demands all and gives nothing. There are many unhappy, rebellious scenes between Elizabeth and her father. Also the character of Henrietta is well brought out. She is the high spirited sister, the only one who is not suppressed by the dominating father.

Mrs. Bousing stated that the play had two points to recommend it. Its real literary quality and the fact that it is true. It clings sufficiently close to the established facts of Robert Browning's and Elizabeth Barrett's life and still is able to build a plot that is both sentimentally moving and dramatically stimulating to all imaginations.

Katherine Cornell, a talented and accomplished actress, very beautifully and sympathetically plays the part of Elizabeth Barrett. It is playing in New York at present but as the engagement there is limited, it will soon be in Chicago.

A committee representing the club, which has been chosen to assist in the relief work includes the following women: Margaretta Amett Lines, Albert Kotel, Sanford Rieke, H. H. Wente, Earl Virden and John Welch, Jr.

Dam Project Will Give County Its 57th Lake

Lake county, long known to a sandy of people as the "Land of Lakes" is to have its lakes here by one on the completion of a project started early this week in Robert C. Alt Antioch, Illinois which is located just south of Elgin.

The total number of lakes in county will be then, fifty-seven. Another artificial lake is being constructed in the southern part of county near Deerfield. Lake Co. was long known as "the county of 55 lakes."

A dam 400 feet long and 15 feet high, now under construction close a natural basin in a ravine near natural beauty where 200 of water will be impounded, for a lake over a mile in length. At shore line almost circling the edge of the lake will prevent shallow, dry engineers stated. The greatest will be 21 feet, near the middle of the lake. Water sources will be springs in the basin and from drainage from surrounding hills and woods.

The lake will occupy nearly a of the 412 acre tract situated between Antioch and the Mississippi river, Milwaukee ave. and state highway.

The building of the dam will be to realize a project that has in contemplation for several years coming to Alt and his associates, who, long ago, saw the possibility of transforming the lower part of land into a beautiful body of water that not only would enhance the of all real estate affected, but prove to be a valuable asset to entire lake region.

Paving of Three Highway to Be Completed This Year

The first unit to extend from Points to Route 68 will be paid from funds of the county bond of $1,250,000 passed in 1928. The unit is to run from Route 21 and is to be a state aid financed. The entire new highway, be approximately five miles long for this year, a twenty-foot wide will be constructed from Half I. Diamond Lake and is to be through the county road bond I. Contracts for each of the road be let and work started as favorable weather sets in. Lobell said.

The Lake County Good Roads association is comprised of super town clerks, and township road

GETTING AIR MAIL THROUGH
A bill before Congress by Representative Ridd of Brooklyn, provides for a pneumatic tube line between the Brooklyn post office and the Floyd Bennett airport. Colonel Clarence D. Chamberlain, the famous aviator, says that "as things stand now, hours are saved daily by means of the air mail. Our pilots fly tens of thousands of miles each day, risking their lives to annihilate space and time to reach their airport destinations on schedule. Then what happens?"
Answering his own question, Chamberlain traces the trail of a truck leaving Floyd Bennett Field with air mail and taking an average of at least forty minutes to deliver its load to the Brooklyn post office at Borough Hall, where another ten to fifteen minutes is required to unload it on the post office station platform, after which the mail bags must be taken inside the post office. "The time thus lost is equal, or almost equal, to the time in which a plane flies from Boston to New York, a distance of 225 miles by air," says Mr. Chamberlain, who comments, "The comparison does not speak well for the present system."
"The existing pneumatic tube system of Brooklyn and New York which consists of 56 miles of tubing and which has handled over 6,000,000 letters daily without the loss of a single letter during the 30 years of its operation proves the practicability of the pneumatic tube."
"Pneumatic tubes are on duty at all times. To save time is the purpose of the air mails."

COULD BALANCE BUDGET
Authorities at the capitol are perfectly willing, it seems, to cut down government expenditures for goods, supplies, etc. in the so-called economy program now under way, regardless of how many workers in private industry this may embarrass, and regardless of the fact that goods are at rock bottom prices. But the federal payroll must remain intact, despite the fact that a 10 per cent cut would go almost the entire distance in balancing the budget, would keep everybody at work, reduce the tax burden, and set an excellent example for states and municipalities.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER
By National Editorial Association
(Special to The Review)

THE LEGISLATORS, anxious to help out distress in their district, are taking their appeals for financial aid direct to the members of the reconstruction finance corporation. Much to their surprise the congress has found that when they approved the bi-partisan board of directors for the new institution their act had robbed the project of political favoritism. As a consequence, the congressional petitioners have found that they must await their turn and have their applications go through the same routine as private citizens. For years, it has been the custom for legislators to pay personal calls at the Veterans Bureau in order to expedite the settlement of claims and push the establishment of hospitals in their states. With hundreds of business concerns pressing hard for quick relief, the congressional group must admit that reconstruction aid is doubtful patronage. If the plan of decentralization is adopted it will lift a great burden of work from the senators and representatives. On the other hand, it will deprive them of a rare opportunity for service to their communities and an open invitation to show their influence.

PICTURESQUE CHARACTERS burst on the official horizon so frequently that the theatricals of Senator Huey Long of Louisiana during his first three days stirred nothing but amusement. Long has returned to his home state to save his political machine from wreckage, but will return to his senatorial duties at an early date. The senate veterans treat the billigerent newcomers just as seniors and sophomores at college give the freshmen plenty of time to romp noisily. It is expected that Senator Long's impulses will eventually bring a tightening to the reins. In sharp contrast with Long was the difference the senate and the other freshmen. The junior senator from Maine, Senator White has attended to his duties but followed the custom of keeping quiet until he learned the ropes. The senate, knowing his wide experience as a member of the house in charge of merchant marine matters, invited an expression of opinion. Long gave his views freely and without solicitation.

IF THE HOLIDAY from bitter partisanship in legislation is prolonged a few weeks it will be difficult for the campaigners in the forthcoming election to explain the "issues." When the Republicans and Democrats get together in a presidential year on such vital political matters as taxes, it gives the party hired help a real cause for concern. For it means that the ammunition or claims of party superiority will be at low ebb. In recent years the tide of cleavage has been difficult to discern for old-time war whoops are no longer effective with the voters. To a tempt to define the party distinctions on current first rate issues is to tell the differences between two twelve-dime and twelve-dee. Agreement has been reached that whatever tax program is adopted it will not cover transactions of 1931 but for this and succeeding years.

ONLY THE DIPLOMATS and the restive professional warriors chaffing at the bit of peace are taking the Oriental sword rattling as a serious American problem. Interest of the contract has been intensified on the Reorganized Finance corporation now definitely in action on domestic matters of far more grave import to the citizens than war alarms in remote countries. It is true that certain groups, particularly the war profiteers who feel well on international strife would welcome hostilities with American participation. The sober-minded gentry, knowing that the present depression is partly traceable to the war's aftermath are not heading the noises of elating sabres. It will require mighty events to send abroad in the states "the spirit-stirring drum and war-piercing fire of war."

THE POLITICAL navigators attempting to chart the course of their ships of chance are justifiably downhearted. It seems that the people are so engaged in their own problems that interest in factional warfare incident to early primary contests is not much of a drawing card. Even the forged discussion of eligibility of suggested candidates is more of less perfunctory. Therefore, it is disconcerting to those seeking to hitch their wagon to a fast-moving star in the political firmament.

AN INTERESTING SIDELIGHT on the "great public demand" for the Congressional Record is revealed in the public printers report. Out of a total palladium of official information, there are only 630 paid subscribers to the Congressional Record. In other words, more than 98 per cent of the readers of the Congressional Record are what are popularly known as "dead-heads" or recipients of a gift. The daily edition when congress was in session in 1931 averaged 108 pages which is a marked increase from other sessions when the average was 83 pages. This data proves that congress is becoming more effective. The truth is that "about one-third" of the Record was devoted to matter other than the actual proceedings and debates in congress. The legislators loaded up the pages with speeches, written but not spoken, and with a conglomerate of letters and clippings.

Wandering From This to That
More Planes Than Pilots
More than 17,700 persons were licensed to fly airplanes at the close of 1931, and there were 10,780 planes in the country, according to a statement issued January 28 by the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce.

The number of pilots licensed to fly increased more rapidly during the last six months of 1931 than did the number of aircraft, the statistics in the announcement show. The number of pilots advanced 16 per cent and the number of planes approximately 10 per cent. More than half of the pilots are licensed to do only private flying, according to the announcement, but transport-pilots account for 38 per cent of the licenses. Women hold 132 pilot licenses, and 42 of them are licensed to fly in commercial transportation, while five women are licensed mechanics, the announcement shows.

New York has the largest number of airplanes, but California with more than 3,000 pilots has by far the greatest number of fliers, according to the announcement, which follows in full text: There were 17,730 pilots, 7,553 aircraft, and 9,016 mechanics holding active department of commerce licenses on Jan. 1, 1932, according to a study just completed by the aeronautics branch of the department of commerce.

Investigate School Costs
The cost of public education compared with local economic conditions and other public expenditures, now being investigated by the national survey of school finance, is destined to have a far-reaching effect on school budgets when it is completed, Paul R. Mort, associate director of the survey, announced orally January 28.

For the first time state lines and political subdivisions will be displaced by actual economic areas, he said. Investigators are studying wealth and system of taxation. These facts are being reduced to maps, state by state and county by county. Dr. Mort, in pointing out this unique phase of the study, supplied the following additional information:
The study primarily a graphic view of education costs and extensive coverage of this comparative study is so broad that it will serve as the basis for inquiry into other phases of public expenditures. Nothing like it has ever been done before. When complete, it will show at a glance the status of school finance anywhere in the United States. Maps will disclose the population and economic conditions of the various areas. The whole problem of state support of local school costs is expected to be revealed as never before.

Increases National Preserves
More than 500,000 acres of land in 10 states were added to national forests in the fiscal year 1931 through approval of purchases by the national forest preservation commissions, according to a statement January 20 by the department of agriculture. The approved acquisitions represent an average cost of $3.50 an acre, it was stated.

The high cost of carrying cut-over lands is resulting in offerings of more acreage than available federal funds can purchase, the annual report of the commission states, and now only the wealthiest states are in a position to manage large forest and watershed lands. The statement follows in full text:

The annual report of the commission shows that 790 tracts located in 10 states were approved for addition to national forests under the administration of the forest service. Total price of lands approved for acquisition was $1,843,798, or at an average of about $3.50 an acre.
All the land approved for purchase was within the eastern and Lake States forest regions, lying in the eastern, southern and north-central states. Acreage approved was slightly greater than had been approved in any previous year since such purchases began under the Weeks law of 1911.

Fair in '32 Positive
Rumors that the 1933 world's fair, A Century of Progress—would be postponed were definitely spiked here by President Rufus C. Dawes in an address before the influential Hamilton club.

The exposition will surely open on June 1, 1933, Mr. Dawes asserted. "We are making excellent progress in securing the promise of participation of foreign nations and different states of the union and have secured as many assurances of support as have ever been the case with other expositions so long before the announced date of opening," Mr. Dawes declared. Mr. Dawes disclosed that postponed for a single year would cost the exposition at least $1,200,000 without any compensating advantage.

"One important item is that we have already made contracts with important corporations for the erection of buildings and the purchase of space in the aggregate sum of about $3,000,000," he said.
"These contracts are binding upon the corporations. In most cases the consideration has actually been paid in advance. These contracts, equally binding upon us, call for the opening of the fair on June 1, 1933."

Dr. Otto L. Schmidt, of Chicago, president of the state historical library, has announced the appointment of Paul M. Angle as librarian of the Illinois state historical library to succeed Miss Georgia L. Osborne, whose resignation becomes effective February 29. For the past six years, Mr. Angle has been secretary of the Abraham Lincoln association.

How to play Bridge AUCTION and CONTRACT
by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"
Copyright, 1931, by Hoyle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 14
While playing with some very good players the other evening, the writer doubled four spades and defeated the contract by two tricks. It was a simple proposition but much to the writer's surprise, one of the players said "How did you know when to double that bid?" It may seem simple to you but I never seem to do the right thing at the right time. I always seem to double when they make their contract or I fail to double when I defeat them by several tricks. If you can tell me when to double and why, you will not only help me but many others who are in the same fix. The writer thought this over very carefully and wrote the following summary on the subject for his friend's benefit, which applies equally to Auction or Contract:
A double made for the purpose of defeating the bid is a business double. Most business doubles are made, of course, after the bidding has reached such a point that it is evident they are made to defeat the contract. If your opponents bid one heart, for example, and you double, it is only common sense that you are doubling for a bid and not to defeat the contract. Such a double is called an information double, made to give information to partner and not to defeat the contract. Suppose, however, your partner deals a free double, and you double, you are doubling for a bid and not to defeat the contract. Such a double is called an information double, made to give information to partner and not to defeat the contract. Suppose, however, your partner deals a free double, and you double, you are doubling for a bid and not to defeat the contract. Such a double is called an information double, made to give information to partner and not to defeat the contract.

The Glenn bill, which has been reported favorably by the U. S. Senate commerce committee provides: (1) Appropriation of $1,725,000 for the federal government's exhibit at a Century of Progress. (2) Establishment of the Chicago World's Fair Centennial commission, to be composed of the Secretaries of State, Agriculture, and Commerce. (3) Appointment of a commissioner of a Century of Progress by the President. (4) Authorization to executive department, independent officers and establishments of the government to cooperate with the commissioner, to lend exhibits for the science and other exhibits, and to exhibit "the function and administrative faculty of the government in the advancement of industry, the arts and peace, demonstrating the nature of our institutions particularly as regards their adaptation to the wants of the people."

The bulk of the state's permanent improvement program for the 1931-33 biennium has been postponed due to the lack of money in the general revenue fund of the state treasury, resulting from Chicago's and Cook county's failure to pay their state taxes. Governor Louis L. Emerson says that the state will postpone its plans for the construction work which it has been forced to postpone and will proceed with it as rapidly as money becomes available.

Millions of tourists, it is expected, will drive to Chicago in 1933 to visit "A Century of Progress." To encourage motorists to come to Chicago during the five months of the Exposition will be open provisions for their convenience are now being made. Such facilities as parking, comfortable living quarters, and adequate means of reaching the fairgrounds are included in the plans.

Secretary of State William J. Stratton issued certificates of incorporation to 316 new domestic corporations during the first eleven months of 1931. This was a decrease from the 349 issued during the same period last year, but there was a decrease of 236 in the number of licenses issued to foreign corporations, a net gain of 50 for the period. Certificates of incorporation were issued to 5788 domestic companies and 520 foreign companies.

Barrington Falls to Libertyville in First Conference Pairings

The Antioch Indians won Northwest Conference tournament last week when they upset the Libertyville Wildcats in the final game, 24 to 20. There have been won conference tournaments and Antioch have been the victor in all except one of them. The winning team had beaten this season by Arlington, Vandalia, and Leysen in regular season games while Libertyville was defeated. On Saturday night, however, they completely outplayed the Vandalias and deserved their hard-earned victory. In this tournament Antioch eliminated Arlington. Palatine, Warren in succession before the Libertyville coach, Martin's 6 and 10, had disposed of Barrington and Leysen and had had little trouble in either game.

The Libertyville-Barrington game proved to be a one-sided affair and final whistle left Barrington on short end of a 40 to 19 score. Brochows failed to show much. They were trailing 10 to 2 at quarter and 14 to 5 at the end of first half. Duddles and D. Mulled the scoring for Libertyville, 11 and 10 points each, while Vandalia and Thorp did most of the scoring for Barrington with 6 and 5 respectively.

Barrington in Second Place
These games, do not count in regular conference standing, however, and Barrington is still in place. If some team gets hot, it knocks off the Libertyville boys, a scheduled game the Bronks will be right in the running. However, Barrington boys have plenty to do about in the next three weeks they have four or five tough games scheduled. The first of these will be at Arlington this Friday night. Cardinals moved out a mean one before the holidays and the G-men are just asking to put it on them as the Arlington floor. The box scores:

Aristotle's Wisdom
A reader is kind enough to mind me, writes "Peter Simple" the London Morning Post, of Aristotle once, "said a mouth which is strangely applicable to the present day."
"Vain men," said Aristotle, "fool as well as ignorant of themselves, and make this plain to the world; for, not doubting, worth, they undertake hard work, and presently stand covered of incapacity."

Mother Know
One day Ted accompanied mother and little sister to a town store and a salesman was in conversation.
"How old is your sister, Ted?"
"I don't know," Ted replied, turning to his mother, said "Mother, do you know her sister is?"
She did.
