Requirements of Postal Classes Not Understood, Says Postmaster

Many persons apparently are under the impression that unsealed letters and cards may be mailed at the circular rate of 1½c for ordinary letters, Postmaster L. B. Paddock stated this week.

"While it is true that certain cards bearing a simple greeting and written signature are mailable as third class matter, if unsealed," he said, "written and typewritten matter in general is first class matter and must have postage prepaid at the first class rate, which is 2 cents for letters for local delivery and 3 cents for out of town letters weighing not more than one ounce, whether sealed or unsealed."

Considerable mail requiring first class postage but prepaid at the third class rate, is received at the local post office, it was stated. In particular, many persons attempt to mail Christmas announcements at the circular rate. Such announcements, being filled in with the usual form of greeting information in writing, are first class matter and require postage at the rate of 2 cents or 3 cents an ounce or fraction thereof, depending on whether mailed for local or out of town delivery.

"Only first class mail, fully prepaid, should be deposited in mail drops or collection boxes," Mr. Paddock pointed out. "It is expected that other matter, mailed by individuals, will be submitted to a postal clerk at receiving windows for examination and rating if matter is found not regulating they will save themselves, and end the postal service, delays, inconvenience, and expense."

There are certain very limited permissible additions to or omissions with third and fourth class mail, not constituting personal messages, which may be in writing or typewriting, which will be explained by any postal employee. Care should be taken not to enclose any other written or typewriting with such mail, as it will result in the mail being refused or, if not detected until it reaches the office of address, in the collection from the address of deficient postage at the first class rate.

All sealed matter must be prepaid at the first class rate except third and fourth class matter bearing printed labels with the prescribed wording permitting opening by the postal service for inspection. Imitations of typewriting such as mimeographing or multigraphing, requires postage at the first class rate except when submitted at a post office window in quantities of 20 or more identical copies, the postmaster concluded.

A report at the business meeting showed an increase of more than 20 per cent in Sunday school enrollment and attendance, largest gain being in the children's department.
