THEN THE FUN BEGAN

Enforcement of the state tax law will not be made by state officials on July 1. The validity of the law is pending before the state supreme court and indications are that the case will take its regular course and a final ruling will not be given until October. The test case was appealed by the state from the circuit court of Sangamon county where it was held invalid, and an injunction granted restraining officials from spending money for the enforcement of the law. Following this ruling, the new law was cast aside temporarily.

After meeting with Gov. Louis L. Emmerson in the centennial building at Springfield on June 9, the general conference of more than 100 persons interested in the coal miners' scale dispute agreed to enter their negotiations to 10 men. These persons, comprising five union leaders and five operators, held a brief session and agreed to go to Chicago. Re-opening of the scale discussions came after Gov. Emmerson had intervened and called a meeting of operators' and miners' representatives in Springfield. Both sides exhibited a greater tendency toward reconciliation than characterized their attitudes at previous conferences, and leaders among both operators and miners predicted that an arrangement would be forthcoming soon.

Sale of $6,250,000 in anticipation of tax warrants will insure the operation of Chicago relief stations until Aug. 1. $4,477 of this amount has already been subscribed to. After Aug. 1, there may be a request to Governor Emmerson for another special session of the general assembly, if a plea for aid from the reconstruction finance corporation at Washington fails. At the close of the recent special session of the assembly a bill for $20,000,000 additional fell by the wayside in the senate. More than $11,000,000 is due the state from 1930 taxes in Cook county, the penalty date for which became effective on June 1. Payment soon of a share of this would materially help the state in providing funds for relief purposes.

In order that the superintendents of highways in all Illinois counties may comply with the state law that now requires them to keep records in accordance with a uniform system, state highway officials are now issuing instructions in highway accounting. A manual of accounts, prepared by the chief of the accounting section of the highway division, and specimen forms required by the law, are being supplied to all the counties. The work of checking up existing records in the various counties in order that the standard system may be installed, is now well under way. R. B. MacLeod, chief of the auditing department in the Division of Highways has reported.

Illinois' highway department is ready to obligate $1,600,000 of gas tax money immediately for street improvement work in the city of Chicago, Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets has announced. In addition, the department will proceed as soon as possible with a $400,000 paving and grade separation project on Route 42 in Lincoln park. The work will be performed under authority of legislation sponsored by Governor Louis L. Emmerson, which permits the use of state gas tax money in constructing, reconstructing, or resurfacing state highway routes through cities.

E. G. Homer, chief poultryman in the Illinois department of agriculture and A. C. Overingham, farm garden and dairy consultant in the state department of public welfare, have selected a site in Quincy for a new building to house the state's egg laying contest. Construction is to get under way in time for occupancy when the new contest opens, November 1. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has set aside $6,500 from his contingent fund, for the erection of the building.

In the monthly bulletin issued by Oscar Nelson, auditor of public accounts, attention is called to the public misconception that banks which have closed their doors are not necessarily failures. The bulletin states: "Only such banks as have gone into receivership should be thus considered as the other institutions which closed their doors and did not go into receivership have in many instances protected their depositors through mergers with other banks or by arranging for payment in full of their deposits."

Danville will be the scene next year of the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, according to the decision of the board of managers which met in Chicago. The convention is to be held in April. An invitation is to be extended by the Illinois group of this association to the National Congress of Parents and Teachers to hold its 1934 convention in Chicago.

Planting of 100 acres of trees, a start on the reforestation program in Illinois was accomplished this spring. L. E. Sawyer, forestry extension specialist of the state natural history survey, has announced that more than 100,000 trees were planted in nine counties. He stated that 3,000,000 Illinois acres should be in timber and probably will be planted with trees before the program is completed.

A state-wide drive to reduce the menace to successful farming that noxious weeds present has been launched by the state department of agriculture. The state's weed control service, centered in the agricultural department's division of plant industry, is enlisting aid from all related agencies for a general warfare against Canada thistles and the various other forms of weeds that threaten field crops, hay and grass production, according to an announcement issued by that department.

Including in the bids opened by the state department of public works and buildings for $1,205,307.78 worth of highway construction work were jobs of widening and salvaging 35.32 miles of narrow, worn-out and obsolete pavement by resurfacing with brick and extending the width to 20 feet by the addition of concrete shoulders. These reconstruction projects, according to the department, will transform the obsolete sections into the most modern type of brick resurfaced highways, minimizing the maintenance costs and conserving the state's original investments.

Mitsui in First Rank as Masters of Finance

The story of the famous Japanese family of Mitsui goes back more than 250 years. Takatoshi Mitsui conceived the plan which resulted in the great house of Mitsui. He inherited a pawn shop from his father. His ambition was to have an exchange house, but it was very difficult for an outsider to break into a business of this kind. He began, therefore, by opening a drapery shop in Hongo in 1670 and established a money exchange department. In less than ten years he had won a place among exchangers. In May, 1683, he opened an exchange house in Surugacho. In 1688 another one opened in Kyoto and in 1691 one in Osaka. He provided that each exchange house should have a member of the Mitsui family at its head and each of these in turn should be succeeded by a member of the Mitsui family. In February, 1872, five young members of the Mitsui family were sent to the United States to learn the banking business. The following year the first national bank in Japan was opened by Mitsui-Gumi and Ono-Gumi. In 1876 the Mitsui established the first private bank in Japan.

COLD... AGAIN!

How often does it happen to you?

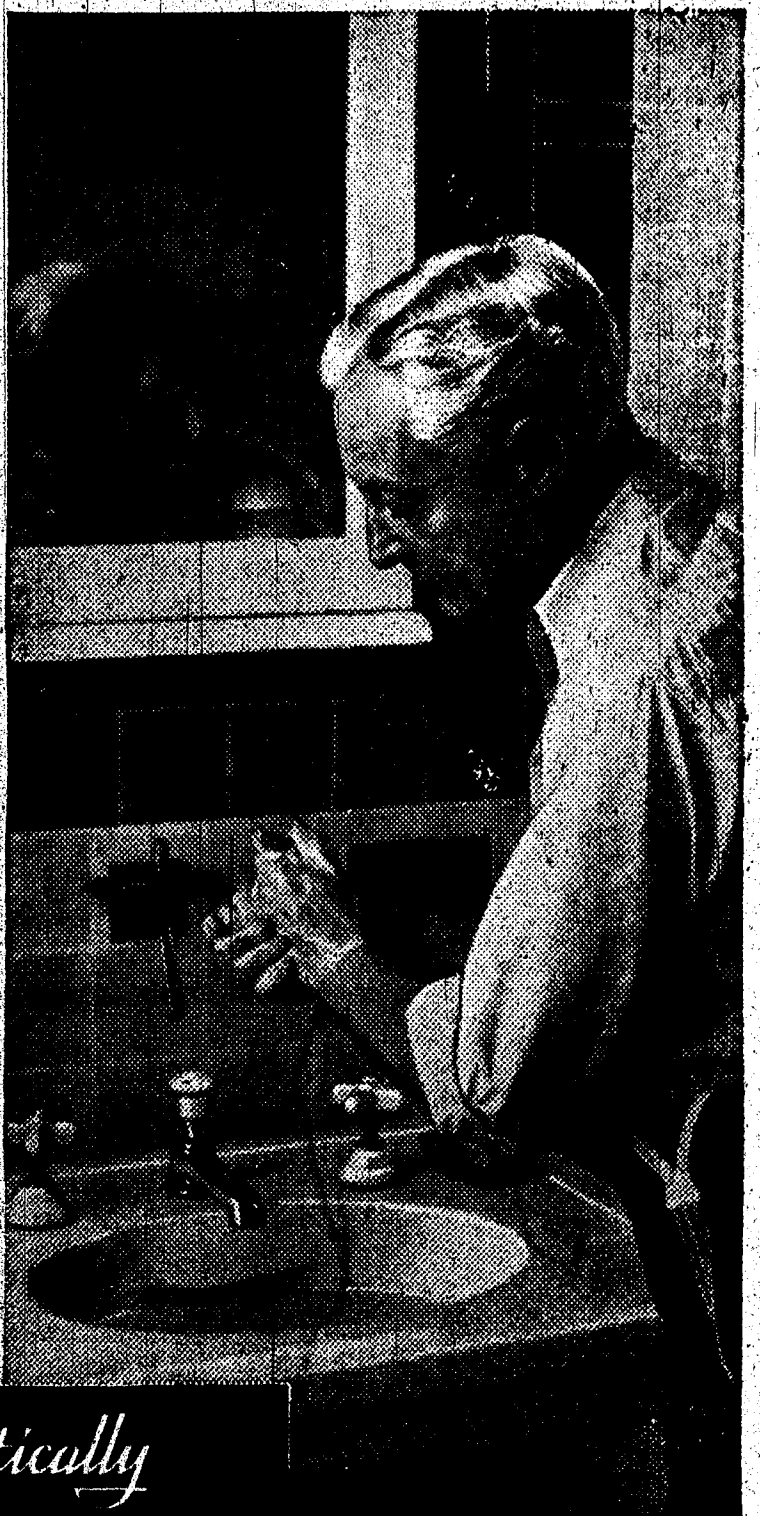

Feeling good . . . all ready to wash up and shave . . . and then only a cold stream from the hot water faucet.

It's a sure way to start the day wrong.

But here's a tip. You can start these days right by having an automatic gas water heater installed in your home. Then you'll have plenty of hot water for washing and shaving. Plenty for bathing and everything else, too. Every day . . . all day . . . without waiting.

Better think it over. This luxury of having all the hot water you want the minute you want it costs comparatively little — far less, probably, than you are now spending for many incidentals that bring nothing like the comfort and convenience automatic hot water service brings.

See your LOCAL PLUMBER or your PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY STORE for all the facts.

MORE DOMESTICATED BUSINESS

"While industry has forged ahead in improving working conditions the study of space, ventilation, lighting, sequence of work, and adequate equipment, the working conditions in the average home have moved forward, as a whole, very little since the modern industrial movement came in the front," states a report from the president's housing conference held in Washington last December. "Ignorance of qualities, uncertainty of taste, lack of accounting, carelessness about prices—faults which would ruin a merchant—prevail in our house-keeping."

In pointing out that the 30,000,000 homemakers of the United States as a group manage one of our largest business undertakings and direct the spending of many billions annually, and that at least one-fifth of the population spend a large portion of the working day in kitchens and other home work centers, the volume suggests the immensity of the economic waste involved in this inefficiency of plant and management. But it finds the loss in family happiness—the fatigue and the strain and the lack of the amenities—to be an infinitely more serious result.

The remedy is that homemakers take a leaf from the book of business and industry and adapt it intelligently to the home. The housewife should analyze the house and its equipment and the processes carried on in it as an efficiency engineer would analyze a factory. She should consider every aspect of the subject whether it be storage space, or wall and floor finishes that are easy to clean, or kitchen sizes and shapes, or heights of working surfaces to reduce fatigue, or lighting and ventilating, or laundry equipment.

BREATH UPON THE WINDOW

If you are not on hand to hear a radio broadcast at the moment it is given, can you "turn back" the radio and pick up the report when you want it?

No. But if you are not at liberty to read a newspaper the minute it is issued, the newspaper is available for your instant use at any time you want to pick it up.

If an important speaker gives a statistical report over the radio can you "turn back" the radio to compare the speaker's closing statement with his opening statement?

No, but your eye can compare the last paragraph of a newspaper's report of a public address with the speaker's report of the speaker's opening remarks.

If you are listening to something you want to hear over the radio, and neighbors drop in, can you ask them to wait until the broadcast is over, before you receive them?

Or if the baby screams, or something boils over on the stove, can you holler at the announcer to "Wait!" while you investigate the baby or take the pot off the stove?

No, you cannot. But you can lay down your newspaper when a domestic emergency arises. You can attend to the duty required of you, return to your paper, and resume reading where you left off.

Can you file a radio talk for reference? Can you refer at will to information gained over the radio? Can you accurately quote from memory what you have just heard over the radio, even five minutes after you have heard it?

Does your mind absorb data vocally given as rapidly as the next man's?

No, No, No! Dozens of Nos to all these questions.

The newspaper will continue to serve, as it always has served, every citizen's need for a stable source of information and knowledge. It is readily available, it may be preserved for record, it may be referred to, taken up and put down, at will. It may be glanced at or pondered over. The section you wish may be singled out when and as you wish it.

Radios were originally designed for entertainment, and media, as a news source, it is as a breath upon the window, here this minute, then gone, FOREVER.—Coutler, Orosi, California.

WHITHER, TAXATION?

If there is a more vital issue at this time than taxation, the average citizen and business man will have a hard time finding it.

In 1890 the total cost of government, federal, state and local, was $775,000,000—$13.88 per capita. In 1910 it was $7,405,000,000—$71.10 per capita. In 1929 it was $17,702,000,000—$80.54 per capita. It is considerable higher now. What it will be in 1935, if the present trend goes on, challenges the imagination. The new revenue bill gives no cause for optimism.

Is the United States going the way of England, or Germany, or Australia? Are we going to be swamped by bureaucracy, waste, duplication, enlargement of governmental activities, paternalism and an eventual dictatorship of officeholders?

The future of industry, of home building and of individual progress is tied up with the money of taxation. High taxes frighten the investor, take money out of circulation, paralyze business. The assurance of economical, efficient and restricted governmental activity would do more than anything else at this time to bring depression to an end.

GOOD

A congressional investigation of governmental competition with private business has received the approval of the house rules committee. Representative Shannon, of Missouri, who introduced the bill, says: "There exists an immediate necessity for the curtailment of the tendency of government to engage in business in competition with private enterprise and for the withdrawal of government from many fields in which such competition already exists."

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER
By National Editorial Association (Special to The Review)

MIXED EMOTIONS are everywhere apparent as congress prepares to fold the tent, and the democratic national convention opens its doors. The rebellious mood of the republican delegates last week brings grave concern to the democratic leaders. It is generally admitted in both camps that incalculable political capital is available as an aftermath of the republican factional storms. It depends wholly on a harmonious adjustment of intra-party differences on democratic candidates and policies. The spectre of a third party still hovers around provoking uneasiness as to which major group will sustain the heaviest losses in membership. Expenses for campaign purposes are another source of trouble for money in scarce and the exchequers are empty.

PROHIBITION has risen to plague all candidates for high office. The hope was expressed that this issue could be subordinated to economic problems. The outbreak at the republican convention showed clearly that the political fashions of the world would pass away for the "wet" and "dry" controversy can no longer be obscured. The G. O. P. discontents mustered unexpected strength even with the administration "steam-roller" functioning. The democrats, lacking the all-powerful weapon of patronage, cannot bring so many hand-picked delegates to Chicago next week. Therefore, the problem of delegate control is greater, especially with their two-thirds in effect. It is troublesome to muster a majority in republican meetings. However, the democratic requirement of linking up an additional 15 per cent to comply with the two-thirds system is a real handicap for the leaders. As an illustration, Curtis could not have won second place on the ticket so early in the balloting had the G. O. P. operated under the democratic two-thirds rule. This numerical factor may seriously interfere with well-laid plans for a short and snappy convention.

THE SELECTION of Everett Sanders of Indiana as chairman of the republican national committee is freely interpreted as an open bid for the active support of Coolidge admirers and followers. The partisans who were active during the Coolidge days have never taken kindly to Mr. Hoover for a variety of reasons. The thinly veiled animosity is known in party councils. Hence, the bid to Sanders, who served as secretary to the former president. It was in the cards to offer the berth to William Butler, who held the post while Mr. Coolidge was in the saddle. Butler offered a problem as the G. O. P. in his state were not friendly and he was never popular with party wheel-horses on the national committee. Advocates of Butler argued that he could drum up money from the East, but even this claim could not win him a place in the high councils. It is predicted that Sanders may induce his former chief to take the stump during the crucial days of October and early November.

THE REFUSAL of the bonus expeditionary force to evacuate their camps here is provocative of concern in political circles. The two political parties want to avoid the subject as a campaign issue. Yet, the presence of the former soldiers in Washington during the electioneering season will ever be an unpleasant reminder to their kin and friends back home. The opinion is gaining that the concentration of unemployed veterans will prove harmful to Mr. Hoover as candidate more than his democratic opponent. The shabby appearance of the men in make-shift camps on the streets of the national capital accentuates our economic depression more than all claims of campaign. There is a tragic side to their mobilization scenes, something that arouses a nation's sympathy and more votes are swayed from the heart than by political conviction.

THE WICKERSHEIM committee report on law enforcement which required so much time and money may be rescued from dusty shelves. These findings are expected to figure prominently in the elections whenever the prohibition issue is discussed. The public was disappointed in the commission's conclusion because there was a lack of unanimity on important matters. Valuable data which is available at other sources make this time. The controversy over the Wickersheim outfit was largely responsible for the sudden halt in creation of Hoover commissions for economic and social studies.

Northeast to View Eclipse
A total eclipse of the sun, recorded by many as nature's most awe-inspiring phenomena, will occur on August 31, and will be visible to people in the New England states. Total eclipses are so rare that few are privileged to witness even one in a lifetime.

The path of totality, or total eclipse, will extend generally from Kennebunkport, on the Maine coast, northwest through Biddeford and Freeburg, Me., sections of New Hampshire and Vermont and into the province of Quebec. It is estimated that the path of totality will be approximately 50 miles in width, the shadow of the sun extending some 23 miles on either side, thus treating a path 100 miles wide where the eclipse may be seen totally or partially, depending upon the location.

Wandering From This to That African Instruments on Display
Various peculiar types of musical instruments of Africa, from the weird sounds of which have been derived in a roundabout way the motifs of much of the most modern music of America and Europe, are on exhibition in the hall of African ethnology at Field Museum of Natural History.

Pianos of a primitive type made and played by tribesmen in various parts of Africa form one of the most ingenious and interesting of the native instruments.

An elaborate xylophone with wooden keys, from East Africa, not at all like the xylophones of the western world, is another interesting exhibit. There are many harp-like instruments with various numbers of strings of hair, sinew, and twisted vines. The ordinary hunter's bow is used as a musical instrument by placing one end in the player's mouth to act as a re-sounder, and tapping the bowstring with an arrow. Other native instruments shown include, of course, various types of drums used for music for entertainment, and for exercising demons, mobilizations for war, and other ceremonies; and guitars, binjole instruments, flutes, rattles, gongs, whistles, horns and others.

A curious instrument is a wooden bell, not played by a human musician but attached to the neck of a dog or other small animal to produce sound according to the caprices of the animal's movements.

Break Ground With Oxen
A hundred years of agriculture history was written in the soil of a Century of Progress at a ceremony breaking ground for the World's Fair Agricultural group.

Upon the signal of Earl Smith, president of the Illinois Agricultural Association, a team of oxen began pulling an eighteenth century wooden plow across the site of the Agricultural group. The oxen had been loaned for the ceremony by C. F. Colcord, of Orland, Ill. The plow was built in 1750, was first used by James Armour, ancestor of Philip D. Armour, and now the property of J. Watson Armour.

The second period of agricultural history was illustrated when a span of mules pulled the original wood beam steel bottom plow, manufactured in 1847 at Canton, Ill., across the ground. Guiding it was Frank I. Mann, of Gilman, Ill., pioneer farmer and one of the nation's leading scientific farmers.

The third period was illustrated when three champion Clydesdale horses pulled the original sulky plow introduced into the United States more than sixty years ago. Guiding this team was Eugene D. Funk, member of the third generation of scientific farmers in charge of the Funk Farms of Bloomington, Ill.

Fourth period in the pageant of agricultural progress, a modern gas tractor pulled a gangplow through the clayey soil, accomplishing 50 times the work of the wooden plow. Driving the tractor was Harvey J. Seance, of the exposition's agricultural section, member of the third generation to operate the Fairview Farm at Siddell, Ill.

Vigilant Eyes
Lights in certain shops and offices at East Pittsburgh, are controlled by "electric eyes." When clouds or other conditions reduce illumination below a pre-determined degree, the never-sleeping "eyes" turn on the artificial lights. Many schools are adopting the same system and report less fatigue and eye-strain.

17-Pound "Flint Copper" Found
A mass of "flint copper," weighing 17 pounds, has been presented to Field Museum of Natural History by Carl Pickhardt of Chicago, who found it in a field near Columbus, Wis. Flint copper does not occur in mines, but is found in soil or gravel, and is widely distributed through the middle western states, according to Dr. Oliver C. Farrington, curator of geology.

How to play Bridge AUCTION CONTRACT
by Wynne Ferguson
Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright, 1931, by Hovle, Jr.

ARTICLE No. 31

Why is it that some players invariably lose the big rubbers and win the little ones? How and why do the big losses occur? Generally speaking, the impossible to suffer big losses at Auction Contract unless you are holding your good cards. When you are holding worthless cards, there is no temptation to overbid and hence no big penalties. It is when you are holding good cards that are not quite good enough, or when you are suffering from bad breaks that you are apt to lose heavily. The good cards, instead of winning for you, are a source of loss. Why is this?

There must be some reason for it and the answer is really very simple. A player just cannot remain quiet with good cards. The good cards indicate one and you become blind to the many signs that the odds are against you. You fail to notice that your partner is passing and that both of your opponents are bidding. What can one good hand do against two? If players would only ask themselves that question, many a big penalty would be avoided.

Moral: Don't overbid good hands. Remember, a good hand has a better defensive value against two good hands, than it has when used for offensive purposes. It's an axiom of the game that one good hand against two has one hundred per cent better chance to save a game than to make game. In nearly half of such hands, it would have been possible to have saved game and in the other half to have defeated the opponent's bid.

Recently the writer kept a record of the over-bidding of one player during one evening's play. Out of fifteen of his bids that failed to make good, twelve were doubled. On ten of the hands, the player could have defeated his opponent's bid and on the other five he could have saved game. He was one of those players who consider it a personal affront to be overbid and his opponents knew he would continue to bid. Such a player is under a great handicap and yet cannot seem to realize what is the trouble with his game. He complains of his hard luck and of the big rubbers he loses, but hasn't the good judgment to realize seven of clubs, which I should trump with the ten of spades and follow with the king of hearts and 7 of hearts. Y should trump the latter with the seven of spades and lead the ace of spades. Y's club is now good for the last trick. At trick two, suppose I had discarded the ten of hearts in that case, at trick three, I should lead the king of hearts, which Z should trump with the king and lead back the five of hearts. This trick Y should trump with the seven of spades and lead back the seven of spades. Z must win this trick with the ten of spades, and not the good six of hearts and queen of diamonds for the last two tricks. It is a clever little problem and worthy of the closest study.

Solution to Last Week's Problem

Hearts — 4, 7, 6
Clubs — 8, 7
Diamonds — none
Spades — A, J, 7

Hearts — 9, 8
Clubs — 10, 9, 8, 7
Diamonds — none
Spades — none

Hearts — K, 6, 5
Clubs — none
Diamonds — K, Q, 6
Spades — 10

If spades are trumps and Z is in the lead, how can Y win all of the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the king of diamonds and Y should discard the six of clubs. At trick number two, Z should lead the six of diamonds and Y should trump with the jack of spades. B should play the jack of clubs but, if he wants to make a fancy play, he can discard the eight of spades. Y should then lead the eight of clubs for Z to trump, and the last four tricks are then taken by the queen of diamonds, king of hearts, seven of spades and ace of spades.

Suppose, however, B, at trick two, makes the proper discard of the jack of clubs. At trick three, Y should lead the ver C. Farrington, curator of geology. Aside from its intrinsic value, flint copper provides excellent material for study in connection with the subject of glaciers and glacial movements. It is of interest also as a source of metal which was used by the Indians in various manufactures. Flint copper originated in the copper fields of Keeweenaw Peninsula, Mich., and was distributed over the middle west by the glaciers, says Dr. Farrington. As a rule, the rocks which are so well preserved in the small, recently created, detached. This widespread occurrence of this copper affords a means of tracing glacial movement.

Barrington Trails Until Seventh Inning in Hard Fought Contest

The Bears defeated Algonquin 6 to 4 after a slow start Sunday at the local park.

After trailing 4 to 0 until the sixth inning the Bears cut Algonquin's lead in half by scoring twice on a single by McGowan, a double by Garbisch and a triple by Kasch. In the seventh inning the Bears went into the lead by scoring four times when Shuetz doubled, Altenburg singled, Sheehan drew a pass and C. Berg and Kasch doubled.

Kasch with a triple and double and Garbisch with two doubles started at bat for the Bears. Hopp and Schutte with two hits each led the Algonquin batters.

Next Sunday the Bears play their annual rivalry from Lake Zurich at the local park and the usual hard fought game is expected.
