The committee suggests a slight change this year due to the need of the institution for cash, especially for the milk fund. Make your gift a bit less expensive if necessary and give the balance in cash but as we are the only organization that sends toys and gifts we do not wish to entirely drop that part of our work for these little people.

The benefit card party, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 30 given at the home of Mrs. Fred Howard, was a very enjoyable occasion. The party was sponsored by the ways and means committee and will benefit the club treasury.

Village Will File Suit Against Bank Deposit Sureties

Trustees Instruct Attorney to Prepare Action in Two Suits

Two separate suits against sureties on a depository bond and sureties on a treasurer's bond will be instituted by David B. Maloney, village attorney, in an effort to recover some $40,000 deposited by the village in the closed First State bank.

This action will come as a result of two resolutions unanimously adopted at the village board meeting Monday at the village board action. The resolutions were adopted against the sureties, directors of the bank, they are a matter of technical routine and are indirectly a protection for these same directors as they include among the defendants the estate of a late director which has been probated and is scheduled to be settled in December. If the action were not taken at this time, the estate would escape responsibility with the result that an additional burden might fall on the other directors at a later time.

The resolution to institute suit against the sureties on the depository bond stated in part:

"Whereas, heretofore the First State bank of Barrington, an Illinois banking corporation, of Barrington, Illinois as principal, and Henry J. Lagaschille, Albert L. Robertson, Edward W. Riley, Walter M. Landwer, George J. Hager, Fred Hopkin, Irvin E. Landwer, George W. Spitzer, William Schnetzler, William Skinner, Edward C. Wolf, and Robert G. Wolf as sureties, executed and delivered to the village of Barrington, Cook and Lake counties, Illinois, a certain depository bond wherein and whereby they were held and bound unto the village of Barrington, a municipal corporation in the sum of $75,000, that said depository should keep, account for and pay over all moneys on deposit with said depository to the credit of the village of Barrington, a . . .

"Whereas it is necessary that suit be instituted upon the depository bond and the sureties and claim be filed against the estate of Edward W. Riley on account of his indebtedness on said bond. . . .
"He it, therefore, resolved by the president and board of trustees of the village of Barrington, that David B. Maloney be directed to institute suit upon the depository bond against the sureties herein above named and be directed to file claim against the estate of Edward W. Riley, deceased, to enforce the liability of the said sureties on said depository bond. . . .
A similar resolution was adopted directing suit against the sureties on the bond of F. L. Waterman, treasurer. The sureties were H. J. Lagaschille and E. W. Riley. As in the other suit, a claim will be made against the estate of E. W. Riley.

road work during the summer. The loss included the building, several hundred bushels of corn and a number of minor items. The cause of the fire has not been determined.
The department was called to the William Brandt home, 916 E. Main street about 9 o'clock Monday morning. A fire in the ceiling of the kitchen just above a pipe leading from the cook stove had gained quite a little headway before the department arrived. The damage was confined principally to the kitchen.
A call for the department early Saturday evening came from the Harry Clark home, 331 E. Russell street. A blaze which started in one of the rooms was extinguished before the department arrived. Little damage was reported.

Death Valley Love

By MARSHALL BREEDON

BULL GRAHAM had lived for fifty years in the Mojave desert spending most of his time tramping around Death Valley.

"It's a gettin' so a man can hardly have room for to turn around in," Bull grumbled.

Lonesome June, his long-eared Jenny, who was asleep on her foot beside him, did not wake up at the sound of Bull's voice. But when the crunch of feet cut the still hot air Lonesome June opened one eye, looked at the newcomer and went to sleep again. Bull had caught a view of the young girl's face. She was making hard headway through the alkali.

She stopped when she came up to the old man. Her lips were cracking, her breath came in quick gasps, but under the blister of her face the countenance was determined. Bull was about to say something when the girl stepped aside and started to pass. Instantly Bull bent forward. His bent-twisted old body barred her passage.

"You can't fight the sink," he said. "You're walking to your death, sure."

She glared at him. Eyes wide, lips set, muscles taut. "I know what I am doing." The tone was harsh, the words stuttered through the dry throat. "Let me go." She jerked away, but before she could step forward Bull took her by both arms and swung her face away from the deadly blow of the sun. He held her until the brief struggle died. When he loosened her she looked at him. "Old Buzzard. You mind your own business, I want to die."

For a brief moment their eyes held, then the girl waved, her breast heaved and, sitting in the hot alkali, she buried her face in her arms and sobbed, dreadfully. Bull Graham stepped to the side of Lonesome June. He took a water bottle from his pack and stood about the girl.

"A drink of water slow like," he held it close, temptingly so, "then you'll not want to die. No man in the world is worth what you was a doing. Take a drink outen the bottle."

"I love him," Her words were more broken than before.

The old man drew her to her feet, led her toward the patient Jenny. "Best we get back to the hotel," he said. "It's not more'n a couple of miles. They started off slow ly. The water had revived the girl. Her eyes lost some of their fierceness, her lips softened. They walked without speaking. Every hundred steps or so Bull would offer her a drink. On the fourth stop she handed the bottle back. "I'm not going back." Her voice was firm.

"If you go into the sink, I'll have to be a-goin' with you and me and Lonesome June is tired, we be."

"He was going to marry me," she said.

"He had a change of heart again, you?"

"In the hotel he told me while we were dancing that he did not want to marry me."

"Thinking maybe you was a right smart gal," Bull said. "Guess maybe I was mislead."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"When I was a young feller," he talked as they began to walk toward the hotel. "I had me a gal. I was all of a heap of more by her. I liked her more'n I do Lonesome June here. An' will you believe of it, one night she up and tells me to 'go plum to h—l out of her sight.' Well, that busted me up a heap. I was for having myself killed, and I was for killing her, and by gosh I was all upset. So I sets out to have myself killed jest as you been doing. Yes I walked from Los Angeles where I was a living, and I kept coming until I come to this here Death Valley, and then I seen what a fine place the world was and I didn't want to get myself killed."

"You think you can love only once. So did I, but I know better now. I been in love ever since that gal turned against me. More in love than I was with her. And you, why, you'll have a better boy afore you can wink twenty times, and then you'll be like I am, plum happy with your new love, and it will be a honest love, like the one you jest had wasn't."

A smile moved her cracking lips. "Why, you're right," she said. Her voice was cheerful. "Of course, there are other men, and besides it wouldn't be fair to my father and mother. They are waiting at the hotel. I'll run along and oh, thank you so much, and I hope you'll always love your wife like you said you did, for you said you found better love than the first girl could give."

Old Bull Graham leaned his aching arms over the back of Lonesome June. He watched the girl going toward the hotel.

"I been honest with the sink for fifty three years, since I come to it," he said, "and it ain't a-goin' to mind ef I tell a bit of a lie. Love me wife, any gal, I ain't had no wife, nor no gal, either. I been in love with Death Valley for all them years and I guesson the sink will love me for saving your life."

Museum Exhibit Recalls Tragic Arctic Episode

The Museum of Science and Industry, Chicago, has among its exhibits several cans of soup which were carried by the third relief expedition sent to Major General A. W. Greeley, United States soldier and explorer, more than a half century ago.

Greeley's famous expedition to the Arctic regions was undertaken in 1881. The party reached Discovery Harbor on Lady Franklin bay, Grinnell land, during the summer. There they established a permanent station, where they remained until the late summer of 1883, when they retreated southward, finally reaching Cape Sabine after a journey of 400 miles. There they expected to meet relief ships, or at least to find supplies cached at designated points. Failing in this, they were obliged to spend the winter at Cape Sabine, where all but seven of the party lost their lives as a result of starvation and exposure.

Really Had Told Truth

A Chinese gardener sold a horse to a farmer, and during the transaction he repeatedly said: "Horse do look well, but plenty tail."

It was subsequently discovered that the animal was blind, and, incensed at being taken in by a Chinese, the purchaser took John to court.

"Did you know the horse was blind?" asked the magistrate.

"Oh, yeh, I know long tam," John replied.

"Then why didn't you tell him so?" the magistrate demanded.

"I tell him all," said the Chinese. "I tell him plenty tam horse no look well."

That being admitted, the case was dismissed.

City of Venice Unique

Venice is at the head of the Adriatic sea, between the mountains and the sea. The whole of the plain has been formed by the debris swept down from the Alps by rivers. In the process of time some of these banks, as in the case of Venice, raised themselves above the level of the water and became the true shore line, while beyond them lay large lagoons formed up doubtfully by fresh water brought down by the rivers, and partly by the salt water tide which found its way in at the channels of the river months. On a group of these mud banks about the middle of the 14th good stands the city of Venice. The soil is an oozy mud which can only be made suitable for erecting buildings by the artificial means of pile-driving.

Sunny Dispositions

A sunny disposition is a gift from God. There are many whose minds are filled with gloomy thoughts, and who look on the dark side of everything. Such people cannot radiate sunshine until they fill their minds with the brighter, happier thoughts. This is not an easy matter, for when gloomy thoughts receive encouragement to remain, it is hard to displace them with more cheerful ones. If we go persistently to work to cultivate a sunny disposition, our efforts will at length be rewarded, and we shall be the possessors of a brightness and cheerfulness scarcely distinguishable from that bestowed as a natural gift.—A. L. Griggs.

Nation's Medicine Bill

According to the committee on the cost of medical care, the annual bill for medicine in the United States is $715,000,000. More than 70 per cent of the total expenditure for drugs and medicine is for self-medication.

Sacred Chinese Gateway

The gateway of the Ming tombs, near Peiping, was constructed in 1540. It has been repeatedly repaired; the last repairs were made in 1785 by order of the emperor.

Byrd's South Pole Ship Attracts History Students

School children are finding the trophies on board Byrd's south pole ship, and the boat itself, which is moored in the Chicago canal, interesting studies on contemporary history. Inasmuch as all history books now include Admiral Byrd's recent expedition to the north and south poles as important chapters in American history, students can get a more vivid impression of the hazardous adventures by seeing the south pole ship, and learning of the many obstacles that had to be overcome before the ship finally landed in Little America with its crew of 42 men, its equipment, food supplies, and numerous other items necessary for the 19 months of the journey.

One of the most interesting of all the trophies exhibited on the boat is the glass-enclosed replica of Little America, which was made to scale by the New York museum of natural history. It shows in miniature detail the wireless towers, the huts and the tunnels that were constructed on the ice barrier, and which served as the home of 82 men during the perilous months of Antarctic snow and cold.

Also on display are rare specimens of bird and animal life, the only living beings of Antarctica. The penguins, seals, and whales have been brought back and stuffed to remain as permanent mementoes of the far-distant land they represent. Suits of various kinds of furs, worn by Byrd and his men are to be seen, as well as the different kinds of equipment. Especially interesting is the radio equipment set up in Little America, that served as so vital a means of keeping the explorers in touch with each other (for sometimes communication by foot was practically out of the question because of blizzards and snow storms) and with the outside world.

The food used by the men on the boat and on the trail is exhibited, and includes among other items, pemmican, a concentrated food that served as the main tidbit at most of the meals, dehydrated fruits and vegetables and Eskimo biscuits.

Ask Citizens to Feed Birds During Early Snowfalls

"Feeding the birds will be an inexpensive kindness that can be performed by any individual—crumbs from the table, scraps of food, or a few handfuls of grain will serve the purpose," Ralph F. Bradford, director of the state department of conservation, stated in an appeal to the public to care for the birds when the snow storm blanketed about two-thirds of Illinois last week. Subsequent reports indicate that many kind-hearted people responded to the appeal, according to the game and fish division representatives.

THINK TWICE, YOUNG PEOPLE

In a recent radio address, W. E. Mallalieu, General Manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, observed that the encroachment of government competition into industry was narrowing chances of young people to go into business for themselves.

Criticizing Mr. Mallalieu's viewpoint, a leading socialist newspaper said: "He might better have deplored the fact that the government is so little in business that it cannot guarantee employment to those worthy young people, but must turn them loose in a chaotic world of industry in which they cannot find jobs."

Here we have two schools of thought represented: The first upholds our American theory of individualism; the second, that of paternalism.

Our country reached world leadership through the freedom of individual initiative. So far our socialist friends have been unable to show the same advancement for the individual through their experiments. Under their theory that the government should guarantee employment to worthy young people, the government would have to take over all business, including land ownership. It could then, in theory at least, regulate production and income. Every citizen would virtually be a ward or an employee of the government and depend upon the public treasury for his "keep." As all government industries are tax-exempt, they would have to make a profit as does private industry, which, in turn, would be handed to the public treasury to be redistributed, with the citizens drawing their living from the public payrolls or charitable institutions.

The fundamental reason for all past failures of government in the field of business, is simply this: Government does not have to make a profit. It can always demand additional sums from the taxpayers to cover inefficiency, carelessness or mediocrity on the part of public servants who are in no way responsible for losses. This condition breeds lack of initiative in the rank and file of public employees for, in the vast majority of cases, they can reap no reward for superior ability. Once we eliminate individual incentive, we have gone a long way toward eliminating progress.

Private enterprise, on the other hand, must be self-supporting and make a profit in order to exist and pay taxes to maintain all functions of government. Each business and each individual must strive for efficiency. Every individual has an opportunity to progress according to his ability and latent genius is thereby developed. The record of this nation shows that the achievement of its citizens have benefited the world and given our own people more conveniences, more luxuries, higher wages, more leisure time and more independence than are enjoyed by the citizens of any other country.

Who will claim that if our young people had been "guaranteed employment by the government," we could have shown any such record of progress? We have proof that in other nations which have extended paternalism to the limit, there has been lack of advancement because of restriction of real opportunity and incentive for the individual.

We are today paying an exorbitant cost in taxation, for loading the government with hundreds of duties outside the legitimate function of governing. If we obligated our government to "guarantee employment to worthy young people when they leave school," we would assume a burden of paternalism and taxation that would make the cost of government simply staggering and our young people would be the ones who would eventually pay this cost either through destructive taxation, or destroyed opportunities, or loss in self respect which would result when government, unable to collect sufficient taxes to meet its exorbitant demands, would confiscate property in lieu thereof and redistribute it in the shape of jobs or doles to its "dependent," rather than "independent" people.

WHY DO WE HAVE FIRES?

That is a fair question—and one that can be answered. We don't have fires because they are unpreventable, and are an unfortunate but inescapable phase of modern life. We have them because we are careless—are incompetent—put a false form of "saving" ahead of real economy—and because we refuse to learn a few simple, easily understood lessons.

Every year we pay out $500,000,000 directly to the bill for fire. The indirect cost comes to several times that figure. Probably the total reaches two billion dollars or more. At least eighty per cent of it is unnecessary—that eighty per cent could well be termed the "carelessness bill." No other civilized people allows so great a waste in either dollars or lives.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

By National Editorial Association
(Special to The Review)

A STRONG counter-movement against curtailment of certain government expenses is reported underway. Advice is to the effect that one powerful group of veterans has decided on drastic reprisals in an attempt to stave off proposed cuts in allowances from the veterans' administration. Groups of government employees are also active in blocking economies in the federal payroll. It is only human that beneficiaries should fight to defend what they consider their rights. Without comment on the merits of the methods, it is obvious that a pitched battle of words will be seen during the next session of the present congress.

ONE REPORT claims that the noted members of the non-partisan economy committees such as Calvin Coolidge, Admiral Byrd, General Pershing, Alfred E. Smith will be targets for caustic criticisms. One scheme is to show how these leaders have themselves benefitted from government bounties either personally or through corporations in which they have a financial interest. Public men, however, gradually become accustomed to attack whenever they espouse principles. Meanwhile the house appropriations committee is quizzing departmental heads on items which may be curtailed or eliminated in a concerted drive to cut government operating costs.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS are reading with grave concern the proceedings of the American Federation of Labor convention held in Cincinnati last Thursday. Making due allowance for organizational bias, the report on unemployment is disturbing to politicians and relief workers alike. "We estimate," says the A. F. of L. review, "counting all workers and those dependent upon them, at least 80,000,000 persons are now living below minimum standards—nearly half our entire population. Forty millions of them have been dragged into poverty by depression; twenty million more are in industries where living conditions even in normal times are below standard."

PEOPLE usually without thinking look to the government to solve their problems. The unfortunate feature is the habits of politicians who find it profitable to maintain the fiction of "careless" from legislators. Government can help but there are limited funds and power of this sort. Making promises is easier than fulfilling them.

DRAFTING OF REVISION of prohibition laws becomes a subject of major importance assuming that the necessary votes for revision are available. What form of legislation will meet the demands of the two parties' platforms? It is believed that efforts will be centered on an amendment to the Volstead act to be followed by repeal of the eighteenth amendment. The senate and house judiciary committees will have the burden of drafting all changes. No doubt they will authorize early hearings to have benefit of outside advice. One puzzle to be solved deals with permission to manufacture and sell beer and other intoxicants and at the same time guard against the return of the old-time saloon. There is another bothersome item in the protection of so-called "dry" states of commonwealths which did not permit the sale of intoxicating liquors prior to the eighteenth amendment. The best legal minds of congress and the incoming or outgoing administrations will be taxed with a multiplicity of baffling detail. The return of beer is not along a smooth legal road.

THE ADVANCE GUARD of legislators returning to their duties are impressed with the need of giving the farmers special attention. The "farm revolt" at the ballot boxes could be interpreted only one way. It is simple to propose remedies through legislation but history shows past success usually have been futile. The much advertised farm board fell short of lofty expectations. There is no escape from facts. Valuation of all capital employed in agriculture fell off 24 per cent within the two-year period beginning January 1, 1930 and ending on the same day of this year. The decline in farmer's income was followed by a shrinkage in their equities. It is logical that congress will authorize broadening the power of credit as a means of checking the wave of foreclosures. The time of the short session will be limited to appropriation bills. Yet it appears that the emergency may speed congressional consideration of measures so vital to the farmers of the country.

Wandering From This to That

Huge Painting at Institute

One of the great works of art which is certain to be chosen for exhibition at the World's Fair, is "The Assumption of the Virgin," by El Greco. This is a commanding canvas, measuring, without the frames, 168 inches in height by 90 inches in width. It was painted in 1577, 355 years ago. The color is still brilliant and shows no signs of deterioration. The old masters never used substitutes for their primary colors, but ground them themselves in their own studios. The painting was executed for the convent of Santo Domingo el Antiguo in Toledo, Spain. The painting was later purchased by the Infante Don Sebastian Gabriel, after whose death it was purchased from the heirs by a Paris dealer, Durand-Ruel, in 1904. It came to America in 1906. A frame in the Spanish Renaissance style was made for it by Howard Dudley Murphy, an artist from Boston. This frame is a work of art in itself and was made especially for the picture in the style in which it might well have fitted in the church at Santo Domingo. Mr. Murphy selected the wood from choice Michigan pine, and went over every square inch with a carving tool. The gold is laid on by the old Italian method of red-gold size, and is burnished all over. The whole picture is nineteen feet high and is mounted on a Levanto marble base. With its great protecting sheet of plate glass it weighs 2500 pounds. The total cost of the painting and the frame was $54,637. It is now appraised at more than one million dollars. In 1915, Nancy Atwood Sprague, of Chicago, presented this great work, the finest by El Greco outside of Spain, to the Art Institute in memory of Albert Arnold Sprague. The painting shows an open sepulchre with the Virgin being raised into the clouds, while angels accompany her; below the twelve apostles are shown, divided by the sepulchre, six on one side and six on the other. For these figures, El Greco used Spanish and Venetian models. The painting of Mary is executed with great dignity while the expression on the faces of the angels shows marked reverence.

Bronchos-

1932-33 Edition of B.H.S. Cagers Makes Debut Friday Night

Conference Schedule Opens With Libertyville Here Friday, Dec. 9

The annual "lid tilting" of the basketball season will take place Friday night, Dec. 2, when the Eight B teams come to Barrington for two games. Coach Clark intends to give his players a workout to see what they can do under fire and it will give the fans a fine chance to look over the 1933 prospects. These Eight B teams are generally big but last year they were not so fast and the Bronchos trimmed them. The Clarkmen need some tough competition now because on Friday, Dec. 9, they will tear into their North-western schedule when the Libertyville Wildcats come to town.

The members of the heavyweight squad at present are Harry Miller, William Bowman, Bernard Christy, George Banks, and Willie Altonberg, forwards; William Tandwer, Howard Meiners and Claude Conn, centers; Willard Grabenkort, Harold Roth, Russell LaPointe, Henry Brandt and Dan Capelli, guards. They are not a very heavy aggregation and they will have to make up for their lack of weight by their speed.

There will be ten home games this year and season tickets will be offered to the public. Only one new basketball rule will be in effect that will cause any confusion on the part of the fans. A line is to be drawn on every court from 40 to 50 feet from each end line depending on the size of the court. The team that has the ball must advance it down the court toward their basket and get it across that line before ten seconds or they lose the ball. The purpose of this change is to speed up the game and make it more interesting for the spectators. Stalling will become more difficult because the ball cannot be passed back across that line once it has been thrown over it from the back court.

The full schedule for the Bronchos is as follows. All home games will be called promptly at 7:30 p. m. and there will be two games each evening.

Furnish Beef for Prisons at One-Sixth of Cost Price

Inmates of the Southern Illinois prison at Menard will consume their usual quota of 30,000 worth of beef per month at a actual cost of less than one-sixth of that amount, through January, February and March, 1933. Rodney H. Brandt, director of the state department of public welfare, received this information from Warden James A. White, following a survey of the cattle feeding operations underway on the prison farm. Steers now fattening on the farm will have cost less than $3,000, and will provide the meat that on the market would cost $18,000. The following is a survey of the cattle feeders, make up most of this. The only bill for feed is for about one and one-half pounds of cotton seed meal per day per animal. The other feed, corn and alfalfa hay, and pasturage, has been produced by prison labor on the prison farm. The meat is found to be of better quality than has been obtained on the open market. Cattle now being slaughtered are dressing out about sixty per cent, according to figures compiled by A. C. Everingham, state farm, garden and dairy inspector.

"Dear Sirs: For 8 months I've been using your salts and am very pleased with results. I've lost 45 lbs. 6 inches in hips and bust measure. I've taken 9 bottles—one lasting 3 weeks. I had often tried to reduce by dieting but never could keep it up but by using down and taking Kruschen I've had splendid results. I highly recommend it to my friends." Mrs. C. E. Wilson, Mantoloking, N. J.
"I lost fat SAFELY and EASILY. Kruschen is a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—don't eat on fatty meats, potatoes, cream and butter—a bottle that lasts 3 weeks changes a fat trifle—but don't your health comes first. GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

THE high tide of friendship between England and the Colonies was reached in 1763. In this quiet little court house, in Hanover, Virginia, located a few miles east of Ashland, the latter on U.S. Route 1, was expressed the first definite opposition to the king. Patrick Henry made his first great speech in this case known as the "Parsons Cause."

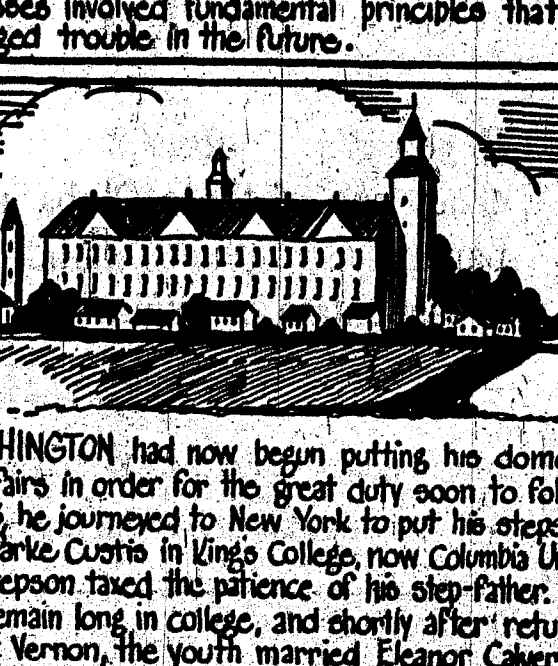

WASHINGTON made a trip down the Ohio River in 1770 to inspect the land. Near the junction of the Ohio and Kanawha Rivers, Washington was visited by Indians, the chief of whom had been in the Braddock tragedy. The chief predicted that Washington, being under the protection of an all-wise Providence, would some day become the founder of a mighty empire.

By James W. Brooks

PEWS IN ST. JOHN'S CHURCH, RICHMOND, VA.

In St. John's Church at Richmond, Virginia, Patrick Henry made his impassioned plea for "Liberty or Death." Washington heard that speech. It is not on record that he made comment, but it created a deep impression as did Henry's speech in the Parsons Cause, at Hanover, for these addresses involved fundamental principles that presaged trouble in the future.

WASHINGTON had now begun putting his domestic affairs in order for the great duty soon to follow. In 1773 he journeyed to New York to put his stepson, John Parke Custis in King's College, now Columbia University. The stepson, taxed the patience of his step-father. He did not remain long in college, and shortly after returning to Mount Vernon, the youth married Eleanor Calvert in 1774, thus adding to Washington's domestic responsibilities.

Relief Workers Report Total of $1125; Goal $1500

20 Per Cent. of Homes, All of Stores Still to Be Solicited

The sum of $1125 raised by house to house canvassing was reported to the Barrington Relief committee Wednesday evening by members of the campaign group of women.

With only 80 per cent of the homes and none of the business houses canvassed, the committee is hopeful that the goal of $1500 from personal contributions will be reached. The committee stated that $150 to $200 is expected from the committee which is preparing to canvass the business district and that an additional $200 to $300 probably will be received from the homes not yet reached.

The goal of $1500 includes only personal and business house contributions. The relief committee dined of early season brought in slightly less than $100. The Lions play will donate $125, and the masquerade dance, to be given by The Jewels will be for the benefit of the relief fund. Mr. E. E. Rehrer, chairman, stated that the committee hopes to receive total cash contributions of $2000 including personal offerings, play and dance proceeds. There is nothing official about this figure, however, as the $1500 from personal contributions is the only goal set.

Food and Clothing

In addition to the $2000 in cash the total receipts will include several hundred dollars of value represented by food and clothing donations amount of which has already been put to good use. A gift of 50 dozen eggs was received this week. Canned goods, vegetables and clothing are among the gift items which have gone through the relief committee organization.

The Barrington organization is never its goal than the suburban district as a whole.

The county wide campaign of the Emergency Welfare fund to provide $500,000 of additional funds entered in fourth week with well over $3,000 subscribed and with prospect of total contribution of $1,000,000 by start of next week.

Interest Growing

Philip W. Moore, chairman of the suburban division, which is now conducting 20 suburban drives in connection with the Chicago campaign, today announced a growth of interest in this project throughout the communities served by his division.

There is considerable misunderstanding, however, said Mr. Moore, as to the purpose and operations of this drive plan that to some extent is growing with subscription to this worthy cause. Occasionally, a resident of one of these towns, without prepared to give to help the needy, the sick and disabled, hesitates at the time of solicitation because of a doubt in his mind of the economy and efficiency of the relief agencies that require the financial assistance.

"I can set at rest any rumors of rate by citing a typical case of welfare work that illustrates how efforts are made to conserve funds and at the same time care adequately for the sick and helpless. Here is an actual instance.

Work for Father

"A family living in the northwest of Chicago, in a foreign neighborhood, as reported in dire straits, a son, aged at the father, mother and two children. The father was described as mentally deficient and unable to work, even if he were offered any. Investigation showed that the only man not receiving aid from any of the general relief organizations, a social worker was assigned to the case. He received the proper diet, including milk, and then her about finding employment that a man with limited ability and mental capacity could handle.

"When she heard of a request for help to run a semi-automatic elevator in a small apartment building, a social worker took the father to the building and obtained a trial for him. At first, the man with the sick was afraid of the elevator, and he looked great pleasure in running it daily up and down to the neglect of passengers. But presently, the case worked him out until he was able to run the car and his duty to the family. Two whole days she helped him, and in the end his work proved satisfactory.

"The result: A man at work, earning a tiny salary, but sufficient to feed and shelter his wife and children. At the same stroke this family of eight was removed from further need to the charity."
