throat told the story of the crime. Within a foot of the murdered woman lay her babe peacefully sleeping, not having been aroused by the dying struggles of the mother. Physicians were hastily summoned. All efforts to restore Mrs. Cowles were fruitless. Life had been effectually choked from her body, but the corpse was still warm, showing that the crime had been committed only a few minutes before.

UNCLE SAM PREPARING TO SQUEEZE PACIFIC ROADS.

Action About to Be Taken Against the Central Pacific Railroad Company-Black Eye For a Labor Bill.

A Washington special says: It is learned from a letter sent by Mr. H. A. Taylor, Commissioner of Railroads, to the Secretary of the Interior that action is about to be taken under the recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of the United States, appellant, vs. the Contral Pacific railroad company. The decision reverses a decision of the Court of Claims, in which it was held that, in the process of ascertaining the net earnings of the Union and Central Pacific railroad companies, upon which 25 per cent is required to be paid to the Government under the Thorman act, it was proper to deduct from the gross earnings not only the actual operating expenses. necessary repairs, and interest on the first mortgage bonds, but also that there should be deducted all sums paid for improvements, betterments and new equipment. The Supreme court reverses the decision and holds that under the Thurman act the net earnings must be ascertained by deducting from the gross earnings only the actual operating expenses, necessary repairs made within the year, and interest on the first mortgage bonds. Under this method of calculation the net earnings of the Central Pacific company will be increased over $2,000,000 and the net earnings of the Union Parific company nearly $7,000,000 since the passage of the Thurman act, 25 per cent of which sums will now be recovered by the government. The letter received by the Secretary from Commissioner Taylor calls attention to the decision of the court and suggests that it will be necessary to make a restatement of the accounts with these reads, and asks the Secretary for instructions in the matter. Commissioner Taylor, under orders from Secretary Noble, has had a conference with the Acting Secretary of the Treasury with a view of getting a full report of all bills for services of the Union and Central Pacific companies on file in the Treasury department and not acted upon. It is intended to ascertain accurately the state of the accounts between the Government and these roads, and then insist upon prompt payment of amounts found to be due.

The Great Strike in the Connellsville Coke Region Inaugurated.

Penn., coke region was inaugurated and every mine and coke works in the region closed down. The miners to the number of about 10,000 refused to go to work, the only men now working being the coke drawers. There are six thousand men employed at this work, and as soon as they have drawn the coke from the ovens they will quit also. The strike is for an advance in wages of 121/2 cents per ton, and against a 10 per cent reduction. Both sides are firm, and a long struggle appears to be inevitable. The operators claim that owing to the depressed condition of the coke and iron trades a reduction is necessary, while upon the other hand, the workmen say the depression is only temporary and the operators can well afford to pay the increase. There are over 16,-000 ovens and seventy coal and coke works in the region.

The flames communicated to Mrs. Seil's apparel and in an in stant she was enveloped in a sheet of fire. She ran from the closet and called to her sister, who was in the house, for help, but the latter was paralyzed with fright and could render no assistance. Mrs. Seil ran frantically up and down the house, each movement fanning the flames which enveloped her. She screamed for help, and finally neighbors rushed in as she fell faint ng to the floor. Her blazing garments were torn from her, taking with them pieces of charred and blistered flesh wherever they had touched her body, and while some of the neighbors busied themselves in extinguishing the flames which had communicated to the house others lifted the now unconscious woman to a bed and called physicians. They at once pronounced her injuries fatal and busied themselve in applying lotions to soothe the awful pain the unfortunate woman was suffering. The flesh about Mrs. Seil's neck, face, hands, and breast was terribly burned, and she had inhaled the flames to such an extent that she will die of internal injuries alone. Mr. Nicholson, the Seils' landlord, who lived upstairs and was the first to rush to the burning woman's assistance, was badly barred about the face and han is. His injuries are not serious.

DEATH TO ALL TRUSTS, SIR JOHN STILL LOYAL.

SO SAYS THE SENATE OF FIRM IN HIS ALLECIANCE TO THE QUEEN.

The Canadian Premier Bitterly Opposed to Annexation-A Manifesto to the Electors.

A Toronto special says Sir. John Macdonald has published an address to the electors of Canada in which he says:

"As in 1882 and again in 1887, so in 1891, do questions relating to the trade and commerce of our country occupy the foremost place in the public mind, Our policy in respect thereto is to-day what it has been for the last eighteen years, and is directed by a firm determination to foster and develop the resources of the Dominion by every means in our power consistent with Canada's position as an integral portion of the British Empire.

Sir John then refers to the growth and prosperity of Canada under the national policy, and takes credit to his government for building the Canadian Pacific railway. Dealing with the policy of the opposition he says:

"Disappointed by the failure of all their productions and convinced that nothing is to be gained by further opposition on the old lines, the reform party has taken a policy to be unrestricted reciprocity, that is (as defined by its author, Mr. Wiman in the North American Review a few days ago) free trade with the United States and a common tariff with the United States against the rest of the world. The adoption of this policy would involve, among other grave evils, discrimination against the mother country.

The great question which you will shortly be called upon to determine resolves itself into this: Shall we endanger our possession of the great heritage bequeathed to us by our fathers and submit ourselves to direct taxation for the privilege of having our tariff fixed at Washington, with the prospect of ultimately becoming a portion of the American Union! I commend these issues to your determination and to the judgment of the whole people of Canada with an unclouded confidence that you will proclaim to the world your resolve to show yourselves not unworthy of the proud distinction you enjoy of being numbered among the most dutiful subjects of our beloved Queen. As for myself, my course is clear. A British subject I was born, a British subject I will die. With my utmost strength, with my latest breath will I oppose the veiled treason which would by sordid means and mercenary proffers lure our people from their allegiance. During my long public service of nearly half a century I have been true to my country and its best interests, and I appeal with equal confidence to the men who have trusted me in the past and to the young hope of

HE GOT THE 'GATOR FIRST, BUT LATER ON THE 'GATOR GOT HIM.

The Story of an Intelligent, One-Eyed Georgia Mule Who Was a Family Heir-

The principal personage concerned in this authentic narrative was known all through the big woods of Southeastern Georgia as Old Tom Krandall's one-eyed mule "Bawley." Old Bawley and his master dwelt on a thousand acres of pine woods and swamp land near the great Okefinokee swamp, and Old Tom religiously believed his mule to be the most sagacious, industrious, and trustworthy beast that ever chewed bay.

"I taken that animal when hit weren't no bigger'n a pint o' huckleberries, an' th' can't nobody tell me hit ain't the smartest an' best mule in Georgy 'thout bein' called a liar an' a fightin' liar, t' boot. When hit comes to a mule 'at knows more'n half the school teachers dooz, and 's willin' t' work, too, I'll put Old Bawley agin any mule 'at walks on

The people of the neighborhood entertained much the same oninion of Old Bawley says the Chicago Tribune. Any stranger that wanted a fight on his hands had only to stroll into that region and cast slurs on Old Tom Krandall's mule. Indeed, it was currently reported that a young dude from Thomasville, who had a "partickler hankerin' after" Miss Georgia Krandall, spoke once upon a time incautiously of Old Bawley in her presence as "an onhan'some beast," and when last seen he was running through a mile of swamp that lay between the Krandalls' and Thomasville, and he was only a short distance ahead of a bull-dog the spirited girl had unchained for his sole and exclusive benefit.

The numerous negroes on the place believed Old Bawley understood everything he heard anybody say, and were careful how they talked when he was within hearin distance. Old Tom Krandall had no sort of doubt the animal would outlive him, and in making his will bequeathed him, in the most solemn and binding English 'Squire Thiggs could muster, to his only son, Young Tom, a lad who was lively and industrious enough, but much given to fishing, 'possum hunting, and above all to alligator-catching. And right here the plot of this story begins to thicken.

THE 'GATOR'S LAIR.

One night, soon after Young Tom's father had made his will, an alligator in an adjacent swamp disturbed the slumbers of the Krandalls by a most unearthly bellowing. Early next morning Young Tom, assisted by a swarm of Afro-Americans aged from 3 to 15 years, repaired to the swamp with the tackle customarily used in capturing 'gators, the chief implement being a book of peculiar construction fastened in a stout wooden handle. It had pulled many an ugly saurian from his cave in the swamps. A great deal of interest was felt in this hunt, as the alligator was believed to be an unusually large one.

"Jedgin' I'm th' racket hit made last night that 'gator's fifteen foot long-not an inch less," said old Fluker, who had been born a slave on the place and was wont to officiate as oracle-in-chief to the younger generation of dusky Georgians. More than one of the gang had mourned the loss of a favorite dog that was believed to have gone down the red gullet of this particular 'gator, and the thirst for vengeance gave zest to the hunt. A drought of unusual duration had made the water in the pond very low, and it was found possible to approach within reaching distance of the 'gator's hole by wading a few rods through swamp mud. Young Tom set his teeth, took a firm grip of the long pole, and in a few moments was prodding vigorously in the cave. The maddened reptile snapped at

OLD BAWLEY LOOKED BACK. the book, it fastened itself in his jaws, and the next instant Tom was jerked prostrate in the mud. He held to the pole, however, and several of the boys reized the rope attached to the handle. They pulled, and the alligator, an enormous one, charged on his enemies, lashing his wicked tail and hissing most horribly. Young Tom dropped everything and made for dry land, barely escaping a vicious blow from the 'gator's tail. The attack was renewed again and again with the same result. The boys had the beast booked but could not land

Like a flash of inspiration the thought of Old Bawley presented itself to young Tom's mind.

"Fetch the mule!" he shouted. A dozen youngsters obeyed the order. In five minutes Old Bawley was hitched securely to the rope. Bogus Jackson, a daring young "coon" who had ridden him in many a scrub-race, was perched on his back and instructed to yank the gator out. He gave the mule one blow -only one-on the ribs with a lightwood knot, and with a wild bellow Old Bawley sprang to his work. At the first jump the alligator was jerked out on the bank, hissing, blaspheming, and thrashing its awful tail. Old Bawley looked back for an instant and saw the hideous creature. No need for Bogus Jackson's club now. As that coffee-colored lad rolled off into the gallberry bushes the mule, snorting with terror, his ears thrown back, his tail straight out and every muscle strained to its utmost, tore through the woods with the speed of an express train. And ever as he looked back and caught a lightning glimpse of his frightful pursuer bumping horribly at his heels he redoubled his efforts and roared with all the energy of his being. Bawley had done some fast running in his days, but his best previous record wasn't a circumstance to the time he was making now, On through the dense woods, on through the pine stumps, palmetto plants, and stunted gallberry bushes flew the frenzied old mule, and on flew, close at his heels, a limp and soggy alligator, bouncing, banging, and zigzagging wildly, now in the air, now on the ground, now rebounding from some decayed stump on one side and bringing up with a muffled crunch against a tree on the other, but keeping all the time in the general direction pursued by Old Bawley. On past the meetinghouse where Parson Wheeler's horrified congregation, just dismissed from a funeral service, stood gazing at the fleeing caravan in petrified astonishment, on through Mammy Briggs' yard, pulling down the week's washing for the Krandall household, on through the premises of Scrub Jones, upsetting a barrel of soft soap, demolishing a bencoop in the rear of Ab Gantling's house, and carrying desolation to Jimbo Hunter's melon patch, whizzed the ill-assorted pair with unabated speed. But all things have an end. At the turning of a long lane stood the schoolhouse where Bessie Krandall was teaching the young Georgia idea its first lessons in projectiles. Old Bawley, clearing a fence without a variation in the swing of his stretching gallop and dragging the 'gator through its decayed timbers without feeling the obstruction, tore down this lane. At the point where the road took a sudden turn he let it turn and crashed through the gate of the school-yard, then through the door of the little school-house, the stout timbers flying into splinters as he struck it. and with a last despairing snort Old Bawley fell to the floor amid a pile of overturned benches and yielded up the ghost, while two score terror-stricken children screeched a requiem over his lifeless remains.

In the Quiet Country.

I had been staying at an Indiana farmhouse all night, and next morning the farmer said he would give me a lift into town. When he was ready to go he called to his oldest boy.

"Bill, is that shotgun loaded with salt for tramps?" "Yes."

"Got the gates shut so that no mad dogs kin git in?"

"Well, keep a lookout for windmill. lightning rod, organ, and sewing machine men. Don't have any truck with the peddlers or poultry buyers. Don't let in any patent gate or wire fence men. Keep clear o' patent hayforks, and don't waste no time on churns, for e pumps, ice-cream freezers, bag holders, patent barrels, fruit trees, wagon jacks, nor ovl traps.

"And say, Bill" called the old man after we had driven forty or fifty rods, 'don't buy no care for the heaves, no fireproof paint, no patent gate hinges, pitchforks, nor encyclopedias." "No."

We had driven about three miles when he suddenly pulled up with an exclamation of disgust. What is it?"

How to Measure Huent. About the time that Daniel Drew began his Wall street career he was up in the country one time to visit some friends, and two farmers called upon him to decide a case. One had sold the other five bushels of wheat and proposed to measure it in a half bushel and sweer the top of the measure with a stick. The other objected, and Uncle Daniel was asked to decide.

"Well, legally speaking, a bushel is only a bushel," he answered. And can the measure be swept off?" "I think it can."

"What with?" "Well, if I was selling wheat I should probably use half the head for a flour barrel.

"Which edge of it?" "Gentlemen, that is a point I cannot now decide on," sighed the old man. "If I was selling to a widow or a preacher I am certain that I should sweep the measure with the straight edge, but if I was selling to a man who pastures his cows in the road and his pigs in his neighbor's corn I'm afraid I should use the circular side and scoop a little too boot." - Wall Street News.

Then every body stood still and stared at a very unusual scene. A lady, well dressed and refined in manner and look, motioned the street boys nearest her to stop yelling, and stepped quickly up toward the dog with a soft, white hand outstretched, and some soothing, soft-spoken words. The poor, frightened thing stopped, curled its tail between its legs, and cringed down nearer the curbstone as if expecting another blow. She spoke to it again, calling it "poor doggie" and various pet names, until it turned its wistful eyes in mute pleading and allowed her to put her hand on it. Then she stroked it softly and reassured it further, while a boy ran to a near drug store for something. and bound up the dog's leg. In a moment the brute was perfectly passive and had ceased even to whine. She turned it over to the kind-hearted Irish janitor of the big Equitable building, who had taken in the situation and brought out a box partly filled with excelsior.

But before he could take it into the basement the knowing man with a leather case had changed his mind about "dog-buttons," and saying that he was a doctor, offered his services to set the broken bone; the lady who had his finger-ring which brought everything talked of shooting the cur politely tendered her own handkerchief to brush the dust from the hands of the sold powerful glasses called "burning dog's friend, the boys came back without the tin can, and, gathering around, proposed to "chip in" and buy some bologna for the patient; and every one went away saying: 'Well, I declare, she used to their ways, to be able to do just the right thing so cleverly."

She had never kept a dog in her life, and was just the least bit afraid of them; but she was the possessor of a heart sensitive to the sufferings of the meanest of God's creatures as to her own, and her little act of thoughtful humanity had stirred the better natures of those whose thoughtlessness only would have made them inhuman.

About 1875 a large tree of the elm species, growing on the farm of Mr. Smyth, rector of Little Houghton, England, was blown down, upturning an immense quantity of dirt in its fall. BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ABOUT THE EMBLEM OF PURITY.

The Wonders and Mysteries Contained in a Snowflake.-God Revealed in a Frozen Rain-drop.-How the Sinner May Become " Whiter Than Snow."

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 8, 1891.-Dr. Talmage's sermon this evening, which he also preached in the Brooklyn Academy of Music in the morning, was from Job 38. 22. "Hast thou entered into the treasures Grossly maligned is the season of winter.

The spring and summer and autumn have had many admirers, but winter, hoaryheaded and white-bearded winter, hath had more enemies than friends. Yet without winter the human race would be inane shame to allow such things!" And still the dog's cries of pain rang shrilly down the screet.

and effortless. You might speak of the winter as the mother of tempests; I take it as the father of a whole family of physical, mental and spiritual energies. most people that I know are strong in proportion to the number of snow banks they had to climb over, or push through, in childhood, while their fathers drove the sled loaded with logs through the crunching drifts high as the fences. At this season him from their seats; clerks ran out of the year when we are so familiar with and wildly gesticulated at him to make the snow, those frozen vapors, those fallhim stop; but still the cur limped and ing blossoms of the sky, those white velped along the gutter-none of these angels of the atmosphere, those poems of things seemed worth a cent so far as the storm, those Iliads and Odysseys of the wintry tempest, I turn over the leaves of my Bible and-though most of it was written in a clime where snow seldom or never fell-I find many of these beautiful congelations. Though the writers may seldom or never have felt the cold touch of the snowflake on their cheek, they had in sight two mountains, the tops of which were suggestive. Other kings sometimes take off their crowns, but Lebanon and Mount Hermon all the year round and through the ages never lift the coronets of crystal from their foreheads. The first time we find a deep fall of snow in the Bible is where Samuel describes a fight between Benaiah and a lion in a pit; and though the snow may have crimsoned under the wounds of both man and brute, the shaggy monster rolled over dead and the giant was victor. But the snow is not She saturated her handkerchief with it fully recognized in the Bible until God interrogates Job, the scientist, concerning its wonders, saying: "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?"

I rather think that Job may have examined the snow-flake with a microscope; for, although it is supposed that the microscope was invented long after Job's time, there had been wonders of glass long before the microscope and telescope of later day were thought of. So long ago as when the Coliseum was in its full splendor, Nero sat in the emperor's box of that grand theatre, which held a hundred thousand people, and looked at the combatants through a gem in close up to his eye. Four hundred years before Christ, in the stores at Athens, were spheres," and Layard, the explorer, found a magnifying-glass amid the ruins of Ninevah, and in the palace of Nimrod. Whether through magnifying instrument or with unaided eye, I cannot say, but I am sure that found wonders, raptures, mysteries, theologies, majesties, infinities walking up and down its corridors, as a result of the question which the Lord had asked him, "Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?"

And now I propose for your spiritual and everlasting profit, if you will accept my guidance, to take you through some of these wonders of crystillization. And notice first, God in the littles. You may take Alpenstock and cross the Mer de Glace, the Sea of Ice, and ascend Mont Blanc which rises into the clouds like a pillar of the Great White Throne, or with Arctic explorer ascend the mountains around the North Pole and see glaciers a thousand feet high grinding against glaciers three thousand feet high. But I will take you on a less pretentious journey and show you God in the snowflake. There is room enough between its pillars for the great Jehovah to stand. In that one frozen drop state is a bad, bad man. He must be on the tip of your finger you may find the throne-room of the Almighty. I rake up the snow in my hand see the coursers of celestial dominion pawing these crystal pavements. The telescope is grand, but I must confess that I am quite as much interested in the microscope. The one reveals the universe above us; the other, just as great a universe beneath us. But the telescope overwhelms me, while the microscope comforts me. What you want and I want especially is a God in littles. If we were seraphic or arch-angelic in our natures, we would want to study God in the great; but such small, weak, shortlived beings as you and I are, want to find God in the littles.

When I see the Maker of the universe giving himself to the architecture of a snowflake and making its shafts, its domes, "halves" and recorded our guesses and its curves, its walls, its irradiations so perfect, I conclude he will look after our insignificant affairs. And if we are of more value than a sparrow most certainly we are of more value than an inanimate snowflake. the Bible would chiefly impress us with God in the littles. It does not say, 'Consider the clouds," but it says "Consider the lilies," It does not say, "Behold the tempests!" but, "Behold the fowls!" and it applauds a cup of cold water, and the widow's two mites, and says the hairs of your head are all numbered. Do not fear, therefore, that you are going to be lost in the crowd. Do not think that because you estimate yourself as only one snowflake among a three-days' January snowstorm that you will be forgotten. The birth and death of a drop of chilled vapor is as certainly regarded by the Lord as the creation and demolition of a planet, Nothing is big to God and nothing is small. What makes the honey industries of South Carolinia such a source of livelihood and wealth? It is because God teaches the lady-bug to make an opening in the rind of the apricot for the bee who cannot otherwise get at the juices of the fruit. So God sends the lady-bug ahead to prepare the forest monster. When they had sawn way for the honey-bee. He teaches the off several of the large limbs on the aut to bite each grain of corn that she puts undermost side to their great astonish. in the ground for winter food in order that ment, not to say downright terror, the it may not take root and so ruin the little weather to throw pebbles into a hollow tree that the water far down and out of reach may come up within reach of the bird's beak. What a comfort that he is a God in the littles.

"Oh," says some one, "I would like to stop the forces of sin and crime that are marching for the conquest of the nations; but I am nobody, I have neither wealth nor eloquence nor social power. What can I " Mrs. do?" My brother, how much do you yes." Then do your share. It is an ag-put this lost world back into the bosom of a pardoning God. Alas that there are so many men and women who will not use the one talent because they have not ten and will not give a penny because they cannot give a dollar, and will not speak as well as they can because they are not eloquent, and will not be a snowflake because they cannot be an avalanche. In earthly wars the generals get about all the credit, but in the war for God and righteousness and heaven all the private soldiers will get crowns of victory unfailing. When we reach heaven-by the grace of God may we all arrive there!-I do not think we will be able to begin the new song right away, because of the surprise we shall feel at the comparative rewards given. As we are being conducted along the street to our celestial residence, we will begin to ask where live some of those who were mighty on earth. We will ask, "Is so-and-so here?" and the answer will be, "Yes, I think he is in the city, but we don't hear much of him; he was good and he got in, but he took most of his pay in earthly applause; he had enough grace to get through the gate, but just where he lives I know not. He squeezed through somehow, although I think the gates took the skirts of his garments. I think he lives in one of those back streets in one of the plainer residences."

Then we see a palace, the door-steps of gold and the windows of agate, and the tower like the sun for brilliance, and chariots before the door, and people who look like princes and princesses going up and down the steps, and we shall say, "What one of the hierarchs lives here? That must be the residence of a Paul or a Milton, or some one whose name resounds throughout all the planet from which we have just ascended." "No. no." says our celestial dragoman. "that is the residence of a soul whom you never heard of. When she gave a charity her left hand knew not what her right hand did. There she comes now, out of her palace grounds, in her chariot behind those two white horses, for a ride on the banks of the river that flows from under the throne of God. Let me see. Did you not have in your world below an old classic which says something about These are they who came out of great Omaha traveling man, will be heard at Ottribulation, and they shall reign forever and ever!" As we pass up the street I find a good many on foot, and I say to the dragoman,

"Who are these?" And when their name s pronounced I recognize that some of them were on earth great poets and great orators and great merchants and great warriors, and when I express my sur- jury. prise about their going afoot, the dragouse they made of what they had." And popular. then I thought to myself, "Why, that --Judge cheerfully and in the right place, and does all the work assigned it, as honorable as a whole Mont Blanc of snowflakes." "Yes, yes," says the celestial dragoman, "Many of these pearls that you find on the foregems in the jewel case of prince and Chicago. princess, are only the petrified snowflakes of earthly tempest, for God does not forget the promise made in regard to them: 'They shall be mine, said the Lord of hosts, in the day when I make up my jewels." Accumulated power! All the prayers and charities and kindnesses and talents of all the good concentered and compacted will must be very fond of dogs, and quite Job somehow went through the galleries of be the world's evangelization. This twenty-three. the snowflake and counted its pillars and thought of the aggregation of the many smalls into that one mighty is another > treasure of the snow. Another treasure of the snow is the suggestion of the usefulness of sorrow. Absence of snow last winter made all nations ial name, the Russian "grip," it was an international plague. The snow is one of the grandest and best of the world's doctors. Yes; it is necessary for the land's productiveness. Great snows in winter are generally followed by great harvests next summer. Scientific analysis has shown that snow contains a larger percentage of ammonia than rain, and hence its greater power of enrichment. Thank God for the snows, and may those of February be plentiful-high and deep and wide and enriching. But who with any analogical faculty can notice that out of such chill as the snow comes the wheat, without realizing that chilling sorrows produce harvests of grace! The strongest Christians, without any exception, are those who were by bereavements, or sickness, or poverty, or persecution, or all of them together, snowed under, and again snowed under. snow-storms of trouble! They kill the malarias of the soul. They drive us out of worldly dependence to God. Call the roll of all the eminently pious of all the ages and you will find them the sons and daughters of sorrow. What proclaims the richest and most golden harvests that wave on all hills of heavenly rapture? The snows, the deep snows, the awful snows of earth by calamity. And the comforting thought is one of the treasures of the snow.

Another treasure of the snow is the suggestion that this mantle covering the earth is like the soul after it is forgiven. "Wash me and I shall be whiter than snow," said the Psalmist. I do not care who you are or where you are, you need as much as I do that cleansing. Do not take it as the tenet of an obsolete theology that our nature is corrupt. We must be changed. We must be made over again. We must be washed in the fountain of God's mercy before we can be whiter than snow. "Without holiness, no man shall see the Lord.'

Oh, for the cleansing power! If there be in all this audience one may or woman whose thoughts have always been right, and whose words always right, and whose actions always right, let such a one rise, or if already standing, lift the right hand. Not one! All we, like sheep. have gone astray. Unclean! Unclean! And yet we may be made whiter than snow; whiter than that which, on a cold winter's morning, after a night of storm. clothes the tree from bottom of trunk to top of highest branch; whiter than that which, this hour, makes the Adriondacks and the Sierra Nevada and Mount Washington heights of pomp and splendor fit to enthrone an archangel.

I declare to all you who are in the heavy and blinding drifts of sin and sorrow that there is a cross near by that can direct you to home, and peace, and God; and hear you not the ringing of the gospel bell hanging to that cross, saying; "This is the way, walk ye in it?" No wonder that the sacred poet put the Psalmist's thought into rhythm with that ringing chorus we have so often sung:

Dear Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole: want thee forever to live in my soul. Break down every idol.cast down every foe Now wash me, and I shall be whiter than

A very pleasant entertainment took place in the lecture room of St. Marks on Monday last, when the Laurel society gave the farce, entitled "Ici on parle Francais." Mrs Spriggings, the Landlady, was well rend-ered by Miss Katie Dornbos, as was Anna Maria, the maid of all work, by Miss Celia Ferguson. Mr. W. Misses A Petterson and Mamie Irwin, were respectively, Mrs. Rattan and Angelina, the object of the Frenchman's adoration, and filled their parts well. The affair was a success, both financially and otherwise.

WHAT IS THE CHICAGO MUTUAL BENE-FIT ASSOCIATION?

The Chicago Mutual Benefit Association is a body corporate under the liaws of the State of Illinois, that every person should join. It combines all the good qualities of the building societies as well as those of a beneficial society and savings banks. All persons over 15 years of age may become members thereof by paying an initi-ation fee of $3.00, and monthly dues of $2.50, and at the end of three years they will receive $250.00. In this you do not have to die to receive your money as you do in the older societies.

Can we do it? I say, positively, Yes; let us see; the Order of Foresters pays out $1.000. when a man pays in his whole expectation of ife, only something like $340 00 yet, how many members receive $1,000 that have even not paid more than $25.00 before their death; how can they do it? The answer is simple, it is the steady increase of the Order and lapses. The Iron Hall of Indiana pays a benefit of $1.000 in some seven years, yet, no individual member pays in over $400, yet, they have been paying off certificates for the last three years and will continue in doing so. The time has passed, when a person will have to pay dues all his life time for the benefit of others after his death.

The Chicago Mutual Benefit Association pays out of the General Fund, all certificates as fast as they mature and adds to the Reserve Fund every month in such amount that the last certificates will be as secure as the first; where can you find a better way of investing your money.

Remember, you pay to the Association & in three years, $100 and they return to you at the end of that time $250. Sixtywo cents a week is all you pay.

For information and applications for membership, apply at the Home Office, Room 28, 151-153 Monroe street, near La-Salle, or at this office, 543 Armitage ave-

"So my fate depends on Queen Mab. Suppose, now, that after awhile-I am in no particular hurry-suppose I desire to leave the island, how shall I carry my purpose into effect-how get away? Assuming, of course, that the queen makes no objection.

"In that big ship of yours. How else?" "If our chance of returning to England depends on Bolsover and me getting the 'Diana' past the Painted Rocks and through the mist, to say nothing of navigating her across the Atlantic, I am afraid we shall have to stay here for the term of our natural lives," I said, gloomily.

"And would you regard that as a misfortune! Where can you find a pleasanter country than this, or one where you could enjoy a greater measure of prosperity and contentment? The queen and the Council of Nine would be only too glad to give you land and slaves, and build you a house, and with your fair skin and red hair and beard you would be sure to have eligible offers of marriage-"

"My hair is not red; it is chestnut," I interposed, impatiently.

Call it what you like; I only mean that it is very beautiful hair. Everybody admires it. The girls cannot keep their eyes off vou. And I am sure you will not find finer women in the world than the Fanes (my mother was a Fane), and if their complexions cannot be described as exactly European, they have a beauty all their own. It is merely a matter of taste."

In this opinion I was able cordially to concur, although I did not say (as I thought) that piebald complexions were not to my taste. As to Mr. Field's proposal that I should settle on the island for good, I observed that, tempting as it was, I did not see my way to accept it; that I did not take kindly to the idea of never seeing England and my friends there again, and that if my mother did not receive news of me before long, she would be brokenhearted. To this he made no answer, andafter some further conversation I repeated an inquiry I had already made more than once as to the position of the island; and producing a chart, I asked him to give me at least an approximate idea of its where-

"Not at present," he said, with a quiet smile. "You have only been here two or three days; why are you so eager to know everything? Have patience, my friend." So I returned the chart to my pocket. and resolved, on the first opportunity, to put the same question to Miss Mab. To tell the truth, I felt rather disappointed that she had not invited me to spend the evening at the Queen's House (formerly was called. Before we separated for the night, Field informed me that, as the shark-killing expedition would set out at sunrise, we should have to breakfast by candle-light, and that I was to be one of the queen's guests on board her own yacht.

I am always punctual, and at five the next morning I entered my host's diningroom, arrayed in my flannels, and we reached the jetty at the very moment that said. "But a broken leg cannot surely be the sun emerged from the sea and chased the shadows from the mountain top.

We had not long to wait. The day was hardly born when the island queen, followed by a gay company of male and fe-male Fanes and their kindred (who alone were admitted to her intimacy), came trooping down the hill. She greeted me very graciously, and invited me to join her party, an invitation which, I need scarcely say, was "accepted with thanks." Rather to my surprise, her yacht, the "Sunflower," was a schooner of some seventy tons burden, solidly built, and well fitted and found. So soon as we were on board, the order was given to weigh archor and make sail, and, followed by several other yachts and a crowd of similar boats, we moved slowly—the wind being light-down the creek.

"There they come!" cried Mab, pointing to a large boat, with a lug-sail, for which all the other boats respectfully made way. It was the shark-hunters' boat, and contained eight men, six of whom were rowing, while one steered, and the other seemed to be attending to the sail. The coxswain, and apparently the captain, was Amyas Fane. In the bottom of the boat were two or three dark objects that looked like bundles of rags. As she passed us returned by the people on the yacht. "The shark-fighters, I suppose?" I said to the queen. "Yes. What do you think of them?"

the crew gave a cheer, which was cordially

"I never saw a set of finer young fellows in my life."

And I never had. All were over six feet three, brawny and broad-shouldered, deep of chest and long of limb, and as lithe and active as so many cats. They were nearly naked, wearing only short drawers, but each man had on a belt, from which hung a sword, and their black hair was confined in a sort of fillet.

Their boat went ahead, and when she was well into the bay, about three miles from the furthest headland, the lug-sail was lowered, and one of the dark objects (which turned out to be goats) fastened to a line and thrown into the sea. Then the pars were unshipped, and Amyas Fane, standing up, saluted the queen, and said, half laughing-

"Morituri te salutant." After this a few minutes' silence, during which the other boats came up and formed a wide circle round the hunters' boat.

'Do you see that?" said Mab, in an intense whisper. "That" was the dorsal fin of a shark, and the next moment the huge fish rolled over, and opening his great jaws, bit the goat in two. Then another floated up from unseen depths and tried to tear the precious morsel from his companion's mouth, while a third, darting suddenly forward, snapped up the remaining portion. Now!" shouted the captain; and six of the hunters, drawing their long, sharp swords, slipped quietly overboard.

The sharks, having by this time finished with the goat, gave their attention to the new-comers. But while they were chasing one, the hunters dived under their bellies and stabbed them repeatedly with their swords, drawing blood at every stroke. Then, when the wounded monsters turned round to meet their enemy, the pursued would become pursuer, and help the comrade who had just helped him. The sharks, bewildered and infuriated, dashed hither and thither in wild confusion, lashing the water with their tails and dyeing

This went on for a quarter of an hour. It was horrible, yet fascinating. The very captain, who gave his orders from the boat like a commander during an action. Over and over again I thought one or other of the hunters would surely be killed or matilated; but at the very moment when destruction seemed imminent, the almost victim would either evade the snap by an agile turn or dive out of sight, or a comrade distract the shark's attention by a sudden stab. One hunter thrust his sword into a shark's jaws, and leaving it there, swam to the boat for another.

The fight went on fast and furious, until one of the fishes, turning belly upward.

floated to the top of the water-dead. In obedience to an order from the captain, the hunters now returned to the boat for a few minutes' rest, which they had well earned, as also the praises of the queen and the plaudits of the spectators.

In the meantime the surviving sharks had fastened on the body of the slain, and others, scenting blood afar, were hurrying up to the feast.

"Have at them again! All!" cried the captain; and himself setting the example, plunged into the water sword in hand, leaving the boat to take care of itself.

This time the sharks, occupied with their meal, were rather taken at a disadvantage; but the creatures being so close together, the only way to get at them was to dive under their bellies, and much address was required to avoid blows from their tails, which were quite capable of breaking a limb. As, moreover, other sharks kept coming up and might take them unawares two of the hunters were told off to keep watch and ward, give notice of their approach, and afford help where help was most required.

In ten minutes after the opening of the second attack two more sharks were numbered with the slain, and almost before the breath was out of their bodies the others began to rend their dead companions, an occupation which they occasionally varied by a free fight among themselves.

"That makes a fourth," said Queen Mab, as another shark turned over on his back. "They have done very well. I think it is almost time to cry, 'Hold! enough!' What say you?"

am quite of your opinion," I answer-"Better stop before anybody is hurt." "Good! I will order the yellow flag to be run up. That is the signal for the combat to cease.

The words were hardly spoken, when one of the hunters anticipated the signal by emerging from the throng and swimming, slowly and painfully, toward the boat. Climbing over the gunwale with some difficulty, he lay down in the stern.

Are you hurt, Bertram?"

"Nothing to speak of," answered the young fellow, smiling. "That last beggar we killed gave me a crack on the leg just as he was turning over; I rather think it is broken." "I am very sorry. I was in hopes the day would end without any mishap. How-Protector's House), as I found her dwelling ever, Doctor Sergeant will soon set you to rights. You will have to keep the house two or three weeks, though.'

"That is the worst of it. But we have had a splendid day's sport, so I must not complain. The fortune of war, you know; and it might have been worse. The last bout we had, poor Tom Ferrers got bitten in two just as I gave the shark that did it the death-stroke."

"What Spartans those fellows are!" cured in two or three weeks?"

"Not quite; but he will be able to hobble about in two or three weeks, and be quite well in five or six." "In England broken legs take double that time to get well." "Yes; but in England you eat beef and drink beer and spirits." "And don't you eat beef and drink beer and spirits?"

"As we have no cattle we can have no beef; and in the way of animal food we confine ourselves to fish, fowl, and venison, and cat very little even of that-don't care for it, in fact. While as for beer and spirits, one of my ancestor's first proceedings when he decided to settle in the island was to cast all the rum in the spirit-room of the 'Santa Anna' into the sea. When he became protector, he prohibited the production of strong drink in any shape. and the prohibition has been maintained by his ancestors."

"You are all teetotalers, then?"

"Teetotalers? What is a teetotaler?" "Don't you know? Ah, I was forgetting. It is a word of the present century. Teetotalers are people who religiously abstain from strong waters."

"In that case we are teetotalers, for we drink only nature's own water."

"And athletes," I added. "Your ancestor was a wise man. Queen Mab. I dare say you are all the better without beef and beer. At any rate you look wonderfully strong and healthy, and Mr. Field tells me you are very long-lived. But you must remember that you have an exceptionally fine climate, and spend much of your time in the open air; that counts for a great deal."

'Yes," she said, significantly; "there are worse places to live in than the Fair Island: and though I should certainly like to see England-

Here she paused, and I seized the opportunity to drop a hint that I should like to see England at no distant date, and to inquire whether I might reckon on her consent to my departure and her assistance in getting away. But she pretended not to hear (though her ears were as sharp as her cousin's), and instead of answering, asked me to dine with her at the Queen's

"We are going to have some cock-fighting," she said, "and afterward a dance. Our dances are, of course, very old-fashioned; but you will perhaps oblige me by teaching us some of the steps that are now the mode in England."

"I bowed, and answered that I should be only too delighted to oblige her in that or any other way; but I was much put about by her refusal to grant my request (for that was what it amounted to). I saw that for some reason or other she was resolved not to let me go; and for the first time I began to consider seriously whether it would not be possible to find a way of leaving the island without her knowledge, and in spite of her evident desire to detain me. Though as ignorant as ever of our exact whereabouts, I had gathered from the records that we were "in the west," and I felt sure that we were no very great distance from some part of the American continent.

When I entered my room at Mr. Field's house, some three hours later, I found lying on my table a three-cornered note, on very rough paper, addressed in a sprawling, school-boy hand to "Mr. Erle." It contained these words-SIR:—The Fair Island is not good for your Health, and your Presence is not desired. You may take ten Days to make your Arrangements for Departure; but if after the Expiration of that Time you are It was horrible, yet fascinating. The very intensity of the excitement kept the spectation as you are intensity of the excitement as you are inte

"A PRESENT FRIEND, BUT A POTENTIAL

"Pleasant" I thought, after reading this precious missive over a second and third time. "The queen refuses to let me go; and if I stay I am to be murdered!"

CHAPTER XXI.-A DANCING LESSON.

I hate anonymous letters. You can never tell what to make of them-whether they are jest or earnest, whether the writer really means what he says, or is merely amusing himself at your expense. The letter I had just received looked like a grim joke; for who could suppose that it was possible for me to get away in ten days, even though the queen and the Council of Nine were as willing to let me go, as they were notoriously unwilling? It was hardly conceivable that I had made an enemy already, and I could think of nobody who had an interest in hastening my departure.

Yes, it must be a joke; and yet—I felt that there might be something in it, after all. But if the rascally writer of the letter thought to frighten me, he was mistaken. His threat should not force me to leave the island a day sooner than suited my convenience, even though I were at full liberty to leave, and the means of leaving were at my disposal.

Had I merely consulted my inclinations. and been able to inform my mother of my whereabouts and safety, I should have been quite content to make a long stay in the island. Queen Mab and her piebald people interested me much, and I wanted to see more of them. But the "Diana" was long past due at Montevideo; unless she was soon heard of, the owners and underwriters must needs conclude that she was lost, with all on board, and my mother, who had only me, would be well-nigh heart-broken. It was, moreover, my duty to inform poor Mrs. Peyton, and the other friends of those who had perished, so soon as might be, of the fate that had befallen them; and I could not forget that the longer I was absent from Liverpool the more difficult I should find it to obtain a situation when I got back. Out of sight is out of mind; and if people began to think me dead, they would forget me altogether. Yet what could I do? It seemed that

ing. For aught I knew, the nearest port where it would be possible to obtain a passage for Europe or the West Indies might be hundreds of miles away. Another voyage in the "Diana" was out of the question; but if Mab could be persuaded to give me an idea of the latitude and longitude of the island, and lend me the "Sunflower" and her crew, the thing iously. Smoking.

At Leipsic they are now celebrating the centenary of the pipe, and the Petite Presse seizes upon the occasion to give a few notes upon the use of tobacco in Europe, which will be interesting to smokers and their enemies.

Snuff, it appears, was the first form in which tobacco was used in France, and the pipe didn't make its appearance until the reign of Louis XIV. At that time the French Government began to distribute pipes among the soldiers. Jean Bart was an inveterate smoker, and the story goes that some Bourbon princesses used to smoke pipes. There was very little smoking in Europe in the eighteenth century. No great man of that time was a smoker. During the French revolution the pipe was comparatively un-known. Neither Robespierre nor Danton, nor any one of the leaders of that period was a smoker. But when Napoleon's army returned from Egypt the pipe became fashionable. General LaSalle used to lead his cavalry charges with a pipe in his mouth; and d'Oudinot was the possessor of a splendid meerschaum, which was presented to him by Napoleon, and which was ornamented with stones to the value of about $7,500. General Moreau, when his legs were about to be amoutated, called for his pipe that he might smoke it during the operation, but how he enjoyed it history doesn't state.

The restoration brought about a reaction against the pipe, and it was not until 1830 that it regained a popularity which it has preserved up to the present time. Except perhaps in England, the pipe is considered out of place on the street; but at home it is just the same in all sorts of society. and it is smoked by many men, including Bismarck. French poets have frequently compared a man's existence to a lighted pipe, whose contents pass off in smoke and ashes. In an old volume of the eighteenth century entitled "Morale representing a young man smoking a fastens itself in the clay pipe, and the legend calls him the "Universal Portrait." This is followed by a queer old piece of poetry compar-ing everybody to a lighted pipe.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

Remarkable Statement of Personal Danger and Providential Escape. The following story—which is attracting wide attention from the press-is so remarkable that we cannot excuse ourselves if we do not lay it before our readers. To the Editor Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat: Sin: On the first day of June, 1881, I lay at my residence in this city surrounded by my friends and waiting for death. Heaven only knows the agony I then endured, for words can never describe it. And yet, if a few years previous any one had told me that I was to be brought so low, and by so terrible disease, I should have scoffed at the idea. I had always been uncommonly strong and healthy, and weighed over 200 pounds and hardly knew, in my own experience, what pain or sickness were. Very many people who will read this statement realize at times that they are unusually tired and cannot account for it. They feel dull pains in various parts of the body and do not understand why. Or they are exceedingly hungry one day and entirely without appetite the next. This was just the way I felt when the relentless malady which had fastened itself upon me first began. Still I thought nothing of it; that probably I had taken a cold which would soon pass away. Shortly after this I noticed a heavy, and at times neuralgic, pain in one side of my head, but as it would come one day and be gone the next I paid little attention to it. Then my stomach would get out of order and my food often failed to digest, causing at times great inconvenience. Yet, even as a physician, I did not think that these things meant anything serious. I fancied I was suffering from malaria and doctored myself accordingly. But I got no better. next noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing-also that there were large quantities one day and very little the next, and that a persistent froth and scum appeared on the surface, and a sediment settled. And yet I did not realize my danger, for, indeed, seeing these symptoms continually, I finally became accustomed to them, and my suspicion was wholly disarmed by the fact that I had no pain in the affected organs or in their vicinity. Why I should have been so blind I cannot understand.

I consulted the best medical skill in the land. I visited all the famed mineral springs in America and traveled from Maine to California. Still I grew worse. No two physicians agreed as to my malady. One said I was troubled with spinal irritation; another, dyspepsia; another, heart disease; another, general debility; another, congestion of the base of the brain; and so on through a long list of common diseases, the symptoms of many of which I really had. In this way several years passed, during which time I was steadily growing worse. My condition had really become pitiable. The slight symptoms I had at first experienced were developed into terrible and constant disorders. My weight had been reduced from 207 to 130 pounds. My life was a burden to myself and friends. I could retain no food on my stomach, and lived wholly by injections. I was a living mass of pain. My pulse was uncontrollable. In my agony I frequently fell to the floor and clutched the carpet and prayed for death. Morphine had litle or no enect in deadening the pain. For six days and nights I had the deathpremonitory hiccoughs constantly. My water was filled with tube-casts and al

bumen. I was struggling with Bright's

Disease of the kidneys in its last stages! While suffering thus I received a call from my pastor, the Rev. Dr. Foote, at that time rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city. I felt that it was our last interview, but in the course of conversation Dr. Foote detailed to me the many remarkable cures of cases like my own which had come under his observation. As a practicing physician and a graduate of the schools, I derided the idea of any medicine outside the regular channels being in the least beneficial. So solicitous, however, was Dr. Foote, that I finally promised I would waive my prejudice. I began its use on the first day of June, 1881, and took it according to directions. At first it sickened me; but this I thought was a good sign for one in my debilitated condition. I continued to take it; the sickening sensation departed and I was finally able to retain food upon my stomach. In a few days I noticed a decided change for the better, as also did my wife and friends. My hiccoughs ceased and I experienced less pain than formerly. I was so rejoiced at this improved condition that. upon what I had believed but a few days before was my dying bed. I vowed, in the presence of my family and friends, should recover, I would both publicly and privately make known this remedy for the good of humanity, wherever and whenever I had an opportunity, and this letter is in fulfillment of that vow. My improvement was constant from that time, and in less than three months I had gained 26 pounds in flesh, became entirely free from pain and I believe I owe my life and present condition wholly to Warner's Safe Cure, the remedy which I used.

Since my recovery I have thoroughly re-investigated the subject of kidney difficulties and Bright's disease, and the truths developed are astounding. I therefore state, deliberately, and as a physician, that I believe more than one-half the deaths that occur in America are caused by Bright's disease of the kidneys. This may sound like a rash statement, but I am prepared to fully verify it. Bright's disease has no distinctive features of its own. (indeed, it often develops without any pain whatever in the kidneys or their vicinity) but has the symptoms of nearly every other common complaint. Hundreds of people die daily, whose burials are authorized by a physician's certificate as occurring from "Heart Disease," "Apoplexy," alysis," "Spinal Complaint," "Rheumatism," "Pneumonia," and other common complaints, when in reality it is from Bright's disease of the kidneys. Few physicians, and fewer people, realize the extent of this disease or its dangerous and insidious nature. It steals into the system like a thief, manifests its presence if at de Guerard." there is an engraving all by the commonest symptoms and constitution before the victim is aware of it. It is nearly as hereditary as consumption, quite as common and fully as fatal. Entire families, inheriting it from their ancestors, have died, and yet none of the number knew or realized the mysterous power which removed them. Instead of common symptoms it often shows none whatever, but brings death suddenly, has two hogs that perform the office of calves to perfection. Mr. Craig had ease. A Mechanical Cotton Picker. The Waco Day, Texas, describes as folows the operation of a new cotton picker the invention of Angus Campbell, lately tried at that place:

The essential feature is 330 fingers or spindles projecting from a hollow cylinder. These fingers are ten inches long, and set in four grooves radially is horse-hair, projecting from the fingers about one-twelfth of an inch. The fingers or spindles are given a whirling motion by a system of og gear. Moving forward, the cylinder revolves, the fingers come in contact with the cotton, the whirling motion of the fingers entangles the cotton lint, and it is picked, then carried upward and backward until cleaned from the fingers by brushes, and thrown into receptacles holding sixty pounds of seed cotton.

The machine weighs about 1,200 pounds, and is of easy draught for two mules. The rows were 185 yards long, and were gone over twice, the result being the cotton was cleanly picked out of the bolls, the machine being as thorough in this respect as the fingers of the negro. No injury to foliage, bolls or branches of the plant was noted. In the morning, when the cotton was slightly damp, a gathering from one row made by the machine, weighed a little more than thirty pounds. The waste knocked on the ground by the machine was picked up by hand and weighed five ounces. The time made was about five pounds a minute, or 300 pounds an hour. The machine could easily work ten hours a day and gather 3,000 pounds at a total expense of $3 per day, making the total cost of the picking for each bale $1.50. At present prices the cost is fully $16.

The Lone Star Cotton Picking Machine Company is now perfecting plans for the erection of an extensive factory in Waco for the manufacture of the machine.

Small Economies.

A girl whose immaculately fresh and admirably groomed appearance attracted her women friends' attention, took a roomful of the sex into her confidence by explaining how she contrived to look so uniformly welldressed in spite of a limited income. "It is simply the result of carefulness," she said; "the old ounce of precaution worth so many pounds of cure. Take my boots, for instance. Instead of doubling them into a shoebag, or letting the tops hang over standing against the wall, I never remove shoes, high or without the precaution low, of slipping in each one a hollow wooden form just the size of my foot. The uppers are neatly buttoned over a leg shape, and there they are, until again needed for service. This applies to all my, walking gear-often half a dozen pairs of boots at a time. My gowns are treated in the same fashion, the waists hooked up over sweet-scented pillows made for the purpose, with tiny perfumed bolsters for the sleeves, polished wooden racks to support the skirts, and big muslin bags to encase the whole. As to wages, the average young girl cannot expect to be paid as much as the average man. It is hard to say why this is so, for she is almost always just as capable. A young woman, for instance, will get ten or twelve dollars a week, where a young man of the same calibre will receive from fifteen to twenty dollars. Perhaps there is an indefinable feeling among employers that they can not exact so much from a woman as they can from a man. A man will often be required to do a great deal of miscellaneous work in connection with shorthand and typewriting, which would never be imposed on a woman.

But there can be no doubt that there is still room for those who will take the trouble to properly equip themselves for the work. The remuneration is ample for the needs of the average girl, and greatly in excess of that paid for other kinds of clerical

That moment is when you prove that its makers can't cure you.

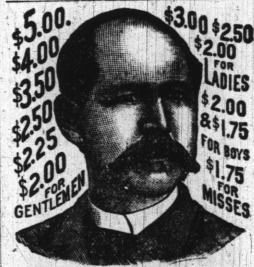

The reason for their faith is this:

Dr. Sage's remedy has proved itself the right cure for ninety-nine out of one hundred cases of Catarrh in the Head, and the World's Dispensary Medical Association can afford to take the risk of your being the one hundredth.

PICKWICK PAPERS.

In Twelve Large Volumes, Which we Offer with a Year's Subscription to this Paper for a Trifle More than • Our Regular Subscription Price.

Wishing to largely increase the circulation of this paper during the next six months, we have made arrangements with a New York publishing house whereby we are enabled to offer as a premium to our subscribers a Set of the Works of Charles Dickibers a Set of the Works of Charles Dick-ens, in Twelve Large and Handsome Volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for a trifle more than our regular sub-scription price. Our great offer to subscribers eclipses any ever heretofore made. Charles Dickens was the greatest novelist who ever lived. No author before or since his time has lived. No author before or since his time has won the fame that he achieved, and his works are even more popular to-day than during his lifetime. They abound in wit, humer, pathos, masterly delineation of character, wivid descriptions of places and incidents, thrilling and skillfully wrought plots. Each book is intensely interesting. No home should be without a set of these great and remarkable works. Not to have read them is to be far behind the age in which we live. The set of Dickens' works which we offer as a rinted from entirely new plates, with new type.

premium to our subscribers is handsomely printed from entirely new plates, with new type. The twelve volumes contain the following world-famous works, each one of which is published complete, unchanged, and absolutely unabridged: BARNABY RUDGE AND CHRISTMAS

STORIES,
OLIVER TWIST AND GREAT EXPECTATIONS,
THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND THE UNCOMMERCIAL TRAVELER, A TALE OF TWO CITIES, HARD TIMES AND THE MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD.

The above are without question the most famous novels that were ever written. For a quarter of a century they have been calebrated in every nook and corner of the civilized world. Yet there are thousands of homes in America not yet supplied with a set of Dickens, the usual high cost of the books preventing people in moderate circumstances from enjoying this luxury. But now, owing to the use of modern impreved printing, folding and stitching machinery, the extremely low price of white paper, and the great competition in the book trade, we are enabled to offer to our subscribers and readers a set of Dickens' works at a price which all can afford to pay. Every home in the land may now be supplied with a set of the great author's works.

Our Great Offer to Subscribers.

We will send the ENTIRE SET OF DICKENS WORKS in TWELVE VOLUMES, as above described, all postage prepaid by ourselves, also THIS PAPER for one year, upon receipt of the regular subscription price of this paper and 75 cents additional. This is the grandest premium ever offered. Up to this time a set of Dickens' works has usually been $10.00 or more. Tell all your friends that they can get a set of Dickens' works, in twelve volumes, with a year's subscription to this paper, for only 75 cents in addition to the regular subscription price. Subscribe now and get this great premium. If your subscription has not yet expired, it will make no difference, for it will be extended one year from date of expiration. We will also give a set of Dickens, as above, free and post-paid, to any one sending us a club of four yearly subscribers. Address,
