THE CLUB HOUSE. It is not quite a year since the Irving Hall Association was organized, and the following officers elected to represent it: C. A. Day, President. A. B. Cook, Vice-President. N. W. Hacker, Secretary.

W. K. Millard, Treasurer. J. R. Wickersham, W. H. Gray, S. M. St. Clair. W. C. Toles, C N. Loucks, C. A. Day and A. B. Cook, Directors,

They bought 100 feet of ground on Irving avenue, and have successfully carried out the enterprise until they brought it to completion and secured a good tenant. They called the stockholders and their friends together and exhibited to them what they had accomplished, and then delivered the building to their successors, The Irving Clab.

A short sketch of this beautiful acquisition to the buildings of the Park will not through which the visitor passes up the entrances, through which one enters the portiers are of silk and solid colors. The

On the right is the private office room of the directors and officers of Irving Club. Between these two rooms will be found a small room in which is the dumb waiter, communicating with the kitchen below. It also connects with a stairway leading to the side entrance of the building. Opening from the library are two large folding doors which lead into the Auditorium hall, a room 40x50, on the north end the boiler room, and janitors quarters.

On the third floor is located the lodge hall, which was built expressly to accom-modate the various secret orders which meet in the Park. The ball is 20x60, and stairway at the southwest corner of the room is the open truss-work finished in Georgia pine, making it look very handsome. This hall is appropriately carpeted and furnished, and is pronounced by good judges to be one of the best of the kind in the country.

The architect of the building was E. Hill Turnock, of Chicago, and the con-tractor who had charge of the work, was Mr. Andrew F. Myren, of Chicago. The steem fitting and plant was furnished by Hoffman & Co., of Chicago, the gasfitting by T. H. Wilmarth & Co., and the gas machine by the Globe Light and Heat Co.

The cost of the building and furniture will amount to between $30,000 and $35,-

There are one hundred and twenty stockholders and over one hundred club members. It was a large undertaking for a small place like this, but all have been very energetic, and success has crowned Heroic Efforts of the Life-Savers Rewarded by Rescuing Ten Persons.

Norfolk, Va., telegram: The Norwegian bark Dictator, trom Pensacola, Fla. to West Hartlepool, England, laden with pine lumber, with a crew of fifteen and the captain's young wife and little boy of 3 years, came ashore in a strong easterly gale four miles south of Cape Henry and two miles north of Virginia Beach hotel. The weather was so thick that the vessel was not seen until 9 o'clock, and then she was in the breakers broadside on, within a quarter of a mile of the shore.

Full crews from two life-saving stations, those of Cape Henry and Seatick, under command of Capt. Drinkwater, were promptly on hand and began firing lines to the ill-fated bark. The gun could not deliver the lines so far, though they were repeatedly fired.

The ship finally succeeded in getting a line ashore tied to a barrel, which the surf carried to the life-savers. The breeches buoy was quickly rigged and sent to the vessel, but unfortunately the bark's crew was ignorant of its use, and the rescue was delayed until Capt. Drinkwater of the life-saving crew wrote instructions, put them in a bottle, and sent it to the Dictator by the line connecting the vesse! wi h the shore.

The men on board broke the bottle at once, as could be seen by glasses from the shore, and proceeded to carry out the directions. The first man was delivered shore in eight minutes and were rescued Four of them came ashore in a life-boat, which was capsized, but the men succeeded in reaching the shore in a half-dead condition. One man had his arm broken.

The captain had urged his wife all during the day to take the buoy and come ashore, but she steadily refused, as she would not leave her husband and child, and only one could take the buoy at a time. NEARLY FIVE HUNDRED PEO-PLE KILLED IN A FIGHT.

Two Days of Desperate Fighting-The Trouble Originated in a Feud Between Rival Rajahs.

A dispatch from Manipur, Assam, brings news of a disaster to a force of native troops there. It seems that James W. Quinton, the chief commissioner of Assam, has recently been investigating some serious troubles which have occurred among the native chiefs. As a result of his investigation the chief commissioner was holding a durbar or conference with the notabilihies of Assam with the view of arresting one of the prominent chiefs who had been instrumental in deposing the

The chief commissioner, while pursuing his inquiries into the disputes between the chiefs, occupied a camp which was garrisoned by a strong force of Ghoorkas, native infantry in the British service. Suddenly this camp was attacked by a number of hostile tribes, led by their chiefs. A two days' battle, during which some desperate lighting took place, followed the onslaught of the tribesmen.

The Ghoorkas fought most determinedly against heavy odds and according to the report 470 of the Ghoorkas were killed. Seven of the British officers who accompanied the chief commissioner and that official have been reported to be missing.

The massacre originated in a feud between the rajah of Manipur and a leading tribal chief. The rajah was deposed and he appealed to the viceroy. Mr. Quinton was sent to settle the trouble and started from the headquarters at Shillong with the Fortysecond and Forty-fourth Ghoorka light infantry.

After crossing the frontier Mr. Quinton summoned the chiefs to a durbar at Minipur for the purpose of arresting the rebellious chief. The tribesmen, pretending to obey the summons, nutstered in force and at midnight on the day before that on which the durbar was to be held suddenly attacked the camp of Commissioner Quinton, which lay between Kohima and Mani-

A KANSAS FARMER MURDERED IN HIS OWN HOUSE.

Shot Down by Masked Men for Stealing Wheat for Seed-Mysterious Murder Near Mitchell, Ind.

Topeka, Kan., telegram: Gov. Humphrey has offered a reward of $:00 for the arrest and conviction of each of the murderers of Thomas Duncan, a settler living in a Cheyenne county dug-out. The murder was committed March 16, but the letter of the prosecuting attorney to the governor gave the first details and confirmed the many stories of White Cap outrages which have recently come from the extreme northwestern part of the State.

For some weeks past there have been rumors in Topeka of White Cap punishments in the sparsely settled outlying counties of the State, but they have lacked official confirmation and no further attention was paid to them.

According to the present attorney's letter Duncan was accused of pilfering grain in small quantities from his neighbors in order to get a sufficient amount of seed to plant his spring crops. Two days before only defense has been in the use of the killing occurred one of the ne ghbors potitively identified Duncan as he making his way from a grain bin. The neighbors were informed and about 8 o'clock on the evening of March 16 about twenty-men with white-cap masks rode up to Duncan's house and were met at the door by his wife. WASHINGTON NEWS.

The officers of the secret service are at their wits' end over discoveries of counterfeit silver certificates. Aside from the dangerous character of these particular counterfeits the fact has been brought out that no one knows how much counterfeit money is affoat. There may be $1,000,000 and there may be $20,000,000. Bills which are circulating from hand to hand and from bank to bank may be connter-feit. As one of the secretservice officers said to day, the perfection of counterfeiting has been reached and banks can be deceived as readily as individuals. There are some peculiar features connected with the counterfeit $2 bills which have just been brought to light. They are the issue of 1886, bearing the face of Gen. Hancock. It was only by accident that one of the bills was detected in Kansas City. Then another was found in the redemption bureau here. Since that time careful scrutiny has brought to light about twenty more of the bills.

Counterfeiters now have at their disposal every facility which the government has, Their engravers are as skillful as the government engravers. The special paper containing hair lines, but now this defense has gone, for the special paper used by the counterfeiters in the bills just brought to light is as good as that turned out by the two mills in Massachusetts under government control. The counterfeit has the same delicate thread running lengthwise, which is discernible only by the Foster will retire the $2 bills which have been counterfeited as soon as new plates can be made for another issue. Instead of the head of Hancock the new bills will have that of the late Secre-

It has the appearance now as though the States in which the tax was paid direct to the government need not worry themselves about what they shall do with direct taxes when they are refunded. Treasury Department authorities announce that they have full record of every individual who paid the tax to Government officers and the amount paid, and that a plan will be formulated by which each State can obtain a full list of its citizens who paid the tax and amount by each one. It is probable this may lead to similar action in cases where States advanced money and collected tax from citizens.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs sent the agents at various Sioux reser-McCauley. They then mutilated his vations a letter giving a synopsis of all existing treaties and arrangements between the Sioux and the Government, including the Indian appropriation acts passed during the last Congress. The commissioner directs the agents to sav to the Indians that Agent Cooper has been instructed to proceed to Pine Ridge and find out definitely what persons suffered loss of property during the late trouble, and that as soon as this information is received the $100,-000 which Congress appropriated to make good these losses will be paid to them. They are also directed to explain that the agents have quested to report to him what Indians are ready and entitled to receive from the Government the cows and other stock, and as soon as this information is received the stock will be purchased and sent to them. Secretary Foster has given the State of Indiana uneasiness by notifying the sub-treasurer at Chicago not to pay the Indiana quota of the direct-tax refund. The Hoosier State was to receive almost $1,000,000 and all the formalities had been gone through with for securing the money, but Secretary Foster found that there were several old claims of the government against Indiana and concluded that this was a good time to strike a balance. The claims against Indiana amount to about $50,000 and until the State settles them it cannot have the $1,000,000. The Secretary says that this action is in line with what will be done in the case of other States which are delinquent to the government. Vermont has been behind on some small debts for several years and now she will have to pay up or go without her share of the direct tax.

Who Should "Bow" First.

A great deal of nonsense has been talked about the question of whose place it is to bow first when a lady and gentleman meet upon the street or in any public assembly.

It is very absurd to say that a man should always wait until a lady has recognized him. In this, as in most. other matters, common sense and mutual convenience are the only guides. Many ladies are near-sighted; many others find great difficulty in remembering faces. Are they, because of these drawbacks, to be always debarred of the pleasure of a chance meeting with some agreeable man?

The important thing, of course, is that a man should not presume; that, for instance, he should not speak to a lady to whom he has been merely introduced, unless she shows some sign of willingness to continue the acquaintance. Not to lift his hat to her with deference would be a rudeness. but he should not stop to speak unless she makes the first movement in that direction.

When two people meet who are really acquainted it is not the man who should necessarily bow first, or the lady-it is whichever of them is the first to perceive and recognize the

If a lady is walking and meets a man whom she knows well, and who desires to speak with her, he will, of course, not commit the awkwardness of keeping her standing in the street, but if he has time will beg permission to join her for a few moments and walk beside her long enough for a

This is what you shall do. You have you have something to say to him, and set an hour when he shall pay you a

your mother all about it, and don't do dignity. Tell him that it hurts you; tell him that you can't permit it, and in addition, that if he continues to act as he does, unpleasant as it may be, you will have to entirely drop his people. The project for their removal is perfectly feasible, and the country to which it is proposed to take them is so like their own that the conditions of life been unapproachable on account of the ice, for in the teath century colonies from Iceland were located on the east coast and were completely cut off from all contact with civilization by an nee veil which ame down from the polar seas and has never since been removed. The entire east coast is therefore believed to be uninhabitable, but the climatic conditions on the west coast are materially different. and extensive settlements have already been formed by the Danes along the eastern shores of Dayis straits and Baffin's window, and saw an ugly looking face bay. The west of Greenland, while it masses of ice far into the sea, has nevertheless many small valleys, where, during he short summer, vegetation is abundant. Mosses grow among the rocks and even almost on he ice, and the wild reindeer on the approach of winter leave the coast and go into the interior. Wherever reindeer can live Lapps can live with them, and it is argued that the climatic conditions are not so different in Greenland from those in Lapland as to Russian empire and the extreme nothern tip of the Scandinavian peninsula. Lapland contains about 130,000 square miles; is therefore, a district about twice the size of Missouri, but has a population not exceeding 150,000. The sea coast is civilized world, with which they have litbroken up by the flords of the Norway the in common, and naturally would precoast, and many of these, owing to the nfluence of the Gulf stream, are never frozen. The climate of the coast is, therefore, much milder than that of the interior; indeed, the extensive mountain ranges in the heart of Lapland are for the most part covered with perpetual snow. The short summmer is prolific of vegetation, and the grasses and mosses which turnish the reindeer with a scanty subsistence are covered up by the snow, are discovered by the subtle sense of smell possessed by these animals, and raked out by the broad hoofs which seems specially adapted to this service.

The people who inhabit this, the most northern land on the Eastern Hemisphere, about 200 yards from a station when are divided into three classes, the mountain, the sea, and the river Lapps. The first named are also the least civilized, in point of fact are wandering nomads, having no wealth except their beids of reindeer, no habitations save tents made from the skins of these weful animals, and fer emigration to an attempt to accomno fixed place of abode, but from year to she ran on by, and a negro boy hung year follow their herds wherever pasturage is most abundant. The river Lapps have advanced a stage further in the road to civilization, have fixed habitations, though these are but huts of earth, and pos ess considerable skill in several manufactures. They make their own boats, manufacture him good-by, and she had to do it if their own clothing, knives, weapons, and she would have to follow the train ten fish-hooks. The wandering mountain Lapps, also known as the "three duty. "She's just and often as much as 503. The river Lapps do not buy and sell their women, but entertain a respect for them akin to that felt in countries whose people have far greater oportunities for education and refinement. The sea Laprs have progressed far beyond their mountain brethren: their houses are of wood or stone; they have rowing and sail boats with which they traverse the open sea. They have no inconsiderable amount of commerce: being skillful fishers, they catch and salt large quantities of the fish which throng the waters of the Norway coast. and are thus able to purchase for themselves the luxuries of more civilized

The Lapps are a curious race. Nothing is known of their origin or whence they came. They seem to be Mongolians, but are as superior to the Esquimaux as the blonde Swedes and Norwegians are to year. chee't bones, hollow cheeks, and receding chin, they present strong points of resem-blance to the Chinese, but their eyes are not oblique and their color is much lighter, while their language bears not the slightest resemblance to that of any known Asiatic tribe. It is probable that they were among the earliest immigrants to Europe from the Asiatic home of the human race, and that, pressed by subsequent tides of immigration, they were gradually crowded into their far-away corner of the continent, and there remained a relic of almost prehistoric times. However this may be, it is certain that in intelligence they far exceed most nations of so-called savages. Most are, at least nominally, Christians. Partly by persuasion, partly by force, they were a couple of hundred years ago induced to give up their heathenism and embrace a Protestant Christianity. In Hatta there is the most northern Lutheran church in the world. It is an unpretending building, standing almost on an eminence, and in it service is rarely held more than once a month, for the clergyman resides many miles away, and is obliged to ride his circuit over an almost roadless country under circum-tances of difficulty which would hinder the clergy of more civilized countries from going at all.

The scenery of the Lapp country is ex tremely varied. Mountain ranges approach near the sea and attain a height of from 6,000 to 7,000 feet. As in this part of the world the line of perpetual snow is a little above 3,000 feet many of the mountains are covered with their white drapery from year to year, and the curious spectacle is presented of green valleys watered by stream; which flow down from never ceasing snows.

Lapland has several towns of considerable trade. Bossekop, on the coast of Norway, coes a large business in clothing, for the sea and river Lapps already ap-

It is true that the sa'e of all sorts of alcoholic stimulents is forbidden, but it is, also true that numberless ways ot evading the law exist, and that drunkenness is annually proving more and more a curse to the land of the Lapp.

Lap and is interesting from a scientific point of view, for within its limits have been established two of the circumpolar stations, through which scientific investigation by means of magnetic, electrical of these is at Bossekop, the other at Boulokaeino, and at each the results attained were in the highest degree satisfactory. Observing," while pleasant enough in the summer time, becomes arduous labor when undertaken during the six months night characteristic of the Lapland winter. For the observer to rise and work all day by candle light is depres-ing in the extreme, both on the physical and on the mental system. At each of these stations the instruments during the summer were placed in the open air, but during the winter were protected by earthen huts, so that much inconvenience necessarily resu ts to the s tentific observer.

It is said that the Lapps look with favor on the idea of emigration. They are beng driven to the wall in their native land. An advancing civilization requires that they shall give up their nomadic habits and become useful members of society. Like the Indians of the Northwest, they have come in contact with the

A large amount of local news crowded from this issue owing to lack of space.

* Henry W. Schaefer, in the 14th Ward, will receive a majority of votes.

the 16th Ward is directly interested, will be held at Baer's Hall, corner of concourses several processions, the Chicago Milwaukee avenues, Sunday, April 5th, at 3 p. m., to discuss the qualifications of the various candidates for alderman.

Vote the straight Republican ticket citizens of the Town of Jefferson and the 27th Ward. Hempstead Washburne for mayor, J. H. Tiedemann for treasurer, B. F. Richolson for attorney and J. R. B. Van Cleave for clerk; M. J. Conway for alderman; Dan Calhoun for supervisor; Peter Youngquist for assessor; D. W. Blair for collector; H. C. Dingman for clerk; and H. E. R. Eicke for constable.

A question for a Democratic city employe to answer: Why did J. C. Elder, assistant city engineer, tell Mrs. John Baird, of 227 Hoffman avenue, Maplewood, to either pay the "contractor" the sum of $5 and thus save any further bother about the sidewalk built by Mr. John Baird in front of Lots 31 and 32, Block 13, and for which the city wrongfully claims payment for building. What could either the "contractor" or Elder do to square it? What right had either of them to $5 of Mrs. Baird's money-or is this the way the city employes turn an "honest" dollar under the Cregier administration? Rather a small amount to be asking for. sn't it Mr. Elder?

Occasionally one comes across a Republican, who for some reason or other has made up his mind to vote tributed. If the "business" men are for a Demcratic alderman, perhaps so earnest in the support of this monbecause he is a personal friend or because he may consider the Democrat names not announced? They have the ablest man of the two. This is a matter that is worthy of attention, for is now far advanced, and really it that one vote possibly make a great does seem that they are not interestdifference. The coming election is one ing themselves as much as Messrs. of great importance, and as it is liable Stiles et al would have the public betobe very close in many wards, and the lieve. his vote for a Democrat for alderman three men, one of which Elmer Republican loss and 3000 the Demo-doing make the City Council Demolican mayoralty candidate, Hempstead Washburn, be successful, all important Committees would naturally be Democratic, which is just what should be guarded against, for with a Democratic council and a Republican mayor, the administration of the latter could not but be crippled and stultified. All good Republicans should bear this in mind and, in order to surely prevent any such possible lamentable catastrophe, vote the straight ticket, Republican throughout. Don't fail then to cast your ballot for the Republican aldermanic nominee next Tuesday. Take no chances,, let us have a real Republican administration, mayor, council and Every time that the "citizens hold a political meeting there is a great hue and cry raised the News about the multitudes which flock to the places appointed for as embling. Last Tuesday night, for in stance, it was claimed that Battery D the armory and the Paris Gaieties were all packed to overflowing with remarkably enthusiastic crowd, num bering, it was claimed 15,000.

Now it is true that a great many people did assemble in the two first named places, although neither of them over flowed except when some went from one hall to another out of curiosity, which by the way was the principal motive which was the cause of the presence of a larger part of the assemblage. In the Paris Gaieties at no time was there over six or seven people present, except of the band on the sidewalk outside, and no attempt was made at speech making there. Hardly had the hands of the clock designated 9 p. m. when a majority of those present in the armory deserted it for the Battery, for the Harrison meeting in Central Music Hall or their homes, and in the Battery building there was plenty of room for all who desired ad-hese meetings from the start, and that has been the number of beardless youths, under age and unable to vote, who have composed the Citizens processions and swarmed their meetings. On Tuesday night before the meeting the "Citizens" of the 10th Ward, numbering by actual count fourteen, most of whom were under 21 years of age, headed by a fife and drum, paraded A meeting in which every citizen of the street to some extent, and at the conclusion of the Michigan avenue largest of which did not number fifty, consisting almost entirely of minors and boys, marched about Clark and Madison streets, cheering and yelling like Comanche Indians, evidently intending to make up with noise for the sparsity of their number.

While it is true that thousands have on each occasion attended the Citizens meetings, it also is true that a large majority of the attendants will not vote for Elmer Washburn, and never intended to.

Let anyone at all acquainted about town drop into one of these assemblages, and glance about him, and on every side he will discover city and county employes, good Democrats or Republicans as the case may be, sauntering about or listening to the flights of eloquence of the speakers. Let the observer notice who do the applauding, and he will discover that it is confined to less than one-third of those present, Again, with occasionally an exception, the heartiness of the applause given is not and cannot be compared with that of the Republican or Democratic meetings. Note also the speakers. Much has been said of the great interest taken by the "business" men in this movement, but where are the "business" men speakers? At last Tuesday's meeting the speakers advertised were their own candidates and no one else; including Gen. Stiles and Gov. Hamilton, the the name of one single business man was not on the cards so liberally disgrel or monkey ticket, why are their not been thus far and the campaign

A peculiar state of affairs exists in the aldermanic contest in the 16th

Geo. Lenke, the Republican nominee, is a business man of considerable edly promising the same to them. As Senate a result of this ill feeling the young has. This state of affairs has become can ticket, from top to bottom. complicated by the appearance on the scene of Peter Miller, an Independent Democrat; Miller claims to have been cheated out of the Democratic nomination by Kunz, but the fact of the matter is, Kunz's supporters outnumbered those of Miller's ten to one maries. Miller now proposes to run independent in order, as he says, to defeat Kunz. He does not expect to be elect. ed himself. Instead of defeating Kunz however his candidacy may have an entirely contrary effect, and may result in the election of the very man he is endeavoring to beat, as every vote he receives is a vote taken from George DesPlanes, Lenke. Miller cannot possibly get any Polish votes, and the only votes he can get are some German votes that would otherwise have gone to Lenke. Miller has been repeatedly asked by his own friends and by the leading election will be held for and withdraw from the contest, but this he stubbornly refuses to do. The question for the voters in the 16th Ward to decide at this election is: Shall the respectable Americans, Germans, Irish and Scandinavians permit the Poles to entirely disfranchise them by gobbling one more and the only one seat remaining in the Common Council for this ward? Vote for Miller and you get another Pole.

We warn the voters of the 16th Ward, both Democratic and Republican, that if they wish to defeat Stanley Kunz at the polls next Tuesday, by all means to vote for Geo. Lenke for Alderman. We particularly desire to. inpress this upon the friends of Mr.

Dont throw away your vote, but vote for Geo. Lenke.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

To satisfy my curiosity I went over to Bowmanville last Saturday night said the Prominent Citizen, and I hear it was the largest political gathering that ever assembled in that community.

Mr. E. L. Budlong presided and Mr. O. F. Gear was secretary. George E. Detweiler, D. W. Blair, Dan Calhoun, Peter Youngquist, Alderman Conway and County Clerk Wulff all spoke and were well received. Mr. Budlong also made a few remarks which were right to the point.

As I was leaving the hall with Mr. Field, Bolsover, of whom so far I had not taken the least notice, put himself in my way, and said he wanted a word with me.

"Say on," I answered, coldly; for old Tom's recent conduct had not been at all to my liking, and I rather suspected him of having had a hand in the cutting loose of the "Diana."

"I ax your pardon, Mr. Erle," he said, very humbly: "but if you will let me say so, I have done you wrong. I was that disappointed with not getting the treasure—I had thought of scarce anything else all my life-I was that disappointed as I was almost mad, and scarce knew what I was doing. And I blamed you. I thought as you was somehow in fault, and as you could have got the treasure for us if you'd liked. Well, when I was in that humor, Mr. Fane comes to me and says as I had a better claim to the treasure than anybody else, and that he would see me righted. I believed him; but I can see now as he only wanted to make a spoon-handle of me, and may be to do something against you and the queen. But he soon found out as though I might be a fool I wasn't a knave, and he did his dirty work himself, or got somebody else to do it. When the 'Diana,' as was thought, broke away from her moorings and foundered, my eyes was opened, and I knew as I had lost my best Erle, will you forgive me, and let by-gones be by-gones? If you can make any use of me, I am quite willing to serve with you agen these niggers or redskins, or pie-Lids, or whatever they are. I'm a naval reserve man, and know my gun drill and small-arm drill as well as anybody."

I took old Tom's proffered hand, and assured him that I should be only too glad to let by-gones be by-gones, that his help would be invaluable, and that I should give him an important command.

CHAPTER XXIX. - WYNTER'S HILL. Never in my life did I work so hard as during the next few days and nights, for I stretch, sleeping as opportunity offered.

When my messengers returned, ten days later, with the news that Swamp Island swarmed with Cariberoes, that a considerable number had disembarked in the neighborhood of Wynter's Hill, and more canoes were in sight, the state of affairs

. I had an army of some one thousand five hundred men, all of them in the prime of life, none less than five feet ten inches in height, as keen-sighted as hawks, as active as cats, and, as I believed, as brave as lions, but with nearly everything to learn in the way of discipline. The archer-guard consisted of five hundred men. They were splendid shots, marched fairly together, and could execute a few simple movements. The others were tolerable bowmen, but when I took them in hand utterly unorganized. I divided the one thousand five hundred into three regiments, which I called first, second, and third, each officered by a colonel, a major, and five captains, (all shark-fighters). The subalterns and sergeants were selected, on the recommendation of Oliver Fane (whom. I made the chief of my staff), from the first or archer-guard regiment.

l also organized a rifle company of fifty men, under the command of Tom Bolso-

It was impossible, with the time at my disposal, to attempt anything like regular drill. We could do no more than teach the second and third regiments to march in step, form in line, and a few other elementary movements. Old Tom, however, drilled his fifty men incessantly, and made very fair shots of them. As for arms, we had any number of bows, and though arrows were in rather short supply, our stock was being rapidly replenished. We had swords and cutlasses enough for the entire force; the former nearly all of Spanish make, and very superior weapons. Our only fire-arms were two cases of rifles (fifty) and three or four others, together with half a dozen revolvers, taken out of the "Diana;" the old flint-lock muskets which had belonged to the "Santa Anna" were out of repair, and decidedly less effective than our bows and arrows.

I gave Tom and each of the colonels a revolver apiece, and kept one for myself. Tom and I also carried each a rifle.

My plan of campaign was very simple. I might, as Mr. Field and some of the seniors proposed, have chosen a strong position, and there awaited the Cariberoe attack. But as the Cariberoes might have taken it into their heads to march elsewhere, and I thought it expedient not to let them take the initiative, I decided to attack them as soon as I found them, and wherever I found them. To this end, though I should have been glad of a little more time for preparation. I resolved to take the field at once. Within an hour of receiving positive assurance that the enemy were at Wynter's Hill, I gave orders to march, and my men, being splendid walkers and in good fettle, I reckoned that we should probably reach that place in about three days. We were attended by about five hundred Caribs, who carried our supplies of food and reserve ammunition. I intended also to employ them as scouts, but as they were quite unorganized and poorly armed, I could not reckon them as effectives.

I had not much fear that the Cariberoes would evade me. Whether their purpose was conquest or merely plunder, their objective point must be Fairhaven, whither the direct road ran along the north coast, the best cultivated and most thickly populated part of the country; and unless they took a very devious and difficult route by the south, this was the only road they could follow. I had, moreover, so arranged matters that, let them go which way they would, I should have speedy information.

On the other hand, as they might make a move at any moment, I took every precaution to avoid being surprised. Two of our best runners were sent on in advance. then, at a short interval, followed four more, then eight, after whom came the advanced guard, a company of the first regiment. Carib scouts were also continually ahead, and our bivouacs (we had no tents) were guarded by a triple line of sentries and outposts.

These precautions were all the more necessary as multitudes of slaves were leaving their masters, and no doubt conveying information to the enemy. The houses of several planters had been plundered and others, our friend Weston and his family) on their way to Fairhaven. It was evident that the fortunes of Fair Island depended on us. If we were beaten, or failed to drive the invaders into the sea.

the country would be ruined. As we were eating our evening meal after our third day's march, two scouts came in with the news that the Caribs were still at Wynter's Hill, and that they had been joined by vast numbers of Calibans, and that appearances indicated that they were making ready for a move. In reply to an inquiry as to their strength, I was answered. "Thousands" This was rather vague, and not very satisfactory; but as waiting would not make them fewer, I determined to attack early in the morning. We had light of moon, and by starting at two o'clock we should be able to reach the neighborhood of Wynter's Hill about six. It would be far better than getting there five or six hours later; for at that time of the year the noon-day heat was almost insupportable.

Having come to this resolution, I called my officers together, told them what I proposed to do, and gave such orders as I deemed necessary. They were full of fight and confident of success-rather too confident, in fact. I advised them, whatever they did, not to hold the enemy too cheap, but to be as vigilant and wary as if we had to do with a disciplined force commanded by a competent general. I knew the Cariberoes to be brave, and as they outnumbered us by probably three or four to one, they were likely to prove formidable foes; our arms, moreover, were not so superior to theirs that we could afford to throw away a chance; we had only tifty rifles. and if their bows and arrows were inferior to ours, they had a great many more of

The men were as eager as the officers, and marched so well (doing twenty miles friend; but it was not till you came back in four hours) that at sunrise the runners that I had any idea as Mr. Fane was not as proported that Wynter's Hill was in sight, honest as he made out. And now, Mr On this I ordered a halt, and while the men were breakfasting I went forward with Oliver Fane and Bolsover to reconnoiter.

The Cariberoes were encamped about two miles off, at the edge of a wood. Between our bivouac and the wood the ground was undulating and open, and, as I thought, not badly adapted for a battle on a small scale. But as the enemy occupied the higher ground they had the advantage of position, and had they possessed fire-arms might have rendered it almost impregnable. Even as it was, if they clung to the wood and declined to "come on," we should not be able to get at them without heavy loss and risk of disaster, for as yet their wrought eighteen and twenty hours at a numbers were an unknown quantity. To overcome this difficulty I had recourse to a stratagem which, though it may seem cruel, was, I think, justifiable in the circuinstances, my object being not merely to save the island, but to give the Cariberoes such a lesson as would keep them away from it for at least a generation. As yet they had not seen us could not see us until we stirred; for we were behind a clump of trees in a dip of the ground. My plan was to send the native camp-followers on first, in the hope that the Cariberoes, perceiving how few they were, and that they belonged to the race they least feared, might come down the hill to meet them, a proceeding which would afford us the opportunity we desired.

To complete my description of the ground and render clear what followed, I must add that we were near the sea, which was thereabouts bordered by tall limestone cliffs, rising sheer from the water, and broken only by a single gap half-way up Wynter's Hill. Broadly speaking, the hill was to our front, the sea to our right, and a stretch of open country to our left.

My stratagem, albeit far from being a failure, did not prove the brilliant success which I expected. Some of the men, contrary to my orders, lighted fires, so that before our Carib allies marched out the Cariberoes were already on the qui vive, and, though they came down the hill in force, they advanced cautiously and, rather to my surprise, silently and in good order. They numbered at least five thousand, and it was obvious that they were commanded by a chief who knew something of the art

The Caribs did not take much harm, after all-then. After exchanging a few shots with the enemy they bolted-according to order. As they ran down the hill we advanced into the open, marching in line. Bolsover and his rifles in the center, and a little in the rear, as until they were committed to an engagement I did not want the Cariberoes to find out that we possessed fire-arms. I held three hundred of the archer-guard and fifty men from each of the other regiments in reserve.

The enemy, though, as it seemed, rather surprised by this display of force, stood their ground. When we were about two hundred yards from them, I gave the order to begin shooting, and I was pleased to observe that nearly every arrow found a mark. The Cariberoes replied briskly, shooting two arrows for our one; but their weapons were so inferior that their missiles did comparatively little execution.

This went on for ten or fifteen minutes, when the Cariberoes drawing nearer, showed a disposition to come to close quarters, which was what I particularly desired to avoid; I feared that they might bear us down by the sheer weight of their superior numbers.

"Now is your time, Tom," I said. "Let them have it!" The old satior wanted nothing better. His men (who had been lying down, a little in the rear) stood up, the archers opened their ranks, and, advancing to the front, the rifles poured in a volley point-blank, which bowled the Cariberoes over like ninepins. The effect was tremendous The enemy, completely taken by surprise gave way in all directions; and sceing that the crisis of the battle had come, I told Tom to go on firing as hard as he could. called up the reserves, and was about to order a charge along the line, when Oliver Fane laid his hand on my shoulder and literally spun me round.

"Good heavens, Mr. Erle!" he exclaimed, "look there!"

He pointed to our left rear, a direction in which I had not turned my eyes since the fight began.

"I see smoke," I said, "and some of the bushes seem to have caught fire. What then?"

"What then? Why, don't you see that the fire is spreading and the wind rising, and that in five minutes all the herbage between the cliffs and Wynter's Wood will be in a blaze? The wood will burn, too; it is as dry as tinder; so shall we, if we stay

"What shall we do? Ah, I see-the gap in the cliff. We must occupy it at once. And it will be who gets there first. I believe the Cariberoes are moving that way already. Give immediate orders for all the men to make for the gap at once—as hard as they can go."

The men needed no second bidding. Some of them had seen the danger even as Oliver pointed it out to me, and ready off. Fighting was now suspended by mutual consent, or rather under a common compulsion; the Cariberoes and ourselves raced madly for the sole avenue of escape from swift and awful death-death by fire. The gap, more than a mile away, was so narrow at the mouth—being, indeed, for a short distance practically a tunnel-that it could be defended by a handful of men against a host; and if the Cariberoes got there first!

I never ran so fast before—or since—and after my three days' march I was in tip-top condition, yet, try as I might, I could not keep up with the swifter of my piebald companions. Oliver would have stayed with me, but I bade him for Heaven's sake hurry on and secure the pass. I would take

Our foremost fellows are now neck and neck with about an equal number of Carl beroes, also splendid runners; and I watch every phase of the contest with sickening anxiety, for upon its issue depends not our lives alone, but the fate of an entire people. "Thank God! They are drawing ahead.

They will win! They will win! Breed and training are telling, as they always do. Bravo, Oliver! Bravo, Wild! One more spurt like that, and-"

They have done it—the goal is reached! A score of the brave fellows leap into the gap, and as their swords flash in the sun and they turn to face the foe, I know that the race is won, the victory ours.

But the battle has still to be fought. For the start was by no means "even;" not a third of our little army has gained the pass; while between us and them is a great body of the enemy, trying might and main to force the gap, and through whom we must cut our way or perish. I wait until the remainder of our fellows-among whom are Bolsover and Amyas Fane come up. I rally them, and then charge right into the thick of the enemy, sword in hand, There is no time for shooting. They fight like fiends—as only men made desperate by fear can fight, neither giving nor taking quarter. It is man against man, sword against spear, and as we hack, and hew, and stab, thick smoke rolls over our heads. The fire is close behind us.

All was now wild confusion, and how personally fared in that desperate struggle for life-at once a race and a battle-I can scarcely tell. Yet one horribly grotesque incident I shall never forget. It was burned into my brain, and I can see it still. Just as I had emptied the last barrel of my revolver a fellow came at me with his spear, which I contrived to catch with one hand, while I ran him through with the other. Before I could withdraw my sword, a second Caliban-a hideous giant with a black skin, white eyes and a red nose-turned round and pointed his spear straight at my throat. For the moment I was defenseless; I gave myself up for lost, and nerved myself to die as a brave man should. But at the very same instant a blood-stained blade flashed through the murky air, and striking the giant's skull. clove it through the middle right down to the chin, and as the wretch staggered backward, the sundered parts fell on either shoulder. It was a hideous sight.

The man who delivered that trenchant blow was Amyas Fane. A few minutes later I had the good fortune to save his life as he had saved mine.

But for Oliver and his companions we should never have got through. They plied the enemy with arrows, then charged; and the Cariberoes, taken between two fires, were forced back, so that after a short yet fierce struggle we gained our point-those of us who survived; for many had fallen, and all were wounded. TO BE CONTINUED.

THE COAL-FIELDS NEAR DOVER, ENG. A Large Addition to the Supply from Southern England.

Nor can there be any doubt as to the value of these coal-fields, when the value of Westphalian, Belgian, and French coal-fields is taken into account. The Westphalian field is 7.218 feet thick, with a 117 seams, yielding 290 feet of workable coal. That of Liege is 7,600 feet, with 85 seams, and about 212 feet of workable coal. That of Mons 9,400 with 110 seams and 250 feet of valuable coal. In Somersetshire the coal measures are 8,400 feet thick with 55 seams, yielding 98 feet of workable coal, and in South Wales 1,-100 feet, with 75 seams and 120 feet of available coal. These coal fields may reasonably be taken to indicate the valve of those which await the explerer in Southern England. Are they, however, it may be asked. within the depths at which mining can be carried on at a profit? They occur at Dover at 1,204 feet from the surface, and at Calais at 1.104 and further to the west, between Dover and London, may be expected to be at the same depth as the Old Red Sandstone under London, or at about 1,100 feet. This depth is well within the limits of practical mining. Most of the important coal pits in this country are worked at a much greater depth than this, and range to over 2,800 feet. In Belgium one pit at Charleroi is worked to a depth of 3.412 feet. Year by year, as the means of ventilation are improved, they are being pushed deeper. The coal commissioners fix the limit at 4,000 feet, because the temperature of the rock at that depth is about 90°, or blood heat, at which work becomes so difficult as to be almost impossible. The temperature, however, of the air in the workings can be regulated by the expansion of compressed air, which, at the point of escape. lowers the surrounding air to freezing point. With this system of ventilation the only limit to depth is that of expense.

From these considerations it is obvious that a large addition to the supply of coal may reasonably be expected from Southern England. The discovery of these hidden coalfields is a question of national importance, well worthy of the attention of Parliament. It is closely connected with the question of royalties, which is now being considered by a royal commission. As the law stands at present if the search for coal be successful the neighboring landowners, who may or may not have contributed to the experiment, are masters of the situation, because they can charge what royalties they like.-Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins in the Contemporary Review.

There is fashion in canes as well as everything else. Big canes and crooked handles have gone out, and the present fancy is for canes tolerably slender and with a knob or other finish at the top.

THOUGHTS FOR EASTER.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON ON THE GREAT CHURCH FESTIVAL.

The Significance of Christ's Resurrection in the Lives of His Fol-

New York, March 29.-Dr. Talmage reached an Easter sermon to his audiences today. Both at the morning service in Brooklyn and at New York in the evening the Academies of Music were bright with a profusion of flowers, Easter lillies being conspicuous. A selection of music appropriate to the festival was beautifully rendered at each service. The text of the preacher's discourse was Matthew 28:6, Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

Visiting any great city we are not satisfied until we have also looked at its cemetery. We examine all the styles of cenotaph, mausoleum, sarcophagus, crypt and sculpture. Here lies buried a statesman. vonder an orator, here a poet, out there an inventor, in some other place a great philanthropist. But with how much greater interest and with more depth of emotiou we look upon our family plot in the cemetery. In the one case, it is a matter of public interest; in the cher, it is a matter of private and heartfelt affection. But around the grave at which we halt this morning, there are gathered all kinds of stupenduous interest. At this sepulchre, I have to tell you, in this sepulchre there was buried a King, a Conquerer, an Emancipator, a Friend, a Brother, a Christ, Monarch of the universe, but bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh, and sorrow of our sorrow, and heart of our heart. "Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

It has for surroundings, the manor in the suburbs of Jerusalem, a manor owned by a wealthy gentleman by the name of Joseph. He was one of the court of seventy who had condemned Christ, but I think he had voted in the negative, or, being a timid man, had been absent at the time of the casting of the vote. He had laid out the parterre at great expense. It was a hot climate and I suppose there were broad-branched trees and winding paths underneath them, while here the waters rippled over the rocks into a fishpool, and yonder the vines and the flowers clambered over the wall, and all around there were the beauties of kiosk and arboriculture. After the fatigues of the Jerusalem courtroom, how refreshing to come out in these suburbs botanical and pomological.

I walk a little further on in the parterre and I come across a cluster of rocks, and I see on them the marks of a sculptor's chisel. I come still closer and I find that there is a subterranean recess and I walk down the marble stairs, and come to a portico, over the doorway-an architecture of fruits and flowers chiseled by the hand of the sculptor. I go into the portico and on either side there are rooms, two, four or six rooms of rock. In the walls are niches, each niche large enough to hold a dead body. One of these rooms of rock is especially wealthy with sculpture. It was a beautiful and charming spot. Why all this? The fact was that Joseph, the owner of the parterre, of that wealthy manor, had recognized the fact that he could not always walk those gardens, and he sought this as his own last resting place. What a beautiful plot in which to wait for the resurrection!

Mark well the mausoleum in the rock. It is to be the most celebrated tomb in all the ages; Catacombs of Egypt, tomb of Napoleon, Mahal Taj of India, nothing compared with it. Christ had just been murdered and his body must be thrown out to the dogs and the ravens as was customary with crucified bodies, unless there be prompt and effective hindrance. Joseph, the owner of the mausoleum, begs for the body of Christ, and he takes and washes the poor and mutilated frame from the blood and the dust, and shrouds it and perfumes it. I think embalmment was omitted. When in olden times they wished to embalm a dead body, the priest with some pretension of medical skill would show the point between the ribs where the incision was to be made. Then the operator would come and make the incision, and then run for his life else he would be slain for violating the dead body. Then the other priests would come with salt nitre and cassia, and wine of palm tree, and complete the embalmment. But I think in this case embalmment was omitted lest there be more excitement and another riot. The funeral advances. Present: Joseph, the owner of the mausoleum; Nicodemus, who brought the flowers, and the two Marys. Heavy burden on the shoulders of two men as they carry the body of Christ down the marble stairs and into the portico and lift the dead weight to the level of the niche in the rock, and push the body of Christ into the only pleasant resting place it ever had. These men coming forth close the door of rock against the recess. The government, afraid that the disciples would steal the body of Christ and play resurrection, put upon the door the seal of the Sanhedrim, the violation of that seal, like the violation of the United States government, or of the British gov nment, always followed with severe penalties. A regiment of soldiers from the Tower Antonio is detailed to guard that mausoleum. At the door of that tomb a fight took place which decided the question for all grave-yards and cemeteries. Sword of lightning against sword of steel. Angel of God against the military. The body in the crypt begins to move in its shroud of fine linen and slides down upon the pavement, moves through the portico, appears in the doorway, comes up the marble steps. Christ having left his mortuary attire behind him, comes forth in the garb of a workman as I take it, from the fact that the women mistook, him for the gardener. There and then was shattered the tomb so that it can never be rebuilt. All the trowels of earthly masonry cannot mend it. Forever and forever it is a broken tomb. Death that day taking the side of the military received a horrible cut under the angel's spear of flame, and must himself go down at the last the King of Terrors disappearing before the King of Grace. "The Lord is risen." Hosanna! Hosanna! O weep no more, your comforts slain, The Lord is risen, he lives again.

Again! Standing in this place where the Lord lay, I am impressed with the fact that floral and sculptural ornamentation are appropriate for the places of the dead. We are all glad that in the short time of the Saviour's inhumation he lay amid flowers and sculpture, I cannot quite understand what I see in the newspapers where amid the announcements of obsequies the friends request "send no flowers." Why, there is no place so appropriate for flowers as the casket of the departed. If your means allow-I repeat, if your means allow-let there be The city of Hamburg has a surplus of $2.250,000. them in the hand; it means victory, Christ was buried in a parterre. Christ was buried in a garden. Flowers are types of resurrection. Death is sad enough anyhow. Let conservatory and arboretum do all they can in the way of alleviation. Your little girl loved flowers while she was alive. Put them in her hands, now that she cannot go forth and pluck flowers for herself. On sunshiny days twist a garland for her still heart. Brooklyn has no grander glory than her Greenwood, nor Boston than her Mount Auburn, nor Philadelphia than her Laurel Hill, nor Cincinnati than her Spring Grove, nor San Francisco than her Lone Standing in this place where the Lord lay, I am also impressed with the dignity of unpretending obsequies. Joseph that day was mourner, sexton, liveryman-had the entire charge of all the occasion. Four people only at the burial of the King of the universe. Let this be consolatory to those Maryland, was when a boy a page in who through small means or lack of large acquaintance, have but little demonstration of grief at the grave of their dead. It is not necessary. Long line of glittering equipages, two rows of silver handles, casket of costly wood, pall-bearers scarfed and gloved are not necessary. Christ looks preserved. out from heaven on a burial, where there are six in attendance and remembers there are two more than he had at his obsequies. Again; standing in this place where the Lord lay, I am impressed with the fact that you cannot keep the dead down: The seal of the Sanhedrim, a regiment of soldiers from the tower of Antonio to old, and a grandson of Timothy stand guard, floor of rock, roof of rock, wall of rock, niche of rock, cannot keep Christ in the crypt. Come out and come up he must. Came out and came up he did. Prefiguration. The first fruits of them that sleep. Just as certainly as you of the best-known newspaper men and and I go down into the grave, just so certainly we will come up again.

Various scriptural accounts say that the work of grave-breaking will begin with the blast of trumpets and shoutings; whence I take it that the first intimation of the day. will be a sound from heaven such as has never before been heard. It may not be so very loud, but it will be penetrating. There are mausoleums so deep that undisturbed silence has slept there ever since the day when the sleepers were left in them. The great noise shall strike through them. Among the corals of the sea, miles deep. where the shipwrecked rest, the sound will strike. No one will mistake it for thunder or the blast of earthly minstrelsy. There will be heard the voice of the uncounted millions of the dead who come rushing out of the graves of eternity, flying toward the tomb, crying, "Make way! Oh, grave give us back our body! We gave it to you in corruption; surrender it now in incorruption." Snap! go the iron gates of the modern vaults. The country graveyard will look like a rough ploughed field as the mounds break open. All the kings of the earth; all the senators; all the great men, all the armies-victors and vanquished; all the ages—barbaric and civilized; all those who were chopped by guillotine, or simmered in the fire, or rotted in dungeons; all the infants of a day; all the octogenarians—all! Not one straggler left behind. All! all! And now the air is darkened with the fragments of bodies that are coming together from the opposite corners on the earth. Lost limbs finding their matebone to bone, sinew to sinew—until every surgeon's table shall be set again at the point from which it was severed. Wake up, my friends, this day, this glorious Easter morning, with all these congratulations. If I understand this day it means peace toward Heaven and peace toward earth. Great wealth of flowers! Bring more flowers. Wreath them around pick a fight. the brazen throat of the cannon, plant them in the desert until it shall blossom as the rose, braid them into the mane of the war charger as he comes back. No more red dahlias of human blood. Give us white lillies of peace. Strew all the earth with Easter garlands, for the resurrection we celebrate this morning implies all kinds of resurrection, a score of resurrections. Resurrection from death and sin to the life of the Gospel, Resurrection of commercial integrity. Resurrection of national honor. Resurrection of inter- bed by 11 o'clock and I told him to come national good-will. Resurrection of art. at half-past. Resurrection of literature. Resurrection of everything that is good and kind and generous and holy and beautiful. Nothing to stay down, to stay buried, but sin and darkness and pain and disease and revenge and death. Let those tarry in the grave forever. "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men."

The president of Brazil has a long name and persons who send dispatches by cable from that country have a habit of splitting it up and using one e.id or the other in their messages. When he was elected again the other day, says a New York paper, dispatches announcing the fact were received by a good many down-town houses which are interested in the South American trade. Late in the day one cablegram arrived which caused a stir, for it read: "Deodoro elected." If he had got in, the receiver reasoned, the other fellow, who had been reported successful, must have been defeated. So pretty soon a story was flying about that Fonseca had lost the election. Half an hour later the rumor was called in. It has been discovered that both Deodoro and Fonseca appeared on the card of the Brazilian its socket, and the amputated limb of the president.

NO MORE MINING FOR HIM.

One Experience of Digging for Gold was all He Wanted.

"Yes," observed a young lawyer riend of mine yesterday, "I have been a gold miner in my time, and I had about all I wanted of it in that one experience, I can assure you.

"You see," he went on, "I was possessed with the idea when I left college, some five years ago, that I'd like to go into gold mining as a business. First I'd learn the practical part of it, then I'd locate some valuable claim somewhere and take things easy afterwards, merely taking out enough gold to pay my running expenses. Sounds well, doesn't it?

"Well, I had a couple of hundred dollars saved up, and with this I bought an outfit of rough clothing and a ticket for the west. Without going into details, I found myself, some two weeks afterwards, in Grizzly Flat, a mining camp in El Dorado county, Cal. My money was about gone, too, and, as I had no way of procuring additional funds, I had to set to work whether I wished to or

"I met a mine boss up there who agreed, in consideration of a ten dollar gold piece—the last money I hadto give me a job as helper in one of the lower levels of his mine. The next day I started out for my new field of labors. It was the dead of winter and bitter cold. The snow was about two feet deep on the level and through this we had to tramp a distance of half a mile to the mine.

"Thus far the outlook was not enouraging certainly. Here, get in the cage there,' said 'the boss,' pointing to a box like affair suspended over a hole in the ground. With some misgivings I got aboard and then down we went.

"Down, down, until it seemed almost as if we had reached the center of the earth. It was dark as pitch, too, save for the flickering rays of the candle which I carried. Then I had to crawl on my hands and knees through a narrow, damp passageway, until we eached the face of the drift. Here, Jim,' said the boss, 'here's a new hand for you. Better set him to work holding drill.'

"I put out my hand and felt a thick, slimy ooze against the wall. Small streams of water trickled from above down the back of my neck. There was no gold in sight, either; no Aladdin's treasure palace greeted my eyes, as I fondly hoped to see. It was an uncanny place-damp, dismal and altogether horrible to contemplate.

"Here, young feller, git a hold on this drill, will yer?' And as I instinctively obeyed Jim prepared to strike: Whish! and down came the hammer on the head of the drill. I remembered only seeing a thousand stars and then all became a blank.

"When I returned to consciousness found my arm in a sling. The blow had glanced and the hammer had descended on my forearm. You're in luck; your arm isn't broken,' said the mine boss; and then he added, with evident contempt: 'Say, you're no miner. I think school teaching is more in your line.'

"He was probably right. At any rate I managed to work my way back to the coast, and was glad enough to see New York city again, I can tell you. No, siree! no more gold or any other kind of mining in mine. Not if can help it."-New York Herald.

She Forget Something.

She was a tidy looking girl of 18, but rather overdressed and a bit too vain. She took a Madison avenue car, says the New York Sun, and as sho sat down it was noticed that she carried one loose glove in her hand. This was to display the four rings on the fingers of that plump and pretty member. The gloves were not quite forty rods long, and they did not have quite 100 buttons each. They came as near it as fashion demands, however, and the girl looked pleased and satisfied. She had been riding less than five minutes when she suddenly stood up and motioned for the car to stop, and half minute later she was out of sight. Then it was noticed that she had left the glove on the seat, and a boy about 6 years of age eyed it attentively for a few seconds, and then whispered to his mother beside him loud enough for all to hear:

'Ma! Ma! She's gone off and forgot one of her stockings!"

Don't forget to vote the straight Republican ticket from Mayor down to Constable next Tuesday, and see that your friends do likewise.

From all present appearances it would seem that Alderman Conway and in fact. the entire Republican ticket will have an easy walk away on April 7th. That any Republican would vote against Conway hardly seems posseble. He has worked hard to secure improvements for us, and succeeded much better than any other alderman representing a new wardl For, it must be remembered, it is not such an easy matter to procure everything for a new ward like ours, and Alderman Conway deserves great credit for the efficient manner in which he has looked after the interests of his constituents. The fact that Alderman Conway's opponent is a resident of our district, will make little difference, first because he is on the wrong side of the fence, and second, because Alderman Conway has made so many friends, that numerous Democrats, who believe in keeping a good thing whrn they have it will scratch in favor of Alderman Conway.

HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

Mr. Editor:

The other day I chanced to be in the private office of County Clerk Wulff on some business, when my attention was called to a rather singular fact. On one of the windows on west side of the office mentioned is pasted a large picture of Hempstead Washburne. Now it happens that the City Clerk's office in the City Hall is just opposite and as you look across lo, and hehold, there upon the City Hall window is Washburne as large as life and twice as natural. Of course it is a reflection, but it is also a clear case of handwriting on tee wall, in my opinion. Let us wait and see if it isn't a good omen.

A BIG FLOOD.

The only thing that will wet a man who wears a "Fish Brand Slicker" is a flood; but even then he must be under water. This statement may seem strong, but a coat that will stand a two days storm without leaking, and will not rip or tear, is sure to fill the bill. The additional advantage is that it costs less and wears longer than any other waterproof coat. Have you one? If not, why do you wait until it rains? Sold everywhere. Buy it now.
