THE DEATH OF GEO, F. CALHOUN.

During the past few years our pleasant community of Irving Park has several times been called upon to mourn the un timely departure to that bourn from whence none return, of some of its best loved citizens, called away by the Great Father in the very prime of their manhood and zenith of their worldly usefulness.

Of these, few were better known, nonmore dearly loved, and none will be more sadly mourned or greatly missed than the late George F. Calhoun, who passed quietly away on the 21st of June last, after a lingering illness and a hopeless battle of eleven long months with that dread disease. bronchial consumption. Born in Jersey City, N. J., in 1854, George was, comparatively speaking, still a young man, apparently many years of life and hope be-

BOARD MEETING.

An adjourned meeting of the Board of Trustees was held on Tuesday evening for the purpose of transacting the unfinished business of the previous meeting. There were present President Black, Trustees Davis, Stuart, Berry, Miller; absent, Whitcomb and Gildea. President Black stated that the members had been brought together for the purpose of electing a Village Collector, receiving the report of the Committee on Sewerage and Drainage, and also that of the Com: mittee appointed by the Board to investigate the matter of the legality of letting he printing for the ensuing year to the Park Ridge Herald. In regard to the office of Village Collector the President stated that he had thoroughly searched the records, but could find nothing to show that the ordinance creating such an office, and passed Feb. 18. 1887, had ever been repealed. After reading the same he stated that it would now be in order for the Board to appoint such an officer and fix the compensation for the perfectly legal. Trustee Davis offered a resolution to the effect that the compensation of Village Collector be placed at 2 per cent, that sum to be deducted from the original amount the same. That the Collector give bonds in the sum of $1,000, and that all funds thus collected be turned over to the Treasurer by the third Tuesday in each month. Mr. Geo. T. Stebbings was chosen to fill that position, receiving the votes of every member of the Board present. President a Village Collector at this time was for the reason that quite a number of property owners on the west side of track in front of whose residences water mains were about to be laid, were anxious to pay their assessments, but that up to this time there had been no one authorized to receive the money. Under the new law most of the assessments would undoubtedly be paid when due, which would enable the Committee on Water and Water Works to push work with wonderful rapidity.

Trustee Davis, chairman of Committee on Sewerage and Drainage, in a verbal report on that subject, said that, although the Supreme Court had affirmed the decision of the County Court of Cook County, and the order of affirment had been entered on the books of the County Clerk, still for several reasons he thought the better plan would be to wait until spring, before com-Grand View has at last started to boom mencing work on the sewer. TERRIBLE WORK OF A LAND SLIDE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Forty Indians and One White Woman Dashed to Death-Seven Scalded to Beath in Colorado.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 14.—News has been received here of a landslide on the banks of the Skeena river at the North Pacific cannery, resulting in the death of one white woman and forty Indians. Early in the morning of July 7 those residing near the cannery were aroused by an avalanche on the mountain back of the cannery. Nine houses with their occupants were swept away. Thirteen bodies have been recovered.

The avalanche of rocks and earth and trees carried everything before it into the slough close by the cannery. The occupants of the houses had time to get outside the buildings, but before they could escape from the advancing torrent of debris they were caught and carried along at a fearful

Among the houses destroyed were the mess house and residence of the foreman of the cannery. In the messroom was the young Swedish wife of the foreman. She was carried along in the mad and deadly current and dashed to death hundreds of feet below. The Indians claim that among those destroyed were about forty Indians of the Port Simpson, Sitka, Metalakat-lah and Kitimiat tribes. The body of the foreman's wife has not yet been found, but there is not the slightest hope for any living thing within the range of the terrible slide of bowlders, trees, and earth.

The slide just missed the cannery building by about two feet. Had the slide struck the cannery or occurred half an hour earlier the death roll would have reached into the hundreds. It had been raining in torrents for the previous four days, and it is thought that the accumulation of water in the ravines on the mountain side broke away, carrying death and destruction before it.

NAVAJOES STEALING STOCK.

Six Hundred Indians in Arizona Likely to Get Into Trouble.

More Inside Facts Furnished Concerns ing the Lincoln Controversy.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 13.—Great interest has been awakened in the controversy between Col. A. K. McClure and John C. Nicolay. An editor who was near to Mr. Forney during that period when Forney's two newspapers were administration organs, was interviewed yesterday. He says that the inside facts in the case unquestionably sustain Col. McClure. It was well understood, he says, among the editors of both the Philadelphia Press and the Washington Chronicle, who daily received confidential instructions from Mr. Forney, that Andrew Johnson was Lincoln's choice for political reasons. Further corroboration of this fact was the editorial, written by Mr. Forney himself, in the Philadelphia Press July 9, 1864, saying:

"It is proper that his (President Lincoln's) colleague should be Andrew Johnson of Tennessee. We should have been satisfied with any of the great names before the convention. We should have been especially pleased if the convention had nominated Mr. Hamlin, for he has been an active and brave defender of the Union cause. There was a policy, however, which the convention had not overlooked and which ao one will more gladly recognize than the distinguished Vice-Presi-

WOULD REQUIRE MILLIONS.

Eugene Kelly Says that Catholic Banks Are Impracticable.

NEW YORK, July 13.-The scheme proposed by many prominent and wealthy Catholics of the old world to establish Catholic banks in all the principal cities of the world has been frowned down by Eugene Kelly, who was approached a number of times by the originators for the purpose of inducing him to become the agent and representative in this city. In speaking of the matter Mr. Kelly said: "The scheine has been broached a number of times and ultimately I thought it had been killed as impracticable. It requires too many millions and too many prominent names for any thorough business man to think of going into it.' Regarding the big shortage in the Peters pence fund occasioned by bad investments on the part of Manager Falchi, who has charge of it, Mr. Kelly said he believed Manager Falchi was much in favor of the Catholic bank scheme, and he understood that £20,000 had been deposited in a London bank to n eet the preliminary expenses. This £20,000 might have come out of the eters pence fund.

Three People Lose Their Lives at the Hands of an Insane Negro. CAIRO, Ill., July 11.—Pat Moss and Eddy Davis, both colored, and a white boy, aged 15, named Harry Odle, were beaten to death in the woods near Olm sted on the Big Four road eighteen miles from here, yesterday. The murderer is an insane negro named Daniel Welsh, 30 years old, who, meeting his victims separately in lonely places in the woods, used a large hickory club with terrible effect. He concealed the bodies in the underbrush and reported the crime to Dr. Waite, living in the neighborhood, and being accompanied led the way to where the bodies lay. He was arrested and is in jail at Mound City. The prisoner asserts that his mission on earth is the destruction of the devil and congratulates himself amid his ravings on having faithfully performed his divine mission.

The Plucky American Woman Talks of Her African Tour.

NAPLES, July 14.-Mrs. French Sheldon, the plucky American woman who headed an exploring party into the heart of Africa, arrived here vesterday on the British Indian steamer. She was met by her husband. Mrs. Sheldon is still weak from the illness which seized her just before leaving Africa, but was well enough to land here. She will proceed slowly to London by an overland route. Her illness was mainly the result of a severe fall she had while descending the steep slopes of a crater to reach Lake Chala. Mrs. Sheldon told a correspondent that her trip was a great success. She more than completed the programme arranged, managed the caravan splendidly, and visited all the Kilmarjo tribes. Just after mass at the Catholic church at Taos, Mo., yesterday Joseph Frank, a well-known farmer and Grand Army leader, accosted Francis Bermlemans. a schoolteacher and Democratic leader in Osage county, in a quarrelsome manner. The latter pacified Frank for a moment, and the two started to walk home arm in arm. When they had gone about fifty paces Frank suddenly drew a revolver and fired. The shot took effect in Bermlemans' left breast. The wounded man caught Frank by the shoulder and said: "Oh, don't shoot me, friend." A second shot was the only response, and Bermlemans fell dead with a bullet through his brain. A crowd gathered, and Frank pointed his pistol at his own head and snapped it twice, but the cartridge did not explode. Then he started away, but before he had gone 200 yards he drew his revolver again and fired two bullets into his own head, falling dead in the road. No cause

AFRAID OF THE INDIANS | A MONTH'S WORK REQUIRED. The Servia Must Have a New Twenty-Ton Crank Shaft.

New York, Jully 13.-It will be nearly a month before the disabled. Servia again sails. Twenty men are hard at work taking apart her ponderous engine. The defective crankpin, which caused her breakdown, has been removed, and so has the big crankshaft. This latter weighs about twenty tons, and the machinists had a hard time disconnecting it. The breaking of the crankpin rendered the big share useless, and for that reason it was taken out. The shaft can not be replaced in this country, and a big firm of marine engine builders in Glasgow was notified that the company wanted a new shaft, and the machinests now have one ready. The ponderous piece of steel will be placed on board the Umbria, which eaves Liverpool this morning. The mbria is expected here next Saturday. It will, take two weeks to place the shaft in position on the engine, and the Servia will probably make another start for England Aug. 1. The steerage passengers who made a start on the Servia last week left on the Utruria, which sailed this morning.

TOLD BY PHILIP BRAND, M. D., LONDOW. CHAPTER IX. - CONTINUED.

"How did you come by this?" he cried, Pointing to the siver of hand. Do you recog-"I gave it to Miss Rowan myself."

"I gave it to Miss Rowan myself."

"Then we are on the right track," I cried, joyfully. "Go on, Mr. Sharpe."

"Yes, gentlemen, we are certainly on the right track; but after all, it isn't my fault if the track don't lead exactly where you wish. You see, when I heard of this mysterious disappearance of this lady, I began to concoct my own theory. I said to myself, when a young and beautiful—"

"Confound your theories!" cried Carriston, fiercely. "Go on with your tale."

The man gave his interrupter a spiteful glance. "Well, sir," he said, "as you gave me strict instructions to watch a certain gentleman closely, I obeyed those instructions, of course, although I knew I was on a fool's errand."

"Will you go on?" cried Carriston. "If you know where Miss Rowan is, say so; your money will be paid you the moment I dind her."

"I don't say I exactly know where to find the lady, but I can soon know if you wish me "Tell your tale your own way, but as short-ly as possible," I said, seeing that my excit-able friend was preparing for another out-

"I found there was nothing to be gained by keeping watch on the gentleman you men-tioned, sir, so I went to Scotland and tried back from there. As soon as I worked on my own lay I found out all about it. The lady went from Callendar to Edinburgh, from Edinburgh to London, from London to Folke-stone, and from Folkestone to Boulong." I glanced at Carriston. All his calminess seemed to have returned. He was leaning against the mantelpiece, and appeared quite unmoved by Mr. Sharpe's clear statement as to the route Madeline had taken. 'Of course," continued Mr. Sharpe, "I was not quite certain I was tracking the right person, although her description corresponded with the likeness you gave me. But as you are sure this article of jewelry belonged to the lady you want, the matter is beyond a doubt?

"Of course," I said, seeing that Carriston had no intention of speaking. "Where did

"It was left behind, in a bedroom of one of the principal hotels in Folkestone. I did go over to Boulong, but after that I thought I had learnt all you would care to know." There was something in the man's manner which made me dread what was coming.

Again I looked at Carriston. His lips were curved with contempt, but he still kept silence.
"Why not have pursued your inquiries past Boulong?" I asked.

For this reason, sir. I had learnt enough. The theory I had concocted was the right one after all. The lady went to Edinburgh alone, right enough; but she didn't leave Edinburgh alone, nor she didn't leave London alone, nor she didn't stay at Folkestone—where I found the pin—alone, nor she didn't go to Boulong alone. She was accompanied by a young gentleman who called himself Mr. Smith; and what's more, she called herself Mrs. Smith. Perhaps she was, as they lived like man and wife. Whether the fellow was right or mistaken, this explanation of Madeline's disappearance seemed to give me what I can only compare to a smack in the face. I stared at the speaker in speechless astonishment. If the tale he told so glibly and circumstantially was true, farewell, so far as I was concerned, to belief in the love or purity of women. Made-line Rowan, that creature of a poet's dream, on the eve of her marriage with Charles Carston to fly, whether wed or unwed mattered riston to fly, whether wed or unwed mattered little, with another man! And yet, she was but a woman. Carriston—or Carr, as she only knew him—was in her eyes poor. The companion of her flight might have won her with gold. Such things have been. Still—My rapid and wrongful meditations were cut short in an unexpected way. Suddenly I saw Mr. Sharpe dragged bodily out of his chair and thrown on the floor, whilst Carr ston, standing over him, thrashed the min vigorously with his own ash stick-a convenient weapon, so convenient that I felt Mr. Sharpe could not have selected a stick more appropriate for his own chastisement. Sc Carriston seemed to think, for he laid on cheerfully some eight or ten good cutting

Nevertheless, being a respectable doctor and man of peace, I was compelled to inter-fere. I held Carriston's arm whilst Mr. Sharpe struggled to his feet, and after collecting his hat and his pocket-look, stood glaring vengefully at his assailant, and rubbing the while such of the weals on his back as he could reach. Annoyed as I felt at the unprofessional fracus, I could scarcely helf laughing at the man's appearance. I doubt the possibility of any one looking heroic after such a thrashing.

"I'l have the law for this," he growled.

"I ain't paid to be beaten by a madman."

"Volume paid to do my work, not, anoth-

"You're paid to do my work, not another's," said Carriston. "Go to the man who has over-bribed you and sent you to tell me your lies. Go to him, tell him that once more he has failed. Out of my sight."

As Carriston showed signs of recommend ing hostile operations, the man fled as far as the doorway. There, being in comparative safety, he turned with a malignant look.
"You'll smart for this," he said; "when they lock you up as a raving lunatic I'll try and get a post as keeper."

I was glad to see that Carriston paid no attention to this parting shaft. • He turned his back scornfully, and the fellow left the room

"Now are you convinced?" asked Cartiston, turning to me.
"Convinced of what? That his tale is un-true, or that he has been misled, I am quite "Tush! That is not worth consideration.

Don't you see that Ralph has done all this?
I sat that man to watch him; he found out the espionage; suborned my agent, or your agent, I should say; sent him here with a trumped-up tale. Oh, yes; I was to believe that Madeline had deserted me—that was to drive me out of my senses. My cousin is a fool after all!"

"W:thout further proof I cannot believe that your suspicions are correct," I said; but I must own I spoke with some hesitation. 'Proof! A clever man like you ought to see ample proof in the fact of that wretch having twice called me a madman. I have seen him but once before—you know if I then gave him any grounds for making such an assertion. Tell me, from whom could be have learnt the word except from Ralph Car-

I was bound, if only to save my own reputation for saracity, to confess that the point noted by Carriston had raised certain doubts in my mind. But if Ralph Carriston really was trying by some finely-wrought scheme to bring about what he desired, there was all the more reason for great caution to be exer-cised.

"I am sorry you beat the fellow," I said.
"He will now swear right and left that you are not in your senses."

'Of course he will. What do I care?"
"Only remember this. It is easier to get put into an asylum than to get out of it." "It is not so very easy for a sane man like myself to be put in, especially when he is on his guard. I have looked up the law. There his guard. I have looked up the law. There must be a certificate signed by two doctors, surgeons—or, I believe, anothecaries will do—who have seen the supposed lunatic alone and together. I'll take very good care I speak to no doctor save yourself, and keep out of the way of surgeons and apothecaries. It quite cheered me to hear him speaking so sensibly and collectedly about himself, but I again impressed upon him the need of great caution. Although I could not believe that his cousin had taken Madeline away. I was inclined to think, after the affair with the spy, that, as Carriston averred, he almed the spy, that, as Carriston averred, he aimed at getting him, sane or insane, into a mad-

But after all these days we were not a step nearer to the discovery of Madeline's whereabouts. Carriston made no sign of doing anything to facilitate that discovery. Again I urged him to intrust the whole affair to the policy. Again he refused to do so, adding that he was not quite ready. Heady for what I must confess, in spite of my affection for Carriston, I felt inclined to rebel against the course which matters were taking. I was a prosaic matter-of-fact medical man; doing my work to the best of my ability, and anxious when that work was done that my hours of leisure should be as free from worry and care as possible. With Carriston's advent several is mbing elements entered into my quiet

Let Ralph Carriston be guilty or innocent of the extraordinary crime which his cousin laid at his door, I felt that he was anxious to obtain possession of the supposed lunate's person. It would suit his purposes for his cousin to be proved mad. I did not believe that even if the capture was legally effected. Carriston's liberation would be a matter of great difficulty so long as he remained in his present state of mind; so long as I, a doctor of some standing, could go into the witness box and swear to his sanity. But my old dread was always with me—the dread that any further shock would overturn the balance of his sensitive mind.

So it was that every hour that Carriston was out of my sight was fraught with anxiety. If Ralph Carriston was really as unscripu-lous as my friend supposed; if he had really, as seemed almost probable, suborned our agent; he might by some crafty trick obtain the needful certificate, and some day I should come home and find Carriston had been re-In such a case I foresaw great trouble and distress.

Besides, after all that had occurred, it was as much as I could do to believe that Carristion was not mad. Any doctor who knew what I knew would have given the verdict

After dismissing his visions and hallucinations with the contempt which they deserved. the fact of a man who was madly, passion ately in love with a woman, and who believ ed that she had been entrapped and was still kept in restraint, sitting down quietly, and letting day after day pass without making an effort toward hading her, was in itself prima facte evidence of insanity. A sane man would at once have set all the engines of detection at work.

I felt that if once Ralph Carriston obtained possession of him he could make out a strong case in his own favor. First of all the proposed marriage out of the defendant's own sphere of life; the passing under a false name; the ridiculous, or apparently ridicu-lous, accusation made against his kinsman; the murderous threats; the chastisement of his own paid agent who brought him a report which might not seem at all untrue to any one who knew not Madeline Rowan. Leaving out the question what might be wrung from me in cross-examination, Ralph Carriston had a strong case, and I knew that, once in his power, my friend might, possibly be doomed to pass years, if not his whole life, under restraint. So I was anxious,-very anxious And I felt an anxiety, scarcely second to that which prevailed on Carriston's account, as to the fate of Madeline. Granting for sake of argument that Carriston's absurd conviction that no bodily harm had as yet been done her, was true, I felt sure that she with her scarcely less sensitive nature must feel the separation from her lover as much as he himself felt the separation from her. Once or twice I tried to comfort myself with cynieism-tried to persuade myself that a young woman could not in our days be spirited away-that she had gone by her own free will-that there was a man who had at the eleventh hour alienated her affections from Carriston. But I could not bring myself to believe this. So I was placed between the horns of a dilemma. If Madeline had not fled of her own free will, some one must have taken her away, and is so our agent's report was a coined one, and; if a coined one, issued at Ralph's instance; therefore Ralph must be the prime actor in the mystery.

But in sober moments such a deduction Seemed an utter absurdity.

Although I have said that Carriston was doing nothing toward clearing up the mystery, I wrong him in so saying. own erratic way he was at work. At such work too! I really lost all patience with

He shut himself up in his woom, out of which he scarcely stirred for three days. By that time he had completed a large and beautiful drawing of his imaginary man. This he took to a well-known photographer's, and ordered several hundred small photographs of it, to be prepared as soon as possible. The minute description which he had given me of his fanciful creation was printed at the foot of each copy. As soon as the first batch of these precious photographs was sent home, to my great joy he did what he should have done days ago; yielded to my wishes, and put the matter into the hands of the police.

I was glad to find that in giving details of what had happened he said nothing about the advisability of keeping a watch on Ralph Carriston's proceedings. He did, indeed, offer an absurdly large reward for the discovery of the missing girl; and, moreover, gave the officer in charge of the case a packet of photographs of his phantom man, telling him in the gravest manner that he knew the original of that likeness had something to do with the disappearance of Miss Rowan. The officer, who thought the portrait was that of a natural being, took his instructions in good faith, although be seemed greatly surprised when he heard that Carriston knew neither the name nor the occupation, in fact, knew nothing concerning the man who was to be sought for. However, as Carriston assured him that finding this man would insure the reward as much as if he found Madeline, the officer readily promised to combine the two tasks, little knowing what waste of time any attempt to perform the latter must be.

Two days after this Carriston came to me.

"I shall leave you to morrow." he said.

"Where are you going?" I asked. "Why do you leave?"

"I am going to travel about. I have no intention of letting Ralph get hold of me. So I mean to go from place to place until I find Madeline."

"Be careful," I urged.
"I shall be careful enough. I'll take care. that no doctors, surgeons, or even apothe-caries get on my track. I shall go just as the fit seizes me. If I can't say one day where I shall be the next, it will be impossible for that villain to know."

This was not a bad argument. In fact, if he carried out his resolve of passing quickly from place to place I did not see how he could plan anything more likely to defeat the in-tentions with which we credited his cousin. As to his finding Madeline by so doing, that was another matter. His idea seemed to be that chance would sooner or later bring him in contact with the man of his dream. However, new that the search had been intrusted to the proper persons his own action in the matter was not worth troubling about. I gave him many cautions. He was to be quiet and guarded in words and manner. He was not to con-verse with strangers. If he found himself dogged or watched by any one he was to communicate at once with me. But, above all, I begged him not to yield again to his mental infirmity. The folly of a man who could avoid it throwing himself into such a state ought to be apparent to him.

"Not oftener than I can help," was all the promise I could get from him. "I I must sometimes, or I shall die." I had now given up as hopeless the combat with his peculiar idiosyncrasy. So, with many expressions of gratitude on his part, we bade each other farewell. During his absence he wrote to me nearly every day, so that I might know his whereabouts in case I had any news to communicate. But I had none. The police failed to find the slightest clew. I had been called upon by them once or twice in order that they might have every grain of information I could give. I took the liberty of advising them not to waste their time, in leasting for them not to waste their time in looking for the man, as his very existence was problem-atical. It was but a fancy of my friend's and not worth thinking seriously about. am not sure but what after hearing this they did not think the whole affair was an imagined one, and so relaxed their efforts.

Once or twice, Carriston, happening to be in the neighborhood of London, came to see me, and slept the night at my house. He also had no news to report. Still, he seemed

The weeks went by until Christmas was over and the New Year begun; but no sign, word, or trace of Madeline Rowan. "I have seen her," wrote Carriston, "several times. ill-treated."

Evidently his natureinations were still in full force.

At first I intended that the whole of this tale should be told by myself; but upon getting so far it struck me that the evidence of another actor who played an important part in the drama would give certain occurrences to the reader at first instead of at second hand, so I wrote to my friend Dick Fenton, of Frenchay, Gloucestershire, and begged him, if he found himself capable of so doing, to put in simple narrative form his impressions of certain events which happened in January, 1866; events in which we two were concerned. He has been good enough to comply with my request. His communica-tion follows.

TOLD BY RICHARD FENTON OF FRENCHAY, GLOUCESTERSHIRE, ESQUIRE.

As my old friend Phil Brand has asked me As my old triend Fall Brand has asked me to do this, I suppose I must. Brand is a right good fellow and a clever fellow, but has plenty of crotchets of his own. The worst I know of him is that he insists upon having his own with people. With those who differ from him he is as obstinate as a mule. Anyhow, he has always had his own way with me. This custom, so far as I am concerned. me. This custom, so far as I am concerned, commenced years ago, when we were boys at school together, and I have never been able to shake off the bad habit of giving in to him. He has promised to see that my queen's English is presentable; for, to tell the truth, am more at home acress country than across foolscap, and my fingers know the feel of the reins or the trigger better than that of the

All the same I hope he won't take too many liberties with my style, bad though it may be; for old Brand at times is apt to get -well, a bit prosy. To hear him on the subject of hard work and the sanctity thereof approaches the sublime!

What freak took me to the little God-for-saken village of Midcombe in the depth of winter is entirely between myself and my conscience. The cause, having no bearing upon the matters I am asked to tell you about, is no one's business but mine—I will only say that now I would not stay in such a place at such a time of the year for the sake of the prettiest girl in the world, let alone the bare chance of meeting her once or twice. But one's ideas change. I am now a good bit older, ride some two stones heavier, and have been married ever so many years. Perhaps, after all, as I look back I can find some excase for being such an ass as to endure for more than a fortnight all the discomforts heaped upon me in that little village inn.

A man who sojourns in such a hole as Midcombe must give some reason for doing so. My ostensible reason was hunting. I had a horse with me, and a second-rate subscription pack of slow-going mongre's did meet some-where in the neighborhood. So no one could gainsay my explanation. But if hunting was my object, I got precious little of it. A few days after my arrival a bitter, biting frost set in-a frost as black as your hat, and as hard as nails. Yet still I stayed on. From private information received-no matter how, when, or where—I knew that some people in the neighborhood had organized a party to go skating on a certain day at Lilymere, a fine sheet of water some distance from Midcombe. I guessed that some one whom I particularly desired to meet would be there, and as the skating at Lilymere was free to any one who chose to take the trouble hired a horse and an apology for a dog-eart, and at ten in the morning started to drive the twelve miles to the pond. I took no one with me. I had been in Lilymere once before, in bright summer weather, so fancied I knew the way well enough. The sky when I started was cloudy; the wind was chopping round in a way which made the effete rustic old hostler predict a change of weather. He was right, Before I had driven two miles light snow began to fall, and by the time I reached a wretched little wayside inn, about a mile from the Mere, a alm of white covered the whole country, stabled my horse as well as I could, taking my skates with me walked down to Ill-Gotten Gains Burn the Pockets. A man who is usually fortunate enough to carry away from the races more money than he brought with him says he finds winning more disastrous than losing. When he loses money it is lost, and that is the end of it. He simply has to shut himself off in cigars and other things that he is better off without, for a week or more. But the winning is quite another affair. It costs him so much to spend it. "Perhaps I come off two or three hundred better." he says; "it's never much more than that, for I only bet small sums. The first thing I do is to blow in a large share of it on some piece of foolishness or other. Then I'll spend the rest of it on something else I don't want. But I don't stop there. The very next day I do the same thing over-spend that same money, I mean. Perhaps this time it will be for something I really need, but I will buy a little too much of it, or a little liner quality than I would have done if I hadn't had that windfall the day before, and when prudence urges me to be careful, I find myself saying: O. well. I'll put this down on the winnings from the races.' And the next day I spent some more money foolishly. and I put that down too. And for a clear week I'm spending the paltry hundred or two that I won-as long, in fact, as I've got any money left to spend. And its all race winningssalary, and savings, and all. And so I've got to quit going to the races. Not because I can't afford to lose, but because I can't afford to win."-N. Y.

Egg and Coffee Cranks.

"I think there are more egg and coffee cranks than any other," said the head of a large house-furnishing store to a N. Y. Tribune reporter. Nearly every day inquiry is made for some new coffee-pot, or some new method of boiling eggs, or more probably, timing eggs while they are boiling. This lit-tle hour-glass was invented a few years ago. It is to hang on the wall to notify the cook when the egg is soft, medium or hard. 'You put it right in the water with the eggs, I suppose,' said a lady the other day before I explained its use." There are probably more patents yearly issued in connection with this simple process in cooking and for coffee pots than for almost anything else in the realm of the kitchen. All this goes to show that there are a great many cooks in America who have not yet learned how to make coffee or boil eggs, or such inventious would not find ready sale.

"WE ARE WITNESSES.

Thrilling Sermon at Bigh Bridge, Kentucky-He Discourses From the Text Acts 3:15-We are Wit-

HIGH BRIDGE, Ky., July 13, 1891.-A vast concourse of people as ambled this morning on the historic cump ground at High Bridge, Ky., to hear Dr. Talmage preach. They came from all the surrounding cities, towns and neigh-borhood. A large contingent from Louisville and another from Cincinnati were present. Many of the visitors have remained here since yesterday afternoon, when Dr. Talmage preached in the same place. The text of his sermon this morning was from Acts 3:15: "We are Witnesses." Standing amid the hills and groves of Kentucky, and before this great multitude that no man can number, most of whom I never saw before and never will see again in this world, I choose a though they did not want to very practical theme. In the days of give it up? "Oh, no," you say; George Stephenson, the perfector of the locomotive engine, the scientists proved conclusively that a railroad train could never be driven by steam power successfully without peril; but the rushing express train from Liverpool to Edinburgh, and from Edinburgh to London, have made all nations witnesses of the splendid achievement Machinists and navigators proved conclusively that a steamer could never cross the Atlantic Ocean; but 10 sooner had they successfully proved the impossibility of such an undertaking than the work was done and the passengers on the Cunard and the Inman and the National and the White Star lines are witnesses. There went up a guffaw of wise laughter at Prof. Morse's proposition to make the lightning of heaven his errand boy, and it was proved conclusively that the thing could never be done; but now all the news of the wide world put in your hands every morning and night, has made all nations witnesses.

So in the time of Christ it was proved conclusively that it was impossible for him to rise from the dead. It was shown logically that when a man was dead, he was dead, and the heart and the liver and the lungs having ceased to perform their offices, the limbs would be rigid beyond all power of friction or arousal. They showed to be an absolute absurd-tty that the dead Christ should ever get up alive; but no sconer had they proved this than the dead Christ arose, and the disciples beheld him, heard his voice, and talked with him, and they took the witness stand, to prove that to be true which the wiseacres of the day had proved to be impossible; the record of the experiment and of the testimony is in the text: "Him hath God raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses."

Our weapon in this conflict is faith,

pat logic; faith, not metaphysics; faith, exploration. But then, in order to heaven. When Madame Sontag began have faith, we must have testimony, her musical career she was hissed off and if five hundred men, or one thousand men, or five hundred thousand men, or five million men get up and tell me that they have felt the religion of Jesus Christ. a joy, a comfort, a day Madame Sontag, in her glory, was help, an inspiration, I am bound as a fair-minded man an inspiration, their testimony. accept want just now to put before you three propositions, the truth of which I think this audience will attest with overwhelming unanimity. The first proposition is: We are witnesses that the raligion of Christ is able to convert a soul. The Gospel may have had a hard time to conquer us, we may have fought it she lost her eyesight." "Give my love back, but we were vanquished. You to her," said Madame Sontag. "and say conversion is only an imaginary tell her an old acquaintance will call thing. We know better. "We are witnesses." There never was so great a change in our heart and life on any at a benefit for that poor blind woman, other subject as on this. People laughed and it was said that Soutag sang that at the missionaries in Madagascar because they preached ten years without one convert; but there are many thousands of converts in Madagascar to-day. People laughed at Dr. Judson, the Baptist missionary, because he kept on preaching in Burmah five years without a single convert; but there are many thousands of Baptists in Burmah to-day. People laughed at Dr. Morrison, in China, for preaching there seven years without a single conversion; but there are many thousands of Christians in China to-day. People laughed at the missionaries at Tahiti for preaching for fifteen years without a single conversion, and at the missionaries for preaching in Bengal seventeen years without a single conversion; yet in all those lands there are multitudes of Christians to-Lay. But why go so far to find evidences of the gospel's power to save a soul? "We are witnesses." We were so proud that no man could have humbled us; we committee of the coming national enwere so hard that no earth'y power could have melted us: angels of God were all around about us: they could not overcome us; but one day, perhaps at a Methodist anxious seat, or at a Presbyterian catechetical lecture, or at a burial, or on horseback, a power seized us, and made us get down, to make good the amount that the and made us tremble, and made State was expected to give. and was going into business, and the Lord took him. Or your daughter had just graduated from the young ladies' seminary, and you thought she was going to be a useful woman and of long life, but the Lord took her, and you were tempted to say, "All this culture of twenty years for nothing." Or the little child came home from school with the hot fever that stopped not for the agonized prayer or for the skillful physician, and the little child was taken. Or the babe was lifted out of your arms by some quick epidemic, and you stood wondering why God ever gave you that child at all, if so soon he was to take it away. And yet you are not repining, you are not fretful. you are not fighting against God.

"Oh, yes," you say, "I saw my father and mother depart. There was a great difference in their death-beds. Standing by the one we felt more veneration. By the other there was more tenderness." Before the one, you bowed, perhaps, in awe. In the other case you felt as if you would like to go along with her. How did they feel in that last hour? How did they seem to act? Were they very much frightened? Did they take hold of this world with both hands as we're yesterday; she had a kind word for as all, and there were a few me mentoes distributed among the children, and then she told us how kind we must be to our father in his loneli ness, and then she kissed us good by and went asleep as a child in a cradle." What made her so composed? Natural courage? "No," you say; mother was very nervous; when the carriage inclined to the side of the road, she would cry out; she was al ways rather weakly." What gave her composure? Was it because she did not care much for you, and the pang of parting was not great? "Oh," you say, "she showered upon us a wealth of affection: no mother ever loved her children more than mother loved us; she showed it by the way she nursed us when we were sick, and she toiled for us until her strength gave out." What, then, was it that gave her composure in the last hour? Do not hide it. Be frank, and let me know? "Oh," you say, "it was because she was so good; she made the Lord her portion, and she had faith that she would go straight to glory. and that we should all meet her at last at the foot of the throne."

Professor Henry, of Washington, discovered a new star, and the tidings sped by submarine telegraph, and all the observatories of Europe were watching for that new star. Oh, hearer, looking out through the darkness of thy soul, canst thou see a bright light beaming on thee? "Where?" you say, "where? How can I find it?" Look along by the line of the Cross of the Son of God. Do you not see it trembling with all tenderness and beaming with all hope? It is the Star of Bethlehem.

Deep horror then my vitals froze, Death-struck I chased the tide to stem, When suddenly a star arose-

It was the Star of Bethlehem. Oh, hearers, get your eye on it. It is easier for you now to become Christians the stage in Vienna by the friends of her rival, Amelia Steininger, who had aircady begun to decline through her dissipation. Years passed on, and one I am riding through the streets of Berlin when she saw a little child leading a blind woman, and she said: "Come here, my little child, come here. Who is that you are leading by the hand?" And the little child replied, "That's my mother; that's Amelia Steininger. She used to be a great singer, but she lost her voice. and she cried so much about it that on her this afternoon." The next week in Berlin a vast assemblage gathered night as she had never sung before. And she took a skilled oculist, tried to give who in vain eyesight to the poor woman. Until the day of Amelia Steininger's death, Madame Sontig took care of her and her daughter after her. That was what the queen of song did for an enemy. But oh, hear a more thrilling story still. Blind, immortal, poor and lost, thou who, when the world and Christ were rivals for thy heart, didst hiss thy Lord away-Christ comes now to give thee sight, to give thee a home, to give the heaven. With more than a Sontag's generasi'y he comes now to meet your nel. With more than a Sontag's mus c, he e m s to plead for thy ne i er nee.

PETITIONS are being extensively circulated throughout the city asking for the erection of public bath houses. where the poor of the city may wash free of all charge. The plan has been under agitation for some time, and it is now being urged again in the hope that the work may be finished before the World's Fair. The scheme is being urged strongly now at the commencement of the hot season on humane and sanitary grounds.

An important resolution was incroduced by President Smith at the county-board meeting Tuesday, which if passed, will materially affect the governing of the county institutions.

ACRES, SUBDIVSONS AND BULDING NOTES,

A report in favor of Diversey street has been made by the Council committee on streets and alleys north, and this thoroughfare will undoubtedly be selected as the one to connect the north and west side park systems.

Negotiations are in progress for the sale of the Lake Street Elevated Railrord, although details are lacking to confirm or deny the probability of the deal going through. The price is said to be $6,000,000, and the parties Philadelphia capitalists.

The Norwood Park and Maine Electric Road has been incorporated, with a captial stock of $250,000, by Russell O. Dunning, M. E. Cole, Freeman J. Short, and Andrew Dunning. The road is to run between Desplaines and some point in the city. It is reported it will begin at some point in Desplaines run south on the River road to the Tanner road, thence southeast through Park Ridge and Norwood Park to Oak Park or Ridgeland avenues, thence south to Grand avenue, and enter the city by way of the latter strect.

A tract of 100 acres in the northwest quarter of section thirty-three, town of Jefferson, has been sold by Patrick H. Rice and David Jennings to T. P. Keefe for about $235,000. > A stock company has been incorporated in both Wisconsin and Illinois to operate an elevated electric road between Milwaukee and Chicago. It is claimed that the distance between the two cities will be covered in less than 60 minutes.

The election of directors and officers of the company will take place some time this month. The promoters of the scheme are quite confident that the money needed will be forthcoming The company is capitalized at $10,000. 000, and it is estimated that the actual cost of putting the scheme on foot is about half that amount. It is proposed to build three power houses, one at either terminus and one somewhere along the road. The Milwaukee terminus will be either on the West or South Side, but no site has yet been selected. The company expects to get its right of way considerably cheaper than steam railroads are able to do. In the first place it will need but twenty-five feet for its roadbed, while the width of a steam railroad right-of-way is 100 feet. Moreover, the property along the electric road will not suffer so much depreciation as is caused by the steam railroads. There will be no annoyance from smoke and cinders. The entire tract being elevated above the ground there will be absolutely no danger of anybody being run over.

History of the Discovery.

In 1883, while hunting for health in the mountain regions of South America, Lieur. Moxie found the peogle using what they called Food Plant as we do greens. Surprised at its effect on his own nervous system, he shipped a bale to Dr. Thompson, asking him to determine its character. Weerener Dr. Thompson used it the patient said: "It gives me a colid, durable stredgth, and a very large appetite." It cured anything caused by nervous exhaustion; it restored nervous people who were tired out mentally or physically, stopped the appetite for intoxicants, cured insenity, blindness from overtaxing the sight, paralysis, headache, loss of manhood from excesses, made people able to stand twice their amount of work, mentally or physically, with less fatigue. It cured softening of the brain and recovered helpless limbs. It was found to be neither medicine nor stimulant, but a nerve food, and harmless as milk. Women say: "My nervousness and exhaustion went like magic." For sale every here. Also syrupfor soda fountains.

TASK. HE task was brought

Through the long village street and a half-mile along the dusty pike he trudged; then, turning aside into a narrow by-road that branched off at the foot of a steep hill, he came to a rude saw-mill. A stalwart man sat upon a large moving log, from which a perpendicular saw was rasping a "Good afternoon, Neighbor Gray," said Jared.

Gray eyed him keenly from under his shaggy brows; then rising, he walked to a lever, pulled it aside, and stopped the saw.

"Sit down on the log, Jared," he said. "We can't hear each other when It was too late to hide what lay upthe saw's going. I see by your face on it—cards, a box of cigars, and two that something has happened.

"I've got a letter from Joe. "He's in trouble." "Just as I supposed. Bankrupt,

I'll warrant?" "That's about it." "And he has written to you to get me to help him?" "That's true; but, John, don't be angry. This matter must be considered with our coolest judgment." "I'll not consider it with cool judgment nor any other kind. He'll get no help from me. Jared." "Very well, John, very well; but you'll hear what the trouble is, won't

"Oh, I suppose I can listen," replied the father, taking a piece of bacon from a shelf and proceeding to grease

"Well, Gray, it's a bad embarass ment. A customer bought a thous and dollars' worth of Joe's patent machines, promising to order twice as many more soon. Joe supposed he was perfectly good for it, and on the strength of this ordered two thousand dollars' worth from the man that manufactures them. Well, the customer turned out bad; he didn't pay the thousand dollars, nor order more. Joe lost the machines, and owes the manufacturer two thousand dollars, which he is unable to

"Joe writes that he might have stood this if a fire hadn't broken out. and burnt up his two thousand dollars' worth of machines."

He glanced up quickly, and caught a shade of sympathy upon the sawyer's

"The manufacturer is unluckily in a tight fix himself, and he is pushing the boy. Joe writes that this will ruin him and just when his business was most promising. Itell you, Gray, it's hard on your boy."

"Well, I don't pity him a bit—not a bit. He was determined to go to the city; now let him dig for himself. I gave him a thousand dollars to start his crazy business, mortgaging our lit-tle place here, and that's enough. Mother has pinched herself and worked her fingers almost to the bone, and have slaved early and late to pay it off, and now that it's paid, do you think I'm going right back into that struggle again?

"No, Jared, not for a boy that forgets his old mother, as Joe has done. Why, he hasn't written a line not a line-to mother or me for a year, and now, when he wants help, he writes to you, Jared.

"Does he deserve help? Just answer me that; does he deserve it? I don't want to hurry you away, but I'm going to start the saw,

He turned decisively, and pulling the lever, set the saw rasping again.
"Very well, John," said, Jared, coming nearer. "If that's your decison, I've nothing more to say. I shall have to write to Joe that you refuse. It does seem a pity to leave him in his trouble. He's not a bad boy, but dear knows where this will drive him.

Good afternoon, John." At home he sat down upon the porch again to think it out. He knew well the character of this father and son. Since Joe had been old enough to assert himself there had been anta-arbitrary in his ideas of right; the son obstinate, and inclined to wayward-have married Sallie, the daughter five years before, but she had been taken ill three weeks before the appointed day, and died ten days later. Her last request to Jared had been to watch over Joe as an older brother, and to help to keep him from evil

"Father is growing old," she had said, "and if ever you have a chance to bring him and Joe to a good un-derstanding, do your best. I know you will do your best, Jared—even to sacrificing yourself a little, for my

The final estrangement came when Joe declared that he intended to leave home. He had invented a machine for compressing sawdust into ornaments, and was wild over his prosperts of wealth.

Through the mother's influence, aided by Jared, who hoped that gratitude would touch the boy's heart, the farm was mortgaged.

"Here are a thousand dollars," the father had said on the morning Joe went away. 'You want to leave us, so go! This is all the help you can expect from me. If you lose it, you must shift for yourself. If you succeed, I shall look for you to pay it back. I wish you success, but I don't expect it."

No sympathy was in the words or tone, and Joe went away, feeling that there was no love for him in his father's heart.

Jared knew that Joe had been lacking in his duty to his parents. He had written enthusiastically of his prosperity, but had not offered to pay a dollar; so there was at least a little reason for the father's refusal of help.

But something must be done. This trouble and his father's refusal would he likely to drive Joe into recklessness and ruin. As he sat upon his little porch, he almost fancied he heard Sallie telling him that here was the walked through the front gate to the opportunity she had hoped for.

But he did not know what to do. He had little knowledge of business. His early life had been spent in farm toil, and subsequently a lucky rise in land values had brought him resources sufficient for a quiet, humble life.

He saw that help from the father would certainly touch the boy's heart now; but without it, he delt that a hard task was before him. Sallie's request, however, was strong upon him. and he decided to go to Philadelphia next morning.

He arrived in the evening, and sought Joe's room. As he tapped, he heard Joe's voice.

"Come in, fellows!" Jared entered, and Joe, who had come half-way to the door, stopped in surprise, and then turned, confused toward a table.

or three unopened bottles

"I wasn't expecting you, Jared." Joe stammered. "I thought it was the fellows knocking." Jared walked forward: and clasping his hand warmly, said, I see you weren't expecting me, Joe. But I'm welcome, ain't I?"

"Yes, yes-certainly, Sit down. Here, take this rocking-chair, and give me your hat.'

Joe was handsome, and in stature, attire and bearing a striking contrast to plain little Jared Harpwick.

"I see that I've come at a wrong time," he said, pleasantly. "Just when you're expecting company."

"Yes, you did-but don't worry about that, Jared." "Joe, my boy, what kind of company were you expecting?'

"It wasn't good company," said Joe, recklessly, "I've just fifty dollars left of what was a prosperous business, and I don't know where more is to come from. In sheer desperation. I invited two dissipated young men here in the hope of winning more from them at cards."

"And suppose you had lost the money—what then?' "I don't know, and I don't care." "Why didn't you wait till you heard from me, Joe?' "Well, I didn't expect any help. I knew just how father would act when you went to him-hardly listen to you, and maybe go on sawing. He never has treated me right; but Jared, I haven't done right either. I know that now better than I ever did. I was never a good son at home, and

I've been worse away.' His voice had sunk from harshness to softer tones, and as Jared, looking his sympathy, let him go on, he proceeded in words that showed that now was the time to touch his heart. "I have thought, Jared, that if father would help me a little, now when I don't deserve it. I could feel better toward him, and we could be as a father and son should be. I should know that he thought something of me. But I can't expect it, and I'm not going to ask you what he said, for fear he has been hard on me, and to save you the pain of telling me.'

"I've come with help, Joe," said Jared, "and I-"

A loud, confident knock interrupted. Joe opened the door and stepped into the hall. Jared heard him explain that he "could not have the game." There were angry expostulations in unsteady voices.

By and by Joe returned, and he and Jared talked long into the night, Jee fully telling the circumstances of his failure.

"I've come to try to help you," said Jared, "and to-morrow I'll call upon your creditor and see what arrangement can be made."

"I would go with you said Joe, "but we had a quarrel the other day, and I guess I used pretty hard language. He says he'll not see me again, and is pushing me now harder than before." "I'll go alone, then, Joe.

"If you succeed, Jared, I promise you I'll try to be better to father, to compensate him for this!' A shade passed over Harpwick's face, and he did not reply. Next morning he went to see the gonism between them. The father was I manufacturer, and Joe met him anxiously on his return.

obstinate, and inclined to waywardness.

Jared's relation to the family was almost that of a son. He was to almost that of a son. He was to again with. You are on your feet once more."

"God bless father!" cried Joe. "I'll write him a letter thanking him for his goodness." "No, Joe." said Jared, knitting his eyebrows a little, "I wouldn't if I were you. Let me report it to him." "Very well, Jared, but I'll go home in two weeks for a visit, and I hope we can meet then as a father and son should meet." Jared went home, and next day he again trudged out to the sawmill. Gray was rolling a log into place. "John," Jared began, "Joe is on his feet again." "He didn't deserve it, Jared," he replied, glumly, picking a cluster of lichen from the log. "And he is coming home to see you in two weeks."

He saw the old man crush down his pleasure, and his effort in making the incredulous response. "We'll see him when he comes.

He showed no curiosity to know how the matter had been adjusted, and Jared left him.

The two weeks brought the evening of Joe's arrival. Jared met him at the little station, and walked with him toward home. They heard the rasping of the saw from a distance, and as they went nearer, Joe's eagerness to clasp his father's hand and enter upon a close relation impelled him to start ahead.

Jared quickly caught him by the arm, and said, "Joe. I wouldn't-say anything to him about the money. A word might ruin my hopes. Just act as if there had been no trouble."

The father sat upon a log, and they came quite near before he heard them. He hastily arose. Joe sprang forward, extended his hand, and said: "Father, I've come back to be a son to you.' It had been two years since they met, and Jared, anxiously watching Gray now, saw the old hardness come to his face. But as the father looked upon his boy, he saw a manlier look than he had seen before, and a look of regret and hope as well.

The hardness was driven from Gray's face, and clasping his son's hands in his, he said, with tears starting, 'Joe, Joe, Joe, you're welcome he ne, and I'm your father!"

Gray turned quickly and stopped the saw. Then, hurrying, to the end of the mill, he called loudly, "Mother!

His wife soon appeared, hurrying, as if she feared an accident had taken place. Joe was hiding behind Jared, but the old father caught him by the arm, and asked joyfully: "Mother, who is this?"

"Joe!" she cried: "my son!" "And mine, mother; and all forgiven and forgotten."

They walked toward their little home, but Jared said good-by very strangely, the three thought, and turned away. He stopped after taking a few steps, and called Joe to him;

"I wouldn't say anything until to morrow, my boy," he said in low "It might spoil it all. It's glorious that this has been brought

He turned away, and the three, watching him, thought he had never looked so sad and lonely since he had

"Jared Harpwick" he replied. 'Why, don't you know that he has sold his place here, and left this morning on the early train? I thought every one knew it here. But are you John Gray? Harpwick left a note that he wanted me to give to you." He brought it, and the old man

Father and son turned to each other, knowing then how Jared had performed his task.

The Art of Self-Shaving.

Men who shave themselves often complain of the difficulty that they experience in keeping their razors sharp. If they would adopt the methods of the professional barber in one or two respects they would find the task of keeping the razor in a proper condition by no means a difficult one. If you watch an amateur stroping his razor you will notice that when he turns it the edge is frequently next the leather -in other words, he turns it on the edge. This should never be done, as the fine edge is very likely to touch the strop and be turned. A barber always turns his hand so that the back of the blade is next the leather and the edge in the air. Again, a man should never use a strop made of leather glued to wood. A great many are sold, but all are destructive to tazors. There is always more or less of a shock when the thin blade is brought against any unvielding substance, and the entire edge is frequently turned upward along its whole length. The worst cuts are inflicted by such a razor. The strop should be of leather, with no backing whatever. Another point that is little understood is the efficiency of hot water in keeping a razor blade sharp. Why this is so is a mystery, but the effect is unquestionable. Let a man find that the operation is much easier and that the blade requires far less stropping than when this is omitted. I have been with the column march-

Brown's House.

So much has been written about the battle of Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., May 12, 1864, that its name is synonymous of a bloody Golgotha, that is, if we can reconcile contradistinet terms into such an expression. The writer, who participated in this struggle, was fortunate enough not long since to enjoy the company of a young man by the name of Brown, who hailed from this very section, so aptly called the Bloody Angle. In fact, this battle was fought on his grandfather's farm. I take the thread boys of his narrative, which runs as folway into the night. After the battle was over I remember (that was when Grant was down towards Richmond) that men came up from Richmond and searched the field for arms, cannon, etc. They would take an iron prod, drive it into the loose earth, and if the touch was soft they knew line. As he walked briskly through the woods, whistling to keep his courage up, he suddenly heard a mysterious pattering of tiny leet lightly treading behin l him. As he stopped to listen the sound of pursuit ceased. A frequent repetition of this alarmed him, and he broke into a wild run down the zizag cattle-trails. Still the mysterious pattering followed, moved as he moved, halted when he halted, then, suddenly, and as the wind in a mornful requiem of unusual tones swept through the trees, he could stand it no longer, but took to his heels and struck a bee-line for home.

A meandering rivulet lay across his way, and with a bound he cleared it and alighted in a clump of bushes on a so t mass that yielded to his impetus. and in a moment, from head to foot. he was wallowing in the ghostly remains of a dead Federal soldier. He shuddered as he related his dire experience of how he rid himself of the reeking mass and turned homeward nearly dead with fright and with the horr ble effluvia; but he had time to catch a glimpse of a fox, which had been following him, and had completely worked on his fears. The varmint was evidently after the decomposed carcass, and to him who un-consciously stumbled upon the ghastly find it seemed as if a spirit of some doughty warrior was in avenging pursuit.

It might be "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," or it might be "John Brown's Body." with the allusion to hanging Jeff Davis to a sour apple tree, but in an instant he would be joined by others, and soon away down the long road as far as the column stretched, a mighty chorus would be going up, while the men would brace up, their eyes brighten and their footsteps lose the weary movement, as they kept step to the music. Twentyfive thousand men stretched out over a long distance in marching and you can imagine the effect of such a chorus of male voices. Perhaps away off on some parallel road, a mile or two away, another column would be advancing, and this, too, would take up the refrain and the effect be neightened twofold, 'Those were the days when war songs meant some-. thing to the men who sang them. Another time when the old songs used to have peculiarly touching effect was at night, after a finished battle. As twilight died out and darkness came on, some one of our boys would begin to sing one of the Union songs. His mates would second him, and soon from away off across the line of campfiles and pickets, where we knew the enemy were, we would have Dixey or some other Confederate song wafted back to us on the breeze. Song after song would be sent over the air in this manner from one contending camp to the other, but presently it would be all broken up by some soldier striking up 'Home, Sweet Home." Both sides used to join in that in unison, as every mother's son remembered his good old home.

Dodging a Bullet.

Some time ago, W. C. McD., Co. E. Seventh Minnesota, of Shelbyville, Mo., wrote of dodging bullets. Now, I say a man can dodge a ball. I belonged to Co. G. Blind Half Hundred, and at the time we were of the left wing of the Sixteenth Corps, under Gen. G. M. Dodge. Our division commander was Gen. Sweeny. He had a warm place in his bosom for our brigade, especially the Blind Half Hundred. A Novel Military Organization.

A movement has been inaugurated at Kansas City, Mo., for the organization of a novel military company, which is intended to be one of the military features of the World's Fair. The organization will be called Co. A, First Regiment United States Blue and Gray, and will be composed of fifty ex-Union and fifty ex-Confederate veterans, the former to be uniformed in blue and the latter in gray. The company is now nearly full, and the officers have been elected as follows: W. F. Wilkins, Captain, an ex-Union soldier of Co- C. 125th Ill.; John T. Ebbs. First Lieutenant, an ex-Confederate, and a member of Joe Shelby's Brigade; John Pigeon, Second. Lieutenant, ex-Union, 12th Mich.; J. M. Hazzett, Orderly Sergeant, Confederate Secret Service.

The General's Cow.

Some years ago the commanding officer of a military station, desiring the grass around the quarters to be protected while it was growing, gave strict orders to the sentries on guard that no one except the cow should be allowed to step over the grass. The next day the general's wife called upon some ladies, and wishing to make a short cut, walked across the grass from one path to another.

THE FARM AND HOME.

It Can Scarcely Be Over-Estimated. Apple Trees Need Care—Hedges Hints and Notes,

Allowing forty trees per acre the "am satisfied there is no medicine bearing of a barrel of fruit to each tree will give even in years of low prices more money than can be got from most grain crops. But with modern facilities for spraying to destroy insect enemies and fungus growth, apples trees fully grown ought to bear five barrels per tree. We have known individual trees in good years to much exceed this amount. Thirty-one years ago last fall we picked from a large Greening tree fourteen barrels of salable fruit, besides the windfalls and those otherwise imperfect. It stood on rich their associates. ground, but not richer than any farmer could well afford to give to all the trees in his orchard for such a yield trade the distinction is always made. The as this. The old tree is long since cut down, but it paid for all the land its has this poor seed to contend against in roots occupied many times over. If apple growing can be or has already been reduced to a science such yields as this ought not to be uncommon.

How much per acre is a well-bearing orchard of these trees worth? If given the attention they should have they will not only pay for that, but also the interest on a larger amount than possibly the entire farm has given under slipshod methods of managing it. What farmers most need is greater faith in their own business-a belief that thought, skill and money invested. in developing the capacity of its dif- down. and even more surely than do such merely for subsistence if poultry is to pay merce and manufactures. When farmers have this faith, they will soon learn to make their business pay. So long as they do not have it much of the best blood and brain belonging to the farm will be attracted elsewhere. While there are reasons explaining failure of apple crops the last few vears, it must not be forgotten that one reason for such failure has been that men who might have found the means to prevent it have so largely been engaged in other business.-Practicle Farmer.

Onions for Lice on Cattle. A correspondent of the Country Gentleman, relates his experience with lice on stock in a recent issue. Readers who have lousy stock are requestcd to try this and report results. He eays: "I used kerosene and lard mixed, curried and brushed over them, also camphor dissolved in alcohol and carbolic acid in lard; but without satisfaction; and being determined that the lice should go I tried onions after waiting about a week. One particular animal, a yearling bull, was very full, even after being treated with the other remedies. I took a large onion, cut in two, and rubbed him hard all over till I had used three or more onions and my eyes smarted. Then I gave him come of the pieces that were left and a few other small scullions which he ate with relish as did all the others, and then I awaited results. The second day I examined him, and to my astonishment and joy the hair was full of carcasses, but not a live one could I find. Since then I have treated all the stock in the same way, but fed none to the cows giving milk for fear of spoiling the butter. I am going to treat the poultry also by rubbing their roost well. I should be pleased to hear the results with others who may try the remedy. It will save many an animal an uneasy night."

Keeping Milk Sweet, One of the first things to do after milk is drawn and strained is to get it cooled to the temperature of the surrounding air as quick as possible. There are germs of fermentation even in the purest milk that need only a brief time of new-milk temperature to develop so far that entire putrefaction cannot be prevented. After cooling quickly by surrounding the can containing the milk with ice, put the milk dition but a few weeks; they are usually into glass jars, and filling full, seal, to uncomfortable, unshapely, and a bad fit prevent contact with the air. Milk thoroughly cooled can be thus kept twenty-four and even thirty-six hours in good condition for use. Some cream will rise during this cooling process, and this should be removed. Milk the dearest in the end. should never be placed in closed vessels until what is called its animal heat has been taken from it. Put in cans perfectly sweet but warm, and it soon becomes extremely offensive.

Robbing. If the beekeeper minds his business as he should, there is little danger of robbers. The plan of changing places with the hives will work, by giving the robbers a good smoking when you change them back. For the last two years I have had trouble with the bees robbing the queen nuclei. If a hive loses a queen care must be taken, as the bees will defend their hive as vigorously as when a queen is present, but as the secret of success is in looking after your queens, a good beekeeper will not be caught in that respect. I wintered 48 colonies in chaff-packed hives, on summer stands, and they did

County Seat Some Years Ago. It is not generally known that the Prince of Wales' breach of hospitality in playing bacearat in defiance of the express wishes of his host at Tranby Croft was by no means his first offense against the laws of hospitality and also of good taste, says the New York Record. He acted in very much the same fashion some years ago at Good-wood, the county seat of the Duke of Richmond. Ever since his marriage the Prince of Wales has been in the habit of visiting the Duke during the

The Duke of Richmond, who is now an old man, is very independent of mind and possesses great force of char-acter. His horror for gambling is well known, and when, a few years ago, the prince's taste for baccarat became the talk of London, the Duke, on the occasion of the heir apparent's last visit, told him of his aversion to games of hazard, and exacted a pledge from him that under no circumstances should baccarat be played during his stay.

The Duke makes an invariable rule of retiring every night punctually at 10 o'clock, no matter who is present, and, confiding in the promise of the Prince, although it had been somewhat reluctantly given, the old peer went quietly to bed at his usual time. On the third day of the races, however, the Duke, who had as usual bidden his royal guests good night at 10 o'clock, had occasion to come down-stairs again about an hour later.

His horror and indignation may be better understood than described at finding the whole royal party seated around a table in the library and playing baccarat for very high stakes, with the Prince of Wales acting as banker! So great was the duke's wrath that he openly protested to the prince against the way in which his confidence had been betrayed, the latter presenting but a sorry spectacle during this al-garade, for he could find no good excuse for his extraordinary behavior.

The card party was broken up in great confusion, and it was never resumed during that or any of the subsequent visits at Goodwood.

VICTORIA'S FIRST PIPER.

Death of William Ross, for Thirty-Seven Years a Piper for the Queen. William Ross, the well-known first piper for the queen, is dead. His sturdy figure and his thrilling pibroch strains were familiar and welcome at every great gathering of Scotsmen in London, and he will be greatly missed on such occasions. His death was a blow to her majesty, who sent a message of condolence to the old piper's widow. Says a recent Court Circular regarding his death: The queen has lost a faithful servant, which has grieved her much. William Ross, her majesty's well-known first piper, died suddenly yesterday at Windsor sor in his sixty-ninth year after a short illness. He had been thirty-seven years in her majesty's service and was much

There is an unusually excellent stand of wheat in the "No. I Hard" districts of Minnesota and North Dakota. The rains have been seasonable and the growing temperature just right. There has been no damage, except in limited and isolated cases, from winds, rains, or insects. The Red River valley, in which there has never been a general failure, promises to beat its best record, when it produced 35,000,000 bushels of wheat. There is much anxiety among farmers there owing to the scarcity of hands, and it is feared that considerable grain will be lost unless help is secured. Farmers are offering from $2.00 to $2.50 and board for harvesters. The Great Northern railway will run harvest excursions July 21st and August 4th at one fare from St. Paul to northern Minnesota and North Dakota

Wasmund's injuries were received in the beroic discharge of his duty, and if he re-covers he will be away to the front in the race for the police medal awarded for brave and meritorious conduct.

Monday afternoon C. M. Coldmann of No. 262 Carpenter street, left his horse attached to a light buggy, standing at the corner of Perior and Ohio stree's. The animal became frightened and ran away. Turning north on Carpenter street it dashed on towards Huron. At the corner stood Officer Wasmund. The street was filled with children at play, and none of them realized their danger until the frightened animal was almost upon them. The children scattered and tried to get out of the way.

In the rush several of the smaller young-sters were trampeled under foot by their play-mates and fell directly in the path of the runaway horse, now almost maddened by the shouts of the spectators. A cry of horror went up from the crowd, followed by a loud shout of admiration as a bluecoated figure sprang in front of the runaway horse, grasped the bridal, and turned him just in time to prevent the children from being trampled to death.

The children were saved, but he whom they owe their lives lay in the street bruised and bleeding. He had been trampled under the hoofs of the animal, and lay writhing in the street with ribs and should-er broken and his face, hands, and body cut and bruised by the sharp shoes of the Charles V. asmund was born in Germany and came to Chicago when a lad of 12 years. He has been a patrolman for eighteen years, first traveling post from the old West Madison Street Station. He was as-signed to duty with the Central Detail for three years, but most of his service has been in the West Chicago avence district.

Washmund is 47 years old, married, and has five children. He lives at No. 696 Superior street.

PECULIAR BECIPROCATION.

To the Editor-Dear Sir -Kindly allow me the spice in your columns, to express, to several members of the Lidy's Guild, of St. Mark's church, my great indignation toward them for the mistaken impression that they themselves have caused to be cir-culated in Maplewood and vicinity, relative to the recent test monial entertainment tendered to Mr. George Roberts by the Maplewood Operettes. These seemingly intelligent, christian women, who are supposed to be going around doing good. nelping the poor, caring for the sick, and in other ways advancing the cause of re-ligion, and bettering the general cond tion of the families in the town, have, in my opinion and in the opinion of several others, either entirely reversed their tactics or else they have swerved from their usual course to no small extent. These ladies have taken the trouble to impress monv of our people with the understanding that the testimonial to Mr. Roberts was distinctly a charitable affiar, and that the g ntleman in question was obliged to accept of the same in order to obtain the necessaries of life. And in addition these ladies did not feel that Mr. Roberts was deserving of any "help" as they were pleased to term it, and not over delicate in their endeavors to keep away from the entertainment, all the people they could. Had these ladies ever worked as hard in the interest of the church, as they worked against the so-called 'ebarity entertainment' the church would now be far ahead of its present fi nancial conditions. It is a wel-known fact that every musical society in the country is in the habit of giving t e musical director a testimonial of some kind, not for the sake of appearing charitable, or of putting a few dollars in his pocket, but to show their appreciation of his work as a director and in that way slightly reciprocate for what he number of the members of the Ladies has done for the organization of which be is Guild of St. Marks church, and several of director.
