of Commerce, Chicago. The entertainment given Friday evening, July 17th, for the benefit of the Irving Club was largely attended. The minstrels, thirteen in number, were arranged in a semi-circle with the boy quartette on an elevation in the rear. The end men. Messrs. Oswald, Perkins, Smith and T. rumston were important factors and were well received. The music was especially pleasing and great credit is due to Messrs. Shoessling, Goodridge and the members of the orchestra. The songs were especially well rendered, and the violin solo by Mr. Schoessling and exhibition of fancy club swinging by Mr. A. D. Richey have had few equals in Irving Park.

A Chapter of the Eastern Star was institutsd at Irving Park, Wednesday evening, July 22d, with the installation of the following officers: Mrs. Coyle, Worthy Mat-ron; Mr. Hilands, Worthy Patron; Mrs. Toles, Associate Matron; Mrs. Kilgore, Treasurer; Miss Primrose, Secretary; Mrs. Day, Conductor; Mrs. King, Associate Conductor; Mrs. McDonald, Chaplain; Mrs. Hacker, Warden. The following ladies from Chicago were present and very ably and successfully instituted the Chapter. Mrs. J. A. Kley, Miss A. L. Fosket, Mrs. A. B. Height, and Mrs. Chester. Mr. A. B. Height was also present.

three extra taps put in for the Park im-provement. The mains are flushed once in two weeks, using at each flushing an aver-age of 225 barrels of water. The daily consumption of water from the tank (for 24 hours) will average 600 barrels or 18900 gallons, which requires a steady pumping of six hours and over, each day. Mr. Robinson states that his entire time which he devotes to the village as superintendent of water works will average ten hours a day. For this labor he receives the mu-nificent pay of $30 per month. The moral to the latter clause of the above article is not obvious. As the result of a gues-ing contest, (which has been suppressed by unknown parties) the following takes the prize: Is the laborer worthy of his hire?

Tennessee Miners Do Not Propose to Allow Soldiers to Interfere with Them-Trouble Expected.

KNOXVIILE, Tenn., July 22.-The crisis came at Briceville about 11 o'clock when the miners and a crowd of sympathizers from the surrounding country gathered around the camp of the State militia and captured the troops and convicts and marched them off to the depot and put them on a train and shipped them to Knoxville. The camp was on a little knoll in a hollow and surrounded on all sides by mountains. The miners and their friends to the number of twelve or fifteen hundred were divided into four equal squads and approached on the four sides of the square which the camp was formed in. The miners sent up a flag of truce and sent in a committee to the officers in command.

The committee notified the officers that they had come to take the convicts-peaceably, if possible, by force, if necessary. The officers parleyed The troops were allowed to keep their arms and ammunition, and they with the convicts were marched to the train. They were loaded in box cars or whatever could be had and the entire lot sent to Knoxville. The troops, to the number of 107 all told, went to. the armory of the Knoxville Rifles, where they now remain awaiting the orders of the Governor. The miners made them promise not to return to Coal Creek.

The convicts were taken to the jail. locked up, and fed. An immense crowd met the troops at the depot. They were freely cheered as they marched through the streets. The city is now intensely excited. Leading men of all political parties say the law must be upheld.

Gov. Buchanan's administration is that of the Alliance and some of the politicians are discussing what the Alliance will do, but the great mass of citizens say the law must be observed and that Gov. Buchanan must enforce the law regardless of cost.

The sentiment here is that he must send all the State troops, who are few and poorly organized, to the front at once and put experienced men and officers in charge. If he has not force enough he must call for volunteers.

OF THE DEAD BODY IN A CHI-CAGO VAT.

The Dead Man of Good Family and Explanation Divulges a Strange and Touching Story.

CHICAGO, July 21.-A letter received at the manufactory of E. W. Gillett to-day effectually clears up the mystery surrounding the dead man taken to the Chicago Medical college under the name of F. C. Hall. The deceased is now known to be Hall, the cousin of Judge and E. W. Kohlsaat, and the traveling salesman who has been doing business for Mr. Gillett and using the name F. C. Hall has confessed that his name is James Curran and that he, being a chum of the dead man, assumed the name with the consent of Hall.

The story is a remarkable one. Years ago among the Eastern hills, there grew up between two farmer lads a strong friendship. As they developed into manhood, although their paths lay in different directions, each man held a warm place in his heart for the them, and have transferred the char- other. Both were successful for ter to Storm Lake, where a new college / awhile. They were married and prospered in business. But fate frowned upon them. They were separated from their families, and when they met in Cincinnati a year ago theywere both under the hand of misfortune.

Things went from bad to worse, until they drifted to Chicago last December. Hall, through his relationship with the wealthy Kohlsaats, was enabled to secure employment, but Curran, without influential friends, without references and unable to secure a position. was on the verge of starvation. One day in March he saw an advertisement in a Sunday paper signed E. W. Gillett and asking for a salesman. He felt certain that he was competent to fill the position, but without recommendations it was useless to apply. He consulted his friend. In the little room of their cheap lodging, however, they talked of the matter for hours. A $25 deposit was required, and where was the $25? Hall, it is said, endeavored, but unsuccessfully, to secure a loan.

At last he said: "I have references. I'll tell Judge Kohlsaat I want the position. I'll get his check and you ake that and my references and get the position."

Curran objected, fearing to get his friend in trouble, but Hall insisted.

The plan was successful. Curran went on the road under Hall's name, and worked the trade successfully, while his friend delved away in Chicago, his only happiness in the thought of Curran's success. One night he went to his lodgings weary and ill, and the next morning he died in the county hospital. At first it was considered a suicide, but later the death was found to have resulted from a ruptured blood-vessel- The Kohlsaats were notified of the death, ane E. W. Kohlsaat visited the Chicago Medical college, whither the body had been taken, but owing to the bad condition

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, July 20.-Pisgah Butler county, is in a state of excite ment over a remarkable case of return to life of one its best known citizen. after death had claimed her.

The residents of that hamlet were shocked to read the announcement of the death of Mrs. Richard Middleton, wife of one of the best known farmers in that section. Imagine the feeling of the community yesterday when it was learned that the dead had come to life again.

Mrs. Middleton, who is a middle-aged lady, was taken suddenly ill on Sunday evening, 'the physician, who was hastily summoned, tried to re ieve her, but of no avail, and she apparently breathed her last at 2 o'clock Monday morning.

Preparations were at once made to arrange the body for burial, and word was sent for the undertaker to come. The remains awaited the coming of that gentleman through Monday until about 6 o'clock in the evening, when the long expected undertaker arrived, sixteen hours after the supposed deatp. As he looked at the corpse he dis-cerned a faint flush upon the cheeks. He was completely upset, and the surprise 1 relatives were notified of the startling state of affairs.

The undertaker postponed his . mbalming process, and the relatives watched eagerly at the bedside until 3 a.m., when a shudder swept over the supposed dead frame and Mrs. Midd'stod was again alive.

The doctor was hurriedly sent for, and he now has every hope that she will recover from her peculiar experience.

WORK OF THE NAVY.

The Forthcoming Report Will Contain Much of Interest.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 21.-The annual publication of the naval intelligence office shortly to be issued will contain an unusually large amount of valuable information on naval subjects at home and abroad. Its leading feature is an article on armor plate, which gives an intelligent resume of the progress made by all the naval powers in this important matter during the last year. The conspicuous points' reached by the United States through successful experiments are well brought out. Another valuable feature is an elaborate account of the coast defense system of Europe. The system of promotion in the European navies, which is concisely treated, will be of special interest at this time in view of the present agitation of the same subject in our own navy. Among other articles included are notes on ships and torpedo boats, machinery, electricity on ship board, naval maneuvers of 1890. high explosives, and a history of the development of torpedo vessels.

PART II.

FOLD BY DICK FENTON OF FRENCHAY, GLOUCESTERSHIRE, ESQUIRE.

Now, whether I had mistaken the day, or whether the threatening fall of show had made certain people change their minds, I fon't know; but, to my annoyance and vexation, no skaters were to be seen, and, more-over, the uncut, white surface told me that none had been on the pond that morning. Still, hoping they might come in spite of the weather, I put on my skates and went out-ide edging and grape-vining all over the place. But as there was no person in partic-plar—in fact, no one at all—to note my pow-ers, I soon got tired. It was, indeed, dreary, treary work. But I waited and hoped until the mow came down so fast and furiously.

that I felt sure that waiting was in valn, and that I had driven to Lilymere for nothing. Back I went to the little inn; utterly dissusted with things in general, and feeling that to break some one's head would be a relief to me in my present state of mind. Of course, a sensible man would at once have got his horse between the shafts and driven home. But, whatever I may be now, in those days I was not a sensible man-Brand will, I know, cordially indorse this remark-the accommodation of the inn was not such as to induce one to linger within its precincts; but the fire was a right good one, and a drink, which I skillfully manufactured out of some hot beer, was not to be despised, and proved warming to the body and soothing to the ruffled temper. So I lingered over the big fire until I began to feel hungry, and upon the landlady assuring me that she could cook the landlady assuring me that she could cook a rasher, decided it would be wiser to stay where I was until the violence of the snow-where I was until the violence of the snow-storm was over; for coming down it was now, and no mistake! And it kept on coming down. About half-past three, when I sorrowfully decided I was bound to make a move, it was snowing faster than ever. I harnessed my horse, and laugh-ing at the old woman's dismal prophecy that I should never get to Midcombe in such weather, gathered up the reins, and away I went along the white road. I thought I knew the way well enough. In fact, I had always prided myself upon re-membering any road once driven over by me; but does any one who has not tried it really know how a heavy fall of snow changes the know how a heavy fall of snow changes the aspect of the country, and makes landmarks snares and delusions? I learnt all about it then, once and for all. I found, also, that the snow lay much deeper than I thought could possibly be in so short a time, and it still fell in a manner almost blinding. Yet I went on bravely and merrily for some miles. Then came a bit of uncertainty— Which of those two roads was the right one? This one, of course—no, the other. There was no house near; no one was likely to be passing in such weather, so I was left to exercise my free, unbiased choice, a privi-lege I would willingly have dispensed with. However, I made the best selection I could, and followed it for some two miles. Then I began to grow doubtful, and soon persuad-ing myself that I was on the wrong track, retraced my steps. I was by this time some-thing like a huge white plaster-of-paris figure, and the snow which had accumulated on the old dog-cart made it run heavier by half-a-ton, more or less. By the time I came to that unlucky junction of roads at which my misfortunes began, it was almost dark; the sky as black as a tarpaulin, yet sending down the white feathery flakes thicker and faster than ever. I felt inclined to curse my folly in attempting such a drive, at any rate I blamed nivself for not having started two or three hours earlier. I'll warrant that steady-going old Brand never had to accuse himself of such ss as mine.

Well, I took the other road; went on some way; came to a turning which I seemed to remember; and not without missiving not without misgivings, to lowed it. My misgivings increased when, after a little while, I found the road grew full of ruts, which the snow and the darkness of ruts, which the snow and the darkness quite concealed from me until the wheels got into them. Evidently I was wrong again. I was just thinking of making the best of my way out of this rough and unfrequented road, wher.—there. I don't know how it happened, such things seldom occur to me-a s fall an the part of my tired horse sent me fly-ing over the dashboard, with the only consol-ing thought that the reins were still in my Lackily the snow had made the falling pretty soft. I soon picked myself up and set about estimating damages. -With some difficulty I got the horse out of the harness and then felt free to inspect the dog-cart. Alas! after the manner of the two-wheel kind whenever a horse thinks fit to fall, one shaft had snapped off like a carro'; so here was 1. five miles apparently from ywhere, in the thick of a blinding snowsto ... left standing helpless beside a jaded hors and a broken cart—I should like to know what Brand would have done under the circumstances. As for me, I reflected for some minutesreflection in a snowstorm is weary work. I reasoned, I belleve, logically, and at last came to this decision: I would follow the road. If, as I suspected, it was but a cart track, it would probably soon lead to a habitation of some kind. Anyway, I had better try a bit furthe.: I took hold of the wearled horse, and with snow under my feet, snow-flakes whirling round me, and a wind blowing right into my teeth, struggled on. It was a journey! I think I must have been three-quarters of an hour going about a quarter of a mile. I was just beginning to despair, when I saw a welcome gleam of light. I steered toward it, fondly hoping that my troubles were at an end. I found the light stole through the ill-fitting window-shutters of what seemed, so far as I could make out in the darkness, to be a small farm-house. Tying to a gate the knotted reins by which I had been leading the horse, I stag-gered up to the door and knocked loudly. Upon my honor, until I leant against that or-post I had no idea how tired I was-until that moment I never suspected that the finding of speedy shelter meant absolutely saving my life. Covered from head to foot with snow, my hat crushed in, I must have been a pitiable object. No answer came to my first summons. It was only after a second and more imperative application of my heel that the dorr deigned to give way a few inches. Through the aperture a woman's voice asked who was there? "Let me in," I said. "I have missed my way to Midcombe. My horse has fallen. Yo must give me shelter for the night. Open the door and let me in." "Shelter! You can't get shelter here, mister," said a man's gruff voice. "This ain't an inn, so you'd best be off and go elsewhere." "But 1 must come in," I said, astounded at such inhospitality, "I can't go a step further. Open the door at once!"

faced them. They were a couple of ordinary, respectably attired country people. The man, a sturdy, strong-built, buil-necked rascal, stood scowling at me, and, I concluded, making up his mind as to what course to pursue, "My good people." I said, "you are behav-ing in the most unheard-of manner. Can't you understand that I mean to pay you well for any trouble I give you? But whether you like it or not, here I stay to-night. To turn me out would be sheer nurder." So saying I pulled off my overcoat, and began shaking the snow out of my whiskers. I daresay my determined attitude, my respectable, as well as my muscular appearance, impressed my unwilling hosts. Anyway, they gave in without more ado. Whiist the woman shut the door, through which the snowflakes were whirling, the man said sullenly: "Well, you'll have to spend the night on a chair. We've no beds here for strangers. "Specially those as ain't wanted." "Very well, my friend. Having settled the matter you may as well make yourself pleasant. Go out and put my horse under cover, and give him a feed of some sort-make a mash if you can,"

After given the woman a quick glance as if warning, my scowling host lit a horn lantern, and went on the errand I suggested. I gladly sank into a chair, and warmed myself before a cheerful fire. The prospect of spending the night amid such discomfort was not alluring, but I had, at least, a roof over my

As a rule, the more churlish the nature, the more avaricious it is found to be. My prom-ise of liberal remuneration was, after all, not without its effect upon the strange couple whose refusal to afford me refuge had so nearly endangered my life. They condescended to get me some tea and rough food. After I had disposed of all that, the man produced a bottle of gin. We filled our glasses, and then, with the aid of my pipe, I settled down to make the best of a night spent in a hard wooden chair.

I had come across strange people in my travels, but I have no hesitation in saying that my host was the sullenest, sulkie., most boorish specimen of human nature I had as yet met with. In spite of his recent ill-treatment of me I was quite ready to establish matters on a friendly footing, and made several attempts to draw him into conversation. The brute would only answer in monosyllables, or often not answer at all. So I gave up talking as a bad job, and sat in silence, smoking and looking into the fire, thinking a good deal, it may be, of some one I should have met that morning at Lilymere, had the wretched snow but kept off.

The long clock—that cumbrous eight-day machine which inevitably occupies one cor-ner of every cottager's kitchen—struck nine. The woman rose and left us. I concluded she was going to bed. If so I envied her. Her husband showed no sign of retiring. He still sat over the fire, opposite me. By this time I was dreadfully tired; every bone in my body ached. The hard chair which, an hour or two ago, seemed all I could desire, now scarcely came up to my ideas of the comfort I was justly entitled to claim. My sulky companion had been drinking silently but steadily. Perhaps the liquor he had poured into himself might have rendered his frame of mind more pleasant and amenable to re .-

son. "My good fellow," I said, "your chairs are excellent ones of the kind, but deucedly un-comfortable. I am horribly tired. If the resources of your establishment can't furrish a bed for me to sleep in, couldn't you find a maitress or something to lay down before the

"You've got all you'll get to-night," he answered, knocking the ashes out of his pipe. "Oh, but I say"

"So do I say. I say this: If you don't like it you can leave it. We didn't ask you to

"You infernal beast." I muttered-and meant it too-I declare had I not been so utterly worn out, I would have had that bulletheaded ruffian up for a few rounds on his own kitchen floor, and tried to knock him in-to a more amlable frame of mind. "Never mind." 1 said, "but, remember, civility costs nothing, and often gets rewarded. However, if you wish to retire to your own couch, don't let your native politeness stand in your way. Pray don't hesitate on my account. Leave plenty of fuel, and I shall manage until the morning." "Where you stay, 1 stay," he answered. Then he filled his pipe, and once more re-lapsed into stony silence. I bothered about him no more. I dozed off for a few minutes—woke—dozed off again for some hours. I was in an uncomfortable sort of half, sleep, crammed full of curious dreams_dreams from which 1 started, wondering where I was and how I got there. 1 even began to grow nervous. All sorts of horrible travelers' tales ran through my head. It was in just such places as this that unsuspecting voyagers were stated to have been murdered, and robbed, by just such unmiti-gated ruffians as my host—I can tell you that altogether I spent a most pleasant night. To make matters worse and more dismal, the storm still raged outside. The wind moaned through the trees, but it had again changed, and I knew from the sound on the window-panes that heavy rain had succeed ed snow. As the big drops of water found their way down the large old-fashioned chimney, the fire hissed and spluttered like a spiteful vixen. Everything combined to deprive me of what dog's sleep I could by sheer persistency snatch. I think I tried every position which an ordinary man, not an acrobat, is capable of adopting with the assistance of a common wooden chair. I even lay down on the hard flags. actually tried the table. I propped up the up-per half of my body against the corner walls of the room; but found no rest. At last I rave up all idea of sleeping, and fully aroused myself. I comforted myself by saying that my misery was only temporary-that the longest night must come to an end. My companion had by now succumbed to fatigue, or to the combined effects of fatigue and gin-and-water. His head was hanging sideways, and he slept in a most uncomforta-ble attitude. I chuckled as I looked at him, feeling quite sure that if such a clod was capable of dreaming at all, his dreams must be worse even than mine. I filled another pipe, poked the smoldering logs into a blaze, and sat almost nose and knees over the fire, finding some amusement in speculating upon the condition of the churl before me, and thanking the Lord I was not like unto this man. Suddenly an idea flashed across me. I had seen this fellow before. But when or where I could not remember. His features, as I looked at them with keener interest, seemed to grow more and more familiar. to me. Where could I have met him? Some-where or other, but where? I racked my brain to associate him with some scene, some event. Although he was but an ordinary countryman, such as one sees scores of in a day's ride, only offering from his kind on account of his unpleasant face. I felt sure we were old acquaintances. When he awoke for a moment and changed his strained attitude, my feeling grew stronger and stronger. Yet puzzle and puzzle as I would I could not call o mind a former encounter; so at last I began to think the supposed recognition was pure fancy on my part. Having smoked out several pipes, I thought that a cigar would be a slight break to the monotony of the night's proceedings. So I drew out my case and looked at its contents. Among the weeds was one of a lighter color than the others. As I took it out I said to myself, "Why, old Brand gave me that one when I was last at his house." Curiously enough that cigar was the missing link in the chain of my memory. As I held it in my hand I knew at once why my host's ugly face seemed familiar to me. About a fortnight before, being in town, 1 had spent the evening, with the doctor. He was not alone, and I was introduced to a tall pile young man named Carriston. He was a pleasant, polite young fellow, although not much in my line. At first I judged him to be a would-be poet of the fashionable miserable school: but finding that he and Brand talked so much about art I eventually decided that he was one of the doctor's many artist friends. Art is a hobby he hacks about on grandly. (Mem. Brand's own attempts' at pictures are simply atrocious!) Just before I left, Carriston, the doctor's back being turned, asked me to step into another room. There he showed me the por-trait of a man. It seemed very cleverly drawn, and I presumed he wanted me to criticise it. 'I am a precious bad judge," I said. "I am not asking you to pass an opinion," said Carriston. "I want to beg a favor of you. I am almost ashamed to beg it on so short an acquaintance."

"He seemed modest, and not in want of money, so I encouraged him to proceed. "I heart you say you were going into the country." he resumed. "I want to ask you at Low Prices, Julius M. Price, writing from Kras-

The peasants for miles around arrive by hundreds and hundreds, not have thought again of the matter. Not a doubt about it! So far as a photograph taken from a picture can go, it was the man himself. The same ragged beard, the same coarse features, the same surly look. Young Carriston was evidently a wonderful hand at knocking off a likeness. Moreover, in case I had felt any doubt in the matter, a printed note at the bottom of the photograph said that one joint was missing from a right-hand finger. Sure enough, my friend lacked that small vortion of his misbegotten frame. This discovery threw me into an ecstasy of delight. I laughed so loudly that I almost awoke the ruffian. I guessed I was going to take a glorious revenge for all the discomforts

I had suffered. No one, I felt sure, could be looking for such a fellow as this to do any good to him. I was quite happy in the thought, and for the remainder of the night gloated over the idea of putting a spoke in the wheel of one who had been within an ace of causing my death. I resolved, the mo-ment I got back to civilization, to send the desired intelligence to Brand, and hope for the best

II. The end of that wretched night came a last. When the welcome morning broke I found that a great change had taken place out of doors. The fierce snowstorm had been the farewell of the frost. The heavy rain that followed had filled the roads with slushy and rapidly-thawing snow. I managed to ex-tort some sort of a breakfast from my host, then, having recompensed him according to my promise, not his deserts, started, as soon as I could, on the bare back of my unfortu-nate steed, for Midcombe, which place, after my night's experiences, seemed gifted with merits not its own.

I was surprised upon leaving the house to find it was of larger dimensions than, from the little I saw of it during the night, I had imagined. It was altogether a better class of residence than I had supposed. My surly friend accompanied me until he had placed me on the main road, where I could make no possible mistake. He was kind enough to promise to assist any one 1 might send out in getting the dog-cart once more under way. Then, with a hearty wish on my part that I might never again meet with his like, we parted.

I found my way to Midcombe without much trouble. I took off my things, had a wash, and, like a sensible man for once, went to bed. But 1 did not forget to send a boy straight off to the nearest telegraph station. My message to Brand was a brief one. It simply said:—"Tell your friend I have found his man." This duty done, I dismissed all speculation as to the result from my mind, and settled down to make up arrears of sleep. I was surprised at the reply received that same evening from Brand:—"We shall be with you as soon as we can get down to-mot-row. Meet us at station." From this it was row. clear that my friend was wanted particular-all the better! I turned to the time table and found that, owing to changes and delays, they could not get to C—, the nearest sta-tion to Midcombe, until three o'clock in the afternoon. I' inquired about the crippled dog-cart. It had been brought in; so I left strict instructions that a shaft of some sort was to be rigged in time for me to drive over the next day and meet the doctor and his friend. They came as promised. It was a comfort to see friends of any description, so I gave them a hearty welcome. Carriston took hold of both my hands, and shook them so warm-ly that I began to feel I had discovered a long-lost father of his in my friend. I had almost forgotten the young fellow's appearance, or he looked a very different man today from the one I had seen when last we met. Then he was a wan, pensive, romantic, poetical-looking sort of fellow; now he seemed full of energy, vitality, and grit. Poor old Brand looke I as serious as an undertaker engaged in ' winne'

LAKESIDE, OHIO.

Multitudes Gather to Hear His Thrilling Sermon Taken from the Text-Thou Shalt Be Missed Because Thy Seat will be Empty.

LAKESIDE, O., July 19th .- For many years people have gathered in multitudes at this season of the year for a great out-door Assembly. The grounds are a short sail from Sandusky. The place is beautiful beyond description. Dr. Talmage preached this morning in this delightful place to a vast multitude. His subject was the "Vacant Chair," shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty."

Set on the table the cutlery and the chased silver-ware of the palace, for King Saul will give a state dinner today. A distinguished place is kept at the table for his son-in-law, a celebrated warrior, David by name. The guests, jeweled and plumed, come in and take their places. When people. are invited to a king's banquet, they are very apt to go. But before the covers are lifted from the feast, Saul looks around and finds a vacant seat at the table. He says within himself, perhaps audibly, "What does this mean? milk! As a matter of fact, here and Where is my son-in-law? Where is David, the great warrior? I invited is frozen, so it can be kept without him. I expected him. What! a vacant chair at the King's banquet?" The "Live stock, game and fish, sufficient fact was that David, the warrior, had been seated for the last at his father - in - law's soon as the frost sets in, and in a very time table. The day before Jonathan had coaxed David to go and occupy that place at the table, saying to David in the words of my text, "Thou shalt be missed, because thy seat will be empty." The prediction was fulfilled. David was missed. His seat was empty. That one vacant chair spoke louder than all the occupied chairs at the banquet. But your father's chair was a sacred place. The children used to climb up on the rungs of it for a good night kiss, and the longer he stayed better you liked it. But chair has been vacant the that chair now for some time. The furniture dealer would not give you fifty cents for it, but it is a throne of influence in your domestic circle. I saw in the French palace, and in the throne room, the chair that Napoleon used to occupy. It was a beautiful chair, but the most significent part of it was the letter "N' embroidered into the back of the chair in purple and gold. And your father's old chair sits in the throne room of your heart. and your affections have embroidered into the back of that chair in purple and gold the letter "F." Have all the pravers of that old chair been answered? I ave all the counsels of that old chair been practicel? Speak out! old armchair. History tells us of an old man whose three sons were The berries, which resemble coffee in the Olympic games, and when they came back, these three chairs of your homes and of your social me as the spectacle of just ons facethe face of an invalid who was wheeled in on her chair. I said to her afterwards: "Madam, how long have you been prostrated?" for she was lying flat in the chair. "O!" she replied: "I have been this way fifteen years." I said: "Do you suffer very much?" "O, yes," she said: "I suffer very much; I suffer all the time; part of the time I was blind. I always suffer." "Well," I said: "can you keep your courage up?" "O yes," she said: "I am happy, very happy indeed." Her face showed it. She looked the happiest of anyone on the ground.

O! what a means of grace to the world, these invalid chairs. On that field of human suffering the grace of God gets its victory. Edward Payson the invalid, and Richard Baxter the invalid, and Robert Hall the invalid, and the ten thousand of whom the world has never heard, but and his text, 1 Samuel 20, 18: "Thou of whom all heaven is cognizant. The most conspicuous thing on earth for God's eye and the eye of angels to rest on, is not a throne of earthly power, but it is the invalid's chair.

I pass on, and I find one more vacant chair. It is a high chair. it is the child's chair. If that chair be occupied. I think it is the most potent chair in all the household. All the chairs wait on it. It means more than David's chair at Saul's banquet. At any rate, it makes more racket. That is a strange house that can be dull with a child in it. How that child breaks up the hard, worldliness of the place, and keeps you young to sixty, seventy, and eighty years of age. If you have no child of your own, adopt one; it will open heaven to your soul. It will pay its way. Its crewing in the morning will give the day a cheerful starting, and its glee at night will give the day a cheerful close: You do not like children?

A pioneer in California says that for the first year or two after his residence in Sierra Nevada county, there was not a single child in all the reach of a hundred miles. But the Fourth of July came, and the miners were gathered together, and they were celebrating the Fourth with oration, and pcem, and a boisterous brass band; and while the band was playing, an infant's voice was heard crying, and all the miners were startled, and the swarthy men began to think of their homes on the Eastern coast, and of their wives and children far away, and their hearts were thrilled with home-sickness as they heard the babe cry. But the music went on, and the child cried louder and louder, and the brass band played louder and louder, trying to drown out the infantile interruption, when a swarthy miner, the tears Folling down his face, got up and shook his fist, and said: "Stop that noisy band, and give the baby a chance.' Oh! there was pathos in it, as well as good cheer in it. There is nothing to aroese, and melt, and subdue the soul like a child's voice. But when it goes away from you, the high" chair becomes a higher chair, and there is desolation all about you. My hearers, I have gathered up the voices of your departed friends and victors | tried to intone them into one invitation upward. I set in array all the vacant sons, with their garlands, put circle, and I bid them cry out this morning: "Time is short. m n was so rejoiced at the victories of is near. Take my Savior. Be at peace with my God. Come up where I am. We lived together on earth, come let us live together in heaven." We answer that invitation. We come. Keep a seat for us, as Saul kept a seat for David, but that seat shall not be empty. And oh! when we are all through with this world and we have shaken hands all around for the last time, and all our chairs in the home circle and in the outside world shall be vacant, may we be worshipping God in that place from which we shall go out no more forever. I thank God there will be no vacant chairs in heaven. There we shall meet again and talk over our earthly heartbreaks. How much you have been through since you saw them last! On the shining shore you will take it all over. The heartaches. The loneliness. The sleepless nights. The weeping until your had no more power to weep, because the heart was withered and dried up. Songs Between Testimony.

The habit of long, painful blanks or the monotony of the ever recurring song between testimonies, is deadly, formalism. That course will drag the life out of the best meeting and best people in the world. A meeting where everything moves forward under the anointing power, can scarcely be too long, but one which drags and drags is almost too long when it has scarcely begun. But the strange feature of the case is that the meeting which drags usually continues beyond the reasonable time. when one which moves up with the work in hand usually closes up in reasonable and proper time.

AT a meeting of property-owners residing along Milwaukee avenue Wednesday resolutions to this effect were adopted: That inasmuch as Mr. Yerks had, for reasons unknown to the property-owners, refused to construct car lines along Milwaukee avenue, Armi tage road, and North avenue, it was commended that a meeting of property-owners ih Secs. 26, 35, and 36 be journal every success. held next Saturday. It is also recommended that all assistance necessary be given to any corporation that wants to build street-car lines northwest of Armitage road on Milwaukee avenue, west af California avenue on Armiage road, and west of California avenue and on North avenue.

The activity in the northwestern part of the city continues despite the hot weather. The St. Paul officials have secured a strip of land one and one-half miles long west of Cragin, and what has not been purchased will be gained by condemnation suits. Land in Seeberger's subdivision will be thus acquired. The property owners are beginning to take advantage of the state of affairs and many transfers are reported. The ten acre tract at the corner of West 52d street and Notrh avenue was Wednesday closed out to a syndicate for $30000, he sale being made by M. D. Birge * Co. The same firm has recently

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. | SS. STATE OF ILLINOIS. | SS. I. ISAAC N. PEABSON. Secretary of State of the State of Illinois, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of "An act to provide for the printing and distribution of ballots at public expense, and for the nomination of can-didates for public offices, to regulate the man-ner of holding elections, and to enforce the secrecy of the ballot," the original of which is now on file in this office. now on file in this office. IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I hereto set

[SEAL.] my hand and affix the great seal of State, at the city of Springfield, this ist day of July, A. D. 1891. I. N. PEARSON, becretary of State.

He Was a Wreck, but He Stopped to Re lieve a Distress-d Horse.

ALL PASSED BY BUT A TRAMP.

He came shambling out of an alley. If appearances count for anything, he had been thrown out of the low groggery hidden in its depths because he did not have the price of a drink in his pockets. He was desperately down at the heel and out at the elbow, unkempt and dirty-a wreck of a man. He wasn't drunk, and he was miserable because he wasn't.

A little further along the street was a buggy. In the buggy was a woman. She had been left to take care of the horse. A hitching-post would have done the work better. When a rein caught and the animal's head was drawn sharply to one side, she wondered what made him hold his head so. Anybody who knows horses-or much of anything else-would have understood that the patient animal was in pain.

The unceasing stream of humanity flowed by. Some men did not see; others saw but did not so much as slacken their pace. The masher on the corner never stirred from his post. Why should he? The woman in the buggy was neither good-looking nor young.

Along came the shambling wreck. His furtive glance fell upon the horse and took in his plight. He stopped. Did some sudden memory of boyhood days on the old farm come to him? Did he see a vision of a big red barn and o'd Bill, and Dobbin, and Whitenose; and the other horses in the stalls. and the lumbering wagons in the shed. and the harness on the pegs? And with these subtle tricks of memory did the wasted life, and the sin, and the degradation of later years vanish for the moment and leave him once more a simple country lad, with a heart full of love for the brute creation?

Not to any great extent. He slipped the rein over the shaft, freed the horse's head, and begged of the woman in the buggy a quarter to buy bread for his sick wife and eight starving children.

Perseverance.

Long ago a little boy was entered at Harrow School. He was put in a class beyond his years, and where all the scholars had the advantage of private instruction, which was denied to him. His master often reproved him for his dullness, but all his efforts failed to raise him from the lowest place in the form. But, nothing daunted, he procured the grammars and other elementary books which his classmates had gone through in previous terms. He devoted the hours of play, and not a few hours of sleep, to the mastering of these, till, in a few weeks; he gradually began to rise, and it was not long before he was ahead of all his companions, and not only became the leader of that division, but the pride of Harrow. You may see the statue of that boy, whose career began with this fit of energetic application, in St. Paul's Cathedral, for he lived to be the greatest Oriental scholar of modern Europe -it was Sir William Jones. THE climate of Hindoostan goes a long way toward explaining the religious scruples which would make millions of Brahmins starve rather than eat meat stews, but less intelligible is the prejudice of Japanese peasants, who cannot be persuaded to drink cow's nilk. The Abyssinian highlanders would shrink from neither alternative, but would promptly cut the acquaintance of a neighbor who should defile himself by broiling a rabbit. Moses, too, interdicts rabbit's flesh. which constitutes the only luxury of the snow-bound lakoots, who would scorn to waste a copper coin on Chinese tea, but are apt to fuddle with a decoction of fly toadstool. The Tartar emirs scandalize American missionaries by their fondness for milk brandy (koumiss), but are, in their turn, amazed at the caprice that makes their pious guests prefer pork to horse flesh. After all, there is no disputing about tastes.

DR. SEAVER, college physician and iustructor in athletics at Yale, has made a comparative study of the users and non-users of tobacco in the present senior class of that institution, and some striking results are presented by his measurements. These denote an average increase in favor of the nonusers as follows: Lung capacity, sixty-six per cent.; chest inflation, nineteen per cent.; height, twenty per cent.; weight, twenty-five per cent. As to the mental effects of the tobacco habit, the statistics are equally significant. Of those who received junior appointments above dissertations ninety-five per cent. have not used tobacco; of those above colloquies 874 per cent. have not used tobacco; of all who received appointments 84 3-10 per cent. have not used tobacco; of the entire class seventy per cent. have not used tobacco.

THERE IS GREAT PROFIT IN CLIPPING CLOVER.

711 Effects of Allowing Cattle to Pasture on Young Clover-Mistakes Concerning Manare-For the Housekeepers.

Clipping Clover.

If any one who practices pasturing young clover will take the pains to examine a plant, they will find that the crown of the clover plant forms just at the surface of the ground, and that the clover plant, although a vigund ven der corns vas first get bloom orous grower, is also the most tender of all grasses. I believe the greatest should be watched while eating. If injury comes from tramping. Consider the weight of from 400 to 1,000 pounds placed on this tender crown by the hoofs of cattle, and it is not strange that the plant is injured? Another objection is that cattle will not graze over the ground regular, but where the clover is the thinnest and needs the most care to help it to its best, is where stock will graze the closest.

> the stems coming from one crown at one time; some will be left to continue a spindling growth, and a plant so treated will not stool and form that thick, even growth necessary for a large crop the following year. It has been proved by experience that to clip clover and leave it on the ground as mulch is worth more than all the pasture you have ever been able to get from newly seeded clover. And whether you intend to mow for hay or pasture the clover it always pays to keep the stock off of the newly seeded fields.

And yet it is the universal practice among farmers to turn the stock into newly seeded fields, as soon as the wheat or oats are taken off; pasturing fertilizes the air space and thus tempts the clover off close to the ground, leaving the tender crown and roots exposed to the hot sun and dry winds. for the rest of the summer and fall, and to the tender mercies of the elements during the winter. If we intend to cut a crop of clover seed after hay, by clipping our clover the first year, instead of pasturing it off, our clover is ready to cut for hay from ten days to two weeks earlier, and all who have any experience in growing clover seed know that the earlier the hay is cut, the better the crop of seed. We believe that in localities where it is impossible to raise clover seed on account of the clover midge, if the clover was clipped back, and everything left on the ground for a mulch to stimulate a rapid and early growth, so as to cut the hay early before the first crop of insects hatched. that the seed would bloom and be too far advanced for them to injure it.

Manure and Mistakes. Among the mistaken opinions long held by cultivators, is the belief that and a thin place is formed in the fibre. Well fed sheep will always pay for the extra feed they consume by a heavy fleece of good, sound wool.

To Feed Young Pigs. The following plan is a good one for pigs just beginning to eat says the National Stockman. Put the ship stuff or mill feed of the kind used in the troughs dry, and pour over it the skimmed and kitchen slops. Allow them to eat what they want, then turn the sows into the lot and let them clean up what the pigs leave. By this way there is no feed left in troughs for the pigs to gorge themselves with, and besides the troughs are clean for the next feeding time. The pigs they do not appear very hungry turn the sows in sooner. It will be found that young pigs five or six weeks old will have better appetites in the evening than in the morning. The time at the trough should be governed by the appetite. By this manner of feeding in the busy season time is saved over the plan of mixing slop each feeding time for the next; it also cuts off the occasional feed of sour slop, which is Stock in grazing do not bite off all always dangerous and detrimental.

A Good Subsoiler.

The best subsoiler we know of, says Colman's Rural World, is clover roots. The hardpan may be so near the surface that clover will not grow, but in farming sections where there is sufficient rainfall to grow clover there is no subsoiler so cheap and effective as the roots of clover. The clover root bores down by night and day, Sabbath included. The silent force which honevcombs the subsoil cannot be measured, but its work is none the less effective. It makes a place for itself in life and at its death it makes a place for the air, the most potent instrument in breaking up the impervious subsoil. Not only that, but it downward the roots of other plants and grasses. What subsoil plow runs so easy and is so cheap in its construction and efficient in its operation? All it needs is clover seed sown early and covered, and time.

Good Roads, Good Horses.

Some one who has been looking into the matter claims that Kentucky's good roads are in a large measure responsible for her good horses. And it seems to be reasonable enough that in a country affording good roads for traveling by horse power we should find the highest degree of development of the horse calculated to make the best time on the roads. No doubt thousands more horses would be kept by those able to do so in many sections if they but had the assurance of being able to enjoy them a greater part of the year on the road. Good roads and good horses go together, and the better the roads the more people keep good horses, and the more willing they are

Some years ago Mercedes Lina Stoller was a handsome girl living with her parents in the R e St. Quentin. The family came from Switzerland years before. Mercedes had ambition. She desired to be a premiere danseuse. She gained admittance to the ballet corps. Young, handsome, supple, she soon achieved honors from Terpsichore. With Carmencita she shared the applause of the boulevarders at the Cafe Chantants. About this time she met Alfred Duffomerie, who was a student. It was love at first sight. They were to be married, but the young student thought he could better his lot in America. In this country he obtained employment as a cook. He applied intelligence to his new vocation, and soon ranked as a chef. Then he sent for Mercedes to join him. While preparing for her departure she was seized with typhus fever. She was then fulfilling an engagement at Barcelona, Spain. The sisters of charity took care of the beautiful girl and nursed her back to life from the verge of the grave. Meanwhile her lover had gone West to Chicago and obtained a place as chef at the Hotel Wellington. He wrote to her again to join him. She started as soon as her health permitted, and reached New York on the steamer La Gascogne a few days ago, where she was met by the prospective husband. They went

A late dispatch from Georgia tells of the capture of a devilfish in Broad River, near Daniel's Ferry. A party of Negroes were seining, and when they hauled their nets ashore they discovered a terrible looking fish with arms and legs of tremendous length. It was ten feet in length, and the two fore limbs, or arms, contained prongs which resembled fingers, while the other limbs were much in the shape of horses' legs. When the Negroes reached the land

Horse Talk.

There is no doubt the kind of horses for farmers to raise for sale is the kind there is the most demand for, and will generally bring good prices. The wants for different kinds of business in different localities differ, and it is the interest of producers to endeavor to supply the article the market requires. Fashion sometimes seems to have almost as much to do with the style of horses called for as in the matter of dress, and fashion is as fickle and capricious as the weather in April. At times the large breeds like the Percherons and Clydesdales are all the rage, and threaten to drive the other breeds out of the country, and then there will be a reaction, the pendulum will swing the other way almost to the Texas mustangs and stop at the French Coach horses or the Cleveland bays. It is said that the latter breed once went out of fashion when the English stages were superseded by railroads. and became extinct, but has since been revived in order to supply these same railroads with omnibus horses. It does not make a particle of difference whether the Cleveland bays of the present day can trace their genealogy back to the stock in Noah's ark so long as they are just as good horses as they ever were.

to pay well for them.

Much time and labor may be wasted by farmers who attempt to improve their stock by selection, but without recourse to some well-known breed. Farmers are not averse to improving stock. Like all other classes they prefer the best, but they do not take the easiest and quickest way to gain their objects. By selection of the best for breeding purposes, every year. any stock can be made better, but some rule must govern the process of improvement by selection, as the first requisite is to fix certain characteristics in order that they may be transmitted to the progeny.

The customary greetings and introductions being over an excellent musical and literary entertainment was given which alone was worth the admission price. Large plates of ice-cream and mountains of cake, such as only Maplewood ladies' know how to make, disappeared perhaps more rapidly than is generally considered proper by the M. D's., yet there was a plenty for all. The way in which those having the matter in charge, especially Mrs. J. A. Riddell, worked is the reason why the occasion was so grand a success. Among those who took part in making the entertainment so agreeable were Mr. Silas Bung, Mrs. Mehring, Miss Beebe and Mrs. Rogers. Dancing concluded what turned out to be one of the most pleasant and enjoyable events of the season.
