Terrible Aceident Near Moirans, 13 France-Nineteen Lives Lost In a Collision at Sea.

PARIS, Oct. 28 .- A passenger train on the railway between Lyons and Gre-noble was derailed near Moirans to day and ran over an embankment. A number of the carriages were telescoped.

The train, which was running at a high rate of speed at the time of the accident, was drawn by two locomotives. The accident occured in a steep incline and curve, and is supposed to have been due to a defect in the brake of the second locomotive. The em-bankment over which the train rolled is forty feet high. A dozen carriages lie in a shapeless heap at the foot of the bank.

According to later particulars from the scene of the accident, fifteen per-sons were killed and fity were injured. Three of the injured are not expected to survive the night, and fifteen others are in a critical condition, one person having both legs broken. The bodies of two of the victims are crushed and mangled beyond recognization.

MINISTER EGAN ACTS.

The Ultimatum of the Washington Government Served on the Junta. SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Oct. 28.-The United States government to-day, through Minister Egan, formally demanded reparation from the government of Chile for the attack recently made in Valparaiso upon a number of the seamen of the United States cruiser Baltimore. The demand made by the United States minister is no informal suggestion that the government at Washington expects some kind of satisfaction for the killing and wounding of the Baltimore's sailors. It is a notification, given according to direct orders received from the State department at Washington, that the United States demands an immediate expla-

MINISTER EGAN.

Acting upon instructions sent to him from Washington Mr. Egan presented the junta with a detailed statement of the results of the investigation made by Capt. Schley of the Baltimore and by Mr. Egan himself. These investigations had shown that Charles Riggan, one of the Baltimore's petty offi-cers, was brutally assaulted by several Chileans while he was riding on a street car. Riggan resisted, but was dragged from the car and murdered by pistol shot in the hands of the Chileans.

William Turnbull, another of the his injuries, received no less than eight teen stab wounds in the back, two of them penetrating his lungs. After giving a full list of the Baltimore's crew who were injured by the mob Mr. Fgan's statement called attention to the fact that thirty-five of the riots arrested, unnecessary violence being used by the police and that they were detained in custody without due cause.

FOUGHT IN THE STREETS.

BLOODY BATTLE BETWEEN OP-POSING IRISH FACTIONS.

McCarthyltes and Parnellites Meet in the Streets of Cork and Engage in a Riot.

CORK. Oct. 29.-Messrs. William Brien and John Dillon arrived here to-day. The two distinguished members of Parliament were met by a deputation composed of members of the National Federation, representa-tives of the Gaelic club, the municipal officers and a large number of priests. An enormous crowd of people lined the route followed by the procession which followed Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon from the railroad station. The procession was headed by a brass band and was escorted by a strong detachment of police.

The reception accorded to the two members of Parliament mentioned may, on the whole, be said to have been of a mixed nature.

Mr. O'Brien, during his speech at the assembly rooms, said that he was willing to give fair play to his oppo-nents, but added that he would not yield to "brickbats and dynamite bombs," a remark which was received with considerable loud applause.

Continuing, Mr. O'Br.en said that tney (the Parnellites) might blow up the office of the newspaper represent-ing the views of the McCarthyites, "but," he exclaimed, "they cannot destroy the spirit which animates that party." [Tremendous applause min-gled with some hooting.]

At another part of his discourse Mr. O'Brien, amid cheers, called upon Mr. John E. Redmond, the Parnellite candidate for Cork city and the new leader of the Parnellite party, to repudiate all respon-ibility for t e violence noted in connection with the dynamite incident last night in Dublin.

After the Cork county convention had adjourned there was a serious fight in the streets of the city between the McCarthyites and the Parnellites. As soon as the convention had closed its proceedings Messers. Dillon and O'Brien passed through this city, still accompanied by the proceession which met them at the railroad station. Sudpenly the McCarthyites were attacked by a large mob of Parnellites, and both sides fought desperately with sticks, clubs, shovels and picks.

A detachment of mounted police was sent for and they spurred their horses Baltimore's men who died to-day from in between the two lines of combatants. striking right and left with the flat of their sabres amid two crossing showers of stones and bricks. The antagonistic groups, it is feared, will reassemble and there is taken in charge by the coroner.

JEALOUSY AND A PISTOL

Bertha Quali Shoots at Her Ex-Lover and Kills Herself.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Oct. 28.-Bertha Quall attempted to shoot Alexander Walker last night and then Alexander Walker last night and then turning the weapon on herself lodged a bullet in her brain. Jealousy in-spired the tragedy. Walker is book-keeper for the Toledo bottling works. He is twenty-eight years old, dresses well, is good looking and sociable. About a year ago he became engaged to Anna Tomlin, a young lady with whom he had been going for some time. ime.

Soon afterward at a social gathering he mst Bertha Quail, Bertha was twenty years old, very pretty and vivacious, a dress-maker by occupation, and her own dresses were good advertisements for herself. A mild flirtation grew up. Walker began paying her attention, accompanied her to the theaters and parties and made himself agreeable generally, but at the same time maintained his good stand-ing in the household of his affianced, Anna Tomlin.

Last week Walker and Bertha had a uarrel and they separated in anger. Walker said he thought she did not care for him, and soon after the quarrel he went to Anna Tomlin and urged upon her an early marriage. She had become a triffe jealous of his attentions to the other girl and this mark of re-pentance pleased her. The couple were married last Saturday night and Bertha was not an invited guest. Last night after supper Walker was alone in the office, busy over his books. when the door opened and Bertha walked in. She looked prettier than ever before. Her face was flushed, but she did not seem excited. She ap-peared to be friendly and she and Walker had a long talk together. "I supposed she did not care for me, but after I had talked with her I regretted my hasty marriage." said Walker, speaking of the interview. "She told me she loved me and I believe that it was only the lattle quarrel last week that prevented us being happy together.

After talking for half an hour Bertha asked Walker if he was going home. He replied in the affirmative, and putting on his coat told her to go ahead while he turned off the gas. She went out into the hall, which was lighted, and when he reached the ball after her he saw Bertha raise her right hand, carrying a revolver. He threw up his hands and a bullet crashed against his sleeve button, breaking it, and then glancing off lodged in the door.

Walker dodged out of the door, and as he did so he heard another shot and supposed it was aimed at him. Hearing nothing further he crept back and looking into the hall saw Bertha lying on the floor.

He summoned assistance, but it was too late. The girl had placed the revolver to her face close to the nose and pulled the trigger. The bullet peneirated the brain and death ensued half an hour later. The body was

Crops Damaged by Floods. MADRID, Oct. 28 .- Floods continue

In conclusion Mr. Egan said that the surgeons of the United States warship expressed the opinion that some of the wounds inflicted upon the American sailors were bayonet wounds, and that this clearly showed that the police officers of Valparaiso, who are armed with bayonets, took part in the at-tack. The Americans were without arms and practica'ly defenseless. Mr. Egan, in presenting the Chilean junta with the statement of the assault on the American sailors, expressed in distinct terms the feeling of great indignation which the State de partment at Washington feels at the whole affair and especially at the brutal conduct of the police of Valparaise in joining with the mob in the latter's attack upon the Baltimore's seamen and in drawing their bayonets and using them against the unarmed Americans. Mr. Egan also practically called attention to the additional brutality of the police of Valparaiso in using horses to drag the Americans to prison.

After making a brief but pointed summary of the facts to which he had been instructed to call attention Mr. Egan informed the representatives of the junta that in the name of the United States he demanded reparation for the insults and injuries complained of.

Now the question which , arises is what will be the action of the Chilean government? As appears now there seems to be no coubt that the junta will soon make the reparation demanded.

The Demand, However, flits at Few But Uncle Sam. PARIS, Oct. 27.-The new tariff act

cannot be promulgated before the end of the present year, therefore there will not be sufficient time to make it the subject of negotiations between the powers before the treaties with them lapse. The government accordingly will introduce in the chamber of deputies a bill to authorize them to establish commercial relations with foreign nations during the year 1892. The mininum tariff will be applied to Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, Portugal and Sweden, the treaties with which will expire in February, on condition that those powers grant France their lowest tariff rates. The minimum tariff will also be conceded to those nations now having the most favored treatment, which include Great Britain, Russia, Mexico and Turkey. On the other hand the United States. Italy and Rumania are subject to the maximum tariff. The French government will request the powers to revive, during the year 1892, the treaties relating to navigation, trade marks, etc.

JACK THE RIPPER AGAIN.

Flendish Murder of a Young Woman in Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 27 .- "Jack the Ripper" is thought to have begun his work in Berlin this morning. Shortly after o'clock Hedwig Nitsche, a woman of the town living in the Holzmark strasse, was found by ner roommate upon returning from a carousal dead on the floor of her room. Nitsche's throat was cut from ear to ear. Her arms and legs had been unjointed with a knife, and the body was otherwise mutilated as was the case in the Whitechapel murders.

At about 2 o clock the night watch man and two of Nitsche's neighbors saw a well-dressed young man of about 20 years, slender figure and light com plexion. leave the house in which she had a room. ### SAILING UP THE NILE. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES GREAT DESCRIPTIVE SERMON.

flow the History of the World Hepents Itself -- A Chapter Taken From the Divine's Travels Thanksgiving Day, 1889.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 25.-The rend-BROOKLYX, N. Y., Oct. 25.—The rend-eving of the first sonata in D minor by Guilmant on the great organ of the Brooklyn Tabernacle this morning, by Frof. Henry Eyre Browne, the organ-ist, held the vast congregation spell-hound with profound emotion. Dr. "Talmage preached on "Sailing Up the Nule," the second sermon of the series, entitled "From the Pyramids of the Acropolis, or What I Saw in Egypt and Greece Confirmatory of the Scriptures." His text was Ezekiel 29:9: "The river is mine and I have made it." Aha! This is the river Nile. A

Aba! This is the river Nile. A brown, or yellow, or silver cord on which are hung more jewels of thrilling interest than on any river that was ever twisted in the sunshine. It ripples through the Book of Ezekiel, and flashes in the Books of Deuteronomy, and Isaiah, and Zechariah, and Na-hum, and on its banks stood the mighties of many ages. It was the crystal cradie of Moses, and on its banks Mary, the refugee, carried the infant Jesus. To find the birth-place of this river was the fascination and defeat of expeditions without number. Not many years ago, Bayard Taylor, our great American traveler, wrote: "Since Columbus first looked upon San Salvador, the earth has but one emotion of triumph left for her bestowal, and that she reserves for him who shall first drink from the fountain of the White Nile under the snow fields of Kilimanjaro." But the discovery of the sources of the Nile by most people was considered an impossibility. The matarias, the wild beasts, the savages, the unclimable steeps, the vast distances, stopped all the expeditions for ages. An intelli-gent native said to Sir Samuel W. Baker and wife as they were on their way to accomplish that in which others had failed: "Give up the mad scheme of the Nile source. How would it be possible for a lady young and delicate to endure . what would kill the strongest man? Give it up.' But the work went on until Speke and Grant, and Baker found the two lakes which are the source of what was called the White Nile. and baptised these two lakes with the names of Victoria and Albert. These two lakes, filled by great rain al s and by accumulated snows from the mountains, pour their waters, laden with agricult, ral wealth such as blesses no o her river.on down over the cataracts, on between frowning mountains, on between cities living and cities dead, on for four thousand miles and through a continent. But the White Nile would do little for Fgypt if this were all. It would keep its banks and hgypt would remain a desert. But from Abyssinia there comes what is called the Blue Nile, which, though this Blue Nile dashes with srdden influx into the White Nile, which in consequence rises thirty feet. and their combined waters inundate Egypt with a rich soil that drops on all the fields and gardens as it is conducted by ditches, and sluices, and can-als every whither. The greatest dam: ge that ever came to Egypt came by the drying up of the river Nile, and the greatest blessing by its healthful and abundant tow. The famine in loseph's time came from the lack of sufficient inundation from the Nile. Not enough Nile drouth, too much Nile is freshet and plague. The rivers of the earth are the mothers of its prosperity. If by some convulsion of nature the Mississippi should be taken from North America. or the Amazon from South America. the Danube from Europe, or or the Yenesei from Asia-what hemispheric calamity! Still There are other rivers that could fertilize and save these countries. Our own continent is gu'ched, is ribboned, is glorified by innumerable watercourses. But hgypt has on y one great river, and that is harnessed to draw all the prosperities of realms in acreage semi-infinite. What happens to the Nile, happens to Fgypt. The nilometer was to me very suggestive as we went up and down its damp stone steps, and saw the pillar marked with notches telling just how high or low are the waters of the Nile. When the Nile is rising, four criers every morning run through the city announcing how many teet the river has risen-ten feet, fifte n feet, twenty feet, twenty-lour feet-and when the right height of water is reached the gates of the canals are tung open and the liquid and refreshing benediction is pronounced on all the land. As we start where the Nile empties into the Mediterrannean ses we be-hold a wonderful fulfilment of the prophecy. The Nile in very ancient times used to have even mouths. As the great river approached the sea it entered the sea at the seven different places. Isaian prophesied: "The Lord shall utterly destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea and shall smite it in the seven streams." The fact is they are all destroyed but two and flerodotus said these two remaining are artificial. This ride along the Nile is one of the most solemn and impressive rides of all my ilfetime, and our emotions deepen as the curtains of the night f ll upon all surroundings. But we shall not be satisfied until we can take a ship and pass right out upon these wondrous waters and between the banks crowded with the story of empires. According to the lead pencil mark in my bible it was Thanksgiving day morning, November '8, 1889, that with my family and friends we stepped aboard the steamer on the Nile. The Mohammedan call to prayers had been sounded by the priests of that religion, the Muezzins, from the four hundred mosques of Cairo as the cry went out: "God is great. I bear wit-ness that there is no God but God. I bear witness that Mohammed is the apostle of God. Come to prayers. ome to salvation. Gcd is great There is no other but God. Prayers are Letter than sleep." The sky and city and palm groves and river shipping were bathed in the light. It was not much of a craft that we boarded. It would not be hatled on any of our held under big trees as in olden times. rivers with any rapture of admiration. It fortunately had but little speed, for twice we ran aground and the sailors jumped into the water and on their shoulders pushed her out. But what yacht of gayest sportsman, what deck of swiftest ocean queen should give such thrill of rapture as a sail on the Nile? The Pyramids in sight, the remains of cities that are now only a name, the villages thronged with pop-ulation. Bo h banks crowded with historical deeds of forty or sixty cen-turies. Oh, what a book the bible is when read on the Nile!

Nations of sepulchres. And one is tempted to call it an empire of tombs. I never saw such a place as Egypt is for graves. And now we un-derstand the complaining sarcasm of the Israelites when they were on the way from Egypt to Canaan: "Because there are no graves in Egypt hast thou taken us away to die in the wilder-ness?" Down the river bank come the buffalo and the cattle or kine to drink. And it was the ancestors of these cattle that inspired Pharaoh's dream of the lean kine and the fat kine. Here we disembark a little while for

Memphis, off from the Nile to the right. Memphis founded by the first King of Egypt and for a long while the capital. A city of marble and gold. Home of the Pharaohs. City nineteen miles in circumference. Vast colonnades through which imposing processions marched. Here stood the l'emple of the Sun, itself in brillancy a sun shone on by another sun. Thebes in, power over a thousand one hundred years, or nearly ten times as long as the United States have existed. Here is a recumbent statue seventyfive feet long. Bronzed gateways. A necropolis called "the haven of the blessed." Here Jo ph was Prime Minister. Here Pl. aoh received Jacob. All possble plendors were built up into the royal city. Hosea, Ezekiel, Jeremiah and Isaiah speak of it as something wonderful. Never did I visit a city with such exalted anticipations an 1 never did my anticipations drop so flat. Not a pillar stands. Not a wail is unbroken. Not a fountain tosses in the sun. Even the ruins have been ruined and all that remains are chips of marble, small pieces of fractured sculpture and splintered hu-man bones. Here and there a letter of some claborate inscription. a toe or ear of a statue that once stood in niche of palace wall. Ezekiel | rophesied its blotting out and the prophecy has been fulfilled. "Ride on," 1 + ... to our party "and don't wait for ...." And as I stood there alone. the ci / of Memphis in the glory of past centu. ies returned. And I heard the rush of her chariots and the dash of her fountains and the conviviality of ner palaces and saw the drunt en nobles roll on the floors of mosaic, while in startling contrast amid all the regalities of the place I saw I haraoh look up into the face of aged rustic Jacob, the shepherd, saying: "llow old art thou?"

Two great nations, Egypt and Greece, diplomatized and almost came to battle for one book, a copy of Aschylus. Ptolemy the Egyptian King dis overed that in the great library at Alexandria there was no copy of Aschylus. The Egyptian king sent up to Athens, Greece, to borrow the book and make a copy of it. Athens dedry or nearly dry half the year, under tremendous rains about the middle of rity. The Egyptian king received the mainstay of her mother and sisters book, but refused to return that which he had borrowed and so forfeited the se enteen thousand seven hundred dollars. The two nations rose in contention concerning that one book. Beautitul and mighty book indeed! But it is a book of horrors, the dominant idea that we are the victims of hereditary induences from which there is no escape, and that fato rules the world, and although the author does tell of Prome heus who was crucified on the r cks for sympathy for mank nd a powerful suggestion of the sacrifice of the ist in later years, it is a very poor book compared with that book which we hug to our hearts because it contains our only guide n life. our only comfort in death, and our only hope for a blissful immortality. If two nation; could afford to struggle for one copy of Eschylus, how much more can ali nations afford to struggie. for the possession and triamph of the ho 's scriptures' But the dead cit'es strung along the Nile not only demolish infidelity, but thunder down the absurcity of modern doctrine of evolution which says the worlds'arted with nothing and then rose, and hum n nature began with nothing lut evolved into splend d manhood and womanhood of itself. Nav; the sculpture of the world was more wonderful in the days of Memphis and Thebes and (arthage than in the days of Boston and New York Those blocks of stone weighing three hundred tons high up in the wall at Karnae imply ma hinery equal to, if not surpassing, the machinery of the ninetcenth century. How was that statue of Rameses, weighing eight hundred and eighty. seven tons, transported from the quarries two hun lred miles away and how was it lifted? Tell us, modern m chinists. How were those gatleries of rock, standing at Thetes, filled stil with paintings surpassed by no artist's penil of the present day? Tell us, artists of the nineteenth century. The dead cities of Egypt so far as they have left enough pillars, or statues, or sepulchres, or temple ruins to tell the story -Memphis Migdol, Hierapolis, Zoan, Thebes, Coshen, Carthage-all of them developing dowaward instead of upward. They have evoluted from magnificence into destruction. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is the only elevator of individual and social national character. Let all the living cities' know that pomp and opulence and temporal prosperity are not security. Those ancient cities lacked nothing bat good morals. issipation and sin slew them and unless dissipation and sin are hal ed, they will some day slay our modern cities, and leave our palaces of merchandise and our galleries ot art and our City Halls as that in the dust as we found Memphis on the afternoon of that Thanksgiving day. While sailing on this river or stopping at one of the villages. we see people on the banks who verify the bible description for they are now as they were in bible times. Shoes are now taken off in reverence to sacred places. Children carried astride the mother's shoulder as in Hagars time. Women with profusion of jewelry ts when Rebecca was affianced. Lenails shelled into the pottage. as when people making bricks without straw compelled by circumstances to use s t bble instead of straw. Hying over, or standing on the banks as in Scripture days, are flamingoes, ospreys, eagles, pelicans, herons, cuckoos and bullfishes. On all sides of this river sepulchres. Villages of sepulchres. Cities of sepulchres. I notice the voice of those ancient I notice the voice of those ancient cities is hoarse from the exposure of forty centuries, and they accentuate slowly with lips that were paised for ages, but altogether these cities along the Nile intone these words. "Hear us, for we are very old, and it is hard for us to speak. We were wise long before At'ens learned her first lesson. We sailed our ships while yet navigation was unborn. These obelisks, these, pyr-amids, these pillars, these wrecked temples, these colossi of black granite, these wrecked sarcophagi under the temples, these colossi of black granite, these wrecked sarcophagi under the brow of the hills, tell you of what I was in grandeur, and of what I am coming down to be. We sinned and fell. Our learnings could not save us: See those half obliterated hierogly-phics on worder wall phics on yonder wall. Our architec-ture could not save ns: See the painted columns of Philæ, and the shattered temple of Esneh. Our heroes could not save us: Witness Menes, Diodorous, Rameses, and Ptolemy. Our gods Ammon and Osicis Our gods Ammon and Osiris could not save us: See their fallen temples all along the four thousand miles of Nile. O, ye modern cities, get some other God; a God who can help, a God who can pardon, a tod who can save. Called up as we are for a little while to give testimony, again the sands of the desert will bury us. Ashes to ashes, dust to dust!" And as these voices of porphyry and granite ceased, all the sarcophagi under the hills responded, "Ashes to ashes!" and the capital of a lofty column fell grinding itself to powder among the rocks, and responding, "Dust to dust!"

Woolens for Young Misses,

Costumes of fancy woolens with very light grounds, gray, ecru, mastic, mushroom color. amber-brown. etc., crossed with the silkiest of shaggy bars in mixed colorings-often scarlet, green and gold-or in checks, stripes and blurred detached patterns, are made up in jaunty styles, many of them too fanciful for any but youthful wearers. Some have bodices cut on the cross. and shaped to the figure without darts, some with cuirass corselets, the high under-bodice covered with nailheads or braiding, this portion being of plain unpatterned goods. Some have velvet sleeves and velvet jacket-fronts, the long square basques reaching farther back than the sideseams of the bodice and losing themselves among the folds of the skirts in the back.

Fair Lillian as a Financier.

Lillian Russell is as shrewd about money matters as the pretty speculator in the "Parisian Romance." In the last three years her savings have averaged $10,000 a year, and beside this she is the sole proprietor of the apartment house in which she lives. Like all impulsive people, Miss Rusand contributes willingly and speedily if not lavishly to innumerable funds for the relief of unfortunate artists or waning stars.

AUDITORIUM.

The announcements relating to the ason of grand opera in French and talian which will be inaugurated at the Auditorium on Monday evening, Nov. 9, have awakened general interest. The new company of artists secured by Messrs. Abbey and Grau is generally admitted to be the strongest ver engaged for an American season. The principles include Emma Albani, Sofia Scalchi, Lillie Lehmann, Marie Van Zandt, Emma Eames, Guila Ravogli, Jean De Reszko, Edward De Reszko, Paul Kalisch and Fernando Valero.

This group of great lyric stars will be supported by a thoroughly efficient corps of artists, among whom may be noted Mlle. Marie Pettigiani, Sofia Ravogli, Mlle. Mathilda Bauermeister, Mile. Ida Klein, Mile. Jane De Vigne, Sig. Gianini-Grifoni, M. Victor Capoul, Sig. Roberto Varni, Sig. Rinaldini, Sig. Antonio Magini Co'etti, M. Jean Martapoura, Sig. Agostineo Carbone. Sig. Edoardo Canera, M. Jules Vinche, Sig. Enrico Serbolini, Sig. Lodovico and Sig. Antonio De Vaschetti.

The auxiliary forces of chorus, ballet and orchestra have been carefully organized and will be proportionably large and competent. The operas to be produced will be taken from the following repertory.

Cavalleria Risticana, Romeo Et Juliette, Faust, Lohengrin, Der Meistersinger, Les Huguenots, L'Afraceine, Le Prophete, Otello, Orfeo, Mignon, Lakme, Le Nozze Di Figaro, La Somnambula, Fra Diavolo, Il Barbiere Di Sivigilia, Dinorah, Don Giovanni, Norma, Fidelio, Lucrezia Borgia, La Juive, La Favorite.

Performances will be given every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday matinee, extending through a term of five weeks.

The season sale opened auspiciously last Monday and will continue until Saturday, Nov. 7. The single seat sale will begin next Monday. Nov. 2, at 9 o'clock. Prices for single seats have been fixed at $3. $2.50, $2, $1.50, and $1-moderate schedule considering the remarkable excellence of the company.

The management intend to produce all the operas in an incomparable style of grandeur, excelling, if possible, the memorable performances of the Patti season which opened the Auditorium in 1889. The entire company will arrive direct from Europe early next week, when rehearsals will actively commence.

M'VICKER'S THEATER.

"Sanjago," "El Petenera," "El Bolera," "Panaderos," "Caballero de Gracia," and "La Sevillana." The Vaudeville company, which has been specially engaged for Carmencita's tour, is said to be an unusually strong one, and includes John Le Clair, fantasist, equilibrist and shadowgraphist; the Wars hau brothers, boy comedians and dancers. Their act is said to be very unique and entirely new to this country. Les Toulousains Quartette from the Les Follies Berges, Paris. The great Barra Troupe, eccentric musicians. A great deal of interest is already manifest among society leaders of Chicago to see this wonderful dancer. who held New York swelldom at her feet for seventeen months in New York City. Several theater parties have been arranged for and the boxes are in great demand for the opening nights.

HAVLIN'S THEATER.

It gives Mr. Havlin no little pleasure to announce the engagement for the week, beginning with the matinee, Sunday, Nov. 1, of his own comedy company in the musical farce, "A Pair of Jacks." This will be the first appearance of this organization at Mr. Havlin's pretty and comfortable Wabash avenue theater this season, and it comes in a greatly improved form. It is entirely new, and is composed of artists of recognized merit-artists who have won both fame and praise on the comedy stage. The careful manner in which Mr. Havlin selected the different members of the organization has resulted in one of the most complete and the finest company that has appeared in farce comedy in years. At the head of the company is the popular Patrice, who has no equal in the soubrette line. Her pretty and expressive face, unusual brightness of manners, peculiar and quaint methods, and eccentricity of costumes have made this little lady a prime favorite all over the United States. She has a part in the play that fits her admirably, and gives her full scope for the display of her wonderful ability. Patrice has many warm admirers in Chicago and its suburbs, all of whom will be glad to welcome her back to the scenes of her many triumphs. As for "A Pair of Jacks," it will be remembered as one of the latest and best of musical comedies, and as one of the very few that merits the patronage of the public. The title of the play has reference to a doctor and a lawyer whose last names are Jack, and who rent the same apartment unknown to each other. The similarity of names result in a series of complications and misunderstandings that cause no end of fun. The other characters in the play all aid and abet in fun-making, and all who witness the performance are simply convulsed with laughter. The mirth-provoking 8:15. Great success. Our new descenes are interrupted at intervals with songs, dances and other pleasing specialties, all of which are new, original and of the most pleasing Music by Russian ochestra. description. It can, in conclusion, be groups, pictures, etc. said in all honesty, that the patrons of Havlin's cozy theater will find in "A Pair of Jacks" a play that is a source of great pleasure. while the performance as given by Mr. Havlin's superb company will be found to be a sure cure for the "blues," and to make one forget his troubles for one night at least.

The Gulliver of the cast will be the big tenor, Harry DeLorme. Matinees for the special benefit of the children will be given on Wednesday and Saturday. Following the "Midgets" comes Miss Fanny Rice in "A Jolly Surprise."

JACOBS' CLARK STREET THEATER.

Commencing next Sunday matinee. Nov. 1, the first Irish comedy drama of the season will be presented. "The sat in his study in deep conversation. Dear Irish Boy" is a play which abounds in tragic and sensational incidents, largely mixed with that mirth which is as indispensable a factor from Irish character as the sparkle from champagne. The interest is sustained from start to finish, and it is with sorrow that we take leave of the characters in the play. The piece is beautifully staged, and contains some of the handsomest and most elaborate scenic efferts ever produced. The view of the ruins of Dare triumphs of art and scenic effect. It is rarely that anything more beautiful is witnessed.

"The Dear Irish Boy" differs from other alleged plictures of life and doings on the Emerald Isle, because its leading character is not a young." goud-looking, sweet s nging and graceful dancing and green-stock, inged fellow, with plenty of nerve. Mike McClutchey is the name of the "star" character, and Mike is not the kind of a fellow one would care to be associated with. He isn't the dear Irish boy. The play is composed of a series of dramat c sit. uations and comedy scenes which follow each other in rapid succession. There's a murder, accusations, persecu ious, and a sprinkling of good dancing and singing. the whole forming an enteresting enterta nment. Gus Reynolds assumes the role of Vic-Clutchey and does some elfe tive work. Son is and dances are liberally in-

How a Farmer Was Rewarded for Kindneis to a Boy.

When Captain Alva Bradley was twenty years old he heard of a circus at Elyria and determined to go, says the Cleveland Plaindealer. Money was scarce, but the temptation was so very strong that young Alva determined to go if he had to walk all the way. He went by a tie pass, but when he reached his Mecca he found the admission to be 50 cents, and he had 25. He was too big to be admitted as a boy and too proud to sneak his way in, so he stood outside disconsolately and looked at the flaming posters prodigally displayed about the grounds. While walking aimlessly about he was found by an old farmer, a neighbor of his at home.

"Well, Alvy, my boy," said the farmer, "ain't you going in?"

"Nop," he answered. "I just came to look at the pictures."

But the old man was lonesome and wanted company, and on that plea succeeded in inducing the young man to enter the enchanted place. So "Alvy" saw the show and carried his quarter back home with him.

Long afterward, one winter evening, when the boy Alva had grown to be a wealthy shipping merchant, he with Captain Stone. The door bell rang and the servant admitted to their presence an old, white-haired, stoopshouldered man.

"I wanted to see my boy Alvy once again." he began. .. but you don't know me, do you, boy; you don't remember the old man who took you to the circus once?"

The tears came to the captain's eyes as he recognized in the aged man the kind benefactor of his youth. He extended to him a cordial welcome, and Castle by moonlight, are veritable they sat together all the evening roviewing the years since last they met. for fortune had not been kind to the old man; his home had been removed to the far west and he had found it a hard struggle to get the necessaries of life. As he was about to leave an envelope was thrust into his hands and he heard the words in the captain's trembling voice, .Here's the money you took me to the circus with when I was a boy, and a little more as interest which it has gathered all these years."

The old man was overcome with surprise and could not e press his thanks. but when he reached home he opened the paper and found it contained a check for $500-40 cents for the circus ticket and the rest for interest.

THE fight which has been made on detective Chas. Spierling by an official of the 15th ward has had anything but the effect desired by its instigator. Mr. Spierling's friends, and they include every business man along Milwaukee avenue and adjacent streets, and all reputable citizens, are indignant at hitransfer, and are unanimously of the opinion that it is a political scheme, pure and simple. The fact that no direct charge has been brought against him and that he is denied the privilege of appearing before an invistigating board is conclusive evidence that his transfer was unwarranted. Such action as this shows poor generalship, and already has greatly injured one of the two most concerned-and that one is not Mr. Spierling.

THE voters of this county will be called on Tuesday to say whether they will give their assent to a proposition to refund county bonds to the among of $1,850,000 which fall due May 1st next. These are what are known as fire bonds. They were issued by the County Board to raise money with which to replace buildings which had been destroyed by the great fire and have drawn 7 per cent interest. The county will not have the money on hand next May to pay them, so it is proposed that they be extended for another term of twenty years. But it is believed that there will be no difficulty about converting them into 4 per cents. So the proposition is simply to cu down the rate of interest on $1,350,000 3 per cent a year and save $40,500. Every voter should make his "X' mark in the affirmative and help in doing a little economizing.

BUTHOR OF HIN BARKCAY) : CHAPTER XI-CONTINU D.

"Why are you so silent?" Unorna asked after a time.

"I was thinking of you," he answered, with a smile. "And since you forbade me to speak of you, I said nothing."

"How literal you are!" she exclaimed, impatiently.

"I could see no figurative application of your words," he retorted, beginning to be annoyed at her prolonged ill-humor.

"Perhaps there was none." "In that case-"

"Oh, do not argue! I detest argument in all shapes, and most of all when I am expected to answer it. You cannot understand me- you never will-" She broke off, suddenly and looked at him.

She was angry with him, with herself, with everything, and in her anger she loved him tenfold better than before. Had he not been blinded by his own absolute coldness, he must have read her heart in the look she gave him, for his eyes met hers. But he saw nothing.

He took her hand and then left her, wondering exceedingly over a matter which was of the simplest.

It was some time before Unorna realized that he was gone.

She grew calmer when she found herself alone, but in a manner she grew also more desperate. A resolution began to form itself in her mind which she would have despised and driven out of her thoughts a few hours earlier; a resolution destined to lead to strange results. She began to think of resorting once more to a means other than natural in order to influence the man she toyed.

"What does it matter how, if only he is mine!" she' exclaimed, fiercely, as she rose from her carved chair an hour after he had left her consequences," he sa'd, stopping before her and speal ing earnestly and quietly.

"We remembered everything, ezcept that our wandering friend and Kafka were very likely to meet, and that Kafka would in all probability refer to his delightful journey to the south in my country."

"That is true!" exclaimed Unorna with an anxious glance. "Well, what have you done?"

"I met the Wanderer in the street. What could I do? I told him that Israel Kafka was a little mad, and that this harmless delusion referred to a journey he was supposed to have made with me, and to an equally im-aginary passion which he fancies he feels for you."

"That was wise," said Unorna, still pale. How came we to be so imprudent! One word, and he might have suspected-"

"No danger there," he answered. "Your witchcraft is above criticism. Nothing of the kind that you have ever undertaken has failed."

"Except against you," said Unorna. thoughtfully.

"Except against me, of course. How could you ever expect anything of the kind to succeed against me, my dear lady."

"And why not? After all, in spite of our jesting. you are not a supernatura! being.'

"That depends entirely on the interpretation you give to the word supernatural. Your influence is a direct one, chiefly exercised by means of your words and through the impression of power which you know how to convey in them. It is marvelous, I admit. But the very definition puts me beyond your power."

"Why?"

Because there is not a human being alive, and I do not believe that a human being ever lived. who had the sense of independence individually that I have. Let a man have the very smallest doubt concerning his own independence-let that doubt be ever so transitory and produced by any accident whatsoever-and he is shall hardly see you again today. I at your mercy.

"And you are sure that no accident could shake your faith in yourself-"

"My consciousness of myself, you mean. No. I am not sure. But, my dear Unorna, 1 am very careful in guarding against accidents of all forts, for I have attempted to resuscitate a great many dead people, and I never have succeeded, and I know that a false step on a slippery staircase may be quite as fatal as a teaspoonful of prussic acid-or an unrequited passion. I avoid all these things and many others. If I did not. and if you had any object in getting me under your influence, you would succeed sooner or later. Perhaps the day is not far distant when I will yoluntarily sleep under your hand."

Unorna glanced quickly at him. "And in that case," he added. "I am sure you could make me believe

The London Lancet denounces as false the doctrine that abundant hair is a sign of bodily or mental strength in man. It says that despite the Sampson precedent the Chinese are mostly bald. yet they form the most enduring of races. The average mad house furnishes proof that long and thick hair is not a sign of intellectuality. The easily wheedled Esau was hairy, while the mighty Cæsar was bald. "Long haired men are generally weak and fasatical, and men with scant hair are the philosophers and statesmen and soldiers of the world," it concludes though of course to this rule there are many exceptions.

In Unorna he had found the instrument he had sought throughout a lifetime. With her he had tried the great experiment and pushed it to the very end; and when he conducted Israel Kafka to his home, he already knew that the experiment had succeeded. His plan was a simple one. He would wait a few months longer for the final result; he would select his victim, and with Unorna's help he would grow young again. Then he wrapped his furs around him and went out again. Scarce a hundred paces from Unorna's door he met the Wanderer. He looked up into the cold, calm face, and put out his hand, with a greeting. "You look as though you were in a very peaceful frame of mind," observed Keyork.

month of life. Thirty days were gone as in the flash of a second, and with them was gone also something less easily replaced, or, at least, more certainly missed. In Kafka's mind the passage of time was accounted for in a way which would have seemed supernatural twenty years ago, but which at the present day is understood in practice, if not in theory. For thirty days he had been stationary in one place, almost motionless, an instrument in Keyork's skillful hands, a mere reservoir of vitality upon which the sage had ruthlessly drawn to the fullest extent of its capacities. He had been fed and tended in his unconsciousness, he had, unknown to himself, opened his eyes at regular intervals, and had absorbed through his ears a series of vivid impressions destined to disarm his suspicions when he was at last allowed to wake and move about the world again. With unfailing forethought Keyork had planned the details of a whole series of artificial reminiscences. and at the moment when Kafka came to himself in the carriage the machinery of memory began to work as Keyork had intended that it should. Israel Kafka leaned back against the cushions and reviewed his life during the past month. He remembered very go there in these days." well the afternoon when, after a stormy interview with Uporna, he had been persuaded by Keyork to accompany the latter upon a rapid southward journey. #### A Pension Decision, Assistant Secretary Bussy has reversed the decision of the Commissioner of Pensions on the appeal of Jane M. Smalley, now Greenhorn, widow of Richard T. Smalley, Co. F. 60th Illinois. The record of the case shows that the soldier was accidentally wounded by the Lieutenant of his company in 1862, and died in January, 1863, of abscess of the lungs, which, according to the medical testimony, resulted as a sequence of the wound. The Commissioner of Pensions rejected the claim on the ground that the soldier was not in line of duty at the time he received the wound; but the Assistant Secretary in his opinion holds that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, it must be assumed that he was in the performance of his duty, as it was customary for soldiers during the war to go on short expeditions. This decision is in harmony with the line of precedents of the Department.

Von Moltke and Napoleon.

The Paris correspondent of the Times relates a hitherto unpublished story about Count Von Moltke During the count's visit to the Paris exposition in 1867 with the emperor and Prince Bismarck he dined one day at St. Cloud with Emperor Napoleon. and in the talk after dinner Napoleon told Marshal Randon, the minister of war, that Von Moltke claimed to be able to fight the French army with the needle gun. Marshal Randon laughed aloud and in a voice in which all in the room could hear responded: "Pardon me, general, but in spite of the high opinion I have of your judgment. I am unable to share your belief."

After the departure of Emperor William Napoleon was so struck with the words of the tactiturn strategist that he busied himself in overhauling the equipment of the French army. the result being the adoption of the Chassepot gun.-Cincinnati Times.

We were ordered to charge in column of fours on their artillery. which was in position and supported by cavalry. As we neared the cannon the enemy broke and ran, except one officer, who foolishiy refused to surrender and therefore was cut down. After passing the cannon the command broke, the one idea of each man being to save himself. While running after the Johnnies, most of whom were dismounted and unarmed, when we came up to them they would call out. "I surrender: don't shoot me." I had just emerged from the wood and struck the road with two of my command when Col.

Minty, commander of the First Brigade came up with two of his aids and said to me, "Orderly, where do you belong?" To which I replied. "To the Second Brigade, Second Division.' He then asked, "Where is the rest of your command?" I replied, "This is all I know anything about. Where is the First Brigade?" He smiled and and said, "This is all of the First Brigade that I know anything about."

As the men emerged from the woods we reformed, and I was placed in command of Companies B and D, and ordered to hold the ridge until the command moved out of sight. they taking our horses with them; then we were to follow up. We took our position behind a couple of log houses and some apple trees, and held it until the enemy drove us away. While running we fired to the rear, making all the noise we could. 'The regiment, hearing the racket, formed their line in a cleared field. As we ran we came to what appeared to be a small stream, but, owing to the recent rain, had me? I learned afterward that they

The Soldier's Nobility.

The world-famous raconteur, Thomas P. Ochiltree, is never at a loss to adorn an otherwise commonplace conversation with a story of thrilling adventure, narrow escape or humorous incident. Recently a number of men were telling of narrow escapes, when the Colonel told of a close place he got into as follows:

"Gentlemen, I was with Gen. Dick Taylor when he operated against Gen. Banks in the trans-Mississippi department. It was shortly after the battle of Pleasant Hill, and Banks was retreating to Grand core. One day we got . ear Gen. Banks' army and Gen. Taylor asked me to head a squadron of cavalry and charge. I was mounted on a coal black horse. and when I rode out to take command of the squadron I never thought to come back from the charge alive. We had to charge across an open field, a distance of one and one-half miles. I drew my sword, put spurs in my horse's sides and dashed forward, ordering the cavalry to follow. Some twenty thousand of Banks' infantry were drawn up in line just on the edge of the field awaiting an attack. Of course when I started I did not know that 20,000 men were awaiting to give a warm welcome to a handful of cavalry. When within 300 yards of the Federals, I raised in my stirrups and yelled to the squadron to follow me. I expected to hear each cavalryman yell, but to my dismay ali was silent. I turned to look, when, horror upon horror! the squadron was over a mile from me in swift retreat! I had been riding across the field alone, thinking they were right behind me. They had evidently seen the thousands waiting to pour a storm. of shot into us and had retreated, but I did not see them as I am near-sighted. Of course I saw them when I yelled. A gleam of bayonets extended for miles in front of me. My horse trembled. I held my breath expecting to be mowed down in a second. Turning my horse I rode leisurely back and not a shot was fired at me. My horse died with nervous prostration half an hour after I got back.

At daybreak we crossed a stream swollen and running so rapidly that we could not go straight across, but would start in above the ford in order to come out at the proper landing. It was reported that there were several herses carried down this stream and lost. When we came to the landing there we found Gen. Kilpatrick standing waist deep in the water taking the horses by the

One of the First to Die.

Of the many monuments that now dot the battlefield of Gettysburg none attract; more attention than that erected to the memory of Maj.-Gen. John F. Reynolds. He was one of the first victims to fall in that bloody struggle, which began on July 1. 1863. Gen. Reynolds was a veteran who had been in the thickest of the fight many a time before. In the Mexican war he won the brevets for captain and major for gallant and meritorious conduct at Monterey and Buena Vista. He was at Mechaniesville, at Gaines' mill, at Savage station, at Charles City cross-roads, where he was taken prisoner. Upon his release he rejoined his comrades. and took part in the first buttle of Fredericksburg. In all these severe contests he faced death repeatedly but escaped unharmed. At Gettysburg he was in command of the three corps constituting the right wing of Hooker's army. By order of that general he was hastening forward in advance of the Union troops. All went well until he suddenly found himself confronted by the van of Lee's army. His own force numbered about 3,000 men; the enemy had three times as many. Nevertheless he bravely brought them into action and was apparently leading them into victory when he fell. In a grove in front of him the Confederates had posted a large number of sharpshooters, who were giving his troops considerable annoyance. He determined to reconnoiter and see if it was not possible to dislodge them. Dismounting from his horse he went forward and approached a fence over which he looked in the direction of the wood. At that moment he was struck in the neck by a rifle ball, and falling upon his face, died in a few moments.

Altogether Different.

Gen. Thomas was greatly beloved among the private soldiers. As Napoleon became the Little Corporal of his army, so was this man affectionately remembered as ... Old Pap Thomas " by the Army of the Cumberland. He was always ready to do the "little kindnesses" which go straight to the popular heart, and once, when he had refused a boon, was reproved in a way which decidedly amused him.

A private soldier who was very homesick went to headquarters to abtain leave of absence. The general asked him why he wasted a furlough.

Died-Monday, Oct. 26th, Officer John Habrohan at his residence, 52 Augusta street, of typhoid fever, after an illness of but eight days. Offices Hanrohan was 59 years of age and became a member of the Police Department Oct. 11, 1870, and at the time of his death was stationed at the 29th precinct, West North avenue. He leaves a wife and family to mourn his loss.

He was buried Wednesday at Calvary and many o' his fellow officers accompanied him to his last resting place. The procession was preceded by a battal-ion of officers and behind the officers came a band playing a dirge; then tollowed a carriage containing the floral pieces, prominent among which was a very beautiful one, presented by his fellow-officers. The hearse escorted by six officers and a large number of carriages containing relatives anu friends of the dead man, completed the last march of the beloved officer.

Many stores on Milwaukee avenue have lately been visited by bnrglars especially the stores belonging to C. Eric'son, L Kaufmann, and Henry Steinbock, from whom they have stolen over $1000.00. Last Wednesday a couple of policemen from North avenue station, found hidden under a sidewalk on Park street, near Robey, some dry goods, silks, etc. They concluded to lay on the watch for the thieves. About 7:30 a woman with a valise and two men come. Constables De Wall and Gleason immediately attempted to catcu them. They caught the woman but the m n managed to escape, even though the police shot repeatedly after them. The woman was taken to the Chicago avenue station. Here she at last confessed to be guilty, furthermore, that her name was Mrs. Anna Gueskie and that she lived with her busband, (who is a hard working man) on 364 N. Ash-land avenue. Many of the stolen articles were found in her home. People generally are reluctant about visting dentel offices because of the severe ains they suffer while there; or because heis pecuniary means is such as will not permit high prices. Well, this announce-ment will cordially invite you to an office where these undesirable barriers are removed, since the first-class dental work done here will not only be reasonable in prrice, but also painless.
