It is a relief to pick up a new book that 14 at once thrilling. romantic, wholesome. pure and true. Such a work is "Footprints of the World's History," the latest and greatest work of the two celebrated historians, John Clark Ridpath and William. S Bryan. These distinguished gentlemen. having won their laurels by independent writhings, having co-operated on this work, and produced a gem "of the purest ray serene," It is not a dry, uninteresting statement of the plain facts, but rather each of the most important events of history has been taken up and described by a master of language, who holds the reader entranced as he wends his way along the path of history, following carefully in the footprints of progress, We are delighted with this superb vol ume. Perfect in thought, suberb in style and magnificent in execution. The bindings are sumptuous, as are also the many illustrations and colored plates, The Publishers have rightly concluded that such a gem should have a rich setting.

It is a valuable addition to literature. It is a book for the old as well as the young. the married as well as the single; the gay as well as the grave. Everybody will read it with equal eagerness and profit; It is sold only through agens, and the Publishers' advertisement eppears in another column-[Christian Record, Reading, Pa.

A WONDERFUL EXHIBITION.

One of the greatest places of interest to be seen by visitors to Chicago is the Libby Frison War Museum, which is open daily (Sundays included) from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. But few people realiz; what an enormous project it was to remove that historical old structure from Richmond to Chicag ane rebuild it exactly as it stood in Dixie Land. It contains 900,000 bricks, its dimensions outside are 130x110 ieet and it is four stories high, and notwithstanding its great size it does not deviate an inch as it stands in Chicago today, from its original proportions in Richmond. It overflowing with wonderful, interesting and valuable relics of the late war. In fact, it is the most extensive museum of the kind in the world, and nearly a half million dollars have been expended in establishing it. It has the honor of showing to the public the first exhibit to arrive in Chicago for the World's Fair-Sir Antonio Moro's original life size oil portrait of Christopher Columbus, painted at the Court of Spain in 1543 for Margaret, Queen of the Netherlands, and conceded to be the only authentic portrait of the great navigator extant. ABERDEEN, S. D., Nov. 20.—George G. He says the business departments of the Alliance in twenty or more States have united with leading business men of New York city and formed a company similar in its plan of operation to the celebrated Rochdale system in England and the Zion co-operative stores in Utah. 'The organization has large means at its command. It is claimed the advantages to the Alliance are tenfold, at least. It will have the business ability and experience of some of the shrewdest men in the nation at its back, while there will, apparently, be plenty of capital to meet any emergency which may arise and to push the business as circumstances permit. In return the Alliance will give the organization its patronage.

UNCLE SAM INVESTIGATING.

Charges Made that the Alum Cave Operators Violated the Labor Law.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 21.-Advices from the troubled Alum Cave mining district are to the effect that all was quiet, the citizens' mob of Wednesday having dispersed. The feeling remains strong, however, against putting the Poles to work, and there is likely to be further trouble if the operators insist on working the foreigners. The miners' committee is still waiting for General Manager Seiffert to appear to get the final decision of the operators as to the Poles. Immigration Commissioner Kelley, who was sent by the government to the mines to see if the alien contract labor law had been violated by the importation of the Poles, was at the Alum Cave mines to-day colecting evidence. The operators claim that miners at Perth and at the Eureka however, is as confident of ultimate victory for the miners as ever.

This is an important event in the history of the nation and the civilized man—there has been no precedent for it in any of the last ages. The producing classes have hitherto remained impoverished in the midst of the plenty which they created. The producing classes of the United States are the nation-all others simply live by the toils imposed by the industry of the workers. We make no war upon the nonproducers as such. Some of them exports for the crop year thus far are render the people a full equivalent of but slightly less than a year ago, stocks services for all they receive; others are at principal ports are 1,200,000 bales, robbers and plunderers who, through the against 600,000 last year at the same imperfection of our laws, strip toil of date, its possessions and do not go to the penitentiary.

The people have beheld with growing alarm the continual advance of conditions which every day have carried us farther and farther away from the principles and traditions of the founders of the republic and nearer and nearer to ports for November thus far are about an abyss in which we can see only the separation of a crushing oligarchy or the dreadful alternative of revolution to be settled by other countries in and anarchy. It is for the purpose of saving free institutions, by the peaceful instrumentalities of education and the ballot, that the People's party of the United States has been organized.

The people perceive that there is room in this country for only two political parties-a party which represents the people and a party which represents the plunderers of the people. Before the close of the election of 1892 we expect to see the two old parties, with all their banners and war-cries, marching and hurrahing together in defense of the iniquities which have The National Executive Committee Recovered the land with mortgages and driven the republic to the verge of destruction. Already the asperities of the past have ceased between them and their campaigns have become the sweet interchange of courtesies between lovers rather than the fierce onslaught of warriors contending for opposing principles.

Business Confidence Good Despite Cur rent Events

NEW YORK, Nov. 21 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade will say: Much has happened of late to repress business and shake confidence, and yet confidence is not shaken, and the volume of business is still close to the greatest ever attained. Prices are settling downward with enormous production, but the fact that such production continues shows that the low prices are not ruinous. Alarm about the money market has passed, and no disturbance is apprehended this year. Industries are, on the whole, well employed, and it is especially noteworthy this week that there is a better tone in branches of trade which have been most embarrassed.

l'almage Draws a Comparison Between Acropolis and Acropagus Hills-Truths of the Latter Live, the Idolatries of the Former Dead.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 22. - It seemed as if morning would never come. We had arrived after dark in Athens, Greece, and the night was sleepless with expectation, and my watch slowly announced to me one and two and three and four o'clock; and at the first ray of dawn, I called our party to look out of the window upon that city to which Paul said he was a debtor, and to which the whole earth is debtor for Greek architecture, Greek sculpture, Greek poetry, Greek eloquence, Greek prowess and Greek history. That morning in Athens we sauntered forth armed with most generous, and lovely letters from the President of the United States, and his Secretary of State, and during all of our stav in that city those letters caused every door and every gate and every temple and every palace to swing open before us. We pass through where stood the Agora, the ancient market-place, the locality where philosophers used to meet their disciples, walking while they talked, and where Paul the Christian logician flung many a proud Stoic, and got the laugh on many an impertinent Epicurean. But before we make our chief visits of to-day we must take a turn at the Stadium. It is a little way out, but'go we must. The Stadium was the place where the foot-races We come now to the Acropolis. It is a rock about two miles in circumference at the base and 1,000 feet in circumference at the top, and 300 feet high. On it has been crowded more elaborate architecture and sculpture than in any other place under the whole heavens. Originally a fortress, afterward a congregation of temples and statues and pillars, their ruins an enchantment from which no observer ever breaks away. No wonder that Aristides thought it the center of all things-Greece the center of the world: Attica the center of Greece: Athens, the center of Attica, and the Acropolis the center of Athens. Earthquakes have shaken it; Verres plundered it.

The Turks turned the building into a powder magazine where the Venetian guns dropped a fire that by explosion sent the columns flying in the air and falling cracked and splintered. But after all that time and storm and war and iconoclasm have effected, the Acropolis is the monarch of all ruins, and before it bow the learning, the genius, the poetry, the art, the history of the ages. I saw it as it was thousands of years ago.

Youder behold the pedestal of Agrippa, twenty-seven feet high and twelve feet square. But the overwas ten times me saluable than now, it cost $4,600,000. It is a Doric grandeur, having forty-seven columns, each column thirty-four feet high and six feet two inches in diameter. Wondrous intercolumniations! Painted porticos, architraves tinged with ochre, shields of gold hung up, lines of most delicate curve, figures of horses and men and women and gods, oxen on the way to sacrifice, statues of the deities Dionysius, Prometheus, Hermes, Demeter. Zeus, Hera, Poseidon; in one frieze twelve divinities; centaurs in battle; weaponry from Marathon; charlot of night; charlot of fates, the furies; statue of Jupiter halding in his right hand the thunderbolt silver-footed chair in which Xerxes watched the battle of Salamis only a few miles away. Here is the colossal statue of Minerva in full armor, eyes of gray-colored stone; figure of a Sphinx, on her head, griffins by her side (which are lions with eagle's beak), spear in one hand, statue of Liberty in the other, a shield carved with battle scenes, and even the slippers sculptured, and tied on with thongs of gold. Far out at sea the sailors saw the statue of Minerva rising high above all the temples, glittering in the sun. Here are statues of equestrians, statue of a lioness, and there are the Graces, and yonder a horse in bronze. There is a statue said in the time of Augustus to have of its own accord turned around from east to west and spit blood: statues made out of shields conquered in battle; statue of Apollo, the expeller of locusts: statue of Anacreon. drunk and singing; statue of Olympodorus, a Greek, memorable for the fact that he was cheerful when others were cast down, a trait worthy of sculpture. But walk on and around the Acropolis and yonder you see a statue of Hygeia. and the statue of Theseus fighting the Minotaur and the statue of Hercules slaying serpents. No wonder that Petronius said that it was easier to find a god than a man in Athens. Oh, the Acropolis! The most of its temples and statues made from the marble quarries of Mount Pestelicum, a little and Æschylus, and Pericles, and Phiway from the city. I have here on my table a block of the Parthenon made out of this marble, and on it is the sculpture of Phidias. I brought it from the Acropolis. This speci-men has on it the dust of ages, and the marks of explosion and battle, but you can get from it some idea of the delicate lustre of the Acropolis great ocean of time. We next hasten down the Acropolis to ascend the Areppagus, or Mars Hill, as it is called. It took only about of his shoulders, and he looks about three minutes to walk the distance, and the two hill tops are so near that and his eyes, which were quiet, bewhat I said in religious discourse on came two flames of fire, and his face, Mars Hill was heard distinctly by which was calm in the introduction, some English gentlemen on the now depicts a whirlwind of emotion Acropolis. This Mars Hill is a rough as he ties the two thunderbolts topile of rock fifty feet high. It was gether with a cord of inconsumable famous long before New Testame at courage and hurls them at the crowd times. The Persians easily and terri-bly assaulted the Acropolis from this two thunderbolts of Resurrection and one of emotion, it must have been one of cool justice. But there was one occasion on this hill memorable above all others. A little man, physically weak, and his rhertoric described by himself as contemptible, had by his sermons rocked Athens with commotion, and he was summoned either by writ of law or hearty invitation to come upon that pulpit of rock and give a specimen of his theology. All the wiseacres of Athens turned out and turned up to hear him. The more venerable of them sat in an amphitheatre, the granite seats of which are still visible. but the other people swarmed on all sides of the hill and at the base of it to hear this man, whom some called a fanatic, and others called a madcap, and others a blasphemer, and others styled contemptuously "this fellow." Paul arrived in answer to the writ or invitation and confronted them and gave them the biggest dose that mortals ever took. He was so built that nothing could scare him, and as for Jupiter and Athenia, the god and the goddess, whose imagines were in full sight on the adjoining hill, he had not so much regard for them as he had for the ant that was crawling in the sand under his feet. In that audience were the first orators of the world, and they had voices like flutes when they were passive and like trumpets when they were aroused, and I think they laughed in the sleeves of their gowns as this insignificant-looking man rose to speak. In that audience were Scholiasts, who knew everything. or thought they did, and from the end of the longest hair on the top of their craniums to the end of the nail on the longest toe, they were stuffed with hypercriticism and they leaned back with a supercilious look to listen. As in 1889, I stood on that rock where Paul stood, and a slate of which I brought from Athens by consent of the Queen, through Mr. Tricoupis, the prime minister, and had placed in yonder memorial wall, I read the whole story, bible in hand.

What I have so far said in this discourse was necessary in order that you may understand the boldness, the defiance, the holy recklessness, the magnificence of Paul's speech. The first thunderbolt he launched at the opposite hill—the Arcopolis—the moment all aglitter with idols and temples. He cries out, "God who made the world." Why, they thought that Promethus made it, that Mercury made it, that Apollo mide it, that Posedion made it, that Eros made it, that Pani ocus made it, that Boreas made it, that it took all the gods of the Parthenon, yea, a.l the gods and goddesses of the Acropolis to make it, and here stands a man without any ecclesiastical title, neither a D. D., nor even a reverend, declaring that the world was made by the Lord of heaven and earth, and hence the inference that all the splendid covering of the Acropolis, so near that the people standing on the steps of the Parthenon could hear it, was a deceit, a falsehood, a sham, a blasphemy. Look at shadowing wonder of all the hill is the faces of his auditors; they are turning pale, and then red, and There had been several earthquakes in that region; but that was the severest shock these men had ever felt. The Persians had bombarded the Acropolis from the heights of Mars Hill, but this Pauline bombardment was greater and more terrific. "What," said his hearers, "have we been hauling with many yokes of oxen for centuries these blocks from the quarries of Mount Pentelicum, and have we had our architects putting up these structures of unparalleled splendor, and have we had the greate t of all sculptors, Phidias, with his men, chiseling the morning: horses of the sun, the away at those wondrous pediments, and cutting away at these friezes, and have we taxed the nation's resources to the atmost, now to be told that those statues see nothing, hear nothing, know nothing?" Oh, Paul, stop for a moment and give these startled and overwhelmed auditors time to catch breath. Make a rhetorical pause! Take a look around you at the interesting landscape, and give your hearers time to recover. No, he does not make even a period, or so much as a colon, but launches the se ond thunderbolt right after the first, and in the same breath goes on to say: God "dwelleth not in temples made with hands." Oh, Paul, is not deity mo e in the Parthenon, or more in the Theseum, or more in the Erechtheium, or more in the temple of Zeus Olympins than in the open air, more than on the hill where we are sitting more than on Mount Hymettus out yonder, from which the bees get their honey. "No more!" responds Faul, "He dwelleth not in temples made with hands."

In the same breath he launches the third thunderbolt, which, to them, is more flery, more terrible, more demolishing than the others, as he cries out, "nath made of one blood all nations." Oh, Paul! you forget you are speaking to the proudest and most exclusive audience in the world. Do not say "of one blood," You cannot mean that Had Socrates, and Plato and Demosthenes and Solon, and Lycurgus, and Draco, and Sophocles, and Euripedes, dias, and Miltiades' blood just like the Persians, like the Turks. like the Egyptians, like the common herd of humanity? "Yes," says Paul, "of one

p ood, all nations. Surely that must be the closing peragraph of the sermon. His auditors must be let up from the nervous strain. Paul has smashed the Aeropolis and smashed the national pride of the Greeks, and what more can he say? Those Grecian orators, standing on that place, always closed their addresses with something sublime and climacteric. a peroration, and Parl is shown as though it were an aerolite going to give them a peroration which cast off from the noonday sun. The will eclipse in power and majesty all temples must have looked like petrified that he has yet said. Heretofore he foam. The whole Acropolis must have has hurled one thunderbolt at a time: now, he will close by hurling two at once. The little old man, under the power of his speech, has straightened himself up, and the stoop has gone out three teet taller than when he began,

WHERE ST. PAUL STOOD judges could not be seen, nor the in righteousnes by that man whom he hath given faces of the lawyers who made the hath ordained; whereof he hath given plea, and so, instead of a trial being assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead." Remember those thoughts were to them novel and provocative; that Christ, the despised Nazarene, would come to be their judge, and they should have to get up out of their cemeteries to stand before him and take their eternal doom. Mightnest burst of elocutionary power ever heard. The ancestors of some of those Greeks had heard Demosthenes in his oration on the crown, had heard Æschines in his speeches against Timarchus and Ctesiphon, had heard Plato in his great argument for immortality of the soul, had heard Socrates on his deathsuicidal cup of hemlock in bed. hand, leave his hearers in emotion too great to bear, had in the theater of Dionysius at the foot of the Acropolis (the ruins of its piled-up ampitheater and the marble moor of its orchestra still there) seen enacted the tragedies of Æschylus and Sophoeles, but neither had the ancestors of these Grecians on Mars Hill, or themselves, ever heard or witnessed such tornadoes of moral power as that with which Paul now whelmed his hearers. At those two thoughts of Resurrection and Judgment the audience sprang to their feet. Some moved they adjourn to some other day to hear more on the same theme, but others would have torn the sacred orator to pieces. The record says, "Some mocked." I suppose it means that they mimicked the sciemnity of his voice, that they took off his impassioned gesticulation, and they cried out, "Jew! Jew! Where d.d you study rhetoric? You ought to hear our orators speak! You had better go back to your business of tent making Our Lycurgus knew more in a minute than you will know in a month. Say, where did you get that crooked back, and those weak eyes from? Ha! Ha! You try to teach us Grecians! What nonsense you talk about when you speak of resurrection and judgment Now, little old mon, climb down the side of Mars Hill and get out of sight as soon as possible." Some mocked."
But that seene adjourned to the day of which the sacred orator had spokenthe day of resurrection and judgment. As in Athens that evening in 1889, we climbed down the pile of slippery rocks, where all this had occurred, on our way back to our hotel, I stood half-way between the Acropolis and Mars Hill in the gathering shadows of eventide, I seemed to hear those two hills in sublime and awful converse "I am chiefly of the past," said the Acropolis. "I am chiefly of the future," replied Mars Hill. The ...cropolis said: "My orators are dead. My law givers are dead. My poets are dead. My architects are dead. My sculptors are dead. I am a monument of the dead past. I shall never again hear a song sung. I will never again see a column lifted. I will never again behold a goddess crowned." Mars Hill responded:

"I, too, have had a history. I had on my heigh s warriors who will never again unsheath the sword, and judges who will never again atter a doom, and orators who will never again make a in the tuture than it ever was in the The words that missionary, Paul, uttered that exciting day in the hearing of the wisest men and the populace on my rocky shoulders, have only begun their majestic roll; the Tarsian orator closed his sermon that day amid the mocking crowd, shall yet revolutionize the planet. Oh, Acropolis! I have stood here long enough to witness that your gods are never evoked a musical note. Your god Ceres never grew a harvest. Your goddess of wisdom, Minerva, never knew the Greek alphabet. Your Jupiter could not handle the lightnings. But the God whom I proclaimed on the day when Paul preached before the astonished assemblage on my rough heights, is the God of music, the God of wisdom, the Goa of power, the God of mercy, the God of love, the God of storms, the God of sunshine, the God of the land, and the God of the sea, the God over all, blessed forever." Then, the Acropolis spake and said, as though in self-defense: "My Plato argued for the immortality of the soul, and my Socrates Marathon drove back the Persian oppressors." "Yes," said Mars Hill. your Plato labor ously guessed at the immortality of the soul, but my Paul divinely inspired, declared it as a fact straight from God. Your Socrates prais d virtue but expired as a suicide. Your Miltiades was brave against earthly fors, yet died from a wound ignominously gotten in after-defeat. But my Paul challenged allearth and all hellwith this battle shout: 'We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places, and then on the 19th of June, in the year di, on the road to Cstia, after the sword of the headsman had given one keen stroke.

took the crown of martyrdom.' After a moment's silence by both hills, the Acropolis mouned out in the darkness: "Alas! Alas!" and Mars Hill responded: "Hosannah! Hosannah!" Then the voices of both hills became indistinct, and as I passed on and away in the twilight, I seemed to Pentelicon marble from the architrave of the Acropolis dropping down on the ruins of a shattered idol, and the other sound seemed to come from the just descended. But we were by this time so far off that the fragments of sentences were smaller when dropping fr m Mars Hill than were the fragments of fallen marble on the Acropolis, and I could only hear parts of disconnected sentences wafted on the night air-"God who made the world" -"of one blood ail nations"-"appointed a day in which he will judge the world"-"raised him from the marry from the Post Office, whether directed to his name or another's, or whether he has subscribed for it or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued, ne must pay all arrearages; the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made and collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals rom the Post Office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima-facia evidence of intended fraud.

Prof. Swing, in his sermon last Sunday, paid a glowing tribute to the United States and it's free schools.

The United States, he said, is the greatest Nation on earth and within its boundaries lies an empire grander than any of all times. Next to the fact of the Union. comes the fact of the school house, where he thoughts of all great men had their beginnings. We need, indeed, religion in the schools of the Nation but it must be the religion of no sect, else it might wed us ideas and beliefs which would be far narrower than the nation. The religion of the school house must be as broad as literature and pregnant with the thoughts of liberty, humanity and the home. In order that man may grow, the school house, the college, and the church must expand. Money will buy many things but it has reached its zenith and fame only when it advanced the culture of a nation and gives us Miltons, and Hamiltons and Franklins.

27TH WARD REPUBLICAN CLUB ELECTION

The 27th Ward Republican Club held a business meeting Saturday night Milwaukee avenue, from Franklin street at the Sherman House and elected the following officers unanimously for the ensuing year-

Walter Saylor, Pres .- 3rd Precinct Herman Bredt, Sect'y-5th Precinct Wm. Goodjohn, Treas.-6th Precinct and seven Trustees, one from each avenue to Crawford avenue. Precinct.

The Sect'y and Trea's report show a balance of forty two dollars in the Treasury, and all debts paid, and a good strong membership. It was decided to hold the meetings hereafter down town owing to its being more convenient for the majority of the Club members.

Many minor matters of business were also attended to and many suggestions offered for the good of the Club. An unanimous resoulition was passed complimentary to the retiring officers, Pres. Craig and Sect'y and Treas. John Esdohr, also a resolution thanking Ald. Fonda and Conway for their achievements in the passage of the bill for the extension at an early ings of the evening it was quite evident that a study of the new by-laws by the talkative members would expedite matters at future mettings. About one hundred of the leading Republicons of the ward were present.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Japan wishes to erect on the north end of the wooded island in Jackson Park a permanent building worth $100,000. This building Japan proposes shall, after the close of the world's Loans on Real Estate a Specialty. Fair, be giving to the city of Chicago The building would be of mediaeval style of architecture. Some of the doors would be bronze. These same doors have been for more than 100 years lying in the National Museum of Japan. This request was submitted to the committee on Grounds and buildings, but definite action was not taken.

There is now in operation in the Exposition grounds an experimental Druggist movable sidewalk 300 feet in length, the same except in length as will be exhibited during the World's Fair. This encircles an oval patch of ground and consists of two movable platforms running side by side and both going the same way. The first or slow platform runs at the rate of three miles an hour which makes stepping on while in Palatin motion extremely easy. Another step puts the passenger on the last platform, which runs six miles an hour. It has been working two weeks and has carried as many as 500 persons at one time. The inventor claims for the invention a carrying capacity of 40,000 an hour past a given point. One advantage claimed for the moving sidewalk is that it can be put on a level with the second stories of buildings, increasing the capacity of the streets. A public trial of the sidewalk will be made this afternoon.

But Unorna was absorbed by very even pretend to be friendly. It is different thoughts. From time to that which any man may feel for a time she stole a glance at his face, fellow being, and what any man would and she saw that it was stern and cold as ever. She had kept her word, but he did not relent. A terrible anxiety overwhelmed her. It was possible, even probable, that he would henceforth avoid her. She had gone too far. She had not reckoned upon such a nature as his, capable of being roused to implacable anger by mere sympathy for the suffering of another. Then, understanding it at last, she had thought it would be be forgotten by him upon whom they had been inflicted. She could not comprehend the horror he felt for herself and for her hideous cruelty. She had entered the cemetery in the consciousness of her strong will and of her mysterious powers certain of victory; sure, that having once sacrificed her pride and stooped so low as to command what should have come of itself, she should see his face change and hear the ring of passion in his passionless voice. She had failed in that, and utterly. She had been surprised by her worst enemy. She had been laughed to scorn in the moment of her deepest humiliation, and she had lost the foundations of friendship in the attempt to build upon them the hanging garden of an artificial love. In that moment, as they reached the gate, Unorna was not far from despair.

A Jewish boy, with puffed red lips and curving nostrils, was loitering at the entrance. The Wanderer told him to find a carriage.

"Two carriages," said Unorna. quickly. The boy ran out. "I will go home alone," she added. 'You two can drive together."

"It is the best arrangement-do you not think so?" she asked. "Quite the best."

"Have you been in pain? Do you feel as though you had been suffering?" she asked of the younger man. in a tone of sympathy and solicitude...

"No. Why do you ask?" "Permit me," he said. "I fore you here."

You will let me know, will you not?" she said. "I am anxious about him."

He raised his eyebrows a little, and dropped her hand.

"You shall be informed," he said. Kafka helped her get into the carriage. She drew him by the hand so that his head was inside the door, and the other man could not hear her words. "I am anxious about you," she said. very kindly. "Make him come himself to me and tell me how you are."

"Surely-if you asked him-" "He hates me," whispered Unorna quickly. .. Unless you make him come, he will send no message.' "Then let me come myself-I am perfectly well" -"Hush-no!" she answered hurriedly. Do as I say-it will be best for you - and for me. Good-by." "Your word is my law," said Kafka drawing back.

"You are in need of rest." said the Was derer watching him curiously. · Indeed, I am very tired, if not "In what way?" asked Kafka. "I have forgotten what happened. I know that I followed Unorna to the cemetery. I had been to her house. and I saw you afterward together. I had not spoken to her since I came back from my long journey this morning. Tell me what occurred. Did see make me sleep? I feel as I have Ifht before when I fancied that she has hypnotized me."

"Yes," he answered. "She made you sleep. Why? Do you know? If she made me dream anything I have forgotten it." The Wanderer hesitated a moment.

"I cannot answer your question," he said at length.

"Ah-she told me that you hated her," said Katka, turning his dark eyes to his companion. "But yet" he added. "that is hardly a reason why you should not tell me what happened."

"I could not tell you the truth without saying something which I have no right to say to a stranger-which I could not easily say to a friend." "You need not spare me-"

"It might save you."

"Then say it-though I do not know from what danger I am to be saved. But I can guess, perhaps. You would advise me to give up the attempt to win her?"

"Precisely. I need say no more." "On the contrary," said Kafka, with sudden energy, "when a man gives such advice as that to a stranger he is bound to give also nis reasons." The Wanderer looked at him calmly as he answered:

"One man need hardly give a reason for saring another man's life. Yours is in danger."

"I see that you hate her, as she said you did."

"You and she are both mistaken in that. I am not in love with her, and hor. Can you conceive of anything when it is finished. An index can be larger to be her friend. As

"What did she say to me when I was asleep?" he asked after a short

"Did you ever hear the story of Simon Abeles?" the Wanderer inquired, by way of answer.

Kafka frowned and looked round

"Simon Abeles? He was a renegade Hebrew boy. His father killed him. He is buried in the Teyn Church? What of him? What has he to do with Unorna or with me? I am myself a Jew. The time has gone by when we p are where the keen, splendid east-Jews hid our heads. I am proud of what I am, and I will never be a Christian. What can Simon Abeles have to do with me?"

"Little enough, now that you are awake."

"And when I was asleep-what then? She made me see him, perhaps?"

She made you live his life. She made you suffer all that he suffered

"What?" cried Israel Kafka, in a loud and angry tone. "What I say," returned the other, quietly. "And you did not interfere? You did not interfere? No-of course-I forgot that you are a Christian." "I would have stopped her if could." he said. "Were you sleeping, too?" asked Kafka hotly.

"I cannot tell. I was powerless, though I was conscious. I saw only Simon Abeles in it all, though I seemed to be aware that you and he of a fixed plan of her own, in the were one person. I did interfere so soon as I was free to move. I think hlm neither falsehood hor insult; tha I saved your life, I was carrying you away in my arms when she waked

"I thank you-I suppose it is as you tell me. You could not move, but you saw it all, you say. You saw me play the part of the apostate, you heard me confess the Christian's faith?"

"Yes-I saw you die in agony, confessing it still." Israel Kafka ground his teeth and turned his face away. The Wanderer Israel, and the deed should not be was silent. A few moments latter the carriage stopped at the door of Kafka's lodging. The later turned to his companion who was startled by ject in concealment, for his own life the change in the young face. Kafka. "for I shall follow soon." As the Wanderer left the room, he saw the Moravian turn toward the ern weapons hung upon the wall.

CHAPTER XVII.

HE Wanderer knew that the case was urgent and the danger great. There was no mistaking the tone of Israel Kafka's voice, nor the look in his face.

Unorna's act had brought the several seemingly contradictory elements of his character to bear upon for her to love him; that her changing treatment of him was not the result of caprice, but execution of which she would spare to love such a woman was the lowe t degradation; that he could neverthet less not destroy that love; and, finally, that the only escape from his shame lay in her destruction, and that this must, in all probability, involve his own death also. At the same time he felt that there was something solemn in the expiation he was about to exact, something that accorded well with the fierce traditions of ancient done stealthily or in the dark. Unorna must know that she was to die by his hand, and why. He had no obwas already ended by the certainty that his love was hopeless, and on the other hand, fatalist as he was, he and more manly, a look of greater believed that Unorna could not essave her.

The Wanderer understood most of "Do you give me your word that you | these things as he hastened toward her house through the darkening streets.

He saw himself in a very strange position. Half an hour had not elapsed since he had watched Unorna driving away from the cemetery, and had inwardly determined that he would never, if possible, set eyes on her again. Scarcely two hours earlier he had been speakof a doubt, that she loved him, and he was hurrying to her house to give her the warning which alone could save her from destruction.

But there was scant time for reflection upon the problem of his own mis-"She did not mean that you should sion in the world as he hastened to though by no means easy of accomplishment. What Israel Kafka had told him was true. Should he attempt a denunciation he would have little chance of being believed. It would be easy enough for Kafka to bring witnesses to prove his own love for Unorna and the Wanderer's intimacy with her during the past month, and posing summarily of his Moravian

ROAMING ONE HUNDRED MILES FROM THE COAST.

The Queer Race of People Met b Prof. Linnemann Who Has Lately Returned from the Pacific-No Clothing-Human Skulls.

B. Linnemann, an engineer representing the agricultural department of the German government, arrived in San Francisco recently after three years' explorations among the cannibals of New Guinea. Germany owns or rather has a protectorate over-about half of these islands, while England and other countries control the others.

Mr. Linnemann's work was both as a surveyor of lands and as a commissioner for the German government in settling claims made by the New Guinea company for lands. The New Guinea company was organized many years ago for acquiring lands and trading among the natives. Its charter gives it powers similar to those enjoyed by the Hudson's Bay company in Canada and the Australian company in

Mr. Linnemann, as the representative of the home government, adjudicated claims and visited the interior of both New Guinea, so called, and New Britaid. On one occasion he found himself nearly one hundred miles from the ocean in the midst of the tropical forests, while on all sides were bands of wild sayages. He had but one European in his party, the remainder being semi-civilized blacks.

Fascinated by his explorations, he scarcely realized he was so far away till the astonished natives swarmed around him, curious to learn where a man with so white a skin came from. "No European had ever before invaded these forests," said Mr Linne-

Many of them had never been near the coast and had scarcely any knowledge of it except by hearsay, consequently their knowledge was very vague. I was interested beyond measure in their strange customs. They were naked. Not a thread one point. He had realized in the ame moment that it was impossible of the Samoans or Hawaiians. For indeed they are of another race. The Samoans and Hawaiians are Polynesians, but these are Papuans. Many of the men are six feet high, but most of them are five feet eight inches or

"The women are also of good size, well developed and often handsome The women, however, have no influence over the men. The natives erect a tall pole near their huts and on this they place the heads of persons who have been captured and eaten. These heads, Mr. Linnemann states, often remain till birds of the air and wind and rain have almost denuded them of flesh, and ghastly and white from these eyries they tower threateningly on the bloody people. It impresses the visitor strangely, and gives him a weird feeling of the awful character of the cannibals.

GOV. HORACE BOIES.

The Popular Governor Recently Re-Elected in Iowa.

Horace Boies, who has been re-elected Governor of Iowa, is a New Englander by birth. His parents were poor farmers and his early education was stinted. He went West when quite young and secured a job on a Wisconsin farm. There he worked late and early for a year or two and then removed to lowa. Possessed of a sterling character and the natural aptness to choose between right and wrong, the young man's rise to prominence was rapid. A notable characteristic of him is that he has the courage of his convictions and never hesitates to assail that which is wrong. He believes that the country would make greater progress minus the liquor industry. He does not believe that a minority should dictate what the majority shall drink. From that point he opposed prohibition in his recent campaign and some say he owes his election to the stand he took. The Legislature elected in Iowa is Republican, but it is believed that no time will be lost in repealing the present law, so as to conform with the ex-

CRICAGO OPERA-HOUSE.

The return of "Sinbad" to the Chicago opera-house last Monday night was characterized by a veritable ovation. The house was packed from the orchestra rail to the back wall of the top gallery, and every one of the favorite numbers received recall after recall. The appearance upon the stage of each of the principal artists was the signal for loud and continued applause, and the fall of e ery curtain was followed by the calling in front of the principals. Several new features have been in rodu ed into the big spectacle since it was seen here last summer, and one of them a pas de deux by Fraulein Martha Irmler and Mile. Henrietta Rosche is one of the prettiest ballet features yet seen in the piece. Dan Hart has a new song entitled. " Haven't Got It Now," and several new ensembles of ballet and chorus have been arranged by Mr. Batchelor, the musical director, and Signor Filiberte Marchetti, the ballotmaster. The advance sale of seats and boxes for the second week assures a continuance of the enormous business which has characterized the first, and persons desiring any choice in the selection of the seats or boxes for the succeeding weeks had best lose no time in securing them. THE PEOPLE'S.

Manager Baylies takes great pleasure ning Sunday matinee. Nov. 29, the sensational comedy drama, "Pulse of New York," with the winsome little soubrette, Gracie Emmett, in six distinct character changes. Note-Miss Gracie Emmett, one of America's cleverest soubrettes has made a popular success in Howard P. Taylor's masterpiece, "The Pulse of New York." The plot abounds in sensationalism, and is an interesting detective story. The heroine, Miss Emmett, plays six different characters throughout the four acts, and is conceded to be one of the most versatile soubrettes on the American stage Possessed with a musical education, she helps to make her performance most enjoyable by her musical numbers introduced throughout the four acts. There is nothing blood curdling about the play; it tells an interesting story of love and villany. The four acts are richly mounted with new and beautiful scenery, comprising the little church around the corner. Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, New York. "German Syrup" Here is an incident from the South

-Mississippi, written in April, 1800, just after the Grippe had visited that country. "I am a farmer, one of thicker woods the cabin door slammed those who have to rise early and work late. At the beginning of last rise. drenched in a shower of rain. with a dry, backing cough. This grew worse every day, until I had to seek relief. I consulted Dr. Dixon who has since died, and he told me to get a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. Meantime my cough grew worse and worse and then the Grippe came along and I caught that also very severely. My condition then compelled me to do something. I got two bottlesof German Syrup. I began using them, and before taking much of the second bottle, I was entirely clear of the Cough that had hung to me so long, the Grippe, and all its bad effects. I felt tip-top and have felt that way ever since." PETER J. BRIALS, Jr., Cayuga, Hines Co., Miss.

CARRIED OFF BY BRUIN.

JOHN PETERSON FINDS A BEAR IN HIS ROOM.

Is Attacked by the Beast and Carried Of Through the Woods-His Screams Bring a Neighbor to His Rescue.

A rancher name . sohnson, living in the southern part of Pierce county, tells of a most thrilling encounter of a neighbor of his with a big black bear, says the Tacoma News. Though the story seems incredible, Johnson declared it to be true in every particular, and, at the request of a reporter who met him, gave the facts in detail. They are these:

The man whom bruin attacked is John Peterson, who lives on a small ranch about twenty miles south of Tacoma. Peterson lives in a small log cabin, and one evening last week left the door partially open when he went to bed, to allow a better circulation of air through the cabin. For supper he had enjoyed a beef-stew, and when the meal was over had placed the kettle containing the remainder on a board just outside the door. Peterson lives alone, his nearest neighbor being

Johnson, who occupies a cabin half a

Peterson retired to his usual peaceful slumbers, intending to get up early in the morning and go fishing in the creek near by before beginning his day's labor. But he was aroused much earlier than he had expected. A heavy tread on the floor awakened him. As he rubbed his eyes he felt the hot breath of some large animal blowing directly against his face. The room was slightly lighted by the open door. Peterson rubbed his eyes and gazed upward. The next second he screamed from fright. The intruder was a bear. His screams brought on an attack. Bruin seized the prostrate man and bore him out the door and down the trail towards his lair. His teeth pierced the poor man's skin. The pain was intense. As the bear trotted slowly along with his prize just one faint hope arose in house. The bear did so. By this time the rancher was nearly exhausted, but summoning his fastfailing courage he raised his voice to a shout as bruin made a turn in the path and came near his friend's cabin. The shout was repeated again and again. Peterson's heart began to fail him. Would there be no response? But at last there was. As the bear left the trail and struck off toward the Winter I was on a trip to the City of Vicksburg, Miss., where I got well shouting. Johnson answering at intervals and hurrying along as fast as he went home and was soon after seized | could. Bruin got tired and occasionally dropped his victim. This allowed Johnson to catch up, but every time the bear dropped him he was sure to plant his teeth in another part of Peterson's body. For two miles the race continued, and then the coming light began to turn the darkness of night into the gray dawn of morning. Johnson finally caught up. The bear dropped his prey and prepared to fight. A shot from Johnson's rifle sent him a rod away, howling with pain and rage. He advanced, but a second bullet hit him in a vital part and silenced him

> Johnson bound up Peterson's wounds as best he could and conveyed him in a fainting condition to his own room. He suffered greatly from loss of blood, and is still so weak as to require a constant watcher at his side. The next day a physician was secured to attend to his wants, and with careful nursing it is believed he will recover.

> The bear was skinned, and proved to be the largest one ever seen in that neighborhood. It was estimated to weigh over 500 pounds. Bruin, it was found, had finished Peterson's stew and was probably attracted to his cabin by the odor from the kettle containing it.

Size of the United States Soldier.

Statistics gathered by the United States government in the latter part of 1890 show that the enlisted soldiers of the United States army vary in heighth from a minimum of 4 feet 9 in inches to a maximum of 6 feet 43 inches. The giant of the army is serving in the department of Arizona, and the dwarf in the department of the Missouri. In weight the range is even greater than it is in height, the minimum being 97 pounds and the maximum 280; the average throughout the army being 1531, and the average height 5 teet 7 inches. The youngest soldier enlisted is 16 years of age; the oldest 66, the average being about 30 years.

During the war with Mexico General Taylor's command boasted a so!dier of 7 feet 11 inches in height, and one of 74 years of age. -St. Louis Republic.

The Other End.

He was a little fellow. evidently just in from the country, and was strolling down West street with a pitchfork carelessly thrown over his shoulder and with an air that seemed to say. "Who cares?" When near High street a big bull-dog came running out of a yard, and, without any preliminaries, began sampling the anatomy of the young farmer, who, without a moment's hesitation, impaled the dog on the pitchfork. The act was witnessed by the owner of the dog, who came running out, white with rage. "What did you kill that dog for?" he roared. "'Cause he bit me," was the calm

For Cleaning Laces.

Here is a recipe for cleaning delicate laces, which an old lacemaker who has woven many a gossamer web for the great connoisseur and lover of laces, Mme. Modjeska, gave to her pupil and patron: Spread the lace out on paper, cover with calcined magnesia, place another paper over it, and put it away between the leaves of a book for two or three days. Then all it needs is a skillful shake to scatter the powder, and its delicate threads are as fresh and clean as when first woven.

What would you think if some one that you knew to be responsible would offer to give you a well-stocked general store for one year's work? You would, no doubt, consider it big pay and jump at the chance. Well such things have beed done and are being done right along. Messrs. B. F. Johnson & Co. Richmond, Va., number imong their employees many men who earn the value of a first-class store every year. W. F. Davis worked for them awhile, and then opened a snug general store at Hick's Wharf. Matthews county, Va., and wrote this firm as follows: "I can only say that I give your business credit for what I am. If I were to meet with any bad luck or lose what I have made, I am proud to say that I would go to you for employement and soon make antoher store." They can show you how to double and treble your income Write to them at once for information.

The Musical and Literary given by Miss Minnie E. Rogers at Merricks Hall, Twesday eyening, Nov. 19th. proved a success. The hall was filled with an appreciative audience. The instrumental music was the chief feature of the evening. The piano solos by Miss Rogers, and the violin solos by Mr. Chai. Elander were exceedingly well rendered, as also was the duo semiramis. Miss Lulu Rogers, in her several numbers acquitted herself very acceptably. The comic recitations by Eugene Richter caused much merriment; as also did the comic duett by Miss Lulu Rogers and Eugene Richfer. The recitations by Miss Mary E. Lloyd were very good. The Columbia quarterte did not do as well as was very good and everybody seemed well

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS-GOOD OPPORTUNITIES IN CHICAGO REALTY.

Statistics show that Chicago has doubled ight times during the last fifty years. Now that it has reached the invincible number of away over a million inhabitants it is bound to go forward, ard nothing can stop the rapid march of its progress. It is difficult to realize in thought the true immensity of a millionaire city, and its g gantic future is impossible to comprehend. The purchase of real estate in or near such a city is always a matt r of the most complete safety.

Building and loan associations are in a large degree responsible for the large Hardware, Stoves, large degree responsible for the large amount of building now in progress in the city. These associations, long since past was given.

A fine lunch was served during the evening in the lodge room, and needless to the experimental stage, now offer to the experimental stage instice was done to all the edicitizens of Chicago unparalleled advantages citizens of Chicago unparalleled advantages a home. For a sum, very little more than the customary rent, paid for six and onehalf years, one now becomes the owner of his home. No association presents more tin, Copper and Sheet Iron Work than The Inter Ocean Honiestead & Loan Association, the home office of which is located at No. 910 Chamber of Commerce building.

A branch office has just been established at 1574 Milwaukee avenue, where stock can be purchased from their duly authorized agents, Roberts & Haarvig, who are also authorized to receive and receipt for all monthly dues, etc. This makes it very convenient for residents in the vicinity This Council, instituted but a few months tnem a trip down town each month. On having stock in this association, saving ago, has had a most flattering career so far and already numbers nearly fifty members holders residing in this vicinity met at

C. Michaelsen, President; Ferd Fritz. Vice President; George Roberts, Secretary; J. Theo. Haarvig, Treasurer, James S. Williams, Charles Hoest, Wm. Landshaft,

Wm. Schaeffer. The stock of this association is divided into shares of $100 each, which are issued in monthly series dated the first day of each month. Anyone may become a member of this association by subscribing for one or more shares of stock. The shares are paid for by monthly installments of seventy-five cents on each $100 share, payable on or before the last Saturday of each month to their legally authorized collectors or at the home office.
