A BRILLIANT PARTY.

Lloyd Robertson Entertains Some Friends at Progressive Whist.

Saturday evening, Lloyd Robertson gave a Progressive Whist party at his palatial home in Lake street.

The early part of the evening was spent in an informal manner until 9 o'clock, when card tables were ranged in the spacious parlors, drawing-room and dining-room, which were tastefully decorated with sprigs of holly and mistletoe in token of the approaching Christmastide.

Miss Mina Robertson acted as timekeeper.

At the close of a series of nine games, the handwriting (of the clock) on the wall warned the players of the approaching Sabbath morn. The games were accordingly declared at an end, and prizes were awarded the successful contestants.

There were several contestants for each of the prizes, excepting that for lady winning least games, a bottle of ketchup, which went to Miss Nellie Lines. Misses Edith Cannon and Ethyl Robertson were obliged to draw lots for the ladies' first prize, a beautiful silver-mounted comb, Miss Cannon being the winner. Messrs. Wm. Cannon and Chas. Hutchinson drew lots for the gentlemen's first prize, a sterling silver match safe, Mr. Cannon winning. Messrs. Otis, Fisher and Sodt drew lots for the "booby" prize, a mammoth Faber pencil, which was triumphantly carried off by Mr. Sodt.

After the prizes had been awarded,

Looking Backward

In looking back over the year's trade it has been very gratifying to us to note the very large increase of business for the year 1895, over the year preceding. This convinces us that prosperous times have come to stay, and that everything is now on a solid basis.

We wish to thank the fathers, mothers, boys and girls, also the little children for the large and liberal patronage. It shows us that you appreciate and approve of our way of doing business. HONEST GOODS, HONEST QUAL-ITIES AT THE LOWEST PRICES. It has always been our aim to give you strictly first class goods for your money, without misrepresenting any article. and if not satisfactory, your money back.

Looking Forward

In looking forward to the year 1896, we hope to still increase our business with you. It will be our aim to study your wants, and give you the best goods for the least money, as well as the largest assortment to select from.

Soliciting your patronage in the future,

We wish you a Happy and Prosperous New Year,

Yours respectfully,

Mrs. Robertson, assisted by the Misses Robertson, served a dainty repast consisting of cake, fruit and coffee.

The repast over, the guests at this the most enjoyable event of the season, after listening to an improvised musical program, reluctantly bade their kindly entertainers adieu, and sought their couches where, no doubt. they lived over again in their dreams the pleasant experiences of the previous evening, until awakened by the chimes of Sabbath bells.

THE DRUG GLERK'S STORY

He Talks of Headaches and Nervousness and Gives a Cure for Both.

From the Evening News, Newark, N. J.

It was the drug clerk's turn to tell a story of one of his experiences, and the reporter, expecting something good, as usual, settled himself comfortably in a chair prepared to give his undivided attention to the speaker. The latter was Henry Maier, who hands out medicine over the counter of Dr. Andrew F. Burkhardt's the counter of Dr. Andrew F. Burkhardt's drug store at 271 Orange Street, this city. "Perhaps I can do nothing better," he began, "than to tell you the secret of my good health. It is a story that I have told to many, recently, and as it resulted in good in each case, it may be worth your while to listen to it. To begin with, I was not always strong and robust, as I am now. Long hours of work and hard study had_left, me in a wretched condition. Frightful, lingering headaches found me a ready victim, and at times I was so ner-Frightful, ingering headaches found me a ready victim, and at times I was so ner-vous that the dropping of a pin would cause me to give a violent start, and then I would be selzed with a fit of trembling that was, to put it mildly, exceedingly bothersome. Well, I began to doctor my-self. Now I flatter myself that I know something of medicine; but with all my knowledge, I could find nothing that would cure those terrible headaches or put an end to my extreme nervousness. When I picked up a bottle my hand would shake as though I had the chills, and if it was a powder that I was handling I stood a good chance of sprinkling it all over these black trousers. Things went from bad to worse, and I soon realized that a man of my physical condition had better not attempt to mix any medicine.

"'Try a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills,' said Dr. Burkhardt, one day; and as you now the doctor's advice is always worth following, I got the Pink Pills and began to take them. Before I had taken the contents of one box my headache began to give me a day off occasionally, and soon it left me entirely. How about my nervous-ness? Well, the pills put an end to that with almost startling abruptness. You see I know enough about the business to appreciate the importance of following the prescribing physicians' directions, and by paying strict attention to those given by Dr. Williams I was soon another fellow. Look at me now! A picture of health, eh? Well, that is what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do for a man, or a woman either. See, I can hold this glass of water out now without spilling a drop, but I couldn't do that two months ago and=

"What is it, ma'm?" he asked as a neatly dressed woman came up to the counter. "A box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." "Yes, ma'm, fifty cents, please. Thank you." "These Pink Pills are great things," said Mr. Maier as he turned to the reporter again, and the latter, after all he had eard, thought so too. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

How Copper Is Secured.

In the Calumet and Hecla copper mine are over seventy miles of drifts, in which one can walk for days without visiting all of the many places underground. There is a vein which has been worked for two miles on its trend, and at some of the shafts the fifty-fifth level has been reached, these levels being generally ten feet apart, or "thick," as generally described.

The court office of Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod was recently vacated in England by the death of its occupant. An English paper advertises the vacancy? "The post is arduous; the hours. are long, ranging from five to six in the course of a week, with no more than six months holiday a year; while the pay does not exceed £2,000 per annum ($10,-000), with a free residence, and 'coal and candle.' Hence, competition may. not be very keen."

The citizens of Waverly, Iowa, are looking through their dictionaries for cuss-words. Recently they hired a hall in which to express their indignation over the recent elopement of Dr. G. A. McCandless and Druggist E. R. Vining with Alice Miller and Nancy Ward a few weeks ago. This resolution was adopted: "The English language does not contain words sufficiently condemnatory of the act committed, and some punishment commensurate to the crime should be meted out."

A dispatch from Havana under date of December 4 says: Reports current for several days that Antonio Maceo had erossed the military line of La Trocha on November 29, are confirmed. He was accompanied by the bands of Miros, Cebreco and Quintin Banderas. The crossing was effected between the forts of La Sanchez and La Redonda on the line north of Ceigo de Avila. Upon crossing the line a force of the insurgents was detached to make an assault upon La Redonda fort, thus creating a diversion to prevent pursuit, while the main force pushed on to the borders of Santa Clara province, which it is proposed to invade. Maceo's force is closely pursued by Gens. Aldave and Aldecoa and Gens. Suarez Valdes and Navarro have also been sent to attack him. An important engagement is imminent, the Spanish object being to divert Maceo's advance upon Santa Clara and to prevent his junction with the forces of Maximo Gomez. The munitions and baggage belonging to Maceo's forces have been carried on schooners from the Manzanilla coast to Santa Clara in order to enable insurgents to go unencumbered and move more quickly. An attack upon a fort near Santa Clara has been made by 800 insurgents. A column of 150 troops was sent to the relief of the fort and the insurgents were dispersed. Lieut. Aguilar, at the head of twenty-eight guerrillas, was surrounded by a band of 200 insurgents under Rios, near Manzanilla. The troops fought bravely and the official report says dispersed the insurgents, who left three killed and five wounded when they retreated. The troops had one gion last December. killed, the lieutenant, and six wounded.

CASUALTIES OF A DAY APPEAL TO CONGRESS.

LONG LIST OF FATAL ACCI-DENTS REPORTED.

Party of Skaters Break Through the lee Near Denver, Colo.-Fire in a West Virginia Hotel-Two Persons Killed at a Grade Crossing.

Arvada, Colo., Dec. 23 .- Four people were drowned at Lathrop lake yesterday morning. Their names are:

JONES, CHARLIE, aged 10 years. JONES, ROBERT, aged 21 year. JONES, MAGGIE, aged 20 years. BELL, INA, aged 16 years.

A large company of people went out to the lake to skate, which is an annual luxury in this section of the state, when the ice broke and Charlie Jones slipped through. His screams aroused the whole party, and instantly there was a rush on the part of his brother and sister to aid him. Mise Bell, who had been skating with Maggie Jones, accompanied her.

The remainder of the crowd shouted to them to desist, that there was danger of their being drowned, but the three young people crowded about the break in the ice and in their frantic efforts to rescue the little fellow they broke through, and, coming up under the ice, died before their friends, who were near, could break it in time to save them. The wonder is that more were not drowned, for nearly everybody on the ice came dangerously near to the gaping hole, and there were a number of narrow escapes.

Those who saw the accident say they will never forget it. They were within a few feet of the unfortunates, could see them struggling in the water, heard their cries as they went under and noted their gestures of distress after they passed under the ice, but were unable to help them or to approach without going down to death themserves. When boards were brought to the scene of the accident and the ice broken the children were all dead.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND SENDS A SPECIAL MESSAGE.

The Legislators Asked to Remain in Session to Consider a Plan for the Revision of the Finances-Text of the Message.

The folowing message was sent to congress by the President Friday:

To the Congress: In my last annual message the evils of our present financial system were plainly pointed out and the causes and means of the depletion of government gold was explained. It was therein stated that after all the efforts that had been made by the executive branch of the government to protect our gold reserve by the issuance of bonds, amounting to more than $162 .-000,000, such reserve then amounted to but little more than $79,000,000, about $16,000,000 had been withdrawn from such reserve during the month next previous to the date of that message, and quite large withdrawals for shipment in the immediate future were predicted.

The contingency then feared has reached us, and the withdrawal of gold since the communication referred to proper framing of such a declaration. and others that appear inevitable Senator Sherman counseled delay and threaten such a depletion in our gov-ernment gold reserve as brings u face to face with the necessity of further action for its protection. This condition is further intensified by the prevalence in certain quarters of sudden and unusual apprehension and timidity in business circles.

We are in the midst cf another season apprehension any sacrifice of the people's interests and the public funds or the impairment of our public credit BUSINESS OF THE COUNTRY in an effort by executive action to relieve the dangers of the present contingency.

PASSED BY THE SENATE.

Hitt Bill Adopted as It Came from the House.

The determination to act in this Venezuelan matter with deliberation was accentuated Friday morning. The shrinkage of $300,000 in the market value of American securities in three days is thought to have had an effect. The deliberations of the senate committee on foreign relations this forenoon resulted in a report to the senate suggesting a modification of the house bill limiting the commission to three in number and making their appointment subject to confirmation by the senate. The promised preamble defining the Monroe doctrine was not made a part of the report, and the remarks of Senator Morgan revealed the fact that the members of the committee were far from being a unit on the said plainly that he was opposed to haste and that the prospect of a postponement of the appointment for a month or a year had no horrors for him. He said he had no idea that a single drop of American or English blood would be shed in the settlement of this Venezulan controversy, and he thought the

CHICAGO THEATERS.

DURING THE WEEK.

Holders Who Are Engaged in Getting Rid of American Securities Are Likely to Repent the Action-War Scare Does Little Damage.

New Yerk, Dec. 23 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"The strong Americanism of the President's message has given its character to the week. Popular feeling was profoundly moved, but excepting in stock and cotton markets business was remarkably dull and scarcely affected. The selling of securities held abroad was naturally a first impulse, though the sellers are likely in time to discover that no other securities are safer from international complications than the American. Coming at a time when nearly all produce markets are inactive and industries unusually dull, the disturbance has affected values much less than might have been expected.

"Not because of any foreign question, but solely because of influences which have been in continuous operation for months, prices of manufactured goods continued to decline. There is no great change in bocts and shoes, and in some branches the demand appears a little better, though gradually lower prices are offered and lead jobbers to look for prices still lower. Shipments from the east are an eighth smaller than last week, but 3 per cent larger for the month to date. Leather still declined, averaging 2 per cent lower for the week,

AMUSEMENT ATTRACTIONS

FOR COMING WEEK

M'VICKER'S THEATER .- Rory of the Hill enters upon the second week of its run on Sunday evening next, the 22d. For the last fifteen years James Connor Roach has been connected with the American stage, and is well-known to his profession as a capable actor in many parts, and a severe critic of the degenerate Irish drama.

A study of Rory of the Hill, the latest Irish play from his pen, reveals clever and astonishing work on the part of the actor and author. The squireen has strength and logic in his despicable makeup, is really a successful business man and makes few mistakes; and his lovely daughter is the heroine of the play. The attorney and the villain are evidently faithful portraits of real castle servants, for they are never entirely on top, and never wholly overthrown, and they have human movements. The spy is the most terrible of the portraits which the stage has yet given of this type, and the sincerity of his malice pierces the heart; and after all he is not a spy, but a violent character whom the suspicion of great wrong has driven into the police service that he may get full revenge. The lady of the Hall is a sweet, reserved woman without any dread of the past or 'fear of black-mail. The Irish mother matches her in sweetness and dignity, speaks low, laughs rarely, does not dance nor fight, and is on the best terms with her neighbors. The colleen is simple in her manners, dresses well, does no high kicking or giggling, and displays all the reserve and modesty of a real Irish girl. The hero, as Roach portrays him, is a big, honest, capable boy, rough but sweet, humorous often, but oftener serious, respectful to his superiors, distant with the women, shy with his colleen, afraid even to touch her dress. He never breaks into song at any moment of the play, dances but once, only to oblige his friends, and then takes only a few steps. He has little to say about fighting and less to do. His rough courtesy is continuous, and perfect of its kind. His rage and his pathos are emotions to see. His patriotism is felt in his words, seen in his actions; from first to last he is so natural, so different from the creature paraded too often in Irish drama that one wonders over him. He is less picturesque than Myles-na-Coppaleen; and more vehement than Shaun the Post. There is more action than sentiment in him, yet in the tender moments of the play, in love for his mother and colleen, in devotion to his friends, his feelings have finely tender expression. Rory of the Hill is unlike the traditional Irish comedy-drama. It is a strict departure from conventionalism. The company carries a carload of magnificent scenery and effects, and a grand production is assured.

New, Miss Emma; severely_injured; will probably recover.

Ritz, S. L.; fatally hurt.

The fire originated in Tomany's bakery and quickly spread to B. C. Cohen's clothing store and the Central hotel, entirely destroying the three structures. The scene in the burning hotel was an exciting one. The guests all escaped with their lives, but saved little else. S. L. Ritz succeeded in rescuing a woman and three children, and then to save himself had to jump from a fourthstory window. George W. Blues, Misses Sallie Comvars and Emma New jumped from the second story.

of perplexity caused by our dangerous | people should be advised to that effect. | though hides at Chicago are scarce and fatuous financial operations. These may be expected to occur with certainty as long as there is no amendment in our financial system. If in this particular instance our predicament is at all influenced by a recent insistence upon the position we should occupy in our relation to certain questions concerning our foreign policy, this furnishes a signal and impressive warning that even the patriotic sentiment of our people is not an adequate substitute for a sound financial policy. Of course there can be no doubt in any thoughtful mind as to the complete solvency of our nation, nor can there be any just apprehension that the merican people will be satisfied with less than an nonest payment of our public obligations in the recognized money of the world. We should not, of Senator White, of California, comoverlook the fact, however, that aroused fear is unreasoning and must be taken into account in all efforts to avert public loss and the sacrifice of our people's interests.

The real and sensible cure for our recurring troubles can only be effected by a complete change in our financial scheme. Pending that the executive branch of the government will not relax its efforts nor abandon its determination to use every means within its reach to maintain before the world the American credit, nor will there be any hesitation in exhibiting its confidence in the resources of our country and the constant patriotism of our people.

In view, however, of the peculiar sitnation now confronting us, I have ventured to herein express the earnest hope that the congress, in default of the inauguration of a better system of finance, will not take a recess from its labors before it has, by legislative enactment or declaration, done something not only to remind those apprehensive among our people that the resources of this government and a scrupulous regard for honest dealing afford a sure guarantee of unquestioned safety and soundness, but to reassure the world that with these factors and the natriotism of our citizens the ability and determination of our nation to meet in any circumstances every obligation it incurs do not admit of question.

I ask at the hands of congress such prompt aid as it alone has the power

Senator Mills asked where America was going to get the money with which to carry on the awful conflict. He answered his own question by suggesting an amendment to the constitution authorizing a levy or direct taxes on real or personal property. Senator Lodge urged action before the Christmas recess. He wanted to teach the money sharps of England that they could not coerce America by throwing our stocks and bonds back upon our hands, calling loans and adopting other means to create a panic on the American exchanges and in the American money markets.

Senator Stewart spoke of the necessity of a firm stand for the maintenance of national honor and the prevention of British aggression. The speech manded attention. He was for unequivstand at every point and he expressed the hope that whatever might be the outcome congress would put a construction on the Monroe doctrine that would be conclusive. Discussion concluded suddenly at 3:45 o'clock. The senate amendments were defeated by a unanimous vote and the house bill was passed as it came over.

The resolution of Mr. Allen for a coinage of silver to meet the exigencies of war came over from Thursday, and Mr. Allen addressed himself- to it. He urged as a measure of financial policy that the free coinage of gold and silver on equal terms be considered by the finance committee. Mri Platt moved the reference of the resolution to committee. The motion was defeated. The resolution finally agreed to is as follows: "That the committee on finance be and they are hereby directed and instructed to inquire and report by bill or otherwise whether it would not be expecient and proper for the government of the United States of America at this time to open its mints to the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, and in addition thereto issue an adequate volume of full legal tender treasury notes in the same manner such notes have heretofore been issued, and in the interest of national safety withdraw the issue power of national banks and retire all bank currency."

and about 2 per cent stronger.

"Prices of iron and steel have fallen about 3 per cent for the week and are now 3 per cent below-their maximum. Bessemer pig and gray forge and most kinds of finished products have yielded more or less. Purchases by the great steel companies, it is now evident, were much in excess of their actual consumption, and it is believed that some furnaces will have to suspend production, as the demand for manufactured products is too small to support the output, estimated for the year at 9,387,639 tons by the Pittsburg American Manufacturer.

"There is no change of importance in the market for cotton goods, which is not active enough to prevent some accumulation. Print cloths are a shade weaker. The market for woolen goods has not improved scarcely any exceptocal indorsement of the President's ing clay mixtures and a few fancy cassimeres selling at better than last year's prices, and clothiers are not in haste to contract largely, owing to uncertainty as to foreign prices. New orders for the heavy weight goods are more delayed than usual and remarkably small.

> "Sales of vool are mainly confined to immediate needs of manufacturers, who are buying but little ahead, and for three weeks of December have been 17,-179,200 pounds, of which 8,905,100 were foreign, against 16,054,100 in the weeks of 1892, of which 4,104,500 were foreign. The imports of woolen goods continue very large, though smaller than a month ago.

> "It sounds strange to hear the many complaints of slow collections and scarcity of money at the west, on account of the tardy movement of products from the farms, when western wheat receipts in three weeks have been 18,615,498 bushels, against 9,436,-324 last year, while Atlantic exports, flour included, are only 5,812,337, against 6,453,100 last year. The movement of cotton continues comparatively small. There was a shade of advance in the price until foreign questions disturbed the market, but it closed with a quarter decline.

> "Failures for the week have been 377 in the United States, against 349 last year, and 32 in Canada, against 36 last year."

CHICAGO OPERA HOUSE. - The opening performance of this house under the new management will take place on Sunday afternoon next. All during this week the house will remain . closed, the new: management having decided to make a number of extensive alterations, which will add to the attractiveness of the house and the safety of the patrons.

The opening attraction will be Eddie Foy and his original company, presenting the musical extravaganza Robinson Crusoe Jr. The Nelson Family of acrobats, nine in number, have been engaged for an extra attraction for the opening week. Following Eddie Foy's engagement Canary & Lederer's Passing Show will come for one week.

The new management announces its intention to make rapid changes, presenting only the best combinations at a scale of prices ranging from 15 to 75 cents, with a view to making the Chicago Opera House a family theater.

HOOLEY'S THEATER .- The first and second weeks of E. H. Sothern in "The Prisoner of Zenda" at Hooley's has called forth the largest attendance of the season at this theater, and the sale for the coming week is large. The performance, which is long, but by no means tedious, begins each evening at 8 o"clock promptly, so as to finish at a reasonable hour, and is now running so smothly that the final curtain descends at 11 o'clock. The staging of the play is announced as the work of Mr. Sothern personally. The magnitude of the work, which includes not only the scenery, stage decorations, and costumes, but also all arangement of stage pictures, is so pronounced, and its fulfillment so perfect, that it fairly entitles Mr. Sothern to be considered the peer of Henry Irving in this regard.

The exhibit consists of minerals and operations in the mining industry, as well as a comprehensive exhibit of arboriculture, which is under the direct In the center of the town is an open supervision of the department of Forestry and Mining of the United States government, and is probably the best collection so far offered at any exposition. The following states have erected buildings on the grounds, which are used as official headquarters by the commissioners and visitors from each most important points of interest state: Pennsylvania, New York, which we visited were the old slave Florida, Alabama, Illinois, Massachu- market, the oldest Cathedral in lining behind the present financial satts, Georgia and California. Many historical exhibits well worthy of inspection was found in each building. Off for Savannah.

Friday evening, December 13th, we left Atlanta at 9 o'clock for Sayannah, arriving at that city the next morning at 5:45, where we spent the day "taking in" the different points of interest. After partaking of a hearty breakfast we paid a visit to the doeks. Here negroes rre employed loading and unloading ships, for which they are paid from $1.50 to $2.00 per day. One thing that renders Savannah especially attractive are the numerous drives in and about the city. In the city the broad, well shaded streets with their frequent squares and monuments, afford no end of pretty views. Everywhere, driving or walking, green verdure and sweet scented flowers carry the memory back to May time in the Northern states.

we took breakfast at the Geneva hotel at 7 o'clock. Mr. Frank Sharp is manager of the hotel, and we found him very courteous and accommodating.

He conducts one of the best hotels in Jacksonville. After spending three hours in viewing the fine hotels and elegantly shaded drives, we left for St. Augustine, the oldest city in the Union, arriving there in time for dinner.

Fortifications and defenses were the first thought of the Spanish soldiers who founded St. Augustine, and they were careful to choose a site which would be a stronghold. Here was fought the battle of Chickamauga on Sept. 19th and 20th, 1863, in which not less than 30,000 men were struck with shot or shell during the two days'

Savannah has one of the best hotels in the country-the DeSoto. This magnificient hotel occupies an entire ing boulevards, while architecturally it would adorn any city in the worldcosting over $1,000,000.

Four miles from Savannah is the farfamed Bonaventure, the most unique of all the world's cemeteries. Here, as nowhere else, the graceful Spanish moss is concent ated and artistically and effectively displayed by Nature's master hand. For over a half-mile extends a magnificent avenue of oaks, forming a leafy tunnel from the roof of which drop long stalactites of lead-colored moss. swayed to and fro by every passing breeze. The effect is superbly uncanny. Here, too, as in the town, palmettoes and Spanish bayonets and other harbingers of tropical regions greet the stranger's wondering eves and remind him that he is beneath a sunnier sky than at home.

Beyond Bonaventure lies Taunderbolt, the Gloucester of Georgia. Oyster roasts and fish dinners hold sway here. This place is considered the Paradise for lovers of yachting and fishing. It was at this popular resort that we again met A. Hanauer, jr., of the Hanauer Smelting works. Salt Lake City, Utah, whose acquaintance we had the pleasure of forming while enroute to Atlanta. The four of us enjoyed a good dinner here.

In the evening we attended the Sivannah theatre, and had the pleasure of seeing Octs Skinner in "The Merchant of Venice." While here we Leon, the finest hotel on earth. We left St. Augustine at 5 o'clock in the afternoon on our return trip, and arrived at Savannah (a distance of 215 miles) at 11:45 p.m., where we were compelled to spend the night, being unable to get a train for Atlanta before 9 o'clock the next morning, when we boarded a train and arrived at Macon at 5:15 p.m., where we had an hour to wait for another train. This gave us an opportunity to see a little of the city and the surrounding country. We got into Atlanta at 8:45 p. m., and stopped over night.

We left Atlanta Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock for Marietta, a distance of about twenty miles. Here we secured square and faces Savannah's two lead-, the services of a team of horses and an intelligent driver, who took us to Kennesaw Mountain, the top of the mountain being our objective point. We had to walk the greater part of the distance. From the top of this mountain you/can obtain a good view of the surrounding country. Here was fought the battle of Kennesaw Mountain in the late Civil War, and in which battle Mr. Lyman Powers' father was wounded. It was from the top of this mountain that Gen. Sherman sent the famous signal: "Hold the Fort for I Am Coming !"

We (Carl and 1) were compelled to forcibly drag Mr. Powers away from the mountain for fear the number of persimmons he was devouring would prove injurious to his health. We carried off a number of relics from this famous mountain. Among the other interesting points at Marietta that we visited was the National cemetery. Here rest 10,132 defenders of the Stars and Stripes.

We left Marietta for Chattanooga at 3 o'clock, arriving there at 7:30 o'clock. The next morning (Wednesday) we drove through the National cemetery, which contains 75 acres. Among the monuments here is one erected by the sarvivors of the Andrew's raiders, who captured a locomotive at Big Shanty. April 12, 1862. The "general" is repat Atlanta, and are as follows: / James and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first sympton is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. If Chamberlain's Cough remedy is freely given all tendency to croup will soon disappear. (CHAPTER VI.-CONTINUED). "As far as I know," Clara repeated, as the widow moved away to where the players were grouped round the net, or sauntering slowly towards, the house. She rose to follow her, but her head was In a whirl with new thoughts, and she sat down again. Which would be best for Ida, Harold or Charles? She thought it over with as much solicitude as a mother who plans for her only child. Harold had seemed to her to be in many ways the noblest and the best young man whom she had known. If ever she was to love a man it would be such a man as that. But she must not think of herself. She had reason to believe that both these men loved her sister. Which would . be the best for her? But perhaps the matter was already decided. She could not forget the scrap of conversation which she had heard the night before, nor the secret which her sister had refused to confide to her. If Ida would not tell her, there was but one person who could. She raised her eyes. and there was Harold Denver standing before her.

"You were lost in your thoughts," said he, smiling. "I hope that they were pleasant ones.'

"Oh, I was planning," said she, rising. "It seems rather a waste of time as a rule, for things have a way of working themselves out just as you least expect."

"What were you planning, then?" "The future.'

"Whose?"

"Oh, my own and Ida's."

"And was I included in your joint futures?"

"I hope all our friends were included." "Don't go in," 'said he, as she began to move slowly towards the house. "I wanted to have a word. Let us stroll up and down the lawn. Perhaps you are cold. If you are I could bring you out a shawl."

asked. "I did not dare think it."

'What a mask of ice I must wear! How could a man feel as I have done without showing it? Your sister, at least, knew." "Ida!"

"It was last night. She began to praise you, I said what I felt, and then in an instant it was all out."

"But what could you-what could you see in me? Oh, I do pray that you may not repent it!" The gentle heart was ruffled amid its joy by the thought of its own unworthiness.

"Repent it! I feel that I am a saved man. You do not know how degrading this city life is, how debasing, and yet how absorbing. Money forever clinks in your ear. You can think of nothing else. From the bottom of my heart I hate if, and yet how can I draw back without bringing grief to my dear old father? There was but one way in which I could defy the taint, and that was by having a home influence so pure and so high that it may brace me up against all that draws me down. I have felt that influence already. I know that when I am talking to you I am a better man. It is you who must go with me through life, or I must walk forever alone."

"Oh, Harold, I am so happy!" Still they wandered amid the darkening shadows, while one by one the stars peeped out in the blue-black sky above them. At last a chill night wind blew up from the east, and brought them back to the realities of life.

"You must go in. You will be cold."

"If you like, my darling. Or I will in the morning. I must tell my mother tonight. I know how delighted she will

A lamp was lit as she entered the room, a mischievous little fairy in front of her. "And have you anything to tell me?" she asked, with a solemn face. Then, suddenly throwing her arms round her sister's neck, "Oh, you dear, dear old Clara! I am so pleased. I am so pleased."

"Then why write it?"

"Goodness! Who is he?"

"Whose then? Your aunt's?"

Ida burst out laughing. "So you actually copied one."

"It was to invite a young lady to a picnic, but I set to work and soon got it changed so that it would do very well. Slattery seems never to have asked any one to ride a tandem. But when I had written it, it seemed so dreadfully stiff that I had to put a little beginning and end of my own, which seemed to brighten it up a good deal." "I thought there was something funny about the beginning and end." "Did you? Fancy your noticing the difference in style. How quick you are! I am very slow at things like that. I ought to have been a woodman, or gamekeeper, or something. I was made on those lines. But I have found something now."

"What is that, then?"

"Ranching. I have a chum in Texas, and he says it is a rare life. I am to buy a share in his business. It is all in the open air-shooting, and riding, and sport. Would it-would it inconvenience you much, Ida, to come out there with me?'

Ida nearly fell off her perch in her amazement. The only words of which she could think were "My goodness me!" so she said them.

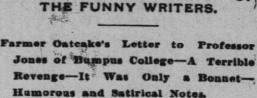

"If it would not upset your plans, or change your arrangements in any way." He had slowed down and let go of the steering handle, so that the great machine crawled aimlessly about from one side of the road to the other. "I know very well that I am not clever or anything of that sort, but still I would do all I can to make you very happy. Don't you think that in time you might come to like me a little bit?"

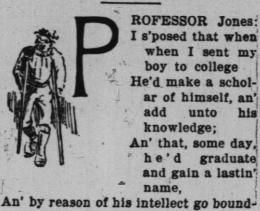

Ida gave a cry of fright. "I won't. like you if you run me against a brick wall," she said, as the machine rasped against the curb. "Do attend to the steering."

"Yes, I will. But tell me, Ida, whether you will come with me."

"Oh, I don't know. It's too absurd! How can we talk about such things when I cannot see you? You speak to the nape of my neck, and then I have to twist my head round to answer."

and there was Ida, dancing about like

"Did you not know it before," he

'Oh, no, I am not cold.'

I was speaking to your sister Ida last night." She noticed that there was a slight quiver in his voice, and, glancing up at his dark, clear-cut face, she saw that he was very grave. She felt that it was settled, and that he had come to ask her for her sister's hand. "She is a charming girl," said he, after a pause.

"Indeed she is," cried-Clara warmly. "And no one who has not lived with her and known her intimately can tell how charming and good she is. She is like a sunbeam in the house."

"No one who was not good could be so absolutely happy as she seems to be: Heaven's last gift, I think, is a mind so pure and a spirit so high that it is unable even to see what is impure and evil in the world around us. For as long as we can see It, now can we be truly happy ?!

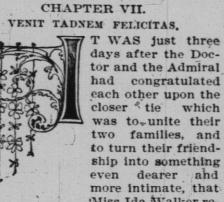

"She has a deeper side, also. She does not turn it to the world, and it is not natural that she should, for she is very young. But she thinks, and has aspirations of her own."

"You cannot admire her more than I do. Indeed, Miss Walker, I only ask to be brought into nearer relationship with her, and to feel that there is a permanent bond between us."

It had come at last. For a moment her heart was numbed within her, and then a flood of sisterly love carried all before it. Down with the dark thought which would still try to raise its unhallowed head! She turned to Harold with sparkling eyes.and words of pleasure upon her lips.

"I should wish to be near and dear to both of you," said he, as he took her hand. "I should wish Ida to be my sister, and you my wife."

She said nothing. She only stood looking at him with parted lips and: great, dark, questioning eyes. The lawn had vanished away, the sloping gardens, the brick villas, the darkening sky with half a pale moon beginning to show over the chimney tops. All was gone, and she was only conscious of a dark, earnest, pleading face, and of a voice, far away, disconnected from herself, the voice of a man telling a woman how he loved her. He was unhappy, said the voice, his life was a void; he had come to the parting of the ways, here lay happiness and honor, and all that was high and noble; there lay the soul-killing round, the lonely life, the base pursuit of money, the sordid, selfish aims. He needed but the hand of the woman that he loved to lead him into the better path. And how he loved her his life would show. He loved her for her sweetness, for her womanliness, for her strength. He had need of her. Would she come to him? And then of a sudden as she listened it came home to her that the man was Harold Denver, and that she was the woman, and that all God's work was very beautiful-the green sward beneath her feet, the rustting leaves, the long orange slashes in the western sky. She spoke; she scarce knew what the broken words were, but she saw the light of joy shine out am quite jolly," said he.

'Miss Ida Walker received a letter which caused her some surprise and considerable amusement. It was dated from next door, and was handed in by the red-headed page after breakfast.

"Dear Miss Ida," began this curious document, and then relapsed suddenly into the third person. "Mr. Charles Westmacott hopes that he may have the pleasure of a ride with Miss Ida Walker upon his tandem tricycle. Mr. Charles Westmacott will bring it round in half an hour. You in front. Yours very truly, Charles Westmacott." The whole was written in a large, loosejointed and schoolboyish hand, very thin on the up strokes and thick on the down, as though care and pains had gone to the fashioning of it.

Strange as was the form, the meaning was clear enough; so Ida hastened to her room, and had hardly slipped on her light grey cycling dress when she saw the tandem with its large occupant at the door. He handed her up to her saddle with a more solemn and thoughtful face than was usual with him, and a few moments later they were flying along the beautiful, smooth suburban roads in the direction of Forest Hill.

"Aren't you tired?" she asked, glancing over her shoulder and turning towards him a little pink ear. a fluffy golden curl, and one blue exe twinkling from the very corner of its lid.

"Not a bit. I am just getting my swing."

"Isn't it wond rful to be strong? You always remine me of a steam engine."

"Why a steam engine?" "Well, because it is so powerful, and reliable, ard unreasoning. Well, I didn't mean that last, you know, but-butyou know what I mean. What is the matter with you?"

"WAv?" "Because you have something on your mind. You have not laughed once." He broke into a gruesome laugh. "I about It.

"Good gracious!" cried Ida. "Fancy our sitting face to face on a motionless tricycle in the middle of the road, and all the people looking out of their windows at us!"

"It would look rather funny, wouldn't it? Well, then, suppose that we both get off and push the tandem along in front of us?"

'Oh, no, this is better than that." "Or I could carry the thing."

Ida burst out laughing. "That would be more absurd still."

"Then we will go quietly, and I will look out for steering. I won't talk about it at all if you would rather not. But I really do love you very much, and you would make me happy if you came to Texas with me, and I think that perhaps after a time I could make you happy, too."

"But your aunt?"

"Oh, she would like it very much. I can understand that your father might not like to lose you. I'm sure I wouldn't either, if I were he. But, after all, America is not very far off nowadays, and is not so very wild. We would take a grand piano, and-and-a copy of Browning. And Denver and his wife would come over to see us. We should be quite a family party. It would be jolly."

Ida sat listening to the stumbling words and awkward phrases which were whispered from the back of her, but there was something in Charles Westmacott's clumsiness of speech which was more moving than the words of the most eloquent of pleaders. He paused, he stammered, he caught his breath between the words, and he blurted out in little blunt phrases all the hopes of his heart. If love had not come to her yet, there was at least pity and sympathy, which are nearly akin to it. Wonder there was also that one so weak and frail as she should shake this strong man so, should have the whole course of his life waiting for her decision. Her left hand was on the cushion at her side. He leaned forward and took it gently in his own. She did not try to draw it back from him.

"May I have it," said he, "for life?" "Oh, do attend to your steering," said she, smiling round at him; "and don't say any more about this today. Please don't!"

"When shall I know, then?"

"Oh, tonight, tomorrow, I don't know. I must ask Clara. Talk about something else."

And they did talk about something else; but her left hand was still enclosed in his, and he knew, without asking again, that all was well.

A MALAY NEW YEAR.

Y Malay syce came close up to the veranda and touched his brown forehead with the back of his open hand.

"Tuan" (Lord), he said, "have got oil for harness, two one-half cents; black oil for cudah's (horse) feet, three cents; oil one cent one-half for bits; oil, seven cents for cretah (carriage). Fourteen cents, tuan."

I put my hand into the pockets of my white duck jacket and drew out a roll of big Borneo coppers.

The syce counted out the desired amount, and handed back what was left through the bamboo chicks or curtains that reduced the blinding glare of the sky to a soft, translucent gray. I closed my eyes and stretched back in my long chair, wondering vaguely at the occasion that called for such an outlay in oils, when I heard once more the quiet, indistent "Tuan!" I opened my eyes.

"No got red, white blue ribbon for whip."

"Sudah chukup!" (Stop talking!) I commanded, angrily. The syce shrugged his bare shoulders and gave a hitch to turn their presents and good will in solid cash.

At midnight we were awakened by a regular Fourth of July pandemonium. Whistles from the factories, salvos from Fort Canning, bells from the churches, Chinese tom-toms, Malay horns rent the air from that hour until dawn with all the discords of the Orient and a few from Europe. By daylight the thousands of natives from all quarters of the peninsula and neighboring islands had gathered along the broad ocean esplanade in front of the Cricket club house, to take part in or watch the native sports by land and sea. The inevitable Chinaman was there, the Kling, the Madrusman, the Sikh, the Arab, the Jew, the Chitty or Indian money lender-they were all there, many times multiplied, unconsciously furnishing a background of extraordinary variety and picturesqueness. At 10 o'clock we, the favored representatives of the Anglo-Saxon race, took our place on the great veranda of the Cricket club, and gave the signal that we would condescend to be amused for ten hours. Then the show commenced. There were not over 200 of us white people to represent law and civilization amid the teeming native population. In the center of the beautiful esplanade or play ground rose the heroic statue of Sir Thomas Stamford Raffles, the English governor who made Singapore possible. To my right, on the veranda, stood a modest, gray-haired little man who cleared the seas of piracy dream July in New York or August in and insured Singapore's commercial ascendency-Sir Charles Brooke, rajah of Sarawak. A little further on, surrounded by a brilliant suite of Malay princes, was the sultan of Johore, whose father sold the island of Singapore to the British. The first of the sports was a series of foot races between Malay and Kling boys, almost invariably won by the Malays, who are the North American Indians of Malaysia-the old-time kings of the soil. They are never like the Chinese, mere beasts of burden or great merchants, nor do they descend to petty trade, like the Indians and Bengalese. If they must work, they become horsemen. Next came a jockey race, in which a dozen long-limbed Malays took each a 5-year-old child astride his shoulders, and raced for seventy-five yards. There were sack races and greased pole climbing and pig catching Now came a singular contest-an eating match. Two dozen little Malay, Kling, Tamil and Chinese boys were seated at regular intervals about an planade, within the shadow of the caopen circle by one of the governor's | thedral; the march past of the sturdy aids. Not one could touch the others in any way. Each had a dry, hard ship biscuit before him. At the firing of a pistol two dozen pairs of little brown fists went pit-a guns of the fort. pat on two dozen hard biscuits, and in an instant the circular crackers were broken into a mass of powdered pieces. forcing the powdered pulp down the tropical sky and within sound of the little throats. Both hands were called | tiger's wail was really January 1st. But one for crowding in and the other for grinding the residue and patting the stomach and throat. other way, would snap a good sized. piece across the lawn to a spot within his reach.

The little brown fellow who won the 50-cent piece by finishing his biscuit first simply put into his mouth a certain quantity of the crushed biscuit, and with little or no mastication pushed the whole mass down his throat by sheer force.

The minute the contest was decided all the participants, and many other boys, rushed to a great tub of molasses to duck for half dollars. One after another their heads would disappear into the sticky, blinding mass, as they fished with their teeth for the shining prizes at the bottom.

Successful or otherwise, after their powers were exhausted, they would suddenly pull out their heads, reeking with the molasses, and make for the ocean, unmindful of the crowds of natives in holiday attire who blocked their way. Smearing everyone they touched, the boys ran on amid shrieks of laughter from their victims.

Then came a jinrikisha race, with Chinese coolies pulling Malay passengers around a half mile course. Letting go the handles of their wagons as they crossed the line, the coolies threw their unfortunate passengers over journed to the yachts to witness those of the sea. There were races between men-of-war cutters, European yachts, rowing shells, Chinese sampans and Malay colehs with great, dart-like sails, so wide-spreading that ropes were attached to the top of the masts, and a dozen naked natives hung far out over the side of the slender boat to keep it from blowing over. In making the circle of the harbor they would spring from side to side of the boat, sometimes lost to our view in the spray, often missing their foothold, and dragging through the tepid water at a furious rate.

Between times while watching the races, we amused ourselves throwing coppers to a fleet of native boys in small dug-outs beneath our bows. Every time a penny dropped into the water a dozen little bronze forms would flash in the sunlight, and nine times out of ten the coin would be rescued before it reached the bottom.

FINE CHRISTMAS TREES. Unusually Fine Programs Rendered by the Scholars-Everybody Was Pleased.

Christmas was fittingly observed in Barrington, especially by the different churches.

SALEM CHURCH,

On Tuesday evening the Salem church was thronged with an eager, happy crowd of both old and young people, and long before the hour of 7 o'clock the elegant' house of worship was crowded, even the aisles being utilized, and when the last bell had ceased sending forth its welcome invitation, standing room only was to be had.

An arch had been erected over the altar, two U.S. flags being displayed on top of each column, while over the center of the arch the most prominent sight visible was the "Stars and Stripes." Immediately in front was a miniature house on which was painted "Santa Claus' Home." In place of a chimney there arose a finely illuminated, revolving Christmas tree, which was beautifully decorated. The arch bore the mscription, "Wir Verkuendigen Euch Grosse Freude," and "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht."

After the opening song Rev. Suhr read a Scripture lesson/after which he offered up an earnest prayer. The following program was then rendered:

"Welcome"-Lizzie Meiners. "Christmas Thought"-Henry Sodt. "Christmas Bells"-Lena Thies.

"Christmas Greeting"- Emma Klein.

'Oh, Happy Christmas Bells"-Nora Plagge, Lydia Sodt, Alma Stiefen-hoeter and Frida Naeher. Song-Congregation.

The collection was then taken up. which netted over $17.00.

Song by the congregation. Santa Claus then called up Supt. Meiners over the 'phone, and informed him that the Sunday school had a membership of 306; that five scholars and one teacher had neither been tardy nor absent during the year. The scholars are: Lydia Sodt, Samuel Lage-Carl Nacher. Those who deserve direction of Mrs. FitzSimmons. Folspecial mention for learning the most lowing is the program: Bible verses are Amanda Kampert and Sam Nacher. These parties were rewarded by presents of books. Mrs. Rev. Suhr sang a solo which was listened to with appreciation by the audience.

The Ten Virgins" was next on the program-Misses Ida Gieske, Em-ma Meiners, Laura Landwer, Mary Schaefer and Martha Landwer repre senting the wise virgins, being dressed In white; while the foolish virgins were represented py Misses Rose Sodt, Laura Frye, Lydia Suhr, Anna Grabenkort and Emilie Beinlich, who were dressed in black. Rev. Suhr representing the bridegroom. It was rendered in excellent style. Quartermaster - General John C. Plagge now took charge of the meeting and sent his assistants among the audience distributing bags of candies, apples, etc., with a lavish hand.

It was after 11 o'clock when the audience started for home, well pleased with the evening's program.
