through their blood are actual minute organisms which are to all intents and purposes living creatures. If a drop of blood is placed upon a glass plate and the plate immediately warmed to the temperature of the body, then if the drop be examined under a powerful microscope the white corpuscies will be seen to put out tiny footlike feelers and crawl about the surface of the plate. The white corpuscles, or cells, of the blood appear to be of the nature of protoplasm.

Investigations point toward the conclusion that a man is not one living creature at all, but that he is an organism made up of millions and billions of infinitesimal living creatures, all acting together. When they are out of health, he loses health. The white cells which are seen under the microscope to crawl about the surface of the glass move in the same way through the veins and arteries of man and animals. Bacteriologists have before found out what the particular work of the white corpuscles is. It is to destroy germ cells hurtful to life.

The white cells are therefore called phagocytes, from two Greek words, one of which means eating, the other, cells. Literally phagocytes are cells that eat. Another brilliant discovery of modern science is that all infectious diseases are caused by microbe germs traveling from one person to another in many ways. When one of these disease germs gets into the system, it multiples itself by the million and circulates through the blood. There, only for the tiny white travelers, it would soon destroy all life. But the white cells are the warriors who fight for us. They immediately attack the diseased germ and devour and digest it, rendering it harmless. Unless the evil germs come in overwhelming numbers, or unless the white cells themselves are out of health and cannot eatoff their feed, so to speak-these white cells will destroy the bad microbes and save us. This they generally do. The process of devouring is called by the surgeons phagocytosis. And Professor Lister gives the consoling assurance that the white corpuscles are ordinarily able to cope with all the evil germs to be found in atmospheric dust.

Alaskan Exploration.

In their way the discoveries made in the arctic regions in 1896 by Professor L. L. Dyche of Kansas university are as interesting as those of Lieutenant Peary in another field. Professor Dyche those Alaska as his base of operations. For one thing, he brought back several specimens of the new kind of sheep that has been discovered in the far northwest. Moose still live in Alaska, and the professor secured the heads of a dozen monstrously large ones. He found great ledges of coal, too, but it is almost as soft as peat. He started from Cook's inlet, where the gold mines are, and went up the river Knik 205 miles to its source; thence he made excursions in the wild region round about. One of the strange things about Alaska is that the mosquitoes there are more troublesome than they are in a Mississippi swamp. Evil things seem to flourish where good ones cannot.

As interesting as anything was Professor Dyche's discovery of a tribe of new women among the Thlinkit Indians. The women take care of all the wealth and hold fast to it and rule things. A boy's father's family are no kin to him-only his mother's. The shrewdest and wealthiest native the professor found in the territory was also a woman, a Yakutat. When she wants a new husband, she swaps blankets for him. The one she had just obtained when Professor Dyche visited her cost her 525 blankets.

Finally this Kansas professor escaped

"Of course. As I should have done by any other lady-but more especially for her. I took her to a hotel, and on the morrow saw her start on her journey. I would have gone with her, but she declined my escort."

"O. I thank you-I thank you so much! I shall be your friend always for that. You will tell me where she is?"

"No. I cannot."

"Cannot! Does that imply that you will not?"

"It does.

"Then you know her present place of sojourn?"

"I do. But she does not desire the knowledge to become general. I have pledged my word to her not to reveal it. Neither is it best for you to know."

"You are right. It is not. I might be unable to hinder myself from seeing her. And that could do no good. I know that she is innocent. That shall saffice me Only tell me she is well, and agreeably situated."

"What do you mean, madam? I am, I trust, a man of honor. You are my wife, and I am true to you. I never loved but one woman, and she is dead to me."

The allusion to the old love was extremely unfortunate just at this time, for Mrs. Trevlyn was just sore enough to be deeply wounded by it, and angry enough to throw back taunt for taunt.

"A man of honor!" she ejaculated scornfully. "Honor, forsooth! Archer Trevlyn, do you call yourself that?"

"I do; and I defy any man living to prove the contrary!" answered Archer, proudly.

"You defy any man! Do you also defy any woman? Tell me, if you can, whose glove this is?" and she pulled from her bosom the blood-stained glove and held it up before him.

He looked at it, flushed crimson and trembled perceptibly. She laughed scornfully.

"Archer Trevlyn, your guilt is known to me! It has been known to me ever since the fatal night on which Paul Linmere met his death. I was there that night, by the lonely graveyard. I saw you kiss her hand! I heard the dreadful blow, listened to the smothered groan, and saw through the gloom the guilty murderer as he fied from the scene of crime! When the victim was discovered, I went first, because I feared he might have left behind something that might fix his identity-and so he had. This glove I found lying upon the ground, by the side of the wretched victim-marked with the name of the murderer, stained with the blood of the murdered! I hid it away. I would have died sooner than it should have been torn from me, because I was foolish enough to love this man, whose hand was red with murder! Archer Trevlyn, you took the life of Paul Linmere, and thus removed the last obstacle that stood between you and Margaret Harrison!"

Trevlyn's face had grown white as death while she had been speaking, but it was more like the white heat of passion, than like the pallor of detected guilt. His rigid lips were stern and pale; his dark eyes fairly shot lightnings. He looked at his wife as though he would read her very soul.

wife like a knell. She staggered back, and fell upon a chair. Had she been mad? She had wounded and maddened him beyond all hope of pardon-him, whom in spite of everything, she held more precious than the whole world! She had lost his respect-lost forever all chance of winning his love. And she had eagerly cherished the sweet hope that sometime he might forget the old dream, and turn to the new reality. But it was past!

She went up to her chamber, and locking the door, threw herself. dressed as she was, on the bed. How long must this continue? How long would he remain away? His business would not, probably, keep him more than a few days, and then, surely, he would return. And she would throw herself at his feet, acknowledge her fault and plead-yes, beg for his forgiveness. Anything, only to have peace betweer them once more!

She could not write to him, for he had not left his address. The next morning, she went down to the store, but they knew nothing of his destination, or his probable time of absence. So all she could do was to return home and wait.

A week passed-ten days-and still he did not return, and no tidings of him had reached his agonized wife.

> CHAPTER XXI. OUIS CASTRANI received one day an urgent summons to Boston. It was the very day following that on which he had been an unwilling listener to the difficulty between Mr. and Mrs. Trevlyn. He knew from whom the summons came. Once before he had been suddenly called in like manner.

A wretched woman she was nowbut once the belle and beauty of the fair Cuban town where Castrani's childhood and youth had been spent. She had been a beautiful orphan, adopted by his parents,, and brought up almost as his sister.

She welcomed him brokenly, her eyes lighting up with the pleasure of seeing him-and then the light faded away, leaving her even more ghastly than before.

"They tell me I am dying," she said, hoarsely. "Do you think so?"

He smoothed back the hair on the forehead-damp already with the dews of death. His look assured her better than the words he could not bring himself to speak.

"My poor Arabel."

THE TRADE REVIEW.

OF BUSINESS IS REVIVAL GENERAL.

R. C. Dun & Co. Report Improvement Everywhere-Wheat Goes Up Over Six Cents-Prospects Good in Iron and Steel Markets. *

New York, Nov. 30 .- R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"When the rush of orders slackened many began to think that business was dwindling. The subsidence of deferred orders is not a decrease of business. The reports from all parts of the country show clearly an enlargement of trade, not at all points in the same branches, but everywhere helped by a more confident feeling.

"Wheat has risen over 6 cents for the week, without material change in foreign advices, which have been on the whole less stimulating. Western receipts are falling behind last year's, and for four weeks past have been only 19,012,584 bushels, against 27,902,-512 last year, while the exports, flour included, have been 6,270,981 bushels in the same week, against 6,265,018 last year, and are not large enough to create excitement. But thirteen cargoes have left Tacoma in November, and thirty have left San Francisco, with twelve more loading and forty engaged.

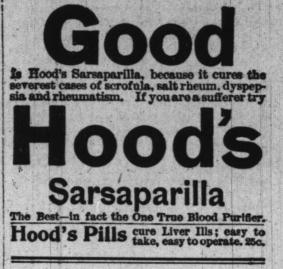

"At four western cities the output of flour in five weeks has been 2,655,415 barrels, against 2,613,300 barrels in the same week last year. Corn has sympathized with wheat only a little, and is coming freely.

"Cotton has gained only a sixteenth, after its marked decline, and yet there is all the time to remember the fact that the crop was nearly one month earlier than usual and the present excess over last year's movement may be materially reduced hereafter. Nevertheless the fact appears that the northern mills are taking much less cotton than in previous years, and the demand for goods is evidently disappointing.

"Wool was and is still bought largely for speculation, and earlier purchasers are unloading on the latter, but the mills are not yet doing much more than they did in October.

"The collapse of the nail combination, and probably of the beam combination, and a large reduction in quotations for nails and beams, give reason to look for a larger demand for products of iron and steel, but at present the sales against speculative purchases made some time ago are depressing prices.

"The failures for the week have been 300 in the United States, against 279

Golden Crops in Truth.

In preparing a tame duck for dinner recently a Lead City (Black Hills) woman found a nugget of gold in the craw that, when weighed, yielded just $3.50. It is safe to assume that the craws of all ducks and chickens will hereafter be pretty thoroughly "prospected" by the good housewives of Lead. It was but recently, by the way, that a chicken's craw panned out quite a quantity of the yellow metal in this same locality. Not every country can produce ducks and chickens that have miniature gold mines in their crops.

A WOMAN'S STORY.

It Should Be of Interest to Every Thinking Woman.

Women who reason well know that no male physician can understandingly treat the complaint known as "female diseases," for no man ever experienced them.

This, Lydia E. Pinkham tanght them twenty years ago, a fatal faith in S at Mrs. Fitz Noodle's, that evening, and Annie, her maid, was down with one of her nervous headaches, and she would be obliged to send for a hairdresser.

Louis Castrani was a guest in the house, by Archer's invitation-for the two gentlemen had become friends, warmly attached to each other, and Mrs. Trevlyn could not help fretting over the unfortunate condition of her cuisine.

She was looking very cross, as she sat in the back parlor, adjoining the tasteful little morning room, where she spent most of her time, and where the gentlemen were in the habit of taking their books and newspapers when they desired it quiet. If she had known that Mr. Castrani was at that moment lying on the lounge in the morning room, the door of which was slightly ajar, she might have dismissed that unbecoming frown and put her troubles aside. Mr Trevlyn entered, just as she had for the twentieth time that day arrived at the conclusion that she was the most sorely afflicted woman in the world, and his first words did not tend to give, her any consolation.

"I am very sorry, Mrs. Trevlyn, that I am to be deprived of the privilege of attending the ball to-night. It is particularly annoying."

"What do you mean, Mr. Trevlyn?" "I am obliged to go to Philadelphia on important business, and must leave in this evening's train. I did not know of the necessity until a few hours ago." Mrs. Trevlyn was just in the state to be wrought up by trifles.

"Always business," she exclaimed pettishly. "I am sick of the word!"

"Business before pleasure, Mrs. Trevlyn. But, really, this is an important affair. It is connected with the house of Renshaw & Selwyn, which went under last week. The firm were under obligations to-"

"Don't talk business to me, Mr. Trevlyn. I do not understand such thingsneither do I desire to. I only hope it is business you are going for!"

Mr. Trevlyn looked at her in some surprise.

"You only hope it is business?" he said, inquiringly. "I do not comprehend."

"I might have said that I hoped it was not a woman who called you from your wife."

The moment the words were spoken she repented their utterance, but the mischief was already done.

"Mrs. Trevlyn, I shall request you to unsay the insinuation conveyed in your words. They are unworthy of you and a shame to me."

"And I shall decline to unsay them. I dare affirm they are true enough."

"Alexandrine!" he said, hoarsely "you believed this of me? You deemed me guilty of the crime of murder, and vet married me?"

"Yes. I married you. I was not so conscientious as your saintly Margaret. She would not marry a man who had shed blood-even though he had done it for love of her!"

Trevlyn caught her arm fiercely.

"Madam, do you mean to say this shameful story ever came to the ears of Margie Harrison?"

"Yes, she knew it. I told it to her myself. Kill me if you like," she added, seeing his fearful face; "it will not be your first crime!"

He forced himself to be calm.

"When did you make this revelation to Margaret?"

"The night before she left New York -the night she was to have gone to the opera with you. I deemed it my auty. I did not do it to separate you, though I am willing to confess I desired you to be separated. I knew that Margaret would sooner die than marry you, if the knowledge of your crime was possessed by her."

"And she-Margaret-believed me guilty?"

"Why should she not? Any jury of twelve impartial men would have committed you on the evidence I could have brought. You were in love with Miss Harrison. She was under a solemn obligation to marry Mr. Linmereyet she loved you. Nothing save his death could release her. You were then, at night, in a lonely graveyard where none of your kin were slumbering. There, at that hour, the murder was done, and after its commission, you stole forth silently, guiltily. By the side of the murdered man was found your glove, stained with his blood; and a little way from his dead body a handkerchief bearing the single initial 'A.' Whose name commences with that letter? Could anything be clearer or more conclusive?" "And you believe me guilty?"

" I do."

He took a step toward her. She never forgot the dreadful look upon his face.

"I scorn to make any explanation. I might, perhaps, clear myself of this foul accusation, but I will make no effort to do so. But not another day will I live beneath the same roof with the woman who believed me guilty of murder, and yet sunk herself so low as to become my wife."

"As you please," she said, defiantly. "I should be quite as happy were it so." He bowed coldly, courteously-went out, and closed the door behind him. The sound struck to the heart of his

"Arabel! Who calls me Arabel?" she asked, dreamily. "I have not heard that name since he spoke it! What a sweet voice he had! O, so sweet!-but falser than Satan! O. Louis, Louis! if we could go back to the old days among the orange groves, before I sinned-when we were innocent little children!"

"It is all over now, Arabel. You were tempted; but God is good to forgive if repentance is sincere."

"O, I have repented! I have, indeed! And I have prayed as well as I knew how. But my crimes are so fearful! You are sure that Christ is very merciful?"

"Very merciful, Arabel."

She clasped her hands, and her pale lips moved in prayer, though there was no audible word.

"Let me hold your hand, Louis. It gives me strength. And you were always a friend, so true and steadfast. How happy we were in those dear old days-you, and Inez and I! Ah, Inez-Inez! She died in her sweet innocence, loving and beloved-died by violence; but she never lived to suffer from the falsity of those she loved! Well, she is in paradise-God rest her!"

The dark eyes of Castrani grew. moist. There arose before him a picture of the fair young girl he had lovedthe gentle-eyed Inez-the confiding young thing he was to have married, had not the hand of a cruel jealousy cut short her brief existence. Arabel saw his emotion, and pressed his hand in hers, so cold and icy.

"You have suffered also, Louis, but not as I have suffered-O, no! O, the days before he came-he, the destroyer! What a handsome face he had, and how he flattered me! Flattered my foolish pride, until, deserting home and friends, I fled with him across the seas! To Paris-beautiful, frivilous, crime-imbued Paris. I am so faint and tired, Louis! Give me a drink from the wineglass."

He put it to her lips; she swallowed greedily, and resumed:

"I have written out my history fully. Why, I hardly know, for there are none but you, Louis, who will feel an interest in the poor outcast. But something has impelled me to write it, and when I am dead you will find it there in that desk, sealed and directed to yourself. Maybe you will never open it, for if my strength does not desert me, I shall tell you all that you will care to know, with my own lips. I want to watch your face as I go on, and see if you condemn me. You are sure God is more merciful than man?"

"In His word it is written, Arabel."

Troops to Go to Pensacola.

It is rumcred in military circles at Washington that the troops of the First Artillery, now stationed at various points on the gulf and Atlantic coasts, are to be concentrated at Pensacola, Fla., for practice with the modern heavy guns, which will soon be in position on Santa Rosa Island. The selection of a site for another battery leaves no doubt in the minds of military men that Pensacola is to be heavily fortified as rapidly as possible.

Wine Culture in China.

It is announced that a Chinese syndicate intends to open at once in Northern China a large establishment for the production of wine. The quality of the grapes grown in that region is said to be excellent. An increasing quantity of wine is consumed in China by the Chinese officials and the growing European settlements on the sea coasts. Heretofore the supply has "I'm in love"-"Oh! Now you stop!" come from California and Europe. With cheap labor it is figured that wine can be produced very cheaply at home. It is stated that the Chinese are anxious to drive foreign wines out of that market.

Up-to-Dave Love.

The story of love may be "that old, old story," but the manner in which it is told is ever changing. This is the day of the motto button, and the endof-the-century young man expresses his feeling for the up-to--date young woman in a style upon which as yet no grass has grown.

The two seat themselves in the parlor. The coat of the young man and the what-do-you-call-it of the young woman are covered with buttons. He hands one to her. It says:

"Girl Wanted." She unpins one from her breast, and, with a blush, hands it to him. It reads:

"How do you like my style?" The man presents: "You tickle me nearly to death."

The Woman: "There are others." The Man: "Nay, nay, Pauline!" The Woman: "Oh, say not!" The Man: "There's only one girl in the world for me."

Neuralgia of the Heart and Stomach and Sleeplessness Made Her Life One of Misery-After Suffering Ten Years and Given Up to Die By Physicians, She Finds a Cure.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind. Mrs. John Beard, of Jackson, Mich. was for many years a great sufferer with neuralgia of the heart and stomach, and was considered hopelessly ill. A reporter of the New Era called on Mrs. Beard, who stated as follows:

"I have been a sufferer from neuralgia of the heart and stomach for many years, originally brought on by exposure. It is just ten years ago since I experienced the first neuralgia twinges when my screams could be heard for several blocks.

"These attacks usually lasted about two hours and came very frequently. Morphine was my only standby, I had no appetite, I could not walk, and at times my jaws became so firmly set that they could not be opened.

"Several specialists and many physicians were consulted, but to no purpose. I had almost lost hope, when I read a testimonial of Mrs. Henry Osting, of Sunman, whom I knew, regard-ing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and decided to give them a trial. The first box had not been used when all the pain left me, and after using the rest of the half dozen boxes I was as well as ever I was in my life." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Thankful It's Not Worse.

Shortly after the American colonies had achieved their independnce George III. issued a proclamation commanding general Thanksgiving. A noted clergyman visited his majesty and desired to know what there was to be thankful for, now that England had suffered the loss of its fairest possession. The king replied that it was proper to be grateful that things were no worse. The relation of this incident may help some silver democrat to enjoy his Thanksgiving turkey.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition. hearing will be denormal condition, hearing will be de-stroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are decaused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous sur-faces.

Are now as desirable as any in the market. The lands, particularly in the northern part of Wisconsin, are being rapidly taken up by actual settlers.

The most salable are the timber and meadow lands now ranging in price from $6.00 to $12.00 per acre. A few months hence their value will be greatly increased.

For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the West has ever before been offered. Now is the time to invest. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere.

"Great Scott!" exclaimed the young man from the city, who was inclined to be critical. "How terribly cross-eyed that half-grown son of Farmer Whetrock is. He is certainly the worst case I ever saw. He looks as if one eye was gazing regretfully back at last Fourth of July, while the other was looking anxiously forward to, next Christmas. What an unfortunate thing to have been born so!".

"Oh, he wasn't born that way," replied Farmer Hornbeak. "One time, when the boy was about nine years old. his father took him out in the woods, an' they saw a big gray squirrel up in a tree an' a chipmunk friskin' around on the ground some distance to one side. The old man told the boy to stand perfectly still an' keep his eyes fixed on both of 'em while he went back to the house for his gun. The boy obeyed orders so faithfully that by the time his father got back his eyes were twisted clear of their bias, an' they've stayed that way ever since."

Under Which Flag?

The experiences of two brothers, returned prisoners, who suffered at the hands of the Spaniards in Cuba the loss of all their worldly possessions may give this government and its citizens something to think about.

Briefly, the brothers were thrown into prison along with hundreds of other political suspects. They had been guilty of no crime except that of owning property in Cuba. While they thus lay in prison, waiting to be either set free or shot, they had plenty of time to make observations. One of the facts they noted and treasured up in their minds was this: At intervals of a short time the British consul at Havana came regularly there any Englishmen or British subthem step out here."

If there was a British subject there, he did not wait for a second call, but H. P. Askew; Manager, Fred Beinstepped out with alacrity. The consul investigated his case, and if there was no well founded serious charge against him that Englishman got his liberty in short order. But no American consul came thus promptly to the relief of imprisoned United States citizens. Nc orders came from the United States government looking to the protection of its children. On the whole, is it any wonder that there are flags more respected among the nations than that of the American republic?

Some Boston Words.

Americans mostly know how much they owe to Boston in the way of examples of propriety of behavior and the use of good grammar. Few, however, are aware of what Buston has done for the English language in the way of actually enriching it with new words. Mr. C. W. Ernst instances a number of these in The New England Magazine.

We find from his paper that the word 'commonwealth" as applied to a country and its government was a coinage of the Massachusetts colony in 1634. Afterward Cromwell himself borrowed the word for Great Britain.

The word "town" as applied to a neighborhood or township is also a Boston idea. So is "rum," meaning an intoxicating drink distilled from molasses. This was first made in Boston in 1653. Boston also borrowed to bicycles more often even than as originally to speeding down hill upon a sled over a snow track. Boston likewise inplanks and woods prepared for the market. "Caucus" is one of her word coins

Fern Hutchinson came off victor in the doll contest at the bazaar last e rening, the result being as follows: Vern Hutchinson, 141 votes; Hattie Palmer, 138, and Florence Jahnke, 129. Hattie and Florence were both presented with a beautiful doll.

The following officers were elected by Camp 809, M. W. A., Tuesday evening, to serve the ensuing year: Venerable Consul, A. J. Redmond; to the fortress and called aloud: "Are Worthy Adviser, George J. Hager; Excellent Banker, John Robertson; jects in this prison? If there are, let Clerk, M. T. Lamey; Escort, H. S. Meier; Physician, Dr. C. H. Kendall; Watchman, M. A. Bennett; Sentry, hoff: Delegate to State Convention, M. T. Lamey; alternate, E. M. Blocks.

> The members of the order of the Modern Woodmen of America are congratulating themselves on the fact that eleven assessments for 1896 are found sufficient to discharge in full the mortuary liability of the order. This is the seventh consecutive year that eleven assessments a year has been found sufficient to meet the expenses of the order, which is by far a better record than any other fraternal insurance society can show up. The fact that no assessment is levied in December does not relieve the members from their obligation to pay camp general fund dues for the first six months in 1897 in December.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Johnson spent Thanksgiving Day with their daughter, Mrs. C. D. Taylor at Palatine. The children and grand children all met for a family reunion, and a jolly good time was enjoyed by all. There were nineteen guests, who sat down to a table laden with every thing Remember that gathered around grandpa's chair, and were entertained for some time with his many campaign songs. All wished for many returns of the day.

A woman patient of the insane asyfrom Gloucester, Mass., and brought into common use the word "schooner," not meaning a large beer glass, but a coast-ing vessel. There, too, is "coasting," lum at Elgin made her escape Thurs-Lageschulte's home, where she was given shelter over night. From her sliding down hill rapidly, now applied talk it was evident that she was of unsound mind, and Mr. Lageschulte came to town and notified Supervisor John C. Plagge of the presence of his vented "lumber," to designate boards, strange guest. Mr. Plagge immediately made inquiries by wire of the Elgin asylum management whether the woman had escaped from that institution. Before an answer was rewidespread and illustrious linguistic in- ceived the woman came into town vention--- "paper money." In Boston and was taken into custody by Marpaper money was first issued and first shal Sandman. A few minutes later a message was received from Elgin, stating that she had escaped from the asylum there and that an attendant would come for her at once. At 3 o'clock a lady attendant of the asylum arrived and returned with her charge to Elgin on the 5 o'clock train.

Censuring Other People.

In an editorial on the spirit of peace and good will which ought to pervade the universe at Christmas time the editor of Scribner's Magazine speaks of that unhappy tendency of people to criticise other people. He says:

It is right for us to have a standard, and it is natural for us to use our discernment in measuring people by it, but it is neither kind nor wise to reject or condemn everybody who does not happen to come up to it.

If we are going to consure our fellows, let us at least blame them only for what in them is justly censurable People are born into this world with vastly different outfits of intelligence, comeliness and health, and they are born into vastly different environments. We should not beame them for the absence of qualities or instincts which they had no means of inheriting, nor for the lack of knowledge or manners or dispositions which their environments gave them no opportunity to acquire. If we are to blame them at all, we ought to limit our censure to such faults as they might mably have avoided. Some folk try very hard to be good and to make the very most and best of what they have, but have such distorted materials to work with that they never win more than a very moderate succe er people don't seem to try half so hard; but, being born sounder, sweeter and more sane, with better wits and better instinct, work out what is in them under advantageous conditions and find the best things in life fairly tumbling into their laps. They are not really so deserving as their brethren who started with less and made more effort, but we applaud them a great deal more and like them a great deal

Paris has now 600 horseless vehicles in daily use. They are mostly utilized for delivery wagons. London is going in for them with a vim too. A city ordinance limits their speed in the streets of London to 12 miles an hour for light carriages and 5 miles an hour for wagons that weigh as much as two tons. This is the reading of the law, and from its wording one may judge that heavy gether on a special train on the Belt hanling motor wagons are already in use in London streets, which is not the as to the reason of their getting to- | case in any American city. England has now 15 factories that are manufacturing motor wagons. They are propelled to a North-Western was suggested, but is large extent by electricity. The United States is behind either France or Great Britain in adopting horseless vehicles.
