PALATINE LOCALS.

A. G. SMITH, LOCAL EDITOR

Eat turkey Thursday.

Lecture Tuesday night.

A large amount of poultry is being handled by our merchants.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gibbs have been visiting relatives here this week.

This section is experiencing the worse fall weather in many years.

Master Ernie Loomis, who has been on the sick list for a week, is out again.

A light covered spring wagon for sale. Enquire at PALATINE REVIEW office.

Miss Alice Wortman of Sheridan, Ill., is visiting with R. H. Lytle and family.

Ray Fox, who was taken sick while visiting friends in Chicago, is improving slowly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Cutting and Mrs. Ann Lytle of Austin were Palatine visitors Wednesday.

The High school football team will play the Marquettes on Nason's field Thanksgiving afternoon.

Miss Margaret Resh and Edith La-Croix of Elgin were guests of Frank Keyes and family Sunday.

The Palatine Fire Department will give a grand dance in Batterman's hall next Wednesday night.

James Moorehouse has been in Chicago this week attending to his divorce suit, which is on trial.

Ruth Wilson, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson, has been dangerously ill, but is better at present.

Mark Bennett of Chicago, who was reported nearly killed by falling onto a switch, expected to go to work yesterday.

Mrs. Walter H. Cobban of Minneapolis is visiting her sister, Mrs. Converse. Mr. Cobban will spend Sunday here, as will also B. O. Gibbs of Rock Island.

Mrs. Bowen and Mrs. Douer with her daughter, Grace, of Chicago visited with Mrs. Fenton on Saturday. Mrs. Jacobson and children and Mrs. Siedler and daughter, Hazel, of Chicago were guests Saturday and Sunday.

The third lecture in the League course will be given on Tuesday evening, November 22, by Rev. Jackman on "Our New Possessions." The lecture will be illustrated and, doubtless, of great interest to all. No admission fee.

Upon hearing that the League was trying to secure money for the church debt, Dr. Crane generously donated twenty-five dollars of the amount which he received for his lectures. Some great men have original ideas of generosity as well as of thought.

Our readers would be surprised to know of the number of stories which reach the editor and which have not a word of truth in them. We wish more of our readers would send in items when they have visitors, or go visiting, so that their articles will be correct.

Dell Sheridan, who has been riding horses for J. W. Wilson for two years past, was killed in a race at Nashville last Wednesday. His horse fell at the start and several horses ran over him, fracturing his skull and inflicting internal injuries. He had been engaged to ride for one of the best stables in Canada next season.

A good-sized crowd greatly enjoyed Dr. Crane's lectures in the Methodist church last Friday night. Mr. Crane has the faculty of telling the most humorous stories with a straight face, which made them intensely pleasing. But wit and humor were not the only good things with which the people were treated. His talk at times showed a wonderful, clean, active brain and the many good common sense sayings were well placed. Dr. Crane's lectures cannot be valued by dollars. We wish that every one in Palatine had been there.

Mrs. L. Peck and Mrs. Wm. Nason when to Chicago Tuesday to see Mrs. Warren Taylor, who has been quite sick.

Will Filbert has secured a good position with the Federal Steel company of the United States, incorporated for $200,000,000, with headquarters at New York. Will has resigned his position with the Chicago & Northwestern railway and goes to New York the first of December. Some people say awful things about trusts and corporations, but we notice several Palatine boys who were not born with the proverbial silver spoon, have, by their own efforts, attained good positions with big concerns. The one who gets up and hustles is always the person who gets the luck he deserves. Will will be missed in Palatine where he has always stood high in the esteem of all our citizens, who congratulate him upon his success.

Letter from Dr. Butcher.

VANCOUVER HARBOR, Nov. 9, '98. EDITOR REVIEW: Our friends in Palatine will be glad to learn that we reached Vancouver without mishap last Saturday. We ought to have sailed on Monday, but the mails from England were delayed on the Atlantic, so we will not sail until tomorrow. In the meantime the ship served us as our hotel, here we eat and sleep at the company's expense, and the eating is not followed by those disturbances and eruptions that so often interfere with digestion on ship board. After visiting our folks in Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota, we left St. Paul over the Soo line to Moose Jaw, where we transferred to the Canadian Pacific.

Western Minnesota is somewhat sparsely settled and there did not seem to be many settlers in the northern part of North Dakota. In the southern part of Canada there are quite a number of farms, and all day Thursday there was not much to relieve the monotony of the vast expanse of level prairie but the old buffalo trails and wallows that abound on every hand.

When we awoke on Friday morning we found ourselves in the heart of the Rocky mountains. The mountain tops were covered with mist, so we saw no glaciers or snow-capped hills. But we did see some snow and at Glacier had a little fun at snow-balling. At Donald, B. C., we left the Rockies and entered the Selkirk mountains. The Selkirks are much lovelier than the Rockies, but they are usually covered with vast forests of fir and cedar, and some of the river gorges are very fine. The scenery all through Friday and Saturday was a constant changing panorama of ravishing views. The highest altitude reached by our railway was about 5,300 feet, and the descent was much more rapid than the ascent. When we reached Vancouver we went to the Carter House, where we had comfortable rooms and fairly cooked food. We were glad to get on the boat, where we have had better food and no expectation of a reckoning to come. Vancouver is a marvelous little city. Thirteen years ago it was a forest, now it is the metropolis of British Columbia. The harbor is as pretty as that of Naples, and altogether, it looks as if Vancouver ought to be one of the leading cities of the Pacific coast. We attended the Homer Street Methodist church on Sunday, and listened to an eloquent sermon by Dr. Eby.

The climate here is damp just now and quite chilly, but the grass is quite green and severe frost is said to be unknown, though the latitude is over 45 degrees. We have on board the Empress of Japan, about 100 first-class passengers and over 500 Chinese.

REV. J. C. BUTCHER.

Electric Road to the Lakes Talked of Again.

The Chicago and Fox Lake Electric railroad company, which has been incorporated, is seeking the right-of-way through central Lake county. The road is designed to connect the lake region of the county with the various railroads that now run through the county for the accommodation of summer resorters. It will be extended north as far as Fox Lake. The capital stock of the company is $300,000 and it is expected that the road will be completed by next summer.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Engineer Bennett Has His Throat Injured on a Diamond Switch Wing.

Mark Bennett, an engineer on the Northwestern railroad met with a peculiar accident, which nearly cost him his life.

Bennett was bringing his train into Chicago Sunday afternoon when, near Winnetka, he found a switch open. He left his cab to close it. He tripped on the track. His neck as he fell struck one of the keen wings of the diamond switch and his throat was cut, as though a knife was drawn across it. The engineer was rendered unconscious by the loss of blood. A doctor was summoned at once and the injured man was removed to his home at 231 North May street.

The last report received here has it that the injured man is progressing nicely.

Mr. Bennett was formerly a resident of Barrington.

A Great Improvement.

The following are a few extracts from the Banker, Merchant and Manufacturer, published in Chicago, in an extended write-up in its issue of November 9th of Chicago's great telephone system:

"People who did business in Chicago years ago, when the telephone was in rather an embryonic state, will realize what it is to have to conduct a business of almost any sort without the convenience offered by that instrument. They appreciate all too plainly the fact that for an important, though small, communication with another business man in another part of the city an extended walk or ride became a necessity, or else a day might be lost in waiting for the customary reply to a letter. In some lines that might have been all well enough in those days. But times have changed, and have changed very materially too, for a successful business man nowadays must be provided with all the equipments and facilities necessary to the quick, yet perfect transaction of his business, else some other man more enterprising gradually undermines him, not from reasons of bitter competition so much as for reasons of pure progressiveness.

"Taking every possible and probable condition into consideration, it is universally acknowledged now that the affairs of this world would be sadly crippled, almost disastrously affected, by the cessation of either our telegraphic or telephonic service, so dependent are we upon both, the latter most of all for our daily and yearly progress.

"Chicago's telephone system and service, however, is one of the many things of which the city is proud. The enterprise of the Chicago Telephone company in keeping abreast of the times by constantly extending its patrons with all the modern appliances which tend to make the exchange complete, is deserving of much commendation."

In conclusion the article points out the perfection of the system, and says: "A subscriber can hold a conversation with any customer in the city, can complete large details on Wall street in New York or engage in business correspondence with friends in Boston, as the case may be. Thus, within a few minutes can be done what would have required at least from three days to a week to accomplish not many years ago." Since the inauguration of this far-reaching line in Barrington by the Chicago Telephone company, we enjoy all the telephone advantages as do Chicago. It is a boom to any town to be thus favored.

How to Get Strong

A system which has become run down by the trying weather of the past summer is not in a condition to meet the severe winter of this climate and will easily fall a prey to disease unless a proper tonic is used.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best medicine in the world for building up and strengthening an enervated system.

Do not confuse these pills with ordinary purgative pills. They do NOT act on the bowels, thereby further weakening the body. They build up the blood and strengthen the nerves.

Major A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich., is a well-known civil engineer. He says: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight. I could not regain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks. I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution."—Detroit Free Press.

"John," she asked, "how do you like this hat on me?" "Oh, I dunno," he answered. "Have you bought it?" "No; not exactly. I brought it home on approval. An Explanation.

"I wonder why it is that so many men of talents become sour and distrustful of their fellow creatures," mused the young woman. "I suppose," replied Miss Cayenne, "it's because they are constantly subjected to such emotional extremes. They can never tell whether a caller is an autograph collector or a bill collector."—Washington Star.

Misjudged.

Old Lady—There is one thing I notice particularly about that young man who calls to see you. He seems to have an inborn instinctive respect for woman as though she were a being from a higher sphere, to be approached with the utmost delicacy and deference. Granddaughter (sweet eighteen)—Yes, he's horribly bashful.

English.

He—They say that 116,000,000 people now speak the English language. She—I wonder how many of them say "he done it" and "I have saw?"

Shell Wilden.

A ROMANCE

"And risk bringing back the infection here? No, thank you," cries Ruby, hotly. "I shall ask mamma to forbid you."

"My dear Ruby," interposes Mrs. Wilden's voice with unusual firmness, "if Shell thinks it her duty to go I shall certainly not try to stop her. I shall feel terribly anxious, but it will only be for a day or so; and I believe the disease in its first stage is not very infectious."

"Do you mean that you would take her back here amongst us after being with the children?" asks Ruby, aghast.

"Of course she will return when the nurse arrives. There is no need to run unnecessary risk. If you and Violet feel nervous, we'd better return to the Wilderness, and Shell can stop here until the doctor warrants her safe."

"I have such a horror of small-pox that I really think that would be the better plan," remarks Ruby, with a sigh of relief. "What do you say, Vi?" "Oh, let us start for Mudford by all means! I am not particularly timid, but I feel that I ought to go for Edwin's sake"—Edwin is her fiancé—"it would be such a sell for him if he came home and found me disfigured. Shell, dear"—pressing a hasty kiss on her cousin's cheek—"you are a heroine; but the world is made up of all sorts, and I am the sort that runs away."

"I am not a bit heroic. I should run away too if I felt afraid," laughs Shell; "but I don't, and therefore I shall take no harm."

So it is arranged. Shell, after gathering a few necessities together and receiving a tearful embrace from her mother, hurries back to her sleeping charges; and during the afternoon Ruby and Violet take their departure, while Mrs. Wilden is left to bemoan the fact that she ever allowed herself to be worried into taking a cottage on the moor.

CHAPTER XIV.

Two days and nights have elapsed; no answer has been received to the doctor's hastily-despatched telegram; and Shell, sitting patiently beside her charges, begins to think that the address given by Piper must have been an erroneous one. Nor has a professional nurse put in her appearance—the children are going on so favorably that the doctor deems the services of one unnecessary, since Shell is determined not to quit her post, and indeed has given a promise to that effect to her little patients.

She is quite isolated from the rest of the household. The children are installed in a large room at the end of the passage which on their arrival was fitted up as a night-nursery. Shell is with them all day; at night she occupies the roomy old sofa in the adjoining room, leaving the door of communication open.

All intercourse with the outer world is carried on cautiously round the saturated sheet which cuts her off from the household in general. Yet somehow Shell has no feeling of isolation; she has books in plenty to occupy her when the children sleep, and during their waking hours she has work enough to keep them amused.

She is sitting at the ivy-wreathed casement on the third morning, looking out for the doctor's visit, when a hired carriage drawn by a pair of horses, turns suddenly into the front yard. She cannot see the occupants as it passes beneath the window, and the front of the house is also out of sight.

She rises from her seat with a strange feeling of confusion and nervousness; she would give worlds to become invisible; she even glances out of the window, as if meditating escape in that direction.

Then steps are heard down the passage, the door-handle turns, and the next moment Robert Champey enters the room, followed by the housekeeper at Champey House.

"Papa, papa," shriek two shrill little voices; "and Tolley—dear old Tolley!"

The children are caressed and quieted, whilst Mrs. Tolley delights them with a huge bunch of flowers which she has brought with her.

Then Robert Champey crosses over to the window where Shell is standing in the background. The girl looks pale and almost stern, though a very unusual thing with Shell—she is trembling visibly.

"Shell, how can I ever thank you for this?" says Mr. Champey, in a tone broken by emotion.

"There is nothing to thank me for that I see," answers Shell coldly. "I like nursing—if mamma would only let me I should like to enter a hospital."

"No young and beautiful woman can like nursing small-pox cases," rejoins Robert Champey.

It is the first time in her life that Shell has been called "beautiful," and a quick flush rises to her white skin which really renders her so for the moment. Then she breaks into a laugh.

"It is chicken-pox—not small-pox," she says quickly.

"Are you sure?" asks her companion, whilst a look of relief lights up his whole face.

"Yes, quite; for the first twelve hours the doctor feared otherwise, but there is no doubt whatever now they are suffering from chicken-pox in its mildest form; only as Mrs. Pomfret's children have not had it; we are taking every precaution."

"And you—have you had it?" asks Robert Champey anxiously.

"Yes, three years ago," laughs Shell; "so you see"—with a satirical little smile—"I have been running no great risk."

"As it has turned out," answers her companion, regarding her steadily; "but I can never forget that you nursed them during those twelve doubtful hours when all others turned and fled." "That is nothing," returns Shell carelessly; then, advancing to the little cots drawn side by side, she says to the children, "Now you have got kind Mrs. Tolley, I am going to run away." "No, no, Sell—you stop too," lisps Meg, catching Shell's sleeve in her hot hand. "Tolley can't tell about the fairy princess."

"Oh, yes, she can!" hazards Shell, with a laughing glance at Mrs. Tolley. "Besides, I'll find out about more princesses to tell you when you are well again;" and she bends down to imprint a farewell kiss on the fevered face.

Suddenly a gray-coated arm is interposed between Shell's red lips and little Meg's white brow.

"I can allow no kissing!" says Robert Champey decidedly.

Shell draws herself up rigid as a grenadier, whilst Meg fights feebly with an intervening arm.

"You have run risk enough without courting it," explains Mr. Champey almost angrily.

Shell merely shrugs her shoulders. "Mrs. Tolley," she says, turning to the housekeeper, "if you will come into the other room with me I will explain about the medicine, et-cetera, and the doctor will be here shortly, so you will have full directions from him about the children."

Mrs. Tolley does as she is asked, and from that "other room" Shell slips away home without any further intercourse with Robert Champey.

A fortnight has elapsed. In the rustic porch of Gorse Cottage two figures are seated—a laughing-eyed merry girl in spotless white, a tall, stalwart man in gray tweed. The house door is closed, and the interview is consequently a private one.

"I shall call you 'Pearl,'" the gentleman is saying, with laughing decision.

"No, I won't be Pearl; my old name suits me much better. I am rough and uneven and hard—in fact, thorough oyster-Shell," pouts the girl rebelliously.

"You certainly conducted yourself like a Shell when I first knew you; but adversity opened the Shell, and then I saw the treasure inside, and pounced upon my Pearl," laughs the gentleman.

"I hope I may really prove a treasure to you, but I sometimes doubt it," says Shell with comic candor. "You know I have a good many faults—I am quick-tempered and blunt, and some people think me eccentric."

Robert Champey indulges in an amused laugh.

"You will perhaps be surprised to hear that neither am I perfect," he returns. "I can be obstinate, and even grumpy at times."

"Really?" asks Shell in a tone of unbelief.

"Yes—really and truly," laughs the gentleman. "And now, Pearl—I told you I was obstinate—I want to know what induced you to be so particularly uncivil to Ted and me when we first returned to Champey House."

"Was I very horrid?" she asks evasively, flushing.

"You snubbed poor Ted so unmercifully that I doubt if he will ever recover his normal state of placid conceit."

"Well, you see, it was this way," explains Shell in self-justification—"I knew that you were rich, and that everybody would be particularly gracious and officious, so I made up my mind to be an exception to the rule."

"Which you certainly were," Meg was one of the first to find you out," laughs Meg's father, as that little damsel, soon tired after her recent illness, comes creeping into Shell's lap. "That little dress reminds me of the day I caught you working at the window," pursues Robert Champey, touching his daughter's pale-blue skirts.

"Does it?" says Shell, with a shy, pleased laugh.

"Own the truth, Pearl; you made that dress?"

"I certainly had a finger in the pie," answers Pearl demurely.

"Do you remember, I told you then that the turquoise was your stone?"—touching her left hand, on which flashes a circlet of diamonds surrounding a turquoise, almost unique in color and size.

"I remember," assents Shell dreamily.

"Tell me a tale, Sell," at this moment interposes Meg, laying her tired head with a restful sigh upon the girl's plump shoulder.

"I'll tell you a tale, Meg," says her father, bending down to kiss the child's white brow. "Shell has promised to come to Champey House and live with us always—what do you say to that?"

"I say she's a brick," remarks Bob, who has joined the circle.

Robert Champey gave an amused glance at his promised wife, and then they both break into a hearty peal of laughter.

(THE END.)

A MUSICIAN'S YOUTH.

It was by a devious path, some steps of which were painful, that Verdi became a musician. When he was seven years old, his mild and somewhat melancholy temperament attracted the attention of the parish priest, and he received the appointment of acolyte at the village church of Le Roncole. One day a priest was celebrating mass, with Verdi as his assistant, when the boy became so carried away by the music that his duties were entirely forgotten. "Water!" whispered the priest, but Verdi did not respond. Then, thinking his request had not been heard, the celebrant repeated "Water!"

Still there was no reply, and, turning round, the priest found the server gazing in wonder and delight at the organ.

"Water!" demanded the priest, for the third time, accompanying the order with such a well-directed movement of the foot that the little Verdi was pitched headlong down the altar steps. In falling he struck his head, and was carried to the vestry quite unconscious.

Perhaps it was this incident, together with the child's unbounded delight in the organ music he heard in the street, that induced his father, who was an innkeeper, to add a spinet, or pianoforte, to his worldly possessions.

But it was several years after this that his vocation was temporarily decided for him, though fate afterward stepped in and undid the decision.

"Why do you want to be a musician?" asked his confessor. "You have a gift for Latin, and must be a priest."

Meanwhile, the lad became an office boy in Brezzi's wholesale grocery store, and for a little over seven dollars a year played the organ in the church at Roncole; but one day it happened that Father Seletti, who had decided that the boy should be a monk, was officiating at mass while Verdi played the organ. The priest was struck with the unusual beauty of the music, and at the close of the service expressed a desire to see the organist. Verdi appeared, and the priest recognized him as the pupil whom he had sought to turn from music to theology.

"Whose music were you playing?" asked Seletti. "It was beautiful."

Verdi said, shyly, that he had brought no music with him that day, and had been improvising.

"So I played as I felt," said he.

"Ah," exclaimed Seletti, "I advised you wrongly. You must be no priest, but a musician."

After that the way was easier. The priestly influence on his side opened many a door to him.

The Old, Old Story.

Mrs. Jaggs (the next morning)—Do you know what time you got home last night? Mr. Jaggs—It must have been pretty late, but an important business transaction detained me at the office and—by the way, dear, did you see anything of my shoes? Mrs. Jaggs—Yes; you'll find them hanging on the hat rack in the hall, just where you left them.

HER HEART'S DESIRE.

"He shall give thee thy heart's desire," the choir of the little country church did not sing the beautiful words very well. The soprano's voice was unmistakably "cracked" and the tenor displayed surprising disregard of time and tune. But then, there were no musical critics in the small congregation scattered throughout this quiet little country church that Thanksgiving morning. And the beauty of the words and the promise contained in them touched the hearts of many.

"Wait patiently upon the Lord and he shall give thee thy heart's desire," repeated the choir.

"It is not true!"

The words were not spoken, but they were in the thought and heart of one old woman sitting far back near the door. She sat alone, for she was alone in the world. Those who had once peopled the old pew with her—father, mother, husband, brothers and sisters, and the child of her love and care, all were gone. The quiet peaceful beauty of that Thanksgiving morning and the spiritual atmosphere of the church had quite failed to appeal to old Margaret Hudson. Never had she felt in a more rebellious mood. It would have dazed and pained the white-haired old elder in the pulpit had he known the thoughts that were uppermost in the mind of the small, dark, keen-eyed little old woman whose head gave a little defiant toss when he rose and said:

"Let us bow our heads in prayer." Margaret Hudson did not bow her head, and her heart did not respond to the simple, fervent prayer of Elder Norris.

"What's the use?" she was saying angrily to herself. "Haven't I been bowing my head and my knees in prayer for years and years—in one prayer for one thing, for my heart's desire, and has it been granted to me? No, it hasn't! I have waited patiently on the Lord and He has not given me the desire of my heart. I don't believe that He ever will give it to me. I've lost faith and hope. I can't help it. My 'heart's desire' has been denied me so long and the promise has not come true to me. I can't believe that it is true."

There were educated, polished and brilliant ministers in beautiful city churches who preached with less simple and tender beauty than that old elder preached that morning about the joy of gratitude and praise-giving for the blessings of God, but Margaret Hudson was not touched by the words. Her faith had lost its Olivet and her love its Galilee.

"When He gives me my heart's desire," she said stubbornly. "When He sends my boy, my Jim, back to me, I will believe that His promises are true. I can't trust Him more until He does."

She did not tarry at the close of the sermon for her usual greeting of old friends, but stole out alone and hurried toward her lonely home, the homeliness and desolation of which were never so hard to bear as now.

"If He'd hear my prayer and send Jim back to me it would be so," she said.

Jim! Her heart's desire! Where was he at that moment?

"God only knows!" his mother said between her broken sobs as she went slowly along over the country road, the bright sunlight of a glorious November day lending a radiance to the brown leaves still remaining on the trees. It had been twenty years since she had seen Jim. He was then a handsome, head-strong boy, of 18, and the only child that had come to her. She had lavished upon him the warmest, tenderest affections of her life, and yet she never knew just why Jim had run away from home in his eight-cent year and she had never seen him nor heard from him since that day. She knew that he had gone "out west," and she was too poor to follow him, had she known where he was.

There had been vague and unfounded rumors that he had "got into trouble," but proof of this was lacking, and her neighbors had long ago ceased to speak of Jim to Margaret Hudson. But not for one day nor for one hour had she ceased to think of him—her heart's desire.

Twenty years of unanswered prayer had ended in this spirit of depression and rebellion, and there was no love nor gratitude in Margaret Hudson's heart that Thanksgiving morning.

Presently she came to the bars in a fence by the roadside through which she must pass on her homeward way. She leaned heavily on the bars, and then dropped slowly to her knees with her head resting on one gaunt arm stretched out upon one of the bars. Her lips moved slowly in prayer:

"Oh, God," she said, "I have been so sinful, so wicked. Forgive me and let the desire of heart be for perfect trust in Thee, no matter what Thy will may be concerning me. Make this my heart's desire."

There was a smile on her brown and wrinkled old face when she rose to her feet and went on her homeward way. All trace of rebellion had fled from her face, and her eyes shone through a mist of tears.

She pushed open the gate before her tiny brown house and when old Hero, the dog, came bounding forward with noisy greeting she patted him kindly and said cheerily:

"Good old dog! Glad to see me, aren't you, old fellow?"

She looked up to see a tall, broad-shouldered, brown-bearded man coming rapidly down the path toward her with outstretched arms and twinkling brown eyes.

"Mother!" he said.

"Why, Jim!"

And they walked up the path with their arms around each other.

And later Margaret Hudson went softly about her tidy, sunny dining room setting her table for dinner and singing softly, "Wait patiently upon the Lord and He shall give thee thy heart's desires."

A certain tribe of Indians possess a divinity known as the "swearing god." This is a ridiculous little image nailed to the wall. It represents the power of evil, and it is considered a pious act to denounce it in the most picturesque and forcible language at one's command. Uniformity of Divorce Law.

The animated discussion of divorce in the general Episcopal convention, which recently closed its sittings at Washington, has called fresh attention to this subject, one of the most important which society is called on to solve. The laws relating to marriage and divorce being made by the different state legislatures, it need scarcely be said, are widely divergent, and this involves a crowd of evils which at once suggest themselves to thought. Why a national law of marriage and divorce, prescribing the fixed conditions under which the dissolution of the marriage vows shall become legal in every state should not exist like a national bankruptcy law is one of the curious anomalies existing under our trifurcated political system.

The facility with which divorce may be obtained in some of the states is well known and has frequently drawn the attention of social reformers. The privileges of these laws are not only bestowed on the real citizens, but extend to temporary sojourners, who have resided there for 60 or 90 days. No discussion of the presumptive evils which are invoked to justify such laws is necessary. It is a question not so much of any alleged evil in the fact itself as of the wide variety of law by which a couple are a divorced pair in one state and married in another, while, even if a dissolution of the bond is admitted in practice, a moral stigma attaches to a new marriage, and all kinds of complications arise, which radically affect the social, if they do not touch the legal condition. The wide difference of opinion which exists as to the theory and purpose of marriage is of course the root of the difference in state legislation. This makes it a question of importance that there should be enforced harmony of conditions, for it is the result on the great body of social life which is to be looked to. A constitutional amendment would of course be necessary to make a uniform divorce law possible. The constitution forbids that one state should impair the legal contract made under the laws of another state. Whether this can be stretched to cover dissolution of contract, as well as the making, is possibly debatable. The question should be thrashed out by persistent agitation. Even those favoring lenient divorce laws recognize the great evils which come out of the widely divergent legislation on this great question. It is probable that a great majority of the citizens of all the country, including those of the liberal divorce states, would be glad to have a uniform law throughout the land.

All those who love brave deeds and gallant spirits will regret that Major Marchand's plucky exploit in crossing equatorial Africa can be only a futile exploit. His exhibition of patient will and endurance in penetrating through the very heart of a series of savage and intractable tribes and in teeth of difficulties equal to those met by Livingstone, Speke, Burton and Stanley will insure him the full meed of the world's admiration. His motive was the same as that which led Champlain, La Salle, Marquette and Joliet to bury themselves in the heart of the North American wilderness—the hope of furthering colonial expansion for France. That on arriving at his goal, the Nile, he should have met the victorious presence of Kitchener's army, resuming a possession the title to which had never been abandoned by Egypt, snatched the substance from his grasp, but does not deprive him of the glory of the deed, though that glory is but a shadow, as it but too often is. Lord Kitchener and all those who barred his way express the heartiest admiration for the man, while they interpose a stern denial to all the claims which the achievement involves. It is for Marchand's sake alone that one could desire that the Fashoda incident could have compassed the fullness of the heroic adventurer's wish.

Lord Joseph Lister, the great founder of antiseptic surgery, made a highly interesting speech recently at the opening of the pathological and physiological laboratory at Victoria university, Liverpool, on the subject of vivisection. While he admitted the cruel abuses with which it had been disgraced by many investigators, he insisted there could be no great progress in medicine or surgery except through its means.

as claimed that competent vivisectionists inflicted scarcely any pain, and it was through them that the field of curative science was being extended at a rate which sometimes amazed even those familiar with the subject. Man, he considered, owed a debt beyond estimate to this kind of investigation.

It is singular that pride of blood and race breaks out so irresistibly sometimes from all bonds. The French Canadians of lower Canada are on the whole loyal subjects of the queen. Yet they still harbor a passionate love for 'la belle France. The French newspapers of Canada froth at the mouth over what they call England's barbarous treatment of France as madly as if they were published in Paris.

To be well dressed not only impresses the world, but it is like a tonic to the courage of a man if he is seeking to reinstate himself. The best advice to any one striving to better his position is, look as if you did not need to have it bettered.

The Singapore Free Press thus reports the criticism of a Chinaman at Shanghai on the European "foreign devils": "They certainly do not know how to amuse themselves. You never see them enjoy themselves by sitting quietly upon their ancestors' graves. They jump around and kick balls as if they were paid to do it. Again, you will find them making long tramps into the country, but that is probably a religious duty, for when they tramp they wave sticks into the air, nobody knows why. They have no sense of dignity, for they may be found walking with women. They even sit down at the same table with women, and the latter are served first. This sounds very much as if it were taken with but slight change from a book written by the English satirist, Churchill, a century since. It was supposed to give the reflections of a Persian nobleman, who was temporarily domiciled in London.

It is believed that some 15,000 Spanish soldiers will conclude to exercise the option given them and settle in Cuba instead of returning home. This will be an excellent thing for the island. Cuba needs all the white blood possible for its new development, and the Spanish peasant class is one of the most industrious, hardy and thrifty in Europe.

The arguments which are armed with such logic when applied to others are limp and halting when they come home to the individual. It is a question of the foot and the boot.

A lay of sunshine or a shower of rain contributes more to the welfare of the poor than all the dreams of the political economists.

It is an interesting fact that so many people connected with the stage are passionately fond of country life and take every opportunity to return to it. To cite some familiar examples, Mme. Calve, Melba, the De Reszkes and Mme. Lehmann, all have farms, where they take their ease and sell their products with a keener pleasure in this petty money making than in the big returns of the stage. There is scarcely an American actor whose first thought on making a little success is not a place in the country, where he can dig and hoe to his heart's content. It is a probable reason for this that the actor's professional life is so intensely artificial that his feelings rebound with the most ardent longing for the simplest things of nature. It is a pleasant thought that of Momus dropping his mask and costumes and plodding joyfully at the plow tail when occasion serves.

Mr. Zangwill, the author, now on a lecturing tour in America, was recently entertained at a great banquet in New York. In his after dinner speech, which was very clever and witty, he said, he referred to the showers of bitter criticism which his savage attack on the modern drama had incurred. He asserted that at first he had attributed this to an anti-Semetic feeling in America such as rages in many parts of Europe, but his friends had assured him differently. The implication is that Mr. Zangwill has so lofty a notion of his own greatness as an oracle that he cannot conceive any sensible person venturing to question the accuracy of his opinion.

A striking example of the inconsistency of fortune is that of Mr. Probascio of Cincinnati, who gave the city its famous Tyler-Davidson fountain. He has now lost all his fortune, and his magnificent residence and its furnishings were recently sold, while the ex-millionaire moved into a cottage.

A Sure Sign of Croup.

Hoarseness in a child that is subject to croup is a sure indication of the approach of the disease. If Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the croupy cough has appeared, it will prevent the attack. Many mothers who have croupy children always keep this remedy at hand and find that it saves them much trouble and worry. It can always be depended upon and is pleasant to take. For sale by A. S. Olms, Palatine and A. L. Waller, Barrington.

A Well-Known Restaurant.

The popular dining rooms of The Mrs. Clark Co., 151-153 Wabash Ave., Chicago, which were recently destroyed by fire, are now open to the public. No one will make a mistake in patronizing this restaurant.

REEFTON, New Zealand, Nov. 23, 1896. I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. In two years I have sold more of this particular remedy than of all other makes for the previous five years. As to its efficacy, I have been informed by scores of persons of the good results they have received from it, and know its value from the use of it in my own household. It is so pleasant to take that we have to place the bottle beyond the reach of the children. E. J. SCANTLEBURY. For sale by A. S. Olms, Palatine and A. L. Waller, Barrington.

Arthur Bees, aged 13 years, died last week at the home of his parents in Fairfield. Death is sad, though the years be many or few, and this is no exception to the rule, as it leaves the family and friends in sorrow for the beautiful life which was nipped in the bud. The last sad rites over the remains were held last Sunday afternoon at the German Lutheran church at 2 o'clock. Long before the appointed hour friends of the departed began to assemble at the church until the time the procession arrived from the house. The church was filled, notwithstanding the muddy roads and threatening weather. The crowd which turned out to pay their last respects to him who was so suddenly called away, expressed in a high degree the high regard in which the deceased was held by all who knew him. The white casket bearing the remains was laden with various flowers, and six of his class-mates acted as pallbearers. The service was conducted by Rev. Casten, pastor of the church. A large number of friends accompanied the remains to the Fairfield cemetery, where they were laid to rest.

The pressure has been removed from his brain and he will resume the active practice of law, in which he had been in the past so eminently successful. Mr. Collier is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rowlands, on Grove avenue, and says there will soon be a vacancy in the dial department of the watch factory, as Miss Lillian Rowlands, who has long been his sweetheart, will shortly become his wife. She attended him during the operation on his skull, and through her influence did he submit to the operation. His friends inform him that he appears as he did previous to his troubles, and predict that he will soon have the finest law practice in the west."

The editor of the Grinnell, (Iowa), Herald is tired of paying four prices for tickets in advertising and then having them branded "complimentary," and has adopted a policy which many other editors of less moral courage have long wanted to adopt, so he prints the following:

"Heretofore we have given freely of our columns to advertise entertainments, lectures, etc., gotten up purposely for gain. We have been paid, often grudgingly, in tickets, many of which we did not want, and did not and could not use, marked "complimentary" just to show that the persons giving them thought they had not been earned, although we paid double the price in advertising. We have stood by the public, the church, the societies and by everybody and everything without grumbling. The excessive demands made upon our columns for free space compels us to change our rules. Hereafter free notices will be given to free socials, church or fraternity gatherings. Notices of entertainments, lectures, etc., where admission is charged, will be charged for and then we shall buy tickets if we want them. This is fair. If you think advertising pays, pay for it. If you don't, then you don't take it."

WILL ABANDON THE TEMPLE

W. C. T. U. Votes Adversely on the Scheme.

MAJORITY WAS DECISIVE.

Only Seventy-One of the Delegates to the Convention Were in Favor of Keeping the Building in the Hands of the Union—Against, 285.

The W. C. T. U. convention at St. Paul decided, by a vote of 71 yeas to 285 nays, not to endorse the Chicago temple plan of Mrs. Matilda Carse. The organization repudiates the debts as a legal obligation, but morally it will support any scheme to secure the temple as a Willard memorial that does not bind it to guarantee the bonds, stock or interest.

The resolution, which was adopted, was reported by the executive committee. It follows: "That in view of the fuller light regarding the financial condition and limitations of the temple enterprise we recommend that the temple be discontinued as an affiliated interest of the N. W. C. T. U."

UNITED STATES SENATORS WHO WILL BE REITRED MARCH 4

David Turpie, Indiana.

Edward Murphy, New York.

Charles J. Faulkner, West Virginia.

WOULD MAKE PEACE.

Sagasta Opposes Proposition of Spanish Queen Regent.

The queen regent of Spain, whose health is visibly impaired by the strain of the last eight months, thinks the wisest course to be for the cabinet to instruct the Spanish peace commissioners frankly to concede the American demand of the Philippines and to work honestly and expeditiously to frame a treaty. Premier Sagasta refuses to entertain the proposition.

WORK OF FIREBUGS.

Disasterous Blaze in the Business Portion of Cannonsburg, Pa.

Firebugs caused the destruction of one-third of the business portion of Cannonsburg, Pa., and while the fire was raging reaped a harvest, robbing many houses. The fire broke out early in the morning and as the buildings were all of wood, the blaze spread rapidly, bidding defiance to the volunteer department and its bucket brigades. The losses aggregate $150,000.

Demand the Group Free.

It is said that the United States demand cession of the Philippines without paying any compensation or assuming any debt. Spain is expected to refuse, and, after the islands are seized by the Americans, will lay the matter before the powers.

ELECT THEIR OFFICERS.

Women's Christian Temperance Convention Chooses Leaders.

The National W. C. T. U. convention elected the following officers: National president, Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens of Maine; vice president at large, Mrs. Anna Gordon of Wisconsin; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. M. D. Fry of Illinois; recording secretary, Mrs. Clara Hoffman of Missouri; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. Francis E. Beauchamp of Kentucky; treasurer, Mrs. Helen M. Barker of Illinois.

Remove All Quarantine Restrictions.

All existing quarantine in the south against yellow fever, so far as it extends to disinfection and detention, has been raised, though the usual regular inspection at ports will be continued all the year round.

Glass Plants in Operation.

All the window glass plants in the country are in operation, the result of an agreement between the manufacturers' and workers' national wage committees. About 30,000 men go to work.

Explosion Kills Four Men.

Fire in the general store of C. A. Stearns at Hanover, Mass., was followed by a terrific explosion, which blew out the sides of the building, killing four men.

KEEP WAR TAXES.

Chairman Nelson Dingley Says They Will Not Be Abolished.

The Washington Post says that the war tax will not be abolished at the coming short session of congress and that there will be no revision of the tariff whatever. It bases this announcement upon the positive statement made by Chairman Dingley of the ways and means committee.

To Consolidate All Companies.

A movement is on foot looking to the consolidation of all the sash, door, and blind interests of America. The combination is backed by English capital. It is understood that each company coming into the trust will receive its prorata of the capital stock of the company, which will be $12,000,000.

Looted a Missouri Bank.

Burglars entered the savings bank at Kirksville, Mo., and looted the safe of all its gold and currency, together with about $15,000 of government coupon bonds. The whole amount taken is $21,000.

Murderer Confesses His Crime.

Ernest Messman, who murdered Mr. and Mrs. John Bahls, a wealthy and aged couple at Michleott, twelve miles from Manitowoc, Wis., committed suicide at the jail. He made full confession.

SIX CANDIDATES FOR THE INDIANA SENATORSHIP.

The race for the United States senatorship is going to be exciting. Mr. Turpie's term will expire next year and the legislature will fill his place with a Republican. But what Republican? That is the question that is at present perturbing the minds of Gov. James A. Mount, Congressman George W. Steele, Franklin B. Posey, Albert J. Beveridge, Robert S. Taylor and Frank Hanly. Mr. Hanly has been a candidate ever since the last legislature met, and has done some first-class campaigning. He is a lawyer of Lafayette, and he used to be an educator. Major Taylor lives in Fort Wayne and is one of the leading citizens of this state. Congressman Steele now represents the eleventh district, and has an ambition to represent the state in the senate. He has been in politics and before the public a long time. Mr. Beveridge is a famous orator. Indianapolis is his home.

Catarrh

In the Head

Is an inflammation of the mucous membrane lining the nasal passages. It is caused by a cold or succession of colds, combined with impure blood. Catarrh is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which eradicates from the blood all scrofulous taints, rebuilds the delicate tissues and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is America's Greatest Medicine. $1; six for $5. Hood's Pills cure all Liver Ills. 25 cents.

Typhoid and Malaria Germs.

It has been asserted that the germs of typhoid fever and malarial fever are antagonistic to each other and cannot exist together. Examinations recently made at the clinical laboratory of the University of Pennsylvania tend to upset this theory. In cases of two soldier patients the germs of both typhoid and malaria were found not only existing but thriving together. The theory is now advanced that the possible cause of the severity of the illness of some of the soldiers in certain camps was the presence of the germs of both of these diseases in their systems.

The new building will have a cold storage plant in the basement, and the upper floors will be used as a storage warehouse, and all freight will be loaded and unloaded from wagons under cover. CITY OF DAWSON IN RUINS.

Heavy Damage by Fire in the Alaskan Town.

LOSS ESTIMATED AT $500,000

No Insurance on the Property Destroyed, and Hundreds of People Will Be Without Shelter for the Winter—Seven Men Seriously Injured.

A fire started by a woman has destroyed a large section of Dawson, Alaska, causing a property loss of about $500,000, with no insurance, and leaving hundreds of people without shelter for the winter. No deaths resulted from the fire, but seven men were seriously injured, as follows: G. O. Ellis, "Pete" Enfield, A. Haskins, W. A. Jones, "Pete" Mullins, Daniel Millin, Constable Tipp.

All that remains to show where formerly forty buildings stood are a few blackened logs, and the town was saved from total destruction only by hard work by the firemen.

The mounted officers are investigating the origin of the fire.

It is said there is not enough lumber and window glass in Dawson to rebuild the burned district, and the people are in distress and will have to live in tents for the rest of the winter.

Ship Shed Horse Breeding.

Judge a farmer by the team he drives says the Western Agriculturist. If he drives scrub horses and mules, his farming is done on the scrub plan and he will raise scrub colts, because he will breed scrub mares to the cheapest stallion, with no regard to improvement; only the color must suit his taste, but he cares nothing for size and quality that go to make up the market requirements; he cares nothing for the market—he does not breed to suit the market, but to suit himself, and never has a good horse to sell. An exchange says one who is not a plug farmer should be ashamed of a plug team. Let him raise his own horses and do it to some purpose. He will be silly to breed his large mares to anything short of a pure bred draft stallion. Horses of a good class will do far more work, and the rearing of them will cost no more than will that of poor ones. Owners of good stallions are reporting larger business, and this betokens a healthy condition in the horse breeding industry; and if we will only bear in mind that good horses are the kind wanted, we shall never again have a large surplus on hand, one year after another, but little to do but eating off their heads. It is a pretty heavy drain on a farmer to carry several head of idle horses through a long season. There is no way to figure profit out of them. Sell them, and save the figuring and the oats.

Two good brood mares will bring their owners $400 yearly, at a cost of $50 for service fees, and will do the work of the farm at the same time. While a five dollar fee may bring a $75 horse, for his $25 he can have an animal worth $200. Get no offspring of an unsound or tricky animal. Never act upon the theory that a mare which is good for nothing else, is good for breeding purposes. The fluctuations in the prices of horses is almost wholly with those of low grade. There is a certainty that when breeding to a good animal, the progeny will sell well four or five years hence.

Some Hog Talk.

The story is told of a summer boarder who spent the season with a worthy couple in Nova Scotia, writes C. L. Gabrilson in Farm Stock and Home. The report does not disclose that they were regular farmers, but at all events they kept a pig which was cared for in the ordinary manner. The summer boarder's vacation came to an end and he returned to his relinquished duties. Yet the pig must have stayed, for two years later, when the self same summer boarder again became a guest he found the same pig in the pen. And when expressing surprise at its not having been butchered long ago was met with the query:

"If we killed the pig what would we do with the swill?"

Now, with the majority of farmers hogs are not kept for any such purpose, but to be an active source of revenue. And it must be confessed that it is difficult to decide whether the cow or the hog be given first place as a money-maker on the farms of our middle northwest. None of our domestic animals are more difficult to care for properly than the hog, and it often becomes a nuisance accordingly; while if given a fair opportunity is the tidiest and most cleanly of them all. Put a pig into a new, dry pen; wet the floor in one corner and that spot becomes the water-closet thereafter, provided the attendant does his duty. Little pigs instinctively avoid fouling their nests, so that experience teaches us that swine need not annoy the senses as they too frequently do.

Salicylic Acid in Milk.—Dr. Henry Leffman of Philadelphia, a prominent chemist of that city, recently stated that many disease of infants, which occur during the summer months, may be induced by the use of milk, and artificial foods which contain salicylic acid. He stated that the drug had an enormous and increasing sale, and that several forms are being put upon the market. Speaking of the artificial form used by brewers, he thought it poisonous, and that its sale should be prohibited by law. In Trenton, N. J., recently, salicylic acid in milk caused the death of several children.—Medical Times.

Shrinkage in Cheese Exports.—Since May 1st, New York and Montreal, the two great cheese exporting markets of this continent, have exported 384,000 less boxes of cheese than they did a year ago, which is a shrinkage of more than 25 per cent. The exporters, in view of this fact, are busy with the query: Is this falling off in exports due to a loss of consumption on the other side, or an increase on this side, or a decrease in production? Under either supposition it would seem as if the English market must soon rise.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Clean Feeding Racks.—When you construct a feeding rack for sheep, make it so that dust, rubbish and seed from the hay and fodder cannot fall into the sheep's fleece. This is an important matter and should be attended to. You can have the rack right by making it wider at the bottom than at the top. Then the dust will fall under the rack, not upon the sheep.—Ex.

For a Ladies' Hitch.

Arcola Record: Chicago can have a peace jubilee and Omaha a world's fair, but when it comes to the real thing Arcola leads the world. At least the popular interest in the hitchman contest given by Charles Hickman last Saturday would indicate as much. The street in front of Hickman's and the Record office was crowded that afternoon by a throng of people anxious to see the contest.

The contest was participated in by six ladies, and the one that hitched a horse to a buggy the quickest was to receive a gold mounted buggy whip.

Three expert judges were selected. Jim Davidson, James Hood and Alf Beazley, while James B. Quick acted as timekeeper. All the ladies were rapid in their work, but Miss Watson or Humboldt, who seemingly was the most deliberate, won the contest. Some of the ladies were slightly nervous and would make false moves in their haste, but Miss Watson was as cool and collected as if there were not several hundred spectators watching her. Mrs. Alf Donley made the second best time and John Burke and James Skinner presented her with a whip also.

The time made by the contestants was: Mrs. Jack Jones, 2:50; Mrs. Donley, 2:33; Miss Morrel, 3:38; Miss Conover, 2:38; Miss Honn, 2:38; Miss Watson, 2:30.

Lord Scully Still Lives.

Viscount William Scully, gentleman of Ballycohey and landlord of 100,000 acres of Illinois corn land, is not dead. It does not often happen that it is news to announce that a man is alive, says the Chicago Times-Herald, but through a confusion of names his thousands of tenants in Logan, Livingston, Grundy and Sangamon counties have been disturbed since harvest time. It came by cable across the seas that Viscount Scully had passed away and all his property had come into possession of the immediate members of his family. An investigation shows that the death in the big house in Tipperary was not that of his head, but of one of the viscount's sons. Viscount Scully, whom his Illinois renters call lord, is very much alive. His agents are adding to his possessions in America until now the vast tract in this state is supplemented by 53,000 acres in Nebraska and 38,000 acres in Kansas.

Mr. Scully has probably made more money out of farming in Illinois than any man that ever came into the state. It is, of course, out of the question to name exactly the amount his enormous holdings have earned him each year. The amount based on the facts known to the public is between $200,000 and $300,000. The expense attached to the gathering of this princely income is the cost of two agents and two or three clerks. The balance goes over the ocean to his lordship as rentals paid by Danes, Swedes, Poles, Germans and Bohemians, with a small scattering of Irish and Americans. This plan, with its foreign colonization attachment, went along without interruption until a few years ago, when Mr. Scully became the main reason for the enactment of certain laws in Illinois, as has been the culminating cause which led to certain revisions of the Irish land laws.

This landlord of miles upon miles of the best soil out of doors is a comparative stranger on his tract. He has visited it a few times since he came into possession of it at a price but little more than the proverbial song. His first trip was about the time the Illinois Central was flooding England with prospectuses of its future in order to sell the bonds. Mr. Scully was then a man of great wealth, inherited from rents in Shronehill and Ballycohey. The features of the railroad prospectus which took his eye was the glowing description of the future of the rich prairies along the route. There was then practically no value to the acres aside from the settlers' prices which the government had made. He soon sailed on a ship, read America and took into his employ an expert land looker. They found on the famous Delavan prairie in Tazewell county about the ground they wanted, and then, like financiers, began to buy it for the least possible amounts per farm.

Loss of Tin Plate Factory.

Joliet, Ill.—The plant of the Great Western Tin Plate company in this city was burned to the ground at 3 o'clock Thursday morning, entailing a loss of upward of $100,000. There is insurance to the amount of $47,500.

The fire caught among the oils in the tinning department and spread so rapidly that some of the night force had barely time to get out of the burning mill. The destruction is total, all the machinery being more or less damaged. Several thousand boxes of finished material, ready for shipment, was ruined. Several cars on the siding loaded with tin pig, tin plate and coal were burned.

The mill employed 275 men, was running night and day and turned out nearly 4,500 boxes of tin plate each week. The output goes to all parts of the country. The company offices are in Chicago. C. H. Wilcox of that city is vice president. It is stated a new structure of steel will replace the one just burned.

In consequence Dr. Egan will tomorrow close the emergency hospital and will transfer the patients to St. John's hospital.

Next Thursday morning, in the class-room of the M. E. church, a "Sunrise Praise and Thanksgiving" service will be held as usual. The service will commence at 6:30 and will last three-quarters of an hour. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

There will be special services at the Salem church Thanksgiving morning at 10:00 o'clock. In the evening the Y. P. M. S. hold their regular meeting. A program suitable for the occasion has been prepared, which promises to be very interesting. All are invited to attend these services.

Sunday morning at the Baptist church Rev. Hageman, the pastor, will begin a series of sermons on "The Beatitudes." In the evening there will be a peoples' Gospel and Praise service, it being the regular Thanksgiving service of the church. The public is cordially invited to these services.

Fred Beinhoff, sr., met with a painful accident Sunday forenoon while driving to his home from the milk car. As the wagon passed over a rock in the road the sudden drop of the wagon caused the seat on which Mr. Beinhoff was sitting to upset, throwing him to the ground. Assistance quickly arrived and he was taken to the office of Dr. Clausius, where the doctor found it necessary to take several stitches in his scalp which was badly rent from the skull. Mr. Beinhoff, although confined to the house, is recovering rapidly.

The Japanese Tea.
The Japanese Tea given by the Woman's Foreign Missionary society last Monday evening was a very enjoyable and pleasant event. As the attendance was much larger than the ladies anticipated, there was not enough tea to go around, but otherwise everything was a success.

The Japanese exhibit was very handsome and some rare and costly bits of china were on exhibition. During the evening six new names were added to the membership roll. The ladies of the Foreign Missionary society believe in a wide awake society and intend that their work shall each year be a progressive and profitable one.

The committee who had charge of the entertainment wish to thank those who took part in the program, also those who so kindly loaned articles for the exhibit and to the ladies who took charge of the tea tables and served.

Tendered a Reception.
Tuesday, November 15, 1898, a reception was tendered Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Townsend, the occasion being in honor of Mr. Townsend's 90th birthday. He has resided in Barrington for 14 years and 40 years at Barrington Center on a farm. Few people pass the 70th milestone of life. The average duration of life is about 33 years, one-fourth of the people die before the age of 6 years, one-half before 16 years and one in a hundred live to be 65 years of age.

Mr. Townsend's hosts of friends, learning of his birthday, decided to call upon him and in an informal manner talk over old times, and especially to congratulate him upon his strong mental and physical condition after the labors, trials and perplexities of 90 years and earnestly wish him to pass the century mark. The reception lasted all afternoon and evening, during which time 104 friends called to pay their respects to his sterling worth, showing that his life during many years residence in Barrington had made all his friends wish him the blessings of future years.
