P. A. C. Masquerade.

The fourth annual masquerade ball given by the Palatine Athletic club in Batterman's half last_Friday night attracted a big crowd and the affair was a success in every way. Many young people from Chicago, Barrington and other places were in attendance and received a cordial welcome. The costumes were varied, unique and made up a picturesque crowd. The six Dutchmen played havoc and enjoyed themselves immensely. The female impersonator was a prize winner and the colored people were represented as usual. The masks were not removed until midnight.

The supper given at the Union Hotel was one of Mr. Hunnerberg's best and that tells that it was first-class. The party did not break up until

At a recent wedding I saw a harbinger of a spring fashion in a scarlet jacket worn by a young girl with blonde hair. These jackets are now the rage in London, but are slow in coming over the water because of our preference for dark colors. They are made short and half fitting, and are buttoned down the left side with small flat brass buttons, arranged in groups of three. The seams are strapped and the loose front dips slightly in the middle, while the coat tails extend not more than four inches below the waist line. They are extremely natty when combined with youth, but dangerous to the good looks of a woman past her first youth. The style of the jacket might be carried out in dark colors with advantage to any woman because of its becomingness to most figures.

A Harbinger of Spring.

Roman Punch.

The juice of six lemons and three oranges, one gill of sherry, one of rum, two and one-half cupfuls of sugar, the whites of four eggs, one tablespoonful of gelatine. Boil the sugar with one quart of water for half an hour, then add gelatine which has been previously soaked in cold water and set aside to cool. When cold add the sherry, rum and juice and mix well together. Put into a freezer and when half-frozen add the whites of eggs beaten stiff, mixing thoroughly, with the frozen preparation. Cover, pack tightly and let stand for several hours.

CAPTER IV. Two days later the widow's funeral was over, and Philip having found the key in a secret drawer of his mother's cabinet, was standing in the room that had been locked up for so many years. The room was about twelve or fourteen feet square, with but one window; opposite to the door stood the chimney and fire-place, with a high buffet of dark wood on each side. On a table near by was a bunch of keys. With one of these he opened the wooden doors of the buffet, revealing an iron safe.

A second key on the bunch opened the iron doors; and Philip found himself in possession of a considerable sum of money, amounting, as near as he could reckon, to ten thousand guilders, in little yellow sacks. Philip replaced the sacks, and locked up the cupboards, after having taken out of one, already half emptied, a few pieces for his immediate wants. Then turning and gazing at the table again he beheld' partly concealed under some embroidery, the sealed letter which his mother had declared had been left there by his father seventeen years ago. He dashed forward, seized the letter, and burst out of the fatal room.

"I cannot, dare not, read it here," exclaimed he: "no, no, it must be under the valut of high and offended Heaven that the message must be received." Philip took his hat, and went out of the house; in calm despair he locked the door, took out the key, and walked he knew not whither,

Philip looned about him for some spot where he might be concealed from observation-where he might break the seal; and read this mission from a world of spirits, A small copse of brushwood, in advance of a grove of trees, was not far from where he stood. He walked to it and sat down, so as to be concealed from any passers-by. Then he broke the seal, which bore the initials of his father's name, and read as follows: 'To Catherine:

"One of those pitying spirits whose eyes/rain tears for mortal crimes has been permitted to inform me by what his plans; but, although the men spoke in a low tone, his attention was soon arrested by the subject of their conversation when he heard the name of Mynheer Poots mentioned. He listened attentively, and discovered that they were four disbanded soldiers, who intended that night to attack the house of the little doctor, who had they knew, much money in his possession.

"What I have proposed is the best." said one of them; "he has no one with him but his daughter. "I value her more than his money," replied /another: "so recollect before we go it is perfectly understood that she is to be my property."

"Yes, if you choose to purchase her, there is no objection," replied a third, "Agreed; how much will you in conscience sake ask for a puling girl?" "I say five hundred guilders," replied another.

."Well, be it so, but on this condition, that if my share of the booty does not amount to so much. I am to have her for my share, whatever it may be."

"That's very fair," replied the other: "but I'm much mistaken if we don't turn more than two thousand guilders out of the old man's chest."

"What do you say-is it agreedshall Baetans have her?"

"Oh, yes," replied the others.

"Well, then," replied the one who had stipulated for Mynheer Poots' daughter, "now I am with you, heart and soul. I loved that girl, and tried to get her-I positively offered to marry her, but the old hunks refused me, an ensign, an officer; but now I'll have revenge. We must not spare him."

"No, no," replied the others.

"Shall we go now, or wait till it is later? In an hour or more the moon will be up-we may be seen."

"Who is to see us? unless, indeed, some one is sent for him. The later the better. I say."

"How long will it take us to get there? Not half an hour if we walk. Suppose we start in half an hour hence, we shall just have the moon to count the guilders by."

"That's all right. In the meantime, was to be distinguished by Philip through the gloom.

"What wouldst thou, young sir, at this unseemly hour? and what is it thou wouldst impart, but imperfectly heard by me, when thou spokest this minute at the door?"

Philip then entered into detail of all that he had overheard, and concluded by begging her to admit him, that he might defend her.

"Think, fair maiden, of what I have told you. You have been sold to one of those reprobates, whose name I think they mentioned was Baetens. The gold, I know, you value not; but think of thine own dear self-suffer me to enter the house, and think not for one moment that my story is feigned. I swear to thee by the soul of my poor, dear mother, now, I trust, in Heaven, that every word is true."

"Baetons, did you say, sir?"

"If I mistook them not, such was the name; he said he loved you once."

"That name I have in memory-I know not what to do, or what to say; my father has been summoned to a birth, and may be yet away for many hours. Yet how can I open the door to you-at night-he not at home-I alone? I ought not-cannot-yet do I believe you. You surely never could, be so base as to invent this tale."

"No-upon my hopes of future bliss I could not, maiden! You must not trifle with your life and honor, but let me in.

"And if I did, what could you do against such numbers? They are four to one-would soon overpower you, and one more life would be lost."

"Not if you have arms; and I think your father would not be left without them. I fear them not-you know that I am resolute."

"I do indeed-and now you'd risk your life for those you did assail. I thank you, thank you kindly, sir-but dare not open the door."

"Then, maiden, if you'll not admit me, here will I now remain, without arms, and but ill able to contend with four armed villains; but still, here will I remain and prove my truth to one I will protect 'gainst odds-yes, even here!"

"Then shall I be thy murderer! But that must not be. Oh! sir-swear, swear by all that's holy, and by all that's pure, that you do not deceive me."

"I swear by thyself maiden, than all to me more sacred!"

The casement closed, and in a short time a light appeared above."In a minute or two more the door was opened to Philip by the fair daughter of Mynheer Poots. She stood with the candle in her right hand, the color in her cheeks varying-now flushing red, and again deathly pale. Her left hand was down by her side, and in it she held a pistol half concealed. Philip perceived this precaution on her part. but took no notice of it; he wished to reassure her. "Maiden." said he, not entering, "if you still have doubts-if you think you have been ill advised in giving me admission-there is yet time to close the door against me; but for your own sake I entreat you not. Before the moon is up, the robbers will be here. With my life I will protect you, if you will but trust me. Who indeed could injure one like you?"

means alone my dreadful doom may be averted.

"Could I but receive on the deck of my own ship the holy relic upon which I swore the fatal oath, kiss it in all humility, and shed one tear of deep contrition on the sacred wood, I then might rest in peace.

"How this may be effected, or by whom so fatal a task; will be undertaken, I know not. Oh, Catherine, we have a son-but, no, no, let him not hear of me. Pray for me, and now, farewell.

"I. VANDERDECKEN."

"Then it is true, most horribly true," thought Philip; "and my father is even now in living judgment. And he points to me-to whom else should he? Am I not his son, and is it not my duty?"

"Yes, my father!" exclaimed Philip. aloud, falling on his knees, "you have. not written these lines in vain. Let me peruse them once more."

Philip raised up his hand; but, although it appeared to him that he had still hold of the letter, it was not there -he grasped nothing. He looked, on the grass to see if it had fallen-but, no, there was no letter; it had disappeared. Was it a vision? No. no; he had read every word. "Then it must be to me, and me alone, that the mission was intended. I accept the sign." "Hear me, dear father-if thou art so permitted-and deign to hear me, gracious Heaven-hear the son who, by this sacred relic, swears that he will avert your doom or perish. To that will he devote his days; and having done his duty, he will die in hope and father's oath, now register his son's upon the same sacred cross, and may perjury on my part be visited with punishment more dire than his! Receive it, Heaven, as at the last I trust that in Thy mercy Thou wilt receive the father and the son; and if too bold, oh, pardon my presumption!"

Philip threw himself forward on his face, with his lips to the sacred symbol. The sun went down and the twilight gradually disappeared; night had for some time shrouded all in darkness, and Philip yet remained- in alternate prayer and meditation!

But he was disturbed by the voices of some men, who sat down upon the turf but a few yards from where he was concealed. The conversation he little heeded; but it had roused him, and his first feeling was to return to

I'll put a new flint in my lock, and have my carbine loaded. I can work in the dark."

"You are used to it, Jan."

"Yes, I am-and I intend this ball to go through the old rascal's head." "Well, I'd rather you should kill him than I." replied one of the others, "for he saved my life at Middleburgh, when every one made sure 1'd die."

Philip did not want to hear any more: he crawled behind the bushes until he gained the grove of trees, and passing through them, made a detour, so as not to be seen by these miscreants. That they were disbanded soldiers, many of whom were infesting the country, he knew well. All his thoughts were now to save the old doctor and his daughter from the danger which threatened them and for a time he forgot his father, and the exciting revelations of the day. Although Philip had not been aware in what direction he had walked when he set off from the cottage, he knew the country well; and now that it was necessary to act, he remembered the direction in which he should find the lonely house of Mynheer Poots; with the utmost speed he made his way for it, and in less than twenty minutes he arrived there out of breath.

As usual, all was silent, and the door fastened. Philip knocked, but there was no reply. Again and again he knocked, and became impatient. Mynheer Poots must have been summoned, and was not in the house; Philip therefore called out, so as to be heard within, "Maiden, if you father is out, as I presume he must be, listen to what peace. Heaven, that recorded my rash I have to say-I am Philip Vanderdecken. But now I overheard four wretches, who have planned to murder. your father, and rob him of his gold. In one hour, or less, they will be here, and I have hastened to warn and protect you, if I may, I swear upon the relic that you delivered to me this morning that what I state is true."

Philip waited a short time, but received no answer.

"Maiden," resumed he, "answer me, if you value that which is more dear to you than even your father's gold to him. Open the casement above, and listen to what I have to say. In so doing there is no risk; and even if it were not dark, already have I seen you."

A short time after this second address, the casement of the upper window was unbarred, and the slight form the cottage, that he might reflect over of the fair daughter of Mynheer Poots

She was indeed (as she stood irresolute and perplexed from the peculiarity of her situation, yet nor wanting in courage when it was to be called forth) an object well worthy of gaze and admiration. Her features thrown into broad light and shade by the candle, which at times was half extinguished by the wind her symmetry of form and the gracefulness and singularity of her attire-were matters of astonishment to Philip. Her Mad was without covering, and her long hair fell in plaits behind her shoulders; her stature was rather under the middle size, but her form perfect; her dress was simple but becoming, and very differer* from that usually worn by the young women of the district. Not only her features but her dress would at once have indicated to a traveler that she was of Arab blood, as was the fact.

She looked in Philip's face as he spoke-earnestly, as if she would have penetrated into his most inmost . thoughts; but there was a frankness and honesty in his bearing, and a sincerity in his manly countenance, which reassured her. After a moment's hesitation she replied:

"Come in, sir; I feel that I can trust you."

Philip entered. The door was then closed and made secure.

"We have no time to lose, maiden," said Philip; "but tell me your name, that I may address you as I ought."

"My name is Amine," replied she, retreating a little.

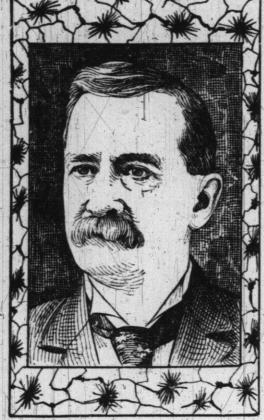

"I thank you for that little confidence, but I- must not dally. What arms have you in the house, and have you ammunition?"

"Both. I wish that my father would come home."

Catarrh in its various forms is rap idly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Pe-ru-na a national catarrh remedy of unequaled merit. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh.

COMFORTING WORDS TO WOMEN.

The Surgical Chair and its Tortures May be Avcided by Women Who Heed Mrs. Pinkham's Advive.

Woman's modesty is natural; it is charming.

To many women a full statement of their troubles to a male physician is almost impossible. The whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham because she is a woman, and her advice is freely offered to all women sufferers. Mrs. O. E. LADD, of 19th and N Sts., Galveston, Texas, whose letter is printed below, was completely discouraged when she first wrote to Mrs. Pink-9 ham. Here is what she says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:--I wrote to you some time ago, telling you of my ills, but now I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. I have used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three packages of Sanative Wash, and one box of Liver Pills, and to-day I call myself a well woman. I suffered with backache, constant headache, whites, sick stomach, no appetite, could not sleep, and was very nervous. At time of menstruation was in terrible pain Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I never Can say enough in praise of it. / I have recommended it to many friends. If only all suffering women would try it, there would be more happy homes and healthy women. I thank you for the change your medicine has made in me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice, have saved thousands of women from hospital operations.

The lives of women are hard; whether at home with a ceaseless round of domestic duties or working at some regular employment, their daily tasks make constant war on health. If all women understood themselves fully and knew how exactly and soothingly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts on the female organs, there would be less suffering.

The Instinct of Self Defense.

Every boy who owns rabbits knows that if a stranger goes into the shed where they are kept they give a resounding thud with their feet upon the floor. This is a warning signal. Wild rabbits strike the ground the same way just before they enter their burrows. An interersting point is that rabbits give this warning stamp with their hind feet, while sheep, deer and antelope use their fore feet. This is because the action of striking was in former times a method of defense or attack, and in rabbits the hind legs are more powerful; in the other animals mentioned the fore legs .- Chicago News.

"Corpse Coins."

"Corpse coins" are treasured in the North of England. They are the coins that have lain over the eyes of their dead. By this means infection has been spread, but superstition causes the custom to continue. A poor collier or peasant would never think of doing anything important unless he has on his person coins that have been upon the eyes of his dead relatives.

Law for Boston Police.

Under the workings of a new rule Boston policemen are receiving instruction in the law. Every week a number of legal questions pertaining to matters which come under their daily observation are propounded to them, and this system of examination is believed to have greatly improved the efficiency of the force.

Smoothed by Oil.

Oil to calm the waves was used on an unusually large scale during the recent gale in the English Channel. The water breaking over Folkestone pier made it difficult for steamers to enter the port till some one thought of pouring a few gallons of oil into the harbor, when the seas immediately became smooth.

Marriage in Cloudland.

A wedding was celebrated in cloudland a few days ago, when Mrs. Alice Mott of New York and Mayor Smith of Fort Steele, East Kootenai, Vancouver, British Columbia, were married on the top of Mount Sullivan. The idea was the bride's, who fancied she would prefer to be married at a distance from the earth, where clouds would be beneath rather than around her.

Saturday, March 4, 1899.

The Prodigal Daughter.

The prodigal daughter business was recently exploited again by Miss Carrie Millard. a presumably vivacious damsel at the Claverside boarding school at Nutley. N. J. She wanted to be a woman of the world, poor thing! Whether she got this inflammable desire from reading Meredith or Ouida is not shown, but she went so far into literature herself as to answer a personal in a New York paper. Dire consequences followed in iridescent colors. A correspondence was opened with a man in New York who had attained great facility in the personal column. After much epistolary billing and cooing the girl disappeared from the boarding school to taste the joys of life. After a month or two of it she was discovered in the city by her friends and reclaimed. The accounts lead us to suppose that she was very much rumpled and that she wept, for she said: "I wanted to see life, and I have seen it. Take me back as quick as you can." This is the stuff of which our melodramas are made, but it is the sorriest kind of juvenile stupidity. which can only be overcome in a restless child by letting life itself play the part of a cat e' nine tails for a couple of weeks.

The Coming Fairs.

In spite of warlike rumors and military expansion the world is getting ready for a number of great fairs. Nearly every great city of civilization desires to have a world's fair. First of all in magnitude comes the Paris exposition next year, and this fair, unless frustrated by political events. will be of vast importance in turning the distracted attention of France once more to the victories of peace. But this is only one of the commercial celebrations that are preparing. The city of Glasgow. in Scotland, is to have an industrial fair in 1901. There is to be a pan-American exposition in Buffalo in 1901, and Detroit is arranging a bicentenary celebration for the same year. In 1903 St. Louis will have its turn, and New Orleans is now moving in the same direction These are the coming events which cast no shadows before. They indicate only the growing fraternity and the closer unity of the working world. Every one of them is to be a celebration of humanity and a recognition of labor. ,and not one of them could succeed without the aid and sympathy of the rest of the world. Most of the material damage of the recent cold snap has been experienced in the south, where it was unexpected and unprepared for. Everything in the ground naturally suffered by a sudden descent of the mercury to zero. Along the line of the northern states the results come under the head of discomfort and delay, but in the gulf states the weather struck at the roots of things. and the sources of supply were in many cases destroyed. New Orleans is an interesting example of the astonishment that overcomes a southerner when the north invades his neighborhood in this manner. The city was sunning itself for Mardi Gras when the arctic visitor arrived. The orange froze in its mouth. the truck farms collapsed. and the palms, which made the city look like Palmyra, drooped and died. Boston and New York will get over the storm with Russian equanimity, but New Orleans and Mobile have rolled themselves in flannel and hung their harps upon the dead willows.

northwestern facts into the popular mind about our climate that are worth considering. Ordinarily the climate of the United States is the pet subject of the native growler and the unending reproach of the visiting foreigner, who is knocked off his pins by the sun in New York and blown off his base by a blizzard in Kansas. The eccentricities of our weather and the agility of the thermometer are subjects of half the humor and nearly all the complaint of the tenderfoot who hasn't anything else to think about, and hosts of our wealthy men and women fly to the Mediterranean every year to escape the severities of their native heath. But Mr. Oswald now shows that while our climate is the severest in the world it is also the healthiest. He points out that nature did not intend to coddle the people of this continent as she does those of Europe, where she has built protecting walls of mountains running east and west that shut off the northern blast. In this country the mountain ranges run north and south and down their great alleyways pour the frosty blasts of the north pole. It is to these recurrent blasts that we owe our hardihood, our liberty, our intelligence and our longevity. Mr. Oswald calls these changes of temperature "microbe killers" and he speaks with the loftiest admiration of the once abused blizzard and even looks kindly with prospective eye upon the cloudburst and the sand storm, for they are toughening and preparing a race that is destined to dominate the world. What a pity it is that we cannot enjoy this process so thoroughly as our posterity will!

Express Opinions.

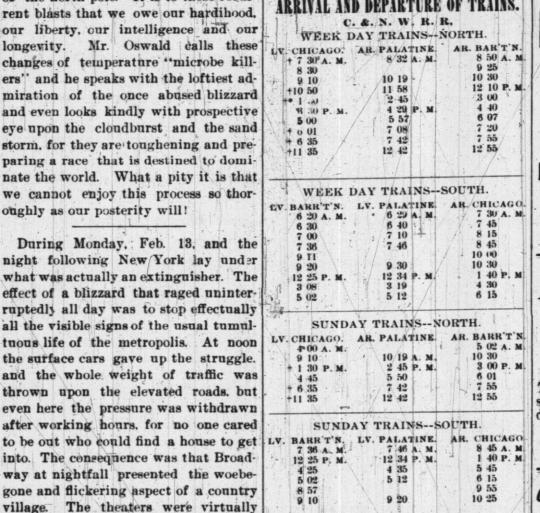

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its en-terprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering in-stitution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great news-paper. CARTER H. HARRISON."

A curious and radical experiment is about to be tried in Akron. O., apropos of the conflict that is going on between the liquor dealers and the temperance crusaders. She lived in the Warren avenue police district for some time after leaving the school, and several policemen are said to have been her warm admirers. One of them is junder suspicion. A blind man who frequently called at her house, and who is said to have been enamored of her, also will be closely questioned. Holtslander, her employer, who is under arrest on suspicion, seems to have treated the woman always with kindness as far as the statements of neighbors can be believed.

QUEER FIGURING.

That' Develops Curiosities of the Calendar.

Have you ever noticed when juggling with figures how remarkable are some of the combinations that can be worked out? They are quite amazing at times. Take, for instance, the calendar. There are some very curious facts connected with the days of the week on which centuries and months begin. The new twentieth century will dawn on a Tuesday, and it would be impossible for it or any century to begin on a Wednesday, Friday or Saturday. The month of October commences always with the same day of the year as January, except in a leap year. September and December also start on the same day, and so do February, March and November. The first day of May, June and August never fall on the same week day on which any other month begins. April and July always start on the same day of the week. This year January and October start on a Sunday; February, March and November, on a Wednesday; April and July, on Saturday; September and December, on a Friday; June, on Thursday; August, on Tuesday, and May, on Monday. Leap year, though, always upsets this little arrangement. Christmas always falls on the same day of the week as New Year's day." This year began on a Sunday, and thus we shall have fiftythree Sundays in the year, an occurrence which can only happen fourteen times in a century, and occurred last in 1893. Very rarely, indeed, is the number of a year a square. The in 1764, when it was the square of 42. The next instance was in 1849, when it was the square of 43, and in 1936 we shall have the square of 44.

Luctgert Case Has a Parallel.

Chicago-A strange parallel to the Luetgert murder mystery was brought to light Sunday. Albert A. Becker, a sausage maker living in the stock yards district, was arrested on suspicion of having murdered his wife on Jan. 27, in order to marry a younger woman. Although the woman's body has not yet been discovered, the police are inclined to believe that she has been wurdered. Eight years ago Becker married Theresa Hafenberg in Milwaukee and shortly after moved to Chicago. Six months ago Becker became acquainted with 17-year-old Ida Sutterlin and since then, according to his neighbors, he has been extremely cruel to his wife. On the day Mrs. Becker disappeared Becker married the Sutterlin girl.

Pure blood and strong nerves - these are the secret of health and beauty.

Dr. Williams' Pink

Pills for Pale People build up and purify the blood and strengthen the nerves. To the young girl they are invalu-able, to the mother they are a necessity, to the woman approaching fifty they are the best remedy that science has devised for this crisis of her life.

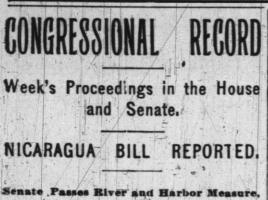

Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Bushnell Ill., is fifty at years old. She says: "I suffered for five or six years with the trouble that comes to women at this time of life. I was much weakened, was unable, much of the time, to do my own work, and suffered beyond my power to describe. I was downhearted and melancholy. Nothing seemed to do me any good. Then I made up my mind to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I bought the first box in March, 1897, and was benefited from the start. A box and a half cured me completely, and I am now rugged and strong." -Bushnell (III.) Record.

with the Canal Provision as a Rider -Representative Johnson Criticises the Policy of the Administration.

Friday, Feb. 24.

During the general debate on the army appropriation bill in the house Mr. Johnson (rep., Ind.) violently attacked the policy of the administration in the Philippines. He charged the secretary of war with incompetency and predicted that the president would" in the end be engulfed by adverse public sentiment. No general reply was made to his speech.

During the afternoon Mr. Sewell of New Jersey expressed the belief that it would require an army of 50,000 men to control the Filipinos, and that wea were likely yet to have serious trouble in Cuba.

Senator Hawlay, chairman of the military affairs committee, reported the compromise army bill. The bill increases the strength of the regular army from 62,000 to 65,000. In addition to this force, the president is authorized to raise 35,000 volunteer infantry to form thirty regiments, and to continue in service only during the necessity thereof and not later than July 1, 1901.

Saturday, Feb. 25.

In committee of the whole the house entered upon the further consideration of the army appropriation bill, and it was read by paragraphs for amendment. When the committee rose the house suspended public business to listen to eulogies upon the late Senator E. C. Walthall and Representative W. F. Love of Mississippi. At the close of the exercises the house adjourned until Monday.

The bill "for increasing the efficiency of the army" was taken up in the senate and was read in full. Mr. Carter gave the number of troops required, as follows: For the Philippine islands, 30,000; for Cuba, 12,000; without any provision for Hawaii or Porto Rico: 15,000 for coast defenses, and 25,000 for garrison duty at Indian ports. That made 82,000 men, but it was well known that at least one-fifth. of an army was at all times unable to respond to the call of duty. The bill went over without action.

Repose of Royalty.

A German paper has taken the public into its confidence on the subject of the slumbers of imperial and royal personages. Naturally the place of honor is given to the kaiser. We are told that his bed is narrow, almost a camp bed, but the sheets are of the finest linen, and he loves a silk counterpane. He goes to bed at 11, gets up at 5, and is terribly agitated during his sleep. One would have imagined that the bedside of Abdul Hamid was haunted by ghosts. As a matter of fact, however, it seems that Abdul Hamid sleeps on a couch of silk and gold and as quietly as a child.

They will return Monday and bring with them a full line of new spring millinery and will open for business at once in the same old stand in the Sodt building, opposite postoffice.

Henry Hillman of Lake Zurich met with a narrow-escape Thursday morn-Mr. Hillman was driving to ing. town to leave on the first Barrington train for Chicago. As he approached the railroad crossing in the center of the town he noticed the engine of the first Barrington train backing down for the rest of the train, but did/not see the fast mail approaching from the north, which is due here at 6:07, on account of the dense fog. As soon as the engine of the Barrington ad commodation had passed he started to drive over the crossing. / The horse which he was driving was struck by the through train and instantly killed. The carriage was somewhat smashed and Mr. Hillman was thrown to the ground. He escaped serious injury and was able to take the train for Chicago and transact his business.

Fix Up Your Machinery.

Now is a good time to overhaul your farm machinery-make all necessary repairs and paint it up-so it will be ready for this year's farm work. J. D. Lamey & Co., Barrington, have a special ready-mixed paint which is extensively used for painting farm machinery, wagons, buggies, etc. It is the best and cheapest.

Chambertain's Cough Remedy.

This remedy is intended especially for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough and influenza. It has become tamous for its cures of these diseases, over a large part of the civilized world. The most flattering testimonials have been received, giving accounts of its good works; of the aggrevating and persistent coughs it has cured; of severe colds that have yielded promptly to its soothing effects, and of the dangerous attacks of croup it has cured, often saving the life of the child. The extensive use of it for whooping cough has shown that it robs that disease of all dangerous consequences. Sold by A. L. Walk ler, Barrington and A. S. Olms, Palaline.
