FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Farmers, Test Your Seed.

From Farmers' Review:—A poor stand of any crop may in most instances be traced to poor seed. It may be immature or too old. Most seed deteriorates rapidly after from one to three years. Immature seed is most often met with in the so-called hay crops as alfalfa, millet and timothy, for in these it is impossible to harvest the crop so as to get all the seeds matured and at the same time avoid shattering. The benefits of testing may be summed up as follows: Testing the seed some time before planting time enables one to make arrangements for other seed should the first lot prove worthless. If the per cent of good seed be not so low as to make it advisable to get a new lot, one can readily calculate how much more seed than ordinary to plant to secure the required stand. For instance if in a test of 100 alfalfa seeds but 75 germinate then one-third more seed must be planted to give the stand that perfect seed would give. As even the standard quality seed contains a certain per cent of seeds which will not germinate (the per cent varies with the variety) this fact must be considered in determining the amount to sow. As simple an apparatus as can be suggested is two dinner plates of uniform size placed top to top, the bottom one filled with sand, or else with blotting paper, according as the seeds be large or small. It must be kept quite moist but do not allow water to stand in the plate. Care must be taken not to let the temperature fall below 40 degrees in the case of the hardy field crops. With garden varieties the minimum temperature must not fall so low as that, 100 seeds by actual count will be found sufficient if the sample be an average one. And the sample must be a fair one if the results are to indicate anything. Delays are dangerous, for if the testing be put off till near planting time one will be unable to get a new lot of seed, should the first be of no account, in time for the most advantageous planting. Other important factors in the selection of seed for planting are: purity, size, and plumpness of the seed.

Balanced Rations for Work Horses.

From Farmers' Review: The season of hard work for horses is well begun and will continue on the majority of Kansas farms till the first of next November. Unless this season is an exception to the rule, the majority of horses will begin the year's work in good flesh and spirits, but before the season is over, thousands of them will be so poor as to be almost literally "nothing but skin and bones," and will require a winter of hard feeding to make them able to begin another year's work. This method of treating horses is ruinous to the horse as well as expensive to its owner. Horses so treated are weak at a time when the heaviest work is required of them. Their bones protrude in such a way as to make it almost impossible to prevent the harness from galling them and we almost invariably find them with shoulders covered with collar boils, with sore backs, and with large patches of skin rubbed off their hip and stifle joints. Such conditions are not due so much to excess of hard work as they are to lack of the proper kind and amount of food. All animals require different kinds of food in proportions which vary according to the conditions under which they are fed. For example, the young growing colt must have different food from that given to the adult horse. It is equally true that the horse working hard should have different food and that in different proportions from the food given to the horse that is not working. Kminent scientists have devoted much time and money to digestion experiments and to analysis of foods needed by certain animals under certain conditions. Their results have been published in various tables of feeding standards. By the use of these tables any ration may be compiled to suit the conditions under which it is fed. The calculations necessary to determine the quantity of each kind of food to take are performed by a sort of "cut and try" method and for this reason are rather laborious to one who has not had experience. Few farmers have cared to take the time necessary to learn to calculate rations quickly, and consequently very few have ever given the subject of "balanced rations" any attention whatever. It is the purpose of this article to present a table of rations for horses hard at work in which the quantities of each kind of food necessary to be fed in one day are given. The rations are not intended to be ideal, but are designed to furnish standards for feeding the various feeds that the Kansas farmer is likely to have on hand or to have easy access to at this time. I am aware that 11 to 14 lbs. is a large amount of bran for one horse to eat in a day, but nevertheless, it is the amount necessary to balance the ration where only such other feeds as corn, and prairie hay or timothy hay are available. In such cases the ration should be as nearly balanced as possible. In the following table the amounts of each feed to be used in each ration are calculated from Wolff's feeding standards and are sufficient to feed a horse weighing 1,000 lbs. one day. For heavier or lighter horses the quantities may be varied proportionally.

Amount of feed in pounds required per day, per 1,000 lbs. live weight, for horses working hard:

- Ration 1, alfalfa hay 10; oats 10; prairie hay 10.
- Ration 2, alfalfa hay 13; corn 12.
- Ration 3, alfalfa hay 15; corn 6; prairie hay 8.
- Ration 4, alfalfa hay 15; Kafir corn 5; prairie hay 10.
- Ration 5, bran 11; corn 6; prairie hay 10.
- Ration 6, bran 13; corn 6; timothy hay 10.
- Ration 7, bran 11; Kafir corn 8; prairie hay 10.
- Ration 8, bran 6; corn 7; prairie hay 11; linseed meal 2.
- Ration 9, bran 7; corn 6; timothy hay 12; linseed meal 2.
- Ration 10, corn 7; Kafir corn 8; prairie hay 12; linseed meal 2 1/2.
- Ration 11, corn 9; linseed meal 4; prairie hay 13.
- Ration 12, Kafir corn 10; linseed meal 3 1/2; prairie hay 14.
- Ration 13, sorghum hay 8; alfalfa hay 14; Kafir corn 8.
- Ration 14, corn 8; bran 7; linseed meal 2; sorghum hay 10.
- Ration 15, Kafir corn 8; bran 7; linseed meal 2; sorghum hay 11.
- Ration 16, oats 14; linseed meal 2; prairie hay 12.
- Ration 17, oats 12; bran 7; prairie hay 10.
- Ration 18, oats 8; corn 5; linseed meal 3; prairie hay 10.

Improving Plants by Selection.

From Farmers' Review:—More than ordinary attention has been devoted this year to the yearbook of the department of agriculture. The present secretary from the first has impressed upon his employees the importance of producing simple, practical articles which every farmer can understand and profit by, rather than abstruse, scientific articles, unintelligible to nine-tenths of the population of the country. One of the many popular articles which the yearbook will contain is entitled "Improvement of Plants by Selection." It is quite simple, yet instructive. It shows that improvement in this line is as simple and important as is improvement in the dairy herd. For instance, in selecting Indian corn for seed, it is the common practice to select the best ears at the time of husking, the main object being to secure ears of good size, shape, and having large, well-formed kernels and a proper proportion of cob and kernel. This, while good as far as it goes, does not take the vigor of the plant into account and hence does not accomplish all that is intended. The largest ears may grow on comparatively unproductive and weak stalks; therefore to obtain the best results, seed should be selected in the field. By patient selection, year by year, although the improvement each year may be slight, entirely new varieties of plants are evolved. The article concludes with "Common methods of selection are simple and inexpensive and should become general practices in agriculture. Every farmer and horticulturist should devise for each crop a systematic method of selection so that the general crop may be grown continually from selected pedigree stock. The common agricultural crops respond readily to successive selection and in every case valuable results will doubtless reward the agriculturist's attention to this principle."

Introducing Date Palms.—Secretary Wilson states that the department of agriculture will likely spend $10,000 during the next two years in buying date palms for the southwest. One of the expert vegetable pathologists of the department, W. T. Swingle, is now in Morocco making a close study of the African date and selecting the very finest varieties and those supposed to be best adapted to this country. It has been found that date palms, under irrigation will grow as well in Arizona as in Arabia. Early Mormon settlers in the territories proved this many years ago; but the trees were not of the best varieties and date growing never developed as an industry. The department, as Secretary Wilson indicates, is prepared to push the experiment on an extensive scale. Each date palm will be shipped in its own tub and should arrive at its destination without material if any injury.

Treatment of a Thistle Patch.—Our advice is to manure the ground and plow early in the spring. Thoroughly cultivate and make a "summer fallow" of the ground until time to plant corn. Then keep the surface well tilled all through the growing season. If you could secure some sweeps to attach to your cultivator, you could do much better work in cutting off every stalk of this pest just under the surface.—Michigan Farmer.

Dairy Notes.

There are firms in Chicago that are selling what they call first-class butter below the Elgin prices. An investigation reveals the fact that much of this butter is process butter. Some of the men that have been buying it have found samples of it that were very rank. In one case, on a sample being returned to the retailer, he replied that he had no objection to taking it back, as he could always get rid of it at the boarding houses, no matter how rank it was. The moral of this is that process butter is not by any means the thoroughly converted article it professes to be.

Our readers will take notice that a new preparation is being pushed onto the market, which promises to relieve the too trustful ones of some of their hard-earned money. The preparation is set forth as having wonderful properties, by which rancid butter is made sweet and delightful to the taste. The men that are advertising say that it will take the worst butter and make it "pure, sweet, nice and elegant." The manufacturers only ask that the farmer shall trust them sufficiently to send $5 and they in return will forward enough of the preparation to treat 500 pounds of poor butter. Let it alone. No honest man can afford to touch such goods, and no chemical has been discovered or can be discovered that will make rancid goods into first-class butter.

Temperature is of immense importance in the making of butter. Too high a temperature is bound to deteriorate the product. No man must expect to make a good marketable product if he churns at 80 degrees or above as is sometimes the case in the summer time. A low temperature is necessary to ensure good grain and excellence in other respects. The old method used by some of our grand-mothers of pouring in hot water to raise the temperature and make the butter come gives us grease. It may be all right on the farmers' table, because it is home-made, but the expert buyer of butter to be placed before people that are willing to pay good prices for it, insists on having a grain that is unbroken. Among our best butter makers it is the practice to cool the milk to about 55 degrees before churning, and then keeping the churning room as low as that in temperature so that the temperature of the cream will not rise during the churning process. This applies to cream that has been raised by the shallow setting process and to separator cream where the per cent of milk with the cream is very small. The larger the per cent of milk in the cream the higher must the temperature be to do the best work. Where cream is mixed with say one-fourth milk the temperature will need to be as high as 60 degrees at this time of year.

Shelter for Hogs.

E. H. Andrews writes to American Swineherd: "The best shelter for brood sows in summer is small, movable houses 8x8, without any floor and only one small door, moving the houses on new ground occasionally and putting in fresh straw bedding. Five sows can sleep comfortably in one of these houses. The objection to large hog houses is that there are too many open places where a cold draught sweeps through, subjecting the hogs to colds. I think a board floor a bad place for sows in pig to sleep, and much prefer the ground. A feeding floor will soon pay for itself in any country. We are not subject to much mud in this country, but we have something worse to contend with, and that is dust. Through the extreme hot weather the dust is inhaled into the lungs to a greater extent than breeders are aware of, thus causing a great amount of sickness. I think we should provide feeding floors and a cool place to avoid dust for summer sleeping quarters."

Composition of the Egg.—Water enters into the composition of an egg to a large extent, 73 per cent being about the average, or in about similar proportion as found in the potato. The color of the egg is usually thought to denote richness, the dark brown colored being much sought after. This is undoubtedly a mere matter of fancy, as little, if any, difference exists. In the case of large and moderate-sized eggs, we have ample proof, by the cook's simple method of demonstrating this, without farther scientific corroboration, that the largest eggs are the most watery. Take large eggs and fry them side by side, with others, and notice, on the one hand, the considerable amount of spluttering and frizzling which goes on with the large eggs in their expelling the superfluous moisture. The white of the egg is represented by pure albumen, a nitrogenous body when coagulated, which it does on heating to about 153 degrees Fahr., and above it is insoluble in water. Now, this is one of the most perfect forms of albuminoids in existence, and is most valuable as a food.—Ex.

Plums for Central Illinois.—At an Illinois convention the question was asked: What are the three best plums for planting in Central Illinois? President Foster answered: German plum, Moore's Arctic and Lombard.

Wealthy Farmer in Jo Daviess County Beaten to Death by Toughs—State Auction Men Organize.

Beating Causes Vick's Death.

Galena, Ill.—Joseph Vick of Willow, Jo Daviess county died as the result of a beating which he received Wednesday at the hands of a gang of young men of that town. Vick was a wealthy farmer and lived alone. Wednesday he quarreled with a member of the gang, and Thursday he was called to a grove near his house by a stranger, who said he wanted him to care for a sick horse. Vick responded, and just as he entered the grove was set upon by a half-dozen young men, who beat him into insensibility and threw him into a ditch. Vick was found a few hours afterward and taken home. In the quarrel he tore a mask from the face of one of his assailants, whom he recognized as the man who quarreled with him the day previous.

Is Found Guilty of Murder.

Ottawa, Ill.—The McCune murder trial, which has been in progress in the Circuit court for a week has come to a close. Peter McCune of Marquette was found guilty of the murder of John Roach on the night of Oct. 10 and the jury sentenced him to be hanged.

The murder was premeditated on the part of McCune, according to the testimony in the case. His motive in committing the crime was to do away with Roach, so that the latter could not appear before the grand jury against Peter McCune, a son of the murderer, on the charge of larceny. The day of McCune's execution has not yet been set.

Pana Miners Will Stay Out.

Pana, Ill., special: The union miners held a mass meeting Tuesday to consider the decision of the state board of arbitration. The miners decided to abide by the board's findings regarding the scale, but adopted a set of resolutions declaring that they would not return to work so long as non-union men were employed in the mines. As the operators have steadfastly declared that they will not voluntarily discharge the men who have stood by them during the long struggle, it appears unlikely that a settlement can be reached in the near future.

Pleas for American History.

Aledo, Ill., special: Judge Richard Yates, son of the famous war governor of Illinois, during his Decoration day address here eloquently urged more thorough instruction in American history in the schools throughout the country. The Visiting Circle of the Republic.

President McKinley's announcement that he will make an extended tour of the west, reaching as far as San Francisco, ought to be, and doubtless will be, received with gratification. The president is the official link that unites all sections of the country in a generous realization of the republic. He is the only personal incarnation that we have of the whole country, and the country ought to be able to see him at times and renew its intimacy and relationship with him. It is true enough that he is measurably accessible to all the people at all times, but the people cannot all go to him, and there is something characteristic of our country in his going to them familiarly and unostentatiously. There is and always will be among such large and widely separated centers as make up the United States a divergence of interests and ideas and tastes, no less than rivalries of enterprise and antagonisms of prejudice. They are the unavoidable fruits of composite civilization centering itself at innumerable points. But there is always one unifying abstraction in the sense of a national solidarity. Everything therefore which makes that great fact concrete the senses makes for conservatism and unity. Probably no nation on the globe can quite equal the spectacle of its president going unguarded among the people of all classes and all politics unattended by any pomp of power, undeterred by any personal peril and virtually acknowledging in his intercourse that all the prestige and potency of his office are derived from the people. He is thus a realization to the sense of the highest political ideal, and the more the people see of him the more clearly they will comprehend where the abstractions of government become a living reality. No one can make a picture in his mind of the republic or of the United States government. It is at the best a vast association of principles and abstractions. To make a symbol of it we have to use our imagination and picture it to ourselves as Uncle Sam or Columbia. But the moment the president appears we have before us a tangible and personal evidence of the living reality of it. He is the embodiment for the time being of our own collective strength, and his presence takes us at once out of our provincial and sectional narrowness and lifts us with the sense of an aggravated and organized power.

The police of two great American cities are simultaneously under official examination, and it has been discovered in both cases that an entirely new order of vision has been developed by them, which makes the discovery of color blindness a very small affair indeed. It has been found in Chicago and in New York that a police captain, with 400 poolrooms and gambling dens put squarely before his face, could not see them, and this optical defect reached even the commissioners, who, when the poolrooms were pointed out to them, doubted their existence and conscientiously denied the evidence of their own senses. Here is a new physiologic mystery worthy the attention of science. What is the effect of police duty on the eyesight? How long after appointment does a policeman retain the use of his senses? And does he, if employed long enough, lose the power of recognition entirely? As blind as a policeman may yet become an adage illustrating one of the discoveries of the age.

Domiphogia is the name of a new disease given by an English physician to symptoms which he has discovered exclusively among women. It may be interpreted as a desire to leave their homes, and he declares, after careful study, that it has been growing at a fearful rate for the last 25 years. The symptoms come on in the spring and produce a nervous restlessness. If the victim is well to do, she must travel. If she is poor, she must move into a new house. If she is young and not her own mistress, she must make visits and jaunts, and it requires strict surveillance to prevent her from running away from home. The doctor ascribes this disease to the general unrest of the sex which has been fed by injudicious women who have advanced all sorts of crazy notions concerning the freedom and the irresponsibility of women generally.

Foregleams of Peace.

In looking for immediate and practical results at the peace conference, we are very apt to underestimate some results that do not lie on the surface of affairs. The mere fact that civilization has been forced by some kind of unmeasurable pressure to consider the matter at all is an inestimable gain and a hopeful assurance that future conferences will carry the matter on to more definite results. The time has come when nations must stop and think of something besides physical force. They are forced to acknowledge that the great bulk of intelligent mankind is in favor of doing away with the strain of professional militarism, and this convention, irrespective of the conclusions at which it may arrive, is a preliminary concession to the demands of the peoples themselves. The delegates, whether they will or not, take the spirit of the times with them, and we are enabled to see in a hopeful way that the princes and potentates of the earth, who always lag a little behind the spirit of the age, are being forced to listen to the promptings of that spirit. Emperors may not be ready to put away all their weapons, but they are beginning to see that men are slightly tired of killing each other at the beck of imperial masters. Therefore, although selfish considerations will come to the front and cover themselves with smooth words and specious diplomacy, the mere fact that they come together at all and acknowledge the necessity for consultation is worth a great deal to the world. The two most powerful of the representatives at this convocation—Russia and Germany—will be forced into an attitude of apologetic reflection, in spite of themselves, very much as if they were summoned to the bar of public opinion. They will have to make excuses for their imperial medievalism, pretend to be slightly ashamed of their brute force, and assume the air of deprecating bullies who would like to disarm, but dare not. All this is something for the end of the century to be proud of, for it is looking on intelligently and will measure the hypocrisy, the insincerity and the jealousy unerringly, taking note of its own moral power to hold up the war lords and make them consider.

The water question in the west is always of supreme importance, because the people either have too little or too much. It is an old story that the man who builds a sawmill on a western river waits until spring to get water enough to turn his wheel, and then he suddenly gets enough to take him and his sawmill into the next county. But even this old and familiar experience does not match that of Mr. Mayne Myers at Whittiers, in California. He was suffering for the want of water, and he bored an artesian well, in the process of which he struck an ocean that shoots up 500 feet into the air and threatens to wash his whole ranch into the Pacific. This ranch consists of 1200 acres, and half of it has been overflowed, destroying ten acres of grain. Trains are now running to the vicinity crowded with sightseers. It is a free show, as there is no way to hide the display, though it is probable that Mr. Myers would be glad to give the thing to any one who would take it away. One of the California papers says that the state authorities are getting ready to add a new river to their map.

The bean king of Ventura county, Cal., looms up larger every year. His name is Dixie Thompson. He raised and harvested last year 1,300 carloads of beans. He says the bean is the true American crop that is to take the place of corn. It makes bigger returns, is surer, more hardy, more nutritious and less perishable. It will feed man and beast and is not easily destroyed by drought or insects. Mr. Thompson thinks that if California will only take kindly to the bean she will in time drive all famine from the face of the earth.

The divine Bernhardt, as the Frenchmen call her, is proving that she is not divine by playing Hamlet. This has been the ambition of more than one gifted actress. Anna Dickinson wrestled with it, and it slew her. She encompassed the rhetoric of it easily enough, but she could not accomplish the action. She handled a sword very much like a larding pin, and her knees betrayed her sex. It was very much the same with an English actress by the name of Marriott, who came over here to show us how superior a woman is to a man in a man's part. She killed Polonius as if she were making tea biscuit. Bernhardt cannot even in this great role keep her sex out of it. Therefore she should have kept out of it herself, unless she could get Coquelin to play Ophelia.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper. CARTER H. HARRISON, "Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically. "WASHINGTON HESING."

The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country."

One of the most pleasant events of the season was the closing exercises at the Slocum's Lake school house last Saturday evening. A fine program, consisting of about twenty-five numbers, had been arranged for the occasion and was rendered in a most excellent manner, after which ice cream and cake were served for the small sum of 10 cents, and it is needless to say all indulged heartily. Rev. Dutton was present and delivered a short address and after all was over was given a pleasant surprise by being presented with the proceeds of the evening's entertainment which amounted to $6.50.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. Wilson, Liveryman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

Plano Jones Mower
Longest Lived and Lightest Draft Mower in the world.
It has no vibration.

no Noise, no Lost Power.
No Cog Wheels to wear out.
Free from Side Draft and free from Neck Weight.
No backing up to start in the grass.

THE PLANO is the simplest and best.

The following are a few of the points why the Plano machines are the best over other makes:

In the Plano Jones Lever Binder the knotter contains only 16 pieces, while the Deering has 44, McCormick 28 and the Champion 33.
It is the only binder put up with lever power, carrying spring, friction clutch reel and jointless main frame.
The main drive wheel is two inches wider than any other made, consequently the machine will not mire or settle down in soft or loose ground.

Farmers should examine this machine before placing their order.

A Study in Mechanics.

The Deering Ideal Mower, made in Chicago, affords an interesting study in advanced machines, and is as perfect a machine as brain, brawn and money can build. It is furnished throughout with Deering Roller and Ball Bearings. The "Ideal" has a very wide track and high wheels, insuring great stability and ample traction. Its gears are light, strong and reliable. In this machine the amount of lost motion is so slight that the instant one of the mower wheels starts it communicates power to the crank shaft and knife, thus making it possible to start in heavy grass without backing. The knife may be removed in fifteen seconds, simply by raising a latch. It is the only mower on the market equipped with ball bearings of the bicycle pattern.

Secrets of the South Pole.

Increasing interest is shown in Germany and England in proposed expeditions to the south polar regions. Recent news from the German exploring ship Valdivia shows that the Southern ocean is now open to an unusual degree, and that its depth is greater than has generally been supposed. One of the unsolved questions in geography is the origin of the cold ocean currents which take their rise in the far South. It is said that because of the tendency of the currents away from the south pole, tremendous squeezings in the ice, such as Nansen's ship experienced, need not be feared. There will be three expeditions—one German, one American and one English, each to follow an independent route.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has taken up the matter of News Agents on the trains with the result that an effort is to be made to prevent passengers from being unnecessarily bothered by the sellers of newspapers, etc. Under the new arrangement the agents can only call their goods four times within an hour in the regular day coaches, and not at all in the sleeping, parlor, chair or dining cars, as it is well understood that an occupant of any of these cars can always get what he wants by calling on the porter whose duty it is to look after the wants of passengers.

PHANTOM SHIP

—OR—

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

CHAPTER XXII.—(Continued.)

The Utrecht sailed with a flowing sheet, and was soon clear of the English Channel; the voyage promised to be auspicious, favoring gales bore them without accident to within a few hundred miles of the Cape of Good Hope, when, for the first time, they were alarmed. Amine was delighted; in the evenings she would pace the deck with Philip; then all was silent, except the splash of the wave as it washed against the sides of the vessel—all was in repose and beauty, as the bright southern constellations sparkled over their heads.

When the day dawned, the lookout man at the mast-head reported that he perceived something floating on the still surface of the water, on the beam of the vessel. Krantz went up with the glass to examine, and made it out to be a small boat, probably cut adrift from some vessel. As there was no appearance of wind, Philip permitted a boat to be sent to examine it, and after a long pull the seamen returned on board, towing the small boat astern.

"There is the body of a man in it," said the second mate to Krantz, as he gained the gangway; "but whether he is quite dead or not, I cannot tell."

Krantz reported this to Philip, who was at that time sitting at breakfast with Amine, in the cabin, and then proceeded to the gangway, to where the body of the man had been already handed up by the seamen. The surgeon, who had been summoned, declared that life was not yet extinct, and was ordering him to be taken below, for recovery, when to their astonishment the man turned as he lay, sat up, and ultimately rose upon his feet and staggered to a gun, when, after a time, he appeared to be fully recovered. In reply to questions put to him, he said that he was in a vessel which had been upset in a squall, that he had time to cut away the small boat astern, and that all the rest of the crew had perished. He had hardly made his answer, when Philip, who Amine came out of the cabin, and walked up to where the seamen were crowded round the man; the seamen retreated so as to make an opening, when Philip and Amine, to their astonishment and horror, recognized their old acquaintance, the one-eyed pilot Schriften.

"He! he! Captain Vanderdecken, I believe—glad to see you in command, and you, too, fair lady."

Philip turned away with a chill at his heart; Amine's eye flashed as she surveyed the wasted form of the wretched creature. After a few seconds she turned round and followed Philip into the cabin, where she found him with his face buried in his hands. "Courage, Philip, courage!" said Amine; "it was indeed a heavy shock, and I fear me forbodes evil; but what then? it is our destiny."

"It is! it ought perhaps to be mine," replied Philip, raising his head; "but you, Amine, why should you be a partner?"

"I am your partner, Philip, in life and in death. I would not die first, Philip, because it would grieve you; but your death will be the signal for mine, and I will join you quickly."

"Surely, Amine, you would not hasten your own?"

"Yes! and require but one moment for this little steel to do its duty."

"Nay! Amine, that is not lawful—our religion forbids it."

"It may do so, but I cannot tell why. I came into this world without my own consent; surely I may leave without asking the leave of priests! But let that pass for the present; what will you do with that Schriften?"

"Put him on shore at the Cape; I cannot bear the odious wretch's presence. Did you not feel the chill, as before, when you approached him?"

"I did—I knew that he was there before I saw him; but still I know not why, I feel as if I would not send him away."

"Why not?"

"I believe it is because I am inclined to brave destiny, not to quail at it. The wretch can do no harm."

"Yes, he can—much; he can render the ship's company mutinous and disaffected; besides, he attempted to deprive me of my relic."

"I almost wish he had done so; then must you have discontinued this wild search."

"Nay, Amine, say not so; it is my duty, and I have taken my solemn oath—"

"But this Schriften—you cannot well put him ashore at the Cape, he being a company's officer; you might send him home if you found a ship there homeward bound; still, were I you, I would let destiny work. He is woven in with ours, that is certain. Courage, Philip, and let him remain."

"Perhaps you are right, Amine; I may retard, but cannot escape, whatever may be my intended fate."

"Let him remain, then and let him do his worst. Treat him with kindness—who knows what we may gain from him?"

"True, true, Amine; he has been my enemy without cause. Who can tell?—perhaps he may become my friend."

"And if not, you have done your duty."

The Utrecht arrived at the Cape, watered and proceeded on her voyage, and, after two months of difficult navigation, cast anchor off Gambroon. During this time Amine had been unceasing in her attempts to gain the good-will of Schriften. She had often conversed with him on deck, and had done him every kindness, and had overcome that fear which his near approach had generally occasioned. Schriften gradually appeared mindful of this kindness, and at last to be pleased with Amine's company. To Philip he was at times civil and courteous, but not always; to Amine he was always deferent. His language was mystical—he could not prevent his chuckling laugh, his occasional "He! he!" from breaking forth. But when they anchored at Gambroon, he was on such terms with her that he would occasionally come into the cabin; and, although he would not sit down, would talk to Amine for a few minutes, and then depart.

The Utrecht sailed from Gambroon, touched at Ceylon and proceeded on her voyage in the Eastern seas. The ship was not far from the Andaman Isles, when Krantz, who had watched the barometer, came in early one morning and called Philip.

"We have every prospect of a typhoon, sir," said Krantz; "the glass and the weather are both threatening."

"Then we must make all snug. Send down top-gallant yards and small sails directly. We will strike top-gallant masts. I will be out in a minute."

Philip hastened on deck. The sea was smooth, but already the moaning of the wind gave notice of the approaching storm. The vacuum in the air was about to be filled up, and the convulsion would be terrible; a white haze gathered fast, thicker and thicker; the men were turned up, everything of weight was sent below, and the guns were secured. Now came a blast of wind which careened the ship, passed over, and in a minute she righted as before; then another and another, fiercer and fiercer still. The sea, although smooth, at last appeared white as a sheet with foam, as the typhoon swept along in its impetuous career; it burst upon the vessel, which bowed down to her gunwale and there remained; in a quarter of an hour the hurricane had passed over and the vessel was relieved; but the sea had risen, and the wind was strong. In another hour the blast again came, more wild, more furious than at first; the waves were dashed into their faces, torrents of rain descended, the ship was thrown on her beam ends and thus remained till the wild blast had passed away, to sweep destruction far beyond them, leaving behind it a tumultuous, angry sea.

"It is nearly over, I believe, sir," said Krantz. "It is clearing up a little to windward."

"We have had the worst of it, I believe," said Philip.

"No; there is worse to come," said a low voice near to Philip. It was Schriften who spoke.

"A vessel to windward scudding before the gale!" cried Krantz.

Philip looked to windward, and in the spot where the horizon was clearest he saw a vessel under topsails and foresail standing right down. "She is a large vessel; bring me my glass."

The telescope was brought from the cabin, but before Philip could use it a haze had again gathered up to windward, and the vessel was not to be seen.

"Thick again," observed Philip, as he shut in his telescope. "We must look out for that vessel, that she does not run too close to us."

"She has seen us, no doubt, sir," said Krantz.

After a few minutes the typhoon again raged, and the atmosphere was a murky gloom. It seemed as if some heavy fog had been hurried along by the furious wind; nothing was to be distinguished except the white foam of the sea, and that not the distance of half a cable's length, where it was lost in one dark-gray mist. The storm-staysail, yielding to the force of the wind, was rent into strips, and flogged and cracked with a noise even louder than the sea. The furious blast again blew over, and the mist cleared up a little.

"Ship on the weather beam close aboard of us!" cried one of the men.

Krantz and Philip sprang upon the gunwale, and beheld the large ship bearing right down upon them, not three cables' length distant.

"Heim up! She does not see us, and she will be aboard of us!" cried Philip. "Heim up, I say; hard up, quick!"

The helm was put up, as the men, perceiving their imminent danger, climbed upon the guns to look if the vessel altered her course; but no—down she came, and the headsails of the Utrecht having been carried away, to their horror they perceived that she would not answer her helm and pay off as they required.

"Ship ahoy!" cried Krantz, on the gunwale, waving his hat. It was useless—down she came, with the waters foaming under her bows, and was now within pistol shot of the Utrecht.

"Ship ahoy!" roared all the sailors, with a shout that must have been heard; it was not attended to; down came the vessel upon them, and now her cut-water was within ten yards of the Utrecht. The men of the Utrecht, who expected that their vessel would be severed in half by the concussion, climbed upon the weather gunwale, all ready to catch at the ropes of the other vessel and climb on board of her. Amine, who had been surprised at the noise on deck, had come out and had taken Philip by the arm.

"Trust to me—the shock—" said Philip. He said no more; the cut-water of the stranger touched their sides; one general cry was raised by the sailors of the Utrecht—they sprang to catch at the rigging of the other vessel's bowsprit, which was now pointed between their masts. They caught at nothing—nothing—there was no shock—no concussion of the two vessels—the stranger appeared to cleave through them; her hull passed along in silence; no cracking of timbers; no falling of masts; the foreyard passed through their mainsail, yet the canvas was unrent; the whole vessel appeared to cut through the Utrecht, yet left no trace of injury—not fast, but slowly, as if she were really sawing through her by the heaving and tossing of the sea with her sharp prow. The stranger's forechairs had passed their gunwale before Philip could recover himself. "Amine!" cried he, at last; "the Phantom ship! My father!"

The seamen of the Utrecht, more astounded by the marvelous result than by their former danger, threw themselves down upon deck; some hastened below, some prayed; others were dumb with astonishment and fear. Amine appeared more calm than any, not excepting Philip; she surveyed the vessel as it slowly forced its way through; she beheld the seamen on board her coolly leaning over her gunwale, as if deriding the destruction that they had occasioned; she looked for Vanderdecken himself, and on the poop of the vessel, with his trumpet under his arm, she beheld the image of her Philip—the same hardy, strong build, the same features, about the same age apparently; there could be no doubt it was the doomed Vanderdecken.

"See, Philip," said she; "see your father!"

"Even so. Merciful heaven! it is—it is!" and Philip, overpowered by his feelings, sank upon the deck.

The vessel had now passed over the Utrecht; the form of the elder Vanderdecken was seen to walk aft and look over the taffrail; Amine perceived it to start and turn away suddenly; she looked down and saw Schriften shaking his fist in defiance at the supernatural being! Again the Phantom ship flew to leeward before the gale, and was soon lost in the mist; but before that Amine had turned and perceived the situation of Philip. No one but herself and Schriften appeared able to act or move. She caught the pilot's eye, beckoned to him, and with his assistance Philip was led into the cabin.

Cinderella of Ancient Egypt.

"Cinderella" is not entirely the product of fiction. Princess Rhodopis of Egypt was the first Cinderella. She was bathing in the Nile, and a bird, which Strabo calls an eagle, flying past, picked up one of her slippers, or sandals, flew away with it, and dropped it on the lap of Prince Psammetichus, who was holding a court of justice in Memphis. He was so struck by the dainty manufacture and small size of the sandal, that, being then in search of a bride, he at once vowed that he would only wed the maiden whose foot fitted the sandal. There were two elder daughters of the first marriage who greatly envied her good fortune—and here we have all the essentials of the story.

Turned Down.

"I came to ask you for your daughter," said the young man who has nothing but what he expects to earn. "but I can't express myself." "Express yourself!" sneered the plutocratic parent. "You don't even need to go by freight. Walking is expeditious enough in this case. Don't forget your hat."—Detroit Free Press.

Negotiations Are Still Proceeding.
Negotiations are still proceeding between the governments of Great Britain and the United States in reference to the Alaskan boundary.

The announcement that Miss Julia Dent Grant of Chicago is shortly to become the wife of Prince Michel Cantacuzene of Russia furnishes the principal item of gossip in social circles on both sides of the water. Miss Grant is the daughter of Brigadier General Fred D. Grant and the granddaughter of General Ulysses S. Grant. She is barely more than twenty years of age. Prince Cantacuzene comes of one of the oldest families of Russia and reputation speaks well of him. He is in the Russian Imperial Guard, and is at present one of the attaches of the Russian embassy at Rome. Like Miss Grant, he is decidedly youthful, but he apparently thinks that he is amply able to embark upon the matrimonial sea. Prince Cantacuzene is related through his mother to the late Count Speransky, who was called some thirty years ago "the grand old man of Russia." Being the reputed possessor of some means, he is not put down in the category of fortune hunters, but subsequent developments must determine his real worth and character. Americans who revere the name of Grant regret that one who inherits the name and blood of that family should not find some noble young American upon whom to bestow her love. She may find happiness in the ties which make her the wife of Prince Cantacuzene, but such are the marked racial distinctions between Americans and Russians that she is not likely to reap from the alliance that measure of felicity which she expects. If she had consulted the experience of her aunt, she might Sunday Closing of Saloons Freely Discussed.

The village board met in regular session Monday evening. In the absence of Clerk M. T. Lamey, Trustee Plagge was made clerk pro tem.

President Boehmer, Trustees Peck, Plagge, Robertson, Grunau and Peters answered to the clerk's roll call. Absent, Trustee Richardson.

The treasurer's report for the month of May was read and accepted on motion of Trustee Peck. Carried unanimously.

A communication from ex-Village Attorney Redmond was read, and is, in substance, as follows:

TO THE PRESIDENT AND BOARD OF TRUSTEES:

GENTLEMEN—During my term of office I disposed of twenty-three cases, winning them all. A large number of orders, ordinances and opinions were drawn up and was obliged to make new and complete forms for court proceedings in special assessment for water mains. This case was the first started under the new law.

During my term of office the village has been put to no expense for special council. There are two cases now pending—Meyer vs. Village of Barrington et al., and Parker vs. Village of Barrington et al. Much of the evidence in these two cases is now in, which is all turned over to my successor in office. I wish to thank the president and board for the honor bestowed upon and the confidence placed in me.

Yours truly,
A. J. REDMOND.

The above communication was accepted, and on motion of Trustee Peck the clerk was instructed to send a vote of thanks to Mr. Redmond for services rendered. Carried.

The following bills were allowed:
Henry Sandman, marshal..... $ 35 00
A. S. Henderson, night watchman..... 35 00

Electric Light Co., lighting streets..... 51 00
A. L. Robertson, freight on coal..... 54 75
Street labor..... 12 88

Total..... $442 02

On motion of Trustee Grunau the bills were ordered paid and warrants drawn for same.

Trustee Plagge reported that they now have a hook and ladder truck and no building to put it in. Suggested that the board take some action in the matter at once. A motion was then made to refer the matter to the committee on public buildings and grounds with full power to act as they see fit.

The sidewalk question came up for an airing and after considerable discussion the street committee was instructed to go over the walks and find out what condition the walks were in.

Trustee Peck, chairman of the license committee, reported that the saloons were kept open on Sunday and running in violation of the laws and ordinance. He was of the opinion that something ought to be done in the matter and evidence secured to convict them if they continue. Some of the trustees thought it would be a hard matter to secure evidence, but would like to see them close. Trustee Grunau suggested that the license committee, consisting of Peck, Richardson and Peters, ought to go to the saloons themselves on Sunday and buy a few rounds of drinks, which would be the best evidence that could be produced. Pres. Boehmer thought the board would sustain the committee in anything they might do. No action was taken.

The annual appropriation ordinance was read but laid on the table, as there would be time enough to pass it at the next meeting and also give time for alterations were any necessary.

The contract for pumping the water for the village by Al. R. Robertson was read. The contract calls for $75 per month for pumping the water if the output does not exceed 18,000,000 gallons per year. Over that amount of water 5 cents per thousand gallons will be charged. The contract is for twelve years—from August 1, 1899, to August 1, 1911.

Trustee Peters made a motion that the contract be ratified and that Mr.

Robertson give a bond in the sum of $5,000 for the faithful performance of his duty. Carried unanimously.

Mr. Robertson offered as surety, his father, John Robertson, who was accepted by the board.

A special rate for water was made to Sandman & Pomeroy at 10 cents per thousand gallons if they used over 2,000 gallons per day on an average.

On motion of Trustee Grunau the board adjourned.

Woodmen Keep Memorial Day.

The Barrington Camp, No. 809, M. W. A., observed Memorial Day last Sunday and a large number of people joined with them in making the day one set aside to be remembered by all.

At 10 o'clock in the morning the procession, headed by the Barrington Military band, followed by the Nunda Foresters in uniform, left the lodge hall and marched to the Baptist church, where an eloquent and appropriate sermon was delivered by Rev. S. S. Hageman, pastor of the church. After the services the procession proceeded in military order to the lodge rooms and broke ranks for dinner.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the line of march was again taken up and moved to the public square, where an exhibition drill was given by the Nunda Foresters, who took first prize at Beloit. The drill was fine and greatly appreciated by all. The team has only been organized about three months and it hardly seems possible that such wonderful advancement could be made in such short time. They are perfect and the body moves as one person with ease.

After the drill the column formed and marched to the cemeteries to decorate the graves of deceased Woodmen. The decorating was completed and the procession started for town, but ranks were broken before they reached the hall, on account of rain, and refuge taken in houses along the streets.

The program was successfully carried out, which is only more evidence that the Woodmen, when they take hold of a thing, know how to carry it through.

Robertson-Lytle Nuptials.

Miss Lydia Robertson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson of this place, was united in marriage to Dr. George A. Lytle of Chicago Wednesday, June 7.

Both parties are well known and highly respected in this community and enjoy the distinction of being among the most popular people of our village. The groom's home was formerly at Palatine, where his parents now reside. For about four years he was located in Barrington as a veterinary surgeon, prior to moving to Chicago. About a year ago Dr. Lytle secured a splendid position under the government on the board of meat inspectors in Chicago, which position he now fills with the utmost satisfaction. The bride has resided in Barrington from the time of her childhood, and is not only well known by nearly everyone, but is much esteemed and loved by all who have had the pleasure of making her acquaintance. She is a young lady of rare talents and marked ability and is a graduate of Prof. Sear's course of music.

The wedding took place at 6815 Emerald avenue, Chicago, the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Lytle, and was quiet, though beautiful and impressive. Rev. T. E. Ream, pastor of the M. E. church of this place, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few of the most intimate relatives.
