Letter from A. G. Smith.

HAZELHURST, WIS., July 12.

Palatine Review:—I arrived here Saturday morning after a cold night's ride. The fishing in Wisconsin is all that it is claimed to be, but that does not tell it all. To go fishing you have to put up with many difficulties, such as mosquitoes by the million, a tramp through almost impassable underbrush and scarcity of boats.

The people in this section have not yet awakened to their opportunities. The county was settled by people who took up claims only to clear off the timber. After the timber was cut many left and those that remained are not farmers, so the country is left a mass of underbrush and standing timber. All the large trees have been cut into lumber, but there is plenty of small timber left suitable for telegraph poles, fence posts and the like. Fire wood brings about $1 per cord and there is good money in this as a quarter of a section will yield thousands of cords. Many of the sections have been deserted and no one is left to do the clearing. Those who are here have not the inclination to work. Land can be bought here for from 50c to $1 an acre, and it is sandy loam, suitable for potatoes, vegetables, hay and many farm products. Most of the hay used, however, come from the low lands, being wild hay and is worth about $10 per ton. The county is just beginning to be populated by farmers who will within a few years change the aspect of things. Nearly every village has electric lights and they are not expensive, as water is abundant and the poles necessary for the building of lines can be obtained almost without any cost. There are about a dozen lakes within five miles of where I am and nearly all afford abundant fishing.

I have seen plenty of deer tracks, but would not dare to hunt them, as the law forbids.

There is a bear within a mile of here and we may have a chance to eat some bear meat before we come back.

The Indian reservation is about two miles from here and their ponies are roaming through the forests. We have seen a few Indians, but of course they are civilized, although they are having dances at present.

Harry Rea came Tuesday and we expect to pull in a few miscallonge tomorrow.

A SUCCESSFUL PICNIC.

M. W. A. Picnic Held Last Saturday in Comstock's Grove.

The M. W. A. picnic, after many unfortunate set-backs, was held in Comstock's grove last Saturday and was a grand success in every way. The rain on the Fourth had put a damper on all enthusiasm, and but for the hard work done by a few of the Neighbors, the affair would have been a failure.

None of the privileges were sold as formerly, each stand being under the charge of a committee of Woodmen, who exerted every effort to make their stand a success financially.

From 9 o'clock in the morning until 2 o'clock in the afternoon the roads to the grounds were filled with arriving picnickers.

At 12 o'clock dinner was eaten in true Woodmen style, i. e.: Woodmen appetites and "any old way." About 1:30 the master of ceremonies proceeded with the Fourth of July program with omissions and variations.

Music by the band whenever and wherever wanted.

Songs by male quartette.

Song and flag drill by forty little girls. Oratorical pyrotechnics by Rev. T. E. Ream and M. C. McIntosh.

Following the program was a voting contest for a large doll, which was voted to Hazel Wooding.

The greased pole was climbed and prize captured by Tony Sbrocchi.

In the game of "Kock in Pot," the rooster was awarded to Mrs. Smith and second prize to Mrs. Rohlmeier.

Twenty-seven boys captured a rooster after an exciting chase, in which Albert Wolf fell on the fowl and was declared the winner.

The greased pig was captured by Tom Gibson, who makes butter at Spring Lake. He evidently was afraid of his prize, as he sold it at once.

In the young ladies' race Miss Rohlmeier ran off with the handsome silver thimble which she won.

In the three-legged race Messrs. Beuchat and Hauschildt displayed skill and training and carried off first prize, while Messrs. Otis and Donlea were awarded second money.

Cook county pulled Lake county in the tug of war and earned their trophy. Unfortunately the spectators were not kept at a sufficient distance and charges of foul play were made.

Rudolph Karschuk's years of training resulted in his winning the wheelbarrow race without toe weights.

The sack race was won by J. Hauschildt without the use of interfering boots.

Tony Sbrocchi came to the front again in the boys' foot race.

C. H. Hutchinson distanced the field in a hundred-yard dash, in which five young men entered.

Mrs. Wm. Nagatz won the married women's race, which proved to be an exciting contest.

Mrs. C. H. Kendall and A. W. Meyer were voted umbrellas as being the most popular people on the grounds.

The men in the refreshment booth worked like beavers and should each receive a medal for bravery on the field of action.

The cane and doll rack were in the hands of Woodmen who were not afraid of blistering their hands or throats and added much to the revenue of the society.

The Neighbor who had charge of the voting contests probably had the most tiresome position of all, and after three and a-half hours of hard work had little to show for his efforts. However, the picnic was a grand success and the Woodmen have again proven the old adage, that "Where there's a will, there's a way."

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of the M. E. church met at the residence of Mrs. C. O. Winter on Tuesday evening. The following readings were rendered:

A WEEK IN ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF HAPPENINGS FOR SEVEN DAYS.

Duelling Lovers Still Live—Participant in Arlington Tragedy Are Both Mortally Wounded—To Force Issue of Licenses in Joliet.

Duelling Lovers Still Live.

Arlington, Ill.—The participants in last week's duel, Charles Saltzman and his affianced wife, Miss Kate Korfoldsheimer, are still in a critical condition and the doctors, say both will die. Saltzman is at his home in Seatonville, while the young woman was taken to the residence of her father, a mile distant. It develops today that Miss Korfoldsheimer yesterday drove to Princeton and secured a warrant for the arrest of her lover and then set out to find him. On the way she purchased a revolver and at Seatonville located Saltzman in a saloon. She asked him to take a drive and he consented. When a mile from the town she halted the horse and demanded of him that he consent to a marriage at once. Saltzman began to make excuses, when the woman suddenly drew a revolver and commenced firing. Her companion wrested the weapon away and turned it upon her, but not until he had received a mortal wound. The weapon was emptied and Miss Korfoldsheimer fell to the bottom of the buggy with serious injuries. The horse became frightened and started to run, unchecked by a driver, Saltzman having fainted from loss of blood. The animal ran nearly two miles before he was stopped by a farmer. The affair caused a sensation here. The families of both are highly respected in the community.

To Force Issue of Licenses.

Joliet, Ill.—The mandamus case against Mayor John B. Mount to compel him to issue saloon licenses was begun Friday. The case is brought by William Conlon, treasurer of the Saloonkeepers' Association. The petition recites at length the fight of the saloonkeepers in the council to reduce the license fee to $500, the refusal of Mr. Mount to accept that action as legal and his subsequent refusal to issue any licenses for that sum. The petitioner claims that he is entitled to the license under the law, and asks the court to compel the mayor to issue one to him. The case will come up in the circuit court July 26 before Judge Dibel.

DAIRY AND POULTRY.

INTERESTING CHAPTERS FOR OUR RURAL READERS.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Turkeys and Ducks.

To the Farmers' Review: From 42 turkey eggs set we secured 39 nice turkeys, all living so far. They are now (June 7) three weeks old and as healthy as possible. The eggs were set under chicken hens, and were given to the hens that hatched them, as far as possible. Three hens hatched 32 poulters, and these were given to two hens, 16 to each hen. The other 7 are with a hen that also has 13 little chicks. Boards a foot wide were built around a bare spot of ground, and in these the coops were placed. The pens adjoin, but have a board partition, and, of course, a coop in each pen. The pens are probably 12x12 feet in dimensions.

The poulters were not let out of these pens until large enough to fly over them, which they could do when two weeks old; then they were allowed to fly over when they wished. They have been fed on curds, soaked wheat bread and corn bread. The curds were made black with pepper, and were eaten with greater relish than any of the other feed. We were not able to give with slug shot, whether any lice are there many on top this year, but we never saw turks do better than they have, not an ailing one among the bunch. They are dusted each week visible or not, and the mother hens are given an extra good dusting each time. The 32 were entirely free of lice at the last dusting, but the previous one the little wings were well inhabited with them.

For various reasons we like the bare pens best. It is impossible for the little things to get wet after a shower if the ground is bare, and getting wet is almost fatal to young poulters. We have several more eggs incubating, mostly under chicken hens, although one hen hid her nest so well she was sitting when found. As to whether eggs from young turkey hens will hatch or not is yet an undecided question with us, for while our neighbor's nine young hens failed to lay fertile eggs, one little hen of ours (well it would have been a runt if it had been a pig), but one year old, laid eggs that were all fertile. We set them more as an experiment than thinking they would be of any value. She lay pure white eggs.

The turkeys are scarcely as large as from the old hens' eggs, but are as pert as any. As a rule it is best to not bother much with turkey eggs laid by a hen under two years old. The young hens lay the most eggs before desiring to set. We only got two, layings of eggs this year. The hens were two weeks later in commencing to lay. We are frequently asked why we didn't raise market ducks this year, if we were afraid of the price, or had we decided they were unprofitable? Neither. We didn't try to have any because unavoidable circumstances prevented our getting a hatch early enough for profit in market ducks.

One must have ducks ready to market by, at the latest, the first week in June to get much profit. It is better if you can have them by the middle of May. We would rather raise ducks than any other poultry, and are not afraid of losing money. In fact, we are rather lonesome without them.—Emma Clearwaters.

Leg Weakness.

Weakness of the legs is a trouble appearing in young birds, cockrels more often than pullets, and is seen usually between three and five months of age, says American Poultry Journal. The larger breeds are more prone to this trouble than the smaller and more active birds. This weakness is caused by the pushing for growth by feeding too much fattening food and condiments, thereby increasing the weight of the body beyond the ability of the legs to support it. If your birds are getting into this condition you will notice at first unsteadiness in gait. They move slowly and the limbs slightly shake. In a week's time they can hardly keep up on their legs, and when feeding will sit down so the body is nearly on the ground. Looking the bird over, you will find little to attract your eye, except the weakness of the legs. The bird otherwise appears to be healthy. The feathers are bright, the eye clear and the appetite good. As the days pass the bird loses his desire for food; is picked upon by his brothers; lice multiply upon him; he becomes thin; the skin grows dry and crackly. In the very beginning of leg weakness remove all causes of trouble. Spice, corn and cornmeal, buckwheat and rye, should not be fed for weeks to such birds. Have regular times to give the meals and make each bird work for part of his food. If possible, have sick birds by themselves to avoid imposition by the other chicks. A grass run, with shade and cool water, will help cure these cases. If you have time and patience, one-tenth of a grain of quinine given to each bird with leg weakness, every morning, will help bring up the chick to health again.

Salting Butter in Denmark.

The New Zealand Dairyman gives the Danish method of salting butter as follows:

As soon as the buttermilk has been removed the butter is weighed, in order to calculate the amount of salt required, and the salt is worked in at this time, usually on the butter-work-er. Sometimes it is all incorporated at one working, but in many places it is preferred to add it in two workings. The amount of salt used is not uniform. It is adapted to the taste of the market where it is expected to be sold, but it varies between 4 and 5 per cent of the weight of the butter. The salt is worked into the butter with the least possible amount of handling, and it is then laid aside for some time before the next working takes place. In summer it is put in butter coolers, which are a sort of ice-box. In winter it is either laid in large rolls in the butter trough or on a table provided for the purpose. It lies here for a couple of hours in the cold season, but when the weather is warm it is allowed to remain for eight or ten hours, or until the cool of the following morning, before it receives the final working. The object is not only to cool the butter, and thus allow it to become firmer, but also to allow the salt to dissolve, and to penetrate the whole mass. When the butter has attained the proper degree of firmness it is again put through the work-er, and a considerable part of the brine formed from the salt is worked out. The amount of working it can stand differs much in individual cases. Care is taken, however, that it is not the least bit overworked, so as to become greasy and sticky. This working may be repeated a couple of times, or it may be packed for shipment at once.

The Fecundity of Swine.

The impression is prevalent among farmers that pure-bred swine are unprofitable for breeding purposes, as it is thought that as purity of breed increases fecundity decreases. The question of the fecundity of improved breeds of swine was investigated recently by the Indiana station. The number of pigs farrowed and raised in the first and the last 200 litters recorded in the registers of Berkshire, Poland-China, and Chester White pigs were compiled. In comparing the litters, 100 litters were selected in which the sows were recorded, and 100 in which the boars were recorded. The dates of farrowing of the first 200 litters varied through a number of years. The last 200 litters were almost all farrowed in 1896. The popular opinion was not confirmed by this investigation.

While there seems to be a reduction in the number of very large litters, the total number farrowed is about the same as shown by the first records. It is not intent to compare breeds, but to compare the earliest and latest records of litters, to determine whether there has been a real gain or loss in the fecundity of the breed. The number of boars and sows raised was as follows: Berkshire, 400 litters, 2,866 pigs, 1,498 boars, 1,368 sows; Poland-China, 1,000 litters, 6,542 pigs, 3,228 boars, 3,314 sows; Chester White, 600 litters, 4,555 pigs, 2,236 boars, 2,319 sows. In a total of 3,693 pigs farrowed, and all raised, there were 1,786 boars and 1,907 sows.

Emergency Crops.

Millet.—For winter hay sow millet or Hungarian grass from the 10th to the 20th of June, using from a bushel to a bushel and a half of seed per acre. When the seed heads are coming into blossom cut and cure for hay. Millet or Hungarian grass will yield from one ton to two and a half tons of good quality hay per acre. Horses should not be given over one feed of millet hay per day.

Cornfodder.—Any variety of corn will do for green or dry forage, the early kinds being the most suitable for early fall feed. Sweet corn is very satisfactory, because the stalks are soft and palatable. Plant in hills or drills just thick enough to choke the ears down to about half their normal size. Begin feeding as soon as the ears are glazing, and continue with the dry forage throughout the winter. From three to six tons per acre of winter forage, suitable for all kinds of farm stock, can be secured from a corn crop grown on good land.—Prof. Henry of Wisconsin Experiment Station.

Lousy Fowls.—A friend told us the other day that her hens never seemed to pay much more than they consumed in food, but during the conversation admitted that her hens were so covered with lice and hits in the warm weather that one had to change their clothes whenever they came out of the hen house. When this state of things exists it would be much better if the poultry could all be killed off. They would then be out of their misery and would pay as well as though alive under such conditions.—Ex.

THE CLOSING GATHERINGS.

Endeavorers End Their Convention at Detroit.

FINAL SCENES IMPRESSIVE.

Messages Sent to Officers in High Places —President Clark Urges His Hearers to Consecrate the Coming Year to the Service of God.

Rain interfered seriously with the work of the Christian Endeavorers at Detroit, July 7. President John Henry Barrows of Oberlin college made a plea for "Christian training" in the colleges of the country.

Largely attended evangelical services were held during the noon hour at factories, public squares and wharves throughout the city. The afternoon was given up to conferences in the larger churches.

A great general out-door "international peace and arbitration" gathering, perhaps the chief event of Christian Endeavor convention week, was held at Detroit July 8. The "Christian Endeavor peace memorial" was adopted, a copy of which will be sent to the international peace conference at The Hague.

There were no general meetings in the Christian Endeavor tents at night.

The Christian Endeavorers walked to services at Detroit Sunday and the men who preached walked with them. The antagonism of the society to all forms of Sunday labor resulted in the practical boycotting of the street cars. The most noted and eloquent of the divines among the delegates were selected to preach at the meetings in honor of the day.

The eighteenth international convention of Christian Endeavor closed July 10 amid scenes of impressive solemnity attending the utterances of "The Last Word" by the president and secretary in each of the great tents respectively, following responses from each state and country represented.

A number of telegrams and cablegrams read in both tents were portions of correspondence between officers of the convention and Andrew D. White, member of the peace conference at The Hague; President McKinley, Lord Minto, governor-general of Canada, and Queen Victoria.

President Clark, in his final address, urged the Endeavorers to consecrate the coming year to the service of God. He concluded: "Make this country a better country because we have held our eighteenth international convention of Christian Endeavor."

RAID ON POLYGAMY IS BEGUN.

Angus M. Cannon, a Prominent Mormon, Arrested.

Angus M. Cannon, president of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion, one of the most prominent officials of the Mormon church, has been arrested on a charge of unlawful cohabitation with his fourth plural wife. It is expected that the arrest of President Cannon is the first step in a raid that is to be instituted against polygamists, and some stirring times are expected.

George W. Julian Dead.

George W. Julian died at his home in Irvington, Ind. He was a politician of note and was a candidate for the vice-presidency on the free-soil ticket in 1852. Later he served many years in congress, and in 1885 was appointed surveyor-general of New Mexico.

A careful estimate of the Michigan wheat crop shows that at least 18 per cent of the total acreage has been plowed up or cut for hay, the wheat having been winter-killed.

Sheep Good and Bad.

In an address at the Iowa Agricultural College, Prof. Craig of that college, said: It is a safe proposition to accept that every sheep has a fault and it is equally true that there are none so bad but that they have their good qualities. In estimating the good and bad qualities of sheep it is then only a question of being able to see things as they really exist. It is particularly hard to do this in the case of sheep, because they can be trimmed and dressed with great success in hiding their defects. Owing to this deception it is practically impossible to form an opinion from what one sees. It is necessary to handle the sheep thoroughly, or, in other words, to see with the fingers.

In handling the form of a sheep it is best to keep the hand completely open, as in this way the straightness of the lines can be best determined, and the wool will be the least disturbed. To be thorough in examination this system should be followed: Beginning with the head, with the finger drop the lower lip of the sheep and notice the condition of the teeth; notice the covering of the head, the eyes and ears; see that there is no appearance of horns in those that should be hornless; then pass to the neck, feeling with the hands the course of the neck, and in that way determine the length of it, the thickness of it, and the way it swells to meet the shoulder at the shoulder vein. Then pass down to the brisket, putting one hand on the floor of the chest and the other at the top of the shoulder, and in this way form an idea as to the depth of the sheep through these parts. Then pass to the shoulder, observe how it is covered with flesh and the evenness on top, also taking the girth or the spring of the ribs of the sheep. From the top of the shoulder, using one hand, follow the line of the back to the end of the body. By carefully handling these parts, the fleshiness of the sheep, or the way the ribs are covered, and the straightness of the back, are determined, and at the same time the spring of the ribs is made apparent. The width of the loin should then be taken, and the covering and the thickness of it should be noticed. The width at the hips should then be observed, and turning to one side and using the two hands, the length from the hip to the hindquarter should be made apparent between the two hands. Afterward notice the way the hindquarter is carried back, and the fullness of those parts should also be examined. Following down toward the leg, the development of the thigh on the outside requires examination, and then, with the hand, the quarters or the twist between the legs should be firmly felt.

The different parts of the lamb, from the butcher's standpoint, show a wide variation. The neck has the value of only one cent per pound, the shoulder two cents and the shank the same. The rib, running from the point of the shoulder to the loin, has a value of nine cents per pound, and the same is true of the loin, while the leg of mutton has the highest value per pound of any part, and is quoted at ten cents per pound. The breast has the low value of two cents per pound in the Chicago markets. From these facts it will be seen that the development of the back and of the leg are the most important points.

Bisulphate of Carbon and Tree-Root Lice

At a recent meeting of the Ohio State Horticultural Society, Prof. Webster stated that he had experimented with bisulphate of carbon to exterminate lice on the roots of trees. Invariably when he applied sufficient bisulphate of carbon to kill the lice the tree also died. The professor remarked that the ants burrow down along the trunks of the trees, then follow the larger roots until they arrive at the soft and tender rootlets and there deposit the lice.

In regard to fumigation Prof. Webster remarked: "I would rather have a certificate of fumigation of nursery stock than one of inspection." The professor exhibited a model house for fumigation. He cautioned the audience to be very careful on account of the deadly invisible gas employed. The hydrocyanic gas used is formed by dropping potassium cyanide into sulphuric acid and water. The moment these two ingredients come in contact they form an invisible deadly vapor. The model house that the professor exhibited was so constructed that the danger from mixing was avoided.

Potash Fertilizers for Sugar Beets.

In several foreign experiments with the culture of sugar beets noted by the department of agriculture. It was found that whereas nitrogenous fertilizers increased the yield of beets per acre, they also decreased the sugar content and purity of the juice, but that the application of potash and phosphoric acid fertilizers improved the quality of the beets. The greatest increase in sugar was due to potash fertilizing. Beets grown from large seeds gave better yields and were richer in sugar than those grown from small seeds. It was concluded that fourteen inches was a good depth for plowing.

The Kentucky Vendetta.

There is only one view to be taken of the vendetta now going on in Clay county, Ky., between the Bakers and Howards. Civilization, even of the weakest dilution, must blush at it. That a family feud should be carried to that length that it suspends the courts, paralyzes the business of the county and endangers the lives of the judges, is almost incredible, considering what time of day it is. The accounts that are furnished us from Clay county read curiously like the clan fights of the middle ages in the mountains of Scotland. One cannot help wondering what Governor Bradley is thinking about. He says he has no authority to proclaim martial law, but he certainly has some authority to remove or have removed a lot of deputy sheriffs who have taken sides in this fight and who have disregarded every principle of law in the community. A state which has furnished so many indomitable statesmen ought to be able to handle this question with instant decision and executive might. If Governor Bradley desires to be known as worthy of the better traditions of his state, he will bring this row to a sudden end, even if he has to put himself at the head of an army. Nothing short of a low estimate of human life and an easy going notion of law and order will account for the apathy with which the outrage in Kentucky has been regarded by those whose duty it was to suppress it. It would really seem that our country is subject to waves of violence. We have epochs of communal madness, when men lose all sense of the sacredness of the person and need to be reminded of it by a strong arm.

Paris, having ordained a new eelskin skirt, or habit, which is to fit so tight to the female form as to leave no detail of beauty undiscovered, has awakened the protests of conservative women who never think of disregarding the fashion, however disagreeable. The venerable Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton has come into this discussion with her usual venerableness of particularity, and points out that the eelskin skirt will retard the advancement of woman because it does away with the pockets and constricts the lap. Now, the lap is much more characteristic of the female animal than the pocket. A woman without a lap is almost unthinkable, and if this skirt is to curtail or diminish that important factor of femininity no one can wonder at the protest. Try and picture to yourself, a woman reduced to the beastly masculine extremity of having no lap in which to put her lorgnette, her programme, her reticule, her bouquet, her fan and her smelling bottle. Fancy to yourself, if you can, a woman who has lost the divine privilege of jumping up suddenly and dumping all these things under the next seat for you to gallantly dive after on your stomach. Is it any wonder that women instinctively abandon the divided skirt at matinees and look with loathing on the eelskin habit?

A great deal of interest has been excited by Professor Atwater's announcement, after long and careful experiments, that alcohol, when taken into the human stomach, is a force producing substance, even when it does not make muscle. The generally accepted idea that alcohol is a poison, he says, has to be modified. The amount of discussion which this decision, coming as it does from an authoritative source, has produced is prodigious. But it should not be overlooked, as it is overlooked in some quarters, that Professor Atwater distinctly says that the injudicious use of alcohol is destructive. His decision, which is simply a matter of chemistry, does not materially alter the moral aspects of the liquor question. If alcohol makes a man beat his wife, the wife does not need an expert to tell her that it has added energy to the system, but she is very apt to know, quite as well as the professor, that it lessens the food supply.

Whatever else the Filipinos may be, they are without precedent as an unabated retiring force. They have been licked regularly, continuously, uninterruptedly and thoroughly without having their attention called to it. As in surgents there is not a scrap of reason why they should exist at all, but they do, with the single purpose of falling back. They are fast winning the reputation of being the best licked people whoever brought the art of falling back to a self sustaining basis.

There is no immediate prospect of war between England and the Boers. So far it has been mainly newspaper talk. There is no excitement in England, no perturbation in mining stock and no beating of drums. Therefore up to date it looks very much as if the Transvaal and England would patch the matter up in spite of all the hot words that have passed.

If Mr. Poulney Bigelow ever returns to the United States, he will probably be slightly ashamed of himself for his attempts to make the Englishmen laugh at the expense of the American volunteer. It seems that he could not be funny except by belittling the Yankee soldier. One can forgive the Englishmen for laughing; but what will we do with Bigelow?

One of the Peculiarities of the Silly Season.

As the heated term approaches reflective man invariably turns his attention to the lower animals with sudden insight. You can always tell what time of year it is by reading the snake stories. Always when the dog star approaches so does Professor Sniggins with his profound paper, "Do sharks think?" and Professor Slinkey turns up with his admirable essay on the probability that cockroaches are theologians. It is at such times that fox terriers take to reasoning out ethical questions of great import to the race, and tabby cats exhibit a keen sense of Aristotle and altruism. The yellow dog that is an automatic nuisance for nine months of the year suddenly wags his recondite tail in moral philosophy, and the joyous chipmunk develops depths of internal consciousness that require columns of exposition. It is in June and July that the frivolous black snake that has been scurrying all the year to get out of the way of the unarmed school-boy suddenly remembers his orthodox mission and attacks the dairymaid with ferocious malignancy, and she cuts his traditional head off with an ax, while the masculine farm hands are paralyzed with fear. If the old and reliable "Farmer's Almanac" had not been superseded, we should learn from it "to look out about this time for the immortality of the soul in bullfrogs and measuring worms."

The parliamentary decision that women may become councilors or aldermen in the new borough councils of London has excited only gallant pleasantries. Even the antisuffrage men have made a show of politeness and good humor, and Mr. Labouchere emitted a high flown tribute to the angels of the hearthstone, merely protesting in a little aside against the iniquity of dragging women into politics. The men left it to the women to blow their own trumpets, and so far as this country is concerned they seem to have relegated their trumpets to Ida Husted Harper.

New York city has a tunnel mania on. There are three under way, and if the mood stays there will be three more. In fact, it looks as if New York would soon have a tunnel under her rivers from every street. It is understood in Brooklyn and Jersey City that this sudden move is to accommodate the people who desire to get out of New York.

The Chicago Sorosis could not in any way have so vindicated the American humorist as it recently did at one of its sessions by tumbling into utter demoralization over a rat. The appearance of this ungallant rodent at the moment when Mrs. Harrison was making an impassioned plea for something converted her eloquence into an ear splitting scream, at which the other members jumped upon the seats, and, gathering their skirts about them, called wildly for a man. As there is never any man within hailing distance of Sorosis except a janitor, that lusty but unfavored male came tardily to the rescue, and having put his heel upon the intruder the emancipation of the sex went on without further perturbation.

Judge Owers of the Colorado district court has struck the gamblers of Leadville with an injunction, and the gamblers naturally object that it is not constitutional to restrain crime by injunction. Judge Owers promptly replied that he would make a precedent. This injunction was applied for by the Woman's Christian Temperance union.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times, every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper. CARTER H. HARRISON, Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically." WASHINGTON HESING, The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats-Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country."

Griswold pitched three innings and then Segers, the speedy boy, pitched the last inning. R. Johnson umpired the game.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. Wilson, Livertyman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

East of Chicago Doesn't Count.

When I was in Chicago in 1877 it was the metropolis of the west without qualification. Now it is merely the frontier city of the middle west. From the point of view of Omaha and Denver it seems to fill the eastern horizon and shut out the further view. Many stories are told to show how absolutely and instinctively your true westerner ignores the eastern states and cities. Here is one of the most characteristic: A little girl came into the smoking car of a train somewhere in Kansas or Nebraska and stood beside her father, who was in conversation with another man. The father put his arm around her and said to his companion, "She's been a great traveler, this little girl of mine. She's only 10 years old and she's been all over the United States."
"You don't say?" replied the other.
"All over the United States?"
"Yes, sir, all over the United States," said the proud father, and then added, as though the detail were scarcely worth mentioning, "except east of Chicago."

Chicago, unfortunately, marks the limit of my wanderings, so I shall return to England without having seen anything of the United States, except for a sort of Pisgah glimpse from the tower of the Auditorium.—William Archer in Pall Mall Gazette.

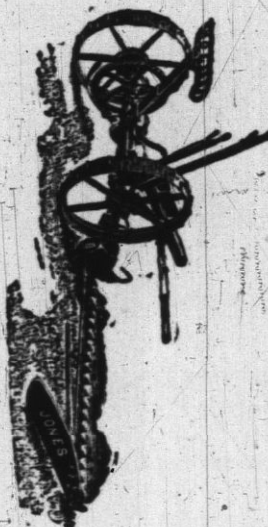

Hair For Violin Bows.

The horse hair used in making violin and other similar bows is imported from Germany. A considerable part of the hair thus imported, however, coming originally from Russia. Horse hair for these purposes is white and black. The black is the heavier and stronger, and this is used in making bows for bass viols, because it bites the big strings better. In preparing the hair for use in bowmaking the white hair, used for violin bows, is bleached to bring it to its final whiteness.

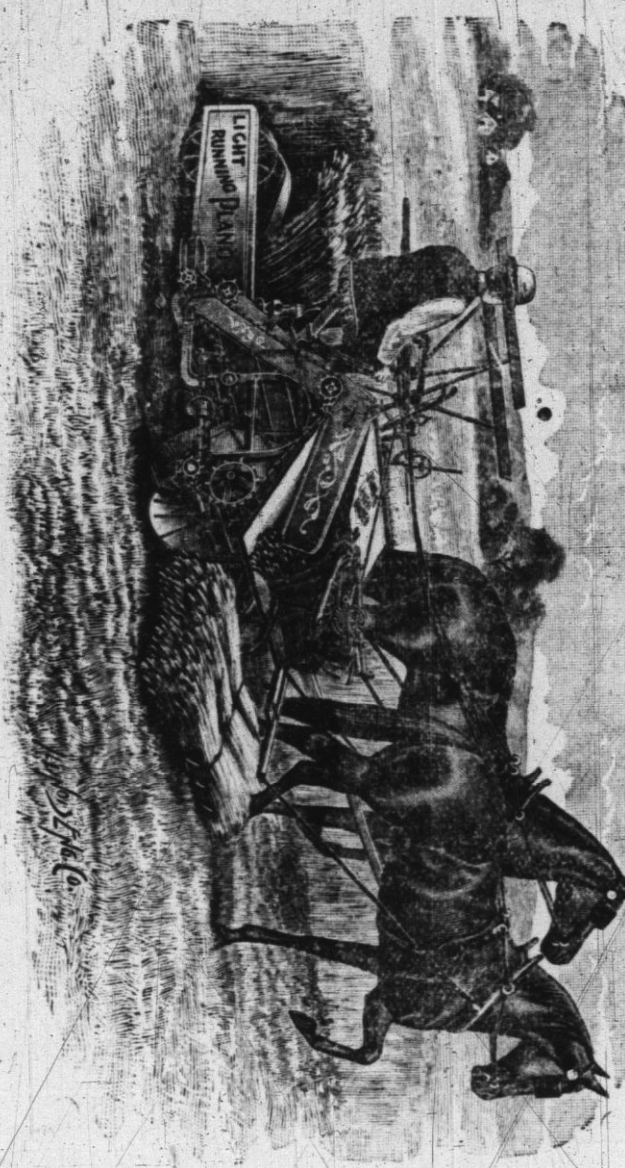

The standard violin bow is 29 inches in length; longer bows are made to order. Shorter bows are used by young persons; but the bow commonly seen in the hands of a violin player is 29 inches long. Horse hair for violin bows is imported in various lengths, but mostly in lengths of 36 inches. Hair sufficient for one bow is put together in what is called a hank. There are grades and qualities of the horse hair, but the best is not very costly. A hank of the best white hair can be bought for 20 cents; it might cost 30 cents more to have it put into the bow. To rehair a bass viol bow costs more, the bulk of hair required being greater.—New York Sun.

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARKYAT.

CHAPTER XXX.

Amine had just returned from an afternoon's walk through the streets of Goa; she had made some purchases at different shops in the bazaar, and had brought them home under her mantilla. "Here, at last, thank heaven! I am alone and not watched," thought Amine, as she threw herself on the couch. "Philip, Philip, where are you?" exclaimed she. "I have now the means, and I soon will know." Little Pedro, the son of the widow, entered the room, ran up to Amine and kissed her. "Tell me, Pedro, where is your mother?"

"She has gone out to see her friends this evening, and we are alone. I will stay with you."

"Do so, dearest. Tell me, Pedro, can you keep a secret?"

"Yes, I can—tell it me."

"Nay, I have nothing to tell, but I wish you to do something; I wish to make a play, and you shall see things in your hand."

"Oh, yes—show me, do show me."

"If you promise not to tell."

"No, by the Holy Virgin, I will not."

"Then you shall see."

Amine lighted some charcoal in a chafing dish and put it at her feet; she then took a reed pen, some ink from a small bottle, and a pair of scissors, and wrote down several characters on a paper, singing, or rather chanting, words which were not intelligible to her young companion. Amine then threw frankincense and coriander seed into the chafing dish, which threw out a strong aromatic smoke; and desiring Pedro to sit down by her on a small stool, she took the boy's right hand and held it in her own. She then drew upon the palm of his hand a square figure with characters on each side of it, and in the center poured a small quantity of the ink, so as to form a black mirror of the size of half a crown.

"Now all is ready," said Amine; "look, Pedro, what see you in the ink?"

"My own face," replied the boy.

"She threw more frankincense upon the chafing dish, until the room was full of smoke, and then chanted:

"Turshoon—turyo-shoon—come down, come down."

"Be present, ye servants of these names."

"Remove the evil, and be correct." The characters she had drawn upon the paper she had divided with the scissors, she dropped it into the chafing dish, still holding the boy's hand.

"Tell me, Pedro, what do you see?"

"I see a man sweeping," replied Pedro, alarmed.

"Fear not, Pedro, you shall see more. Has he done sweeping?"

"Yes, he has."

And Amine muttered words which were unintelligible, and threw into the chafing dish the other half of the paper with the characters she had written down. "Say, now, Pedro, Philip Vanderdecken, appear!"

"Philip Vanderdecken, appear!" responded the boy, trembling.

"Tell me what thou seest, Pedro—tell me true?" said Amine, anxiously.

"I see a man lying down on the white sand. I don't like this play."

"Be not alarmed, Pedro; you shall have sweetmeats directly. Tell me what thou seest—how the man is dressed?"

"He has a short coat. He has white trousers; he looks about him—he takes something out of his breast and kisses it."

"Tis he! 'tis he! and he lives! Heaven, I thank Thee. Look again, boy."

"He gets up. I don't like this play; I am frightened; indeed I am."

"Fear not."

"Oh, yes I am; I cannot," replied Pedro, falling on his knees; "pray let me go."

Pedro had turned his hand and spilled the ink; the charm was broken and Amine could learn no more. She soothed the boy with presents, made him repeat his promise that he would not tell, and postponed further search into fate until the boy should appear to have recovered from his terror and be willing to resume the ceremony.

"My Philip lives—mother, dear mother, I thank you."

Amine did not allow Pedro to leave the room until he appeared to have quite recovered from his fright; for some days she did not say anything to him except to remind him of his promise not to tell his mother, or any one else, and she loaded him with presents.

One afternoon when his mother was gone out Pedro came in and asked Amine "whether they should not have the play over again?"

Amine, who was anxious to know more, was glad of the boy's request, and soon had everything prepared. Again was her chamber filled with the smoke of the frankincense; again was she muttering her incantations; the magic mirror was on the boy's hand, and once more had Pedro cried out, "Philip Vanderdecken, appear!" when the door burst open, and Father Mathias, the widow, and several other people made their appearance. Amine started up. Pedro screamed and ran to his mother.

"Then I was not mistaken at what I saw in the cottage at Terneuse," cried Father Mathias, with his arms folded over his breast, and with looks of indignation; "accursed sorceress! you are detected."

About half an hour afterward two men dressed in black gowns came into Amine's room and requested that she would follow them, or that force would be used. Amine made no resistance; they crossed the square, the gate of a large building was opened; they desired her to walk in, and in a few seconds Amine found herself in one of the dungeons of the Inquisition. She was subsequently tried and condemned to be burned at the stake as a sorceress. Subsequently she was executed according to sentence.

We must again return to Philip and Krantz. When the latter retired from the presence of the Portuguese commandant, he communicated to Philip what had taken place, and the fabulous tale which he had invented to deceive the commandant, by a story of buried treasure they had invented. "I said that you alone knew where the treasure was concealed," continued Krantz, "that you might be sent for, for in all probability he will keep me as a hostage; but never mind that, I must take my chance. Do you contrive to escape somehow and join Amine."

They concocted a story of buried treasure on a distant island, and through the soldier, Pedro, readily got the consent of the commandant to accompany them. Pedro, Schrieffen and other soldiers connected with the fort accompanied them in the vessels. None of these bore the commandant good-will.

The party arrived under the tree—the shovels soon removed the light sand, and in a few minutes the treasure was exposed to view. Bag after bag was handed up and the loose dollars collected into heaps. Two of the soldiers had been sent to the vessels for sacks to put the loose dollars in, and the men had desisted from their labor; they laid aside their spades, looks were exchanged, and all were ready.

The commandant turned round to call to and hasten the movements of the men who had been sent for the sacks, when three or four knives simultaneously pierced him through the back; he fell, and was expostulating, when they were again buried in his bosom, and he lay a corpse. Philip and Krantz remained silent spectators; the knives were drawn out, wiped and replaced in their sheaths. The party then set sail for home.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Years have passed away since we related Amine's sufferings and cruel death; and now once more we bring Philip Vanderdecken on the scene. And during this time, where has he been? A lunatic—at one time frantic, chained, coerced with blows; at others, mild and peaceable. Reason occasionally appeared to burst out again, as the sun on a cloudy day; and then it was again obscured. For many years there was one who watched him carefully, and lived in hopes to witness his return to a sane mind; he watched in sorrow and remorse—he died without his desires being gratified. This was Father Mathias!

The cottage at Terneuse had long fallen into ruins; for many years it waited the return of its owners, and at last the heirs at law claimed and recovered the substance of Philip Vanderdecken. Even the fate of Amine had passed from the recollection of most people.

But many, many years have rolled away—Philip's hair is white—his once powerful frame is broken down—and he appears much older than he really is. He is now sane; but his vigor is gone. Weary of life, all he wishes for is to execute his mission—and then to welcome death.

The relic has never been taken from him; he has been discharged from the lunatic asylum, and has been provided with the means of returning to his country. Alas! he has now no country—no home—nothing in the world to induce him to remain in it. All he asks is, to do his duty and to die.

The ship was ready to sail for Europe, and Philip Vanderdecken went on board—hardly caring whither he went. To return to Terneuse was not his object; he could not bear the idea of visiting the scene of so much happiness and so much misery. Amine's form was engraven on his heart, and he looked forward with impatience to the time when he should be summoned to join her in the land of spirits.

"When, oh when is it to be accomplished?" was the constant subject of his reveries. "Blessed indeed will be the day when I leave this world of hate and seek that other in which the weary are at rest."

The vessel on board of which Philip was embarked as a passenger was the Nostra Senora da Monte, a brig of three hundred tons, bound for Lisbon. The captain was an old Portuguese, full of superstition and fond of arrack—a fondness rather unusual with people of his nation. They sailed from Goa and Philip was standing abaft and sadly contemplating the spire of the cathedral, in which he had last parted with his wife, when his elbow was touched, and he turned around.

"A fellow-passenger again," said a well-known voice—it was that of the pilot Schrieffen.

There was no alteration in the man's appearance; he showed no marks of declining years, his one eye glared as keenly as ever.

Philip started, not only at the sight of the man, but at the reminiscences which his unexpected appearance brought to his mind. It was but for a second, and he was again calm and pensive.

"You here again, Schrieffen?" observed Philip. "I trust your appearance forbodes the accomplishment of my task."

"Perhaps it does," replied the pilot; "we both are weary."

Philip made no reply; he did not even ask Schrieffen in what manner he had escaped from the fort; he was indifferent about it, for he thought that the man had a charmed life.

"Many are the vessels that have been wrecked," Philip Vanderdecken, and many the souls summoned to their account by meeting with your father's ship while you have been so long shut up," observed the pilot.

"May our next meeting with him be more fortunate—may it be the last!" replied Philip.

"No, no! rather may he fulfill his doom, and shall till the day of judgment!" replied the pilot, with emphasis.

"Vile caltiff! I have a foreboding that you will not have your detestable wish. Away—leave me! or you shall find that, although this head is blanched by misery, this arm has still some power."

The ship had now gained off the southern coast of Africa, and was about one hundred miles from the Lagullas coast; the morning was beautiful, a slight ripple only turned over the waves, the breeze was light and steady, and the vessel was standing on a wind at the rate of about four miles an hour.

"Blessed be the holy saints," said the captain, who had just gained the deck; "another little slant in our favor and we shall lay our course. Again, I say, blessed be the holy saints, and particularly our worthy patron, St. Antoine, who has taken under his particular protection the Nostra Senora da Monte. We have a prospect of fine weather; come, signors, let us down to breakfast, and after breakfast we will enjoy our cigarros upon the deck."

But the scene was soon changed; a bank of clouds rose up from the eastward, with a rapidity that to the seamen's eyes was unnatural, and it soon covered the whole firmament; the sun was obscured, and all was one deep and unnatural gloom; the wind subsided, and the ocean was hushed. It was not exactly dark, but the heavens were covered with one red haze, which gave an appearance as if the world was in a state of conflagration.

In the cabin the increased darkness was first observed by Philip, who went on deck; he was followed by the captain and passengers, who were in a state of amazement. It was unnatural and incomprehensible. "Now, holy Virgin, protect us!—what can this be?" exclaimed the captain, in a fright. "Holy St. Antonio, protect us!—but this is awful!"

"There—there!" shouted the sailors, pointing to the beam of the vessel. Every eye looked over the gunwale to witness what had occasioned such exclamations. Philip, Schrieffen and the captain were side by side. On the beam of the ship, not more than two cable lengths distant, they beheld slowly rising out of the water the tapering mast-head and spars of another vessel. She rose and rose gradually; her topmasts and topsail yards, with the sails set, next made their appearance; higher and higher she rose up from the element. Her lower masts and rigging, and, lastly, her hull showed itself above the surface. Still she rose up, till her ports, with her guns, and at last the whole of her floatage were above water, and there she remained, close to them, with her main yard squared and hoist.

FORESTS OF PHILIPPINES.

But it is to the forests of the Philippines that we are wholly unable to do justice. Timber exists in great variety and of most excellent quality. There are to be found kinds of wood suitable to every purpose. Many are of dense and tough fiber, susceptible of the highest polish. Four kinds are so heavy that water will not float them, nor can they be cut with ordinary saws. One variety is of a bright emerald green, and another rich yellow, and they retain those colors when polished.

Another, "narra," perhaps the prettiest, and much used in fine furniture, varies in color from light straw to deep red. It is strong and hard and takes a high polish. Perhaps the best known is "molave," a very heavy dark brown wood, used for finishing in the interior of the Jesuit Church at Manila, where it is said the carvings are by master hands and of surpassing beauty. Ebony is abundant. There are the cacao tree, the coconut palm, and the bamboo, all invaluable to the natives, and also a tree which yields a kind of cotton.

A pitcher-plant is found with receptacles that hold as much as a quart of water. There is a very curious plant with long pendant feelers that hang near the ground and have remarkable prehensile properties, taking the strongest hold on anything that happens to touch them. It is with the greatest difficulty that a passer-by can extricate himself from one of these many-fingered, hanging hands.—From "A Sketch of the Philippines," in Self-Culture for July.

The Place for Your Daughters.

St. Mary's Academy at Notre Dame, Indiana, ranks first among the educational institutions for girls. Young women from all parts of the United States are found in its classes. Parents desirous of sending their daughters to the best institution should send for this catalogue before deciding on sending them elsewhere. It is under the supervision of the Sisters of the Holy Cross and is located at Notre Dame, far from the excitement of even village life, and right among the beautiful scenes of the Creator's handiwork.

Only Thirty and Gray

How is this? Perhaps sleepless nights caused it, or grief, or sickness, or perhaps it was care. No matter what the cause, you cannot wish to look old at thirty. Gray hair is starved hair. The hair bulbs have been deprived of proper food or proper nerve force.

CRITICAL PERIODS

In Woman's Life Are Made Dangerous by Pelvic Catarrh.

Mrs. Mathilde Richter, Doniphan, Neb., says: "I suffered from catarrh for many years, but since I have been taking Pe-ru-na I feel strong and well. I would

Mrs. Mathilde Richter. advise all people to try Pe-ru-na. As I used Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin while I was passing through the change of life, I am positively convinced your beneficial remedies have relieved me from all my ills."

Pe-ru-na has raised more women from beds of sickness and set them to work again than any other remedy. Pelvic catarrh is the bane of woman-kind. Pe-ru-na is the bane of catarrh in all forms and stages. Mrs. Col. Hamilton, Columbus, O., says: "I recommend Pe-ru-na to women, believing it to be especially beneficial to them."

Send for a free book written by Dr. Hartman, entitled "Health and Beauty." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in a practice of over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-ru-na. Those desiring further particulars should send for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

American Horses in London.

Few of the million passengers or more who make their daily journey in a London bus or street car know that the horses which draw them are nearly always Americans or Canadian. Great Britain, the "horsiest" country in the world, buys more than 20,000 horses from the United States every year. Nearly all of these are heavy draft horses. The truth is, since the coaching era came to an end, the British farmer has neglected the harness horse in favor of the hunter, and still prefers to rear "something that can gallop and jump."

A Foolish Question.

Rounds—Emmons is about the most unsophisticated man I ever ran up against. Squires—What's the matter with Emmons? Rounds—Some of us went to see if he would run for alderman, and if you'll believe it, he actually asked what salary there was attached to the office.—Boston Transcript.

Binder Twine History.

The single strand binder twine, in general use today, was the original conception of Mr. William Deering of the Deering Harvester Co., Chicago. The value of the idea is apparent, since without it the modern twine binder would be impossible. The Deering Harvester Company is the largest manufacturer of binder twine in the world.

UNIVERSITY OF NOTRE DAME.

We call attention of our readers to the advertisement of Notre Dame University, Notre Dame, Indiana, one of the great educational institutions of the West, which appears in another column of this paper. The Commercial Course intended for young men preparing for business may be finished in one or two years according to the ability of the student. St. Edward's hall, for boys under thirteen, is an unique department of the institution. The higher courses are thorough in every respect and students will find every opportunity of perfecting themselves in any line of work they may choose to select. TWO FAMOUS RESORTS.

An Outing Hint from "Outing."

Fast, safe, superbly equipped and most carefully governed, one need not wonder at the great popularity of the New York Central. No other line affords such facilities for through travel between the East and the West as this wonderful four-track system. In the possession of Grand Central Station, located in the heart of New York City, and within trifling distances of all first-class hotels, this railway offers greater advantages than competing lines. Spring, summer, autumn and winter, it has attractions irresistible. The great Northern Wilderness, the playground of the State, now beckons its thousands. As autumn falls, America's scenic masterpiece—far-famed Niagara, will claim its annual host of pilgrims with its majestic power, the fierce-tumult of the Whirlpool and all of the picturesque surroundings, the awesome Cave of the Winds and the several other minor attractions of the vicinity. And when winter comes, then the entire scene transformed to what seems a fairland of marvelous frost dressings, of icy forts and snowy palaces; of gleaming, crystal prison barriers vainly striving to bind the roaring, foaming plunge of water—will present a spectacle of weird, mysterious beauty which is not duplicated in the world.—Outing.

Farming in Colorado and New Mexico.

The Denver & Rio Grande railroad, "The Scenic Line of the World," has prepared an illustrated book upon the above subject, which will be sent free to farmers desiring to change their location. Write S. K. Hooper, G. P. & T. A., Denver, Colo.

Sympathy.

Probably the reader has heard voices which the following will recall to his mind: "I know Mr. Pidgeley is a good man," said one of the members of the family, after the caller had gone, "but it makes me so tired to hear him talk!" "I know why it is," said another member of the family. "You feel like clearing your throat all the time to help him out."

A Mountain Tourist

The Denver & Rio Grande railroad publishes a series of useful illustrated pamphlets, all of which may be obtained by writing S. K. Hooper, general passenger and ticket agent, Denver, Colo.

Miss Lockheart's LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 67,104.]

"I cannot express my gratitude to you for the good that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I have taken five bottles of the Compound and two boxes of Liver Pills and feel better in every respect. I had suffered for years with dropsy; the veins in my limbs burst, caused from the pressure of the water. I had the worst kind of kidney trouble, fainting spells, and I could not stand long at a time. I also had female weakness and the doctor said there was a tumor in my left side. The pains I had to stand were something dreadful. A friend handed me a little book of yours, so I got your medicine and it has saved my life. I felt better from the first bottle. The bloating and the tumors have all gone and I do not suffer any pain. I am still using the Vegetable Compound and hope others may find relief as I have done from its use."—MISS N. J. LOCKHEART, Box 16, ELIZABETH, PA.

Only the women who have suffered with female troubles can fully appreciate the gratitude of those who have been restored to health.

THE DEERING IDEAL MOWER

Cuts Repair Expenses in Two.

There are many reasons why the Ideal is the most economical mower on the market: The IDEAL saves time by cutting more in a day than any other. The IDEAL saves power by transmitting it direct from wheels to knives through simple gears. The IDEAL saves horse flesh by virtue of genuine bicycle bearings, which lessen the draft to a minimum. The IDEAL saves hay by giving the ground a clean, close shave. Time, power, horse flesh and hay represent money. The IDEAL saves all. The repair bill for the DEERING IDEAL MOWER is a revelation to those who have worried through past harvests with the wrongly-constructed, breaking-down kind. The IDEAL cuts repair expenses in two.

Police Court News.

Wednesday evening police court circles were rent in twain. A traveling optician got to frisky with the wife of one of our citizens and was marshaled before the police magistrate, where a large audience heard a mixed tale of effervescing affection and spectacular repulsion.

The squire decided that $3 and costs would about fix the case, and knowing that the stranger was not familiar with our rural code of morals, the fine was remitted.

Mr. Optician announced after the trial that it was worth $25 to him as an advertisement. A spectator remarked that he "did not want any of that kind of advertising in his."

Thus we learn that virtue is its own reward.

ABOUT TAXES.

Personal Property Tax Nearly Double This Year.

County Treasurer Foote has completed the mammoth task of compiling the assessment rolls for different townships in Lake county. The figures are interesting and we print herewith comparative tables of values of '98 and '99 as shown by the county treasurer's books.

The only two townships in which the assessment on real estate took a jump were in Deerfield and Shields. The former was more than doubled, the assessed valuation in 1898 being $665,715 and $1,589,593 this year. Shields was $934,425 in '98 and $989,971 in '99.

As was anticipated the assessment on the personal property was much larger this year than last, the amount being nearly doubled. The figures show it to be $695,335 in 1898 and $1,224,252 this year.

Both the personal property and the real estate are assessed at one-fifth of the actual value.

The assessors who have compiled the figures for the different townships are given below:

A Noble Life Ended.

Rev. Carl August Starck, who has been pastor of the Evangelical church at Long Grove for the past 15 years, dropped dead at 4 o'clock yesterday morning at his home in Long Grove. He had enjoyed good health until recently, when it appears that he has been somewhat afflicted with heart trouble. Rev. Mr. Starck retired feeling as well as usual Thursday evening, and arose at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. A few minutes later he sank to the floor of his bedroom, dying almost instantly.

Rev. Mr. Starck was born at Chilli-cothe, Ohio, Jan. 30, 1856, where he spent his younger days. In 1870 he went with his parents to Northfield, Ill., and was given confirmation there by his father. The family afterward moved to Long Grove.

At the age of 19 he started in at the Elmhurst college to prepare himself for the ministry. In 1877 he graduated from this college with high honors.

Afterwards he completed his studies at the Evangelical college at Marthasville, Mo., and was ordained as a minister at St. Louis. His first mission was as assistant to Rev. Keuchen at Beecher, Ill., and shortly afterward he was assigned as assistant to Rev. Bank at New Albany, Ind.

In 1878 he was given his first charge as pastor at Peotone, Ill., and remained here for six years meeting with very good success in his chosen work. In 1884 he went to Long Grove and took charge of the Evangelical church there, where he remained until the time of his death. While at Long Grove he did much to build up the church, making extensive improvements in all the church property.

Rev. Starck's work here is familiar to every one in the community and does not necessitate further comment. The fruits of his good work is evident on every hand. The funeral will take place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Evangelical church, Long Grove. He leaves a wife, two sons, a brother and sister to mourn his loss. His brother, Phil A. Starck, of Chicago, is well known in Barrington.

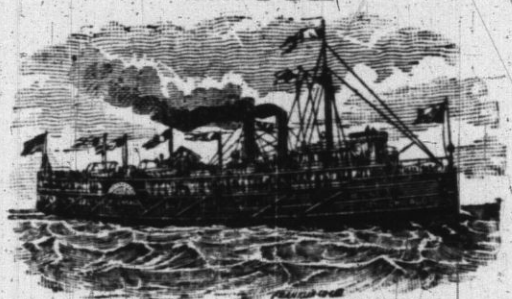

Waukegan Assessment Increased.

The board of review has a new problem on its hands, one that is no more pleasant than the hearing and deciding of assessment complaints. A protest has been filed by Assessor Wm. Reid against the 30 per cent increase of the Waukegan real estate assessment by County Treasurer Foote, supervisor of assessments.

The subject of the Waukegan assessment has been the chief topic at Waukegan ever since the publication of the roll. This, followed by the announcement that Mr. Foote had decided that the Waukegan real estate was 30 per cent too low, has created considerable excitement. When the publication of a notice from Assessor Reid declaring that the assessment was not too low and that the increase would make it excessive appeared, it served to arouse the interest and enthusiasm on one side or the other in this matter.

Mr. Swayer, of the board of review, says that the protest against the 30 per cent increase, filed by Mr. Reid, would be discussed by the board in the near future.
