Miss Sarah E. Baxter of Cambridge, Ohio, has been engaged to teach the fifth and sixth grades of our public schools. This makes the corps of teachers complete and the board feels that they have a good selection of instructors.

Death of Henry J. Stroker.

The sudden and unexpected death of Henry J. Stroker last Sunday evening spread a gloom over the entire village. While it was generally known that he was suffering badly with rheumatism, he was not considered by his friends in a dangerous condition. The town hall bell tolled the news of his death.

The deceased was one of the most popular of our younger citizens and his death was the occasion of many demonstrations of grief. The village trustees draped his chair in the council chamber in mourning and met in special session to offer a testimonial of their sorrow. The K. O. T. M. and Court of Honor lodges held special meetings to suitably express their sorrow in the death of a member. The Athletic club, which met for the purpose of arranging to attend the Barrington Social and Athletic club picnic, decided instead to refrain from participating in same and passed suitable resolutions on the death of their treasurer.

The funeral services were held at the home of the deceased's mother Wednesday afternoon. The services were held in the open air and a large congregation was present, who respectfully showed their sorrow for his departure. The services were conducted by the Palatine Tent, No. 88, K. O. T. M., of which he was commander. C. D. Taylor acted as director and the services were conducted in an impressive manner. The male quartette, composed of Messrs. Chas. Foksett, Wall Mosser, A. S. Olms and Peter Knowe, opened the services by singing "Rock of Ages." The singing was grand and impressive. Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister, pastor of St. Paul's Evangelical church, spoke in both the German and English language. His address was a splendid one and he spoke highly of the noble qualities of the deceased and the loving care for his family. He spoke from text found in I Corinthians 15:55, "O Death, where is Thy Sting? O Grave, where is Thy Victory?" After the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" by the quartette, friends viewed the remains and the procession to the cemetery formed as follows:

Village police.
Palatine Athletic club.
Court of Honor, No. 405.
Flowers.
Knights of the Maccabees, Palatine Tent, No. 88.
Heatse and Active Pall Bearers.
President and Members of Village Trustees as Honorary Pall Bearers.
Mourners.
Pall Bearers.

Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister spoke a few words and made a short prayer at the cemetery, after which the Knights of the Maccabees rendered their funeral service, which was short and very suitable for the occasion. The quartette assisted in the services at the grave by singing a beautiful selection. The flowers and floral pieces were numerous and expensive. Aside from the many testimonials sent in by friends, the following pieces were presented:

By the Palatine village trustees, a star emblematic of his office as a trustee mounted on a bank of flowers.
By the K. O. T. M., a floral representative of a tent with the words

"Our Commander" and "K. O. T. M., No. 88."

By the Court of Honor, a pillow with "Court of Honor, No. 405," over which swung the balances.

By the Palatine Athletic club, a harp with a broken string.

By the Ladies' Kranchen society, a beautiful wreath.

By the officials and clerks in the Chicago National bank, a star and crescent design mounted on a bank of roses, also a large bouquet.

Obituary.

Henry J. Stroker was born in Chicago January 24, 1870. He came to Palatine with his parents at the age of six years and attended the Palatine Public schools. At the age of 18 he went to work in the Chicago National bank, being employed in the messenger department. He was rapidly promoted until he was given the position of head of the collection department of the bank, which position he held to the time of his death.

He was married June 7, 1893, to Miss Emma Huderberg, who with one son mourn his loss, besides his mother, three sisters and three brothers. In 1893 he was elected village clerk of Palatine and was re-elected for three years, when he was elected trustee, which position he held up to his death. His early death was the cause of much regret by his many acquaintances. Although of a quiet disposition, he was always friendly and true to those with whom he became acquainted. His popularity is best shown in the manner in which the various organizations with which he was connected turned out to reverberate his memory.

The relatives of the deceased weep not alone for the departed one; many grieve with them in their loss.

Village Board Proceedings.

The board of trustees met in the village hall in special session Tuesday night for the purpose of taking proper action on account of the death of Alderman Henry J. Stroker. The following resolution was passed and the village hall was ordered draped in mourning for thirty days:

WHEREAS, Death has suddenly entered our midst and fills our hearts with grief and sorrow. The chair occupied by Henry J. Stroker, our former faithful colleague, is vacant and his voice in our council forever hushed. Cut off in the full vigor of his manhood, we have lost in him a true and efficient officer, a valuable and estimable citizen and his dear ones a good husband and father, a dutiful son and loving brother; be it therefore

Resolved, That we individually and as president and trustees of this village, in special session assembled, deeply mourn with those that are nearest to him and that we extend to them our sincerest sympathy in this, their darkest hour of bereavement and sorrow, and be it further

Resolved, That this resolution be spread upon the records of our village and that the clerk is hereby instructed to make suitable copies thereof to be forwarded to the members of our departed colleague.

The Man who Succeeds.

Success in business is not to be reached nowadays in easy-going methods that was obtained a generation or two ago. Times have changed and the people have changed with them. Push is the only thing that will carry a man ahead, and it is the liveliest pusher that gets there first. He must not sit down and wait for business to come to him, or he may sit until the seat of his pants wears out, and be that much the poorer. The chronic pusher, the dyed-in-the-wool hustler, he is the man that lets other fellows wait while he rushes ahead and pockets what they are after. What is the manner of his pushing? How does he do it? Well, in two or three ways, but there is one in which he puts implicit faith. As a general rule, the chronic advertiser. Printer's ink is the lubricating oil of his business wheels, and he allows them not to lag or creak for the want of it. He may pinch or economize in other directions, but he would look upon "cutting his ad" as another phrase of cutting his throat. Hard times and poor business are incentives to increasing his advertising, rather than an argument to him for cutting it down—upon the principle that it needs more power to drag a cart up than down hill. It will pay semi-occasional advertisers to ponder over the pusher's success, and he may possibly find in it the cause of some cause for the lack of his own.—Ex.

ROOT IS SECRETARY OF WAR.

New York Lawyer Appointed to Succeed Gen. Alger.

TO HANDLE COLONIAL MATTERS

New Official Will Probably Be Called On to Formulate Plans for the Government of Cuba and the Philippines, When the Time Comes.

Elihu Root of New York has accepted the war portfolio in President McKinley's cabinet.

It is not improbable that the near future will see Mr. Root in the position of colonial secretary and a new man at the head of the war department. The president believes the time has come to give the Cubans a trial at self-government, and he wants Mr. Root to take hold of this matter and formulate plans whereby the Cubans will have an opportunity to establish some kind of government which this government can recognize.

Mr. Root, of course, will have much to do with the Philippine war, but the president will naturally depend more upon his advice for substituting a civil for a military government in the Philippines when the time comes for such action than he will upon his assistance in connection with the military campaign.

Ahead of the Times and Leading the Future.

The most wonderful and realistic exhibition, Dewey's Victory at Manila, Wash-bash avenue, just south of the Auditorium, Chicago. An Electro-Cyclorama that is completely revolutionizing war productions and movie scenes. An immense building constructed for the purpose in the very heart of the city. The magnitude of this undertaking can be better measured from the following facts: It required a corps of fifty of the most finished artists in the world 120 days and nights to create the painting alone. If the immense scene were stretched out twenty feet high it would be one mile long. The cloth, painting canvas and frame of structure holding same weighs over 100,000 pounds and in addition to that there was 20,000 pounds of white lead used by the artists on this great scene, besides several thousand pounds of other materials in the way of colors, etc. It was necessary to erect a special track with derrick cars to hang the immense canvas ready for the artist's brush. It cost a fortune alone for the cable and telegrams to procure a positively correct statement on each point for the artists. The immense picture alone represents an outlay of over $50,000, every detail of the picture being absolutely correct. It requires a special electric light plant of over 100 horse power, and over 2,000 incandescent lights of different sizes are used in the illumination and electrical effects. It requires a trained force of fifty electricians, expert and professional people, aided by a small army of gun-firers, lecturers, etc., to properly conduct the great enterprise and give exhibitions. The battleship Olympia, on which the audience stand to view the entire scene, weighs over 200,000 pounds. There is daily consumed in the battle between fleets and forts and in the exploding of mines as much ammunition as was consumed by the U. S. cruiser Philadelphia in bombarding Samoa. The electrical effects are produced by specially constructed mechanism that has no duplicate in the world. It is original with, and the entire creation of, the president of the Manila Exhibition Co. The sun set before victory, the American fleet in the storm and the night-signalling surpasses all previous and combined efforts in thrilling realism. The night firing of the forts, the moonlight scene, Manila and Cavite by night, the tropical sunrise and the firing of the Spanish fleets and forts just at sunrise, combined with the firing of the American fleet surpasses anything the world has ever seen. It has been witnessed and indorsed by some of the most prominent men of the United States and Europe, Rear Admiral Schley, U. S. N.; Captain McCalla, Marblehead, U. S. N.; Jos. L. Stickney, Admiral Dewey's aide; the Japanese consul and naval experts, as well as several American representatives of foreign governments, and is pronounced by all as the very pinnacle of sights, the acme of truth and reality, the most startling, soul-inspiring and thrilling exhibition ever conceived and successfully carried out by man. The doors open at 9 o'clock in the morning during the week and at 1 o'clock on Sunday. A descriptive lecture by men that were behind the guns with Dewey at Manila. Sight-seers and visitors to the city should never fail to visit the Battle of Manila. It is a lesson in history and a scene you will never forget should you live 100 years.

Where He Made His Money.

"Do you make much out of your apples?" asked the visitor. "Oh, pretty considerable," answered the farmer; "but I've got a son up in the town who makes more out of the apples in a month than I make the whole season." "A farmer, is he?" "No; he's a doctor. I'm talking about green apples now."—Yonkers Statesman.

DEATH AND RIOTING AT CLEVELAND

Street Railway Strike Leads to Bloodshed and Howling Mobs.

Cleveland telegram: Troops to the number of nearly 1,000 men arrived in Cleveland this afternoon to assist the local authorities in maintaining order.

The four Columbus militia companies, together with the military organizations from Newark and Chillicothe, 600 strong, arrived here to-day to re-enforce the soldiers already on guard.

Mayor Farley refused to say whether

The presence of the soldiers is very distasteful to the strikers, and Mayor Farley is censured by them for calling the additional troops. The latter reiterated his statement that he would keep the city free from rioting and violence if it took every soldier in the state to do it.

After a night marked by disorder and rioting the city this morning again presented a peaceful aspect. On all

No Charges Against Ryan—Secretary of Illinois Miners Is Not to Be Suspended
—Secretary Hunter Makes an Explanation—Late Telegrams.

No Charges Against Ryan.

Springfield, Ill.—It was reported here that W. D. Ryan, secretary of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, had been suspended from office, pending the investigation to certain charges, touching his official conduct, by the executive board of the order, which was held here today.

Some of the things complained of, it is said, were that he entered into a written contract with the owners of the Pana mines that the price of mining should be fixed at a rate not to exceed 30 1/4 cents a ton; that after the state board of arbitration had decided that to be a fair rate he denounced the action of the board, and that lately he charged the militia on duty at Carterville with firing shots in the night for the purpose of creating the impression that danger existed and the services of the militia were required there to preserve order. President Hunter was seen and emphatically declared that there was absolutely no foundation for the report. He says:

There have been no charges preferred against Secretary Ryan; he has not been suspended from office; he is discharging his duties as usual, and will continue to do so. A member of the executive board was heard to declare that the report originated in the statehouse, and it is certain that the members of the state board of arbitration feel that Mr. Ryan acted in bad faith in using his influence to prevent the miners from accepting the board's decision in the Pana matter.

Changes Election on Mayor.

Taylorville, Ill.—Judge Farmer has just rendered a decision in the Circuit Court here declaring that Democratic Nominee Ebach was elected mayor of Taylorville last April by a majority of six votes. The decision orders the ousting of W. E. Peabody, the Republican candidate, who was elected by a plurality of five on the face of the official returns, but the case will be carried to the Supreme Court. Numerous irregularities were discovered in the counting of the votes. The most glaring instance was a bunch of five Republican tickets scratched and voted for Mr. Ebach, which had been placed among the straight Republican tickets and counted for Mr. Peabody. Mr. Peabody's counsel made a strong fight against admitting the ballots as evidence claiming the tally sheets were the better evidence and intimating that the ballots had been exchanged since being voted. The result as announced by Judge Farmer shows 563 votes for Mr. Ebach and 557 for Mr. Peabody. Since the election the city has had a dual government, with two sets of police, engineers and other appointees, caused by the old officials holding over. Mayor Peabody's appointments were not confirmed by the city council, which is composed of five Democrats and three Republicans.

Prominent Chicago Man in Trouble.

Chicago telegram: William Alexander Stewart Graham, former school agent, clerk and secretary of the board of education, is a defaulter to the extent of at least $34,500, and is said to be on his way to South America to escape the consequence of embezzling the funds of the school board. His plunderings may amount to $62,000, or even reach to $75,000, though the board of education is hoping that the first amount will be the extent of his defalcation. Graham confesses to a shortage of $23,000, and offers property worth $24,000 to cover the shortage. He has lost all his savings and the school funds in stock speculation, and in the attempt to make a fortune in a short time.

Stolen Papers Turn Up Abroad.

St. Louis, Mo.—Chief of Police Eltzroth of this city has received a telegram from Chief of Detectives Collier of Chicago informing him of the arrest at Venice, Italy, of a man upon whom papers of naturalization as a citizen of the United States, issued at Taylorville, Ill., to Henry Timmerman, had been found, and inquiring as to Timmerman. Chief Eltzroth ascertained that Henry Timmerman is now residing in Taylorville. Timmerman says the naturalization papers must have been stolen from him a year ago by an Italian tramp to whom he gave lodging.

Gov. Tanner Sick in the West.

Springfield, Ill., telegram: Col. J. Mack Tanner, the governor's private secretary, received a letter from Mrs. John R. Tanner dated at Glenwood Springs, Col., saying that Gov. Tanner was sick, and that while his condition was not alarming, he would go up into the mountains for a short time to recuperate.

LONDON SUNDAY PAPERS.

Lord Rosebery's Opinion of That Class of Journalism.

Quite supposably, it must be difficult for the American mind to appreciate how intense a national thrill has been evoked by the recent appearance of two Sunday newspapers. I had the privilege of hearing Lord Rosebery speak, the other evening, at one of the great dinners now so constantly given in London. He touched on this theme of Sunday Journalism, and with a gravity of disapprobation which might well astonish the inexperienced trans-Atlantic mind. If he should dwell at length on the subject of whether seven-day papers should deserve countenance, he said it would be chiefly because of the news-vender, who endeavored to obtain a free Sunday and saw little chance of obtaining it now. He then continued to the effect that both the gentlemen who edited these same sheets were his friends, and yet that he would venture to tell them they were losing, in the fierce competition of journalism, more than they gained. He would ask them to consider (how strange it must sound to American ears!) whether, in this same fierce competition, they might not be losing more than they gained. Loud cheers followed, and his lordship then pursued: "I would ask them to consider whether they might not, between them, arrive at a self-denying ordinance, a truce with God, which would release both of them." There were more cheers at this point, but to the abundant applause I am afraid that my own contribution was hardly more important than that of a dazed smile. I could not resist a vision of Mr. Pulitzer, Mr. Hearst and Mr. Bennett agreeing together upon this same sort of Divine truce, and resolving that they would issue no more Sunday editions! Lord

Rosebery, who must now be hearing the shady side of 50, "keeps" astonishingly well. Years ago, in New York, I saw him—twenty years, at least—and since then the changes in his face and figure have been notably slight. As an orator, I had never heard him before. His voice is rich and resonant, and though his stature is by no means tall, it constantly preserves an air of statesmanlike dignity.—Edgar Fawcett, in Collier's "Weekly."

"KISSING-BUG" DEFENDED.

The old proverb about giving a dog a bad name and then hanging him or otherwise disposing of him may also be applied to bugs. Some of the latter are useful, a few are ornamental and all of them are interesting to the scientist.

That bugs are addicted to kissing is a recent discovery—or, perhaps, it would be better to say, invention. For, after a nine-days' wonder about its osculatory exploits, the "kissing-bug" yesterday found a champion and defender. Prof. Chope of the Field museum, as reported in The Daily News, may be said to have done tardy justice to the harmless "kissing-bug," which, the professor explains, is "a semi-tropical creature, found in plenty in Kentucky, and he rarely leaves the borders of that state. His function," adds the professor, "in nature is to destroy the large worms which infest cotton plants. He is a very useful member of society and cotton-growers would not think of killing him."

The Kentucky citizenship of the "kissing-bug" effectually disposes of the story of its newly developed propensity. The monalestes picipes was first heard of in its new role in Washington, D. C. That a Kentucky bug of osculatory habits would leave a state noted for its beautiful women and begin a kissing career in Washington is not reasonable. That he should come to Chicago, granting that he has started on the new career ascribed to him, would be natural, considering the many attractions in this line this city has to offer. But, unfortunately for the maligners of an honest bug, Prof. Chope says it always makes a practice of keeping away from human beings and he very prosaically ascribes to "spiders" the effects heretofore attributed to the slandered bug.

The men express a determination to do their duty fearlessly. The regiment is made up of volunteers of the Spanish war, the Columbus

In addition, the professor has as yet been unable to find in the varied selection of bugs daily offered for his inspection a single "kissing-bug." Any person having one of the latter can secure a place for it in the Field museum as a curiosity. And thus science comes to the aid of virtue, and the Kentucky bug will hereafter be permitted to go its way and attend to its legitimate function in protecting the cotton crop no longer disturbed by the slanderous reports lately set in circulation as to its sapped habit.

How Funston Writes.

Gen. Frederick Funston writes with as much ginger as he fights, says a Washington correspondent of the Buffalo Express. In a recent private letter to a friend in Washington he says: "On general principles I am not an expansionist, but I believe that since we were by an unfortunate train of circumstances thrown into this thing, we should stay with it to the bitter end, and rawhide these bullet-headed Asiatic ruffians until they yell for mercy. And after the war I want the job of professor of American history in Luzon university, when they build it—and I'll warrant that the new generation of Filipinos will know better than to get in the way of the band-wagon of Anglo-Saxon progress and decency."

second degree. Attorney Tolles, on behalf of Hawley, requested a preliminary hearing before Police Judge Fiedler Tuesday next.

CLAMS USEFUL NOW.

Fresh Water Mussels Whose Shells Are Made Into Buttons.

Being a clam is no longer a cause for reproach.

Fresh-water mussels now live useful lives, building up shells that are afterward available—not to the clam, however—to make buttons of.

The industry of dredging for mussels was introduced in Muscatine, Iowa, by a German named Koepple. Thence the new industry spread up and down the Mississippi river. At New Boston 10,000 tons have been taken out in three seasons. The best variety is known as the "nigger-head." A good many of the clam shells are sent abroad.

The shells are sawed by hand-tempered steel saws which cut out little disks. These are polished by rubbing against each other in a sort of churn, which is kept revolving for three days. Drilling the eyes and sewing the buttons on cards is done by young girls.

There are fifty mussel-shell button factories along the Mississippi.

The Camel's Eye.

The Nile is essentially a river of silence and mystery. Even the camels turn their beautiful soft eyes upon you as if you were intruding upon their silence and reserve. Never were the eyes in a human head so beautiful as a camel's. There is a limpid softness in their expression which drags at your sympathies like the look in the eyes of a hunchback. It means that, with your opportunities, you might have done more with your life. Your mother looks at you that way sometimes in church, when the sermon touches a particularly raw nerve in your spiritual make-up. I always feel like apologizing when a camel looks at me.—Lillian Bell, in the Woman's Home Companion.

The Dreyfus Affair.

If you have, in the rush of events, forgotten the first act of the astounding Dreyfus melodrama, it would be well to recall it, so that you may intelligently watch the denouement. A comparatively unknown captain of artillery in the French army was accused some years ago of selling military secrets to the German government. That was Dreyfus. He was a Jew. He was accused, arrested and convicted by popular anti-Jew clamor and perjury. In the unreasoning tumult of the hour, the public did not care to think and cried for blood, and Dreyfus fell a victim to a mob sentiment. But there were three or four men who were not influenced by mere noise and not frightened by a merciless prejudice. One of these was Zola. They examined the facts and declared that a hideous injustice had been committed. Then they had to run for their lives. It was in vain that Germany protested that no secrets had been obtained from Dreyfus. The clamor of the Jew baiting mob had to expend itself. Dreyfus went to prison—exiled and loaded not only with chains, but with a national opprobrium. That is the first act. When the curtain lifts on the second act, the hero is in a cell, but the heroine appears. She is the wife, who ascertains that her husband is not only innocent, but is the victim of national dementia and hate. Then she assumes the stupendous task of vindicating her husband against the onslaught of a rabid populace and a cowardly court of justice. This woman and her few friends succeed in unmasking the real villain in one Esterhazy. They bring to view, the most abominable lingo of our times, a product of French sentiment, French debauchery and French audacity. Then it is found that the incriminating documents that condemned Dreyfus are clumsy forgeries. But how turn back the decrees of justice? How convict France of national pusillanimity? This was Mrs. Dreyfus' heroic job. Now comes the third act, with shame faced Justice herself in the prisoner's dock and Dreyfus, bent and whitened by injustice, representing Truth. We are waiting for the conclusion and curtain. If there is any poetic justice in the end, we can afford to spare France the charge of having played a very cheap and disreputable melodrama.

Not long ago a soldier who had served in the late war died in camp, and it was found that he was worth at the time of his death $5,000. Having no immediate relatives, the man had bequeathed his money to the United States government that he had served. No sooner was this case made known than several other cases of the same kind came to light, in which veterans insisted that their property should go to Uncle Sam. In commenting on this a government official remarks that, taken into consideration with the conscience fund at Washington, it is doubtful if any other country can show such examples, both of honest patriotism and honest penitence rising into affection for a government.

Mme. Bernhardt, the French actress, continues to ride on a man's wheel in England. In other words, she plays Hamlet to the great delight of the people who never knew of what sex Hamlet was. The corporations of the provincial towns meet her and escort her into the city with horns. The mayor makes a speech and everybody feels that Shakespeare has come to his own. But the critics continue to wonder how Shakespeare got along at all with the drama when there were no women in the company to interpret the men's roles.

It is now pretty well understood in theatrical circles, that Daly's historic theater will lapse after the present contracts are filled, merely because there is no one to carry out the policy of its creator or preserve the traditions that he gathered about him. Mr. Daly was the unit of its prestige and the source of its distinction. Several of the members of the stock company, without whom the theater would lose its distinction, are understood to be already casting about for new engagements.

Society and Divorce.

A great deal of comment has been created by the sermon of a fashionable clergyman in Newport, who appealed to society to come to the aid of the church in its effort to discountenance divorce. The attitude of the preacher in this matter attracted wide attention, because it was held to be an acknowledgment that society had more influence than religion in shaping the morals of a community. But the divorce question is so peculiarly a social rather than a religious question that this conclusion seems rather hasty. It is the irregularity of divorce, if one may use that term, and not any general sinfulness in divorce itself, that is causing the trouble. Society undertakes to control or at least to regulate the matter, and it has made such a mess of it that religion itself cannot rectify the disorder. So long as every state has a divorce law which is opposed in some respect to the divorce laws of all the other states, but which is held to be legally and socially binding in that state, and not out of it, we shall have persons of loose moral natures availing themselves of the mere contrariety of those laws to carry out their own purposes. That the growing feebleness of the marriage tie is disturbing the cohesive integrity of society there can be no question. Moralists, lawyers, statesmen and clergymen agree substantially that society itself ought to correct this evil simply from a sense of self protection. In that view of it the Newport clergyman was perfectly right and had in no way acknowledged the inefficiency of religion. If the social set supposed to be congregated at Newport were to withdraw its favor from all persons who get divorced with no other purpose than to make indecently hasty marital arrangements with other persons, it would throw a corrective damper on the whole business. It is society's duty to do this as a conservative measure. It will thus be aiding the moral law without assuming any moral prerogative.

In nothing has our country shown its expansiveness so much as in the size of the firecracker. Time was when this ingenious device of the evil one was about the size of a boy's lead pencil, and everybody knows that that is never over two inches long. Then it grew to be about the size of a modest tomato worm. It was also growing in assertion. It was put under the edge of a barn or under the front veranda, and it never burned down more than one barn out of five. The patriotic youth of 50 years ago bought these innocent things by the hundred and slung them with joyous patriotism in the faces of restive horses and frightened girls without causing any very serious gaps in the population. But now the enterprising youth hoards his money to accomplish one firecracker. But he has it sent home on a truck, and as the family take to the mountains the fire department and the insurance agents put cotton in their ears and wait for it to go off. At the same rate of progress in the firecracker we shall arrive in another half century at a condition of things in which the Fourth of July will have only one report, and after that all will be silent. The marvelous part of it all is that the small boy, who is bent on blowing up everything else, does not, as a rule, get blown up himself. The other day he took his firecrackers and began to play in his guileless way very close to a shed containing several hundred pounds of dynamite. What puzzles the people for a radius of three miles, whose houses were all wrecked, is that the small boy came out whole and still wears a look of innocent triumph.

Every wayfaring man who has given the slightest attention to The Hague conference must have seen how small a part ethics played in the congress and how large was the part enacted by material interests. As to what nations ought to do in their relations to each other we hear very little, but what nations ought to prevent other nations from doing we hear a great deal. How nations can preserve their property without sacrificing their prestige became the only question at issue. In other words, while international morality took a back seat and let her yell down business and politics came to the front and embraced. There was a tacit admission that the best way to accomplish disarmament was to accomplish it in the twentieth century, to leave the creation of a sentiment in favor of peace to coming generations. Each nation, with the single exception of the United States, gave its whole attention to the business of finding out how far it could go in preparing for destruction without actually destroying anything.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution, it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper. CARTER H. HARRISON, Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make-up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically." WASHINGTON HESING, The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher, Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country." MARTIN J. RUSSELL, Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

The Wauconda Independents won an easy victory over the Choir boys at the Point Wednesday, the score standing 36 to 9. Segers and Duers was the battery for the Independents.

Prof. Orton Hubbard left our village Monday for a tour through the Eastern states. Among the most important places he intends to visit are Boston and the Niagara Falls. We wish him a pleasant trip.

J. E. Pratt left for McHenry Sunday, where he has secured a position as clerk in Simon Stoffel's store. Ed is a good hand at this business and will merit the good will of his employer. We wish him success.

Stocum's Lake school now boasts of a new Crown organ, purchased of H. Maiman & Son last week. It was delivered last Saturday and supplies a long-felt want, something which brightens a school room as nothing else can and we believe the time is not far distant when every school of any importance will be supplied with an instrument.

"Queen Esther," the dramatic cantata rendered at the Oakland hall last Friday and Saturday evenings were the best entertainments of the kind ever given in our village. The parts were carried out entirely by home talent, with the exception of Mr. Cristy and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Walsh of McHenry, who so kindly gave assistance. To say the least it was elegant. We would like to describe it, but it is impossible, but it needed only to be seen to be appreciated. The gross receipts of the two evenings amounted to $97.

I wish to extend my most sincere thanks to all who have sympathized with me during the illness and death of my lamented husband. I especially wish to most sincerely thank the members of the A. F. & A. M. lodge for their assistance and care which they so willingly tendered me in the hour of need. That the Almighty may ever keep them true and faithful is my earnest wish for the future and my present consolation.

MRS. S. SMITH.

J. W. Acker, one of our old soldiers and residents, has sold his place, consisting of 12 acres, with house, barn and other buildings to Wilbur Cook, the consideration for the place being just what Mr. Acker had held it at. When asked in regard to his future plans, Mr. Acker said: "I don't yet know just where I shall locate, but I intend to buy a house and lot somewhere." Mr. and Mrs. Acker are well and favorably known in our village and vicinity, having lived here for a number of years and we hope they will decide to purchase a home in our village.

Resolutions of Condolence.

In the morning of manhood, in the possession of every faculty, while the hope which inspires confidence in the future, gave promise of years of usefulness, the bright light became suddenly extinguished, and before life had reached its noontide, darkness cast its shadow over the sun which had illumined the pathway of our esteemed companion, Henry J. Stroker, and on Sunday, July 23, the hand of death removed him from our midst, but never from our memory.

In his death we have sustained an irreparable loss, the community deprived of an enterprising and energetic citizen and his friends a true-hearted and courteous associate. He was pure of heart, honest in his intentions and perfect in his integrity. He was at once the head and heart of his home, devoted and loyal to his own and to the end.

While we bow in humble submission to nature's final decree, we do so in the deepest sorrow, fully sensible to the fact that we have been deprived of one whose noble characteristics bound him to us and made his name the synonym of all that was good, whereon he was known as a man, as a citizen and as a friend, therefore be it

Resolved by the members of the Palatine Athletic club that the following memorial be adopted as an expression of our esteem for our late associate, and that a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased as an expression of our sympathy with them in this, the hour of their deep bereavement.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, The great creator having been pleased, out of his infinite mercy, to remove from our midst our late commander, Sir Knight Henry J. Stroker, who was beloved and respected by all, and

WHEREAS, In his death our order has lost a loyal Sir Knight and friend, the village an enterprising and energetic citizen and his family a kind and indulgent husband and father, and

WHEREAS, His efforts, his voice and his energies, as a commanding officer of our order were ever arrayed on the side of honesty, truth and justice; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Palatine Tent, No. 88, K. O. T. M., do deeply deplore the loss of their commander, a loss that seems irreparable to us and to his large circle of friends, and be it further

Resolved, That we, the officers and members of this tent, extend to the widow and family our sincere sympathy in this, their hour of sorrow and bereavement, and also, be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this tent and that the recorder transmit to the family of the deceased a copy of same properly engrossed and that the charter be draped in mourning for a period of sixty days.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. WILSON, Liveryman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms Palatine.

Plano Jones Mower
Longest Lived and Lightest Draft Mower in the world.
It has no Vibration.

No Noise, on Lost Power.
No Cog Wheels to wear out.
Free from Side Draft and free from Neck Weight.
No backing up to start in the grass.

THE PLANO is the simplest and best.

The following are a few of the points why the Plano machines are the best over other makes:

In the Plano Jones Lever Binder the knottor contains only 16 pieces, while the Deering has 44, McCormick 28 and the Champion 33. It is the only binder put up with lever power, carrying spring, friction clutch reel and jointless main frame. The main drive wheel is two inches wider than any other made, consequently the machine will not mire or settle down in soft or loose ground.

Farmers should examine this machine before placing their order.

LOVE AND LAW.

By the author of BONNY'S LOVERS

CHAPTER I.

"Handsome? Yes. He has the most innocent blue eyes in the world, and the smile of an angel; but he broke his mother's heart, spent her fortune and his own, and committed every wickedness under the sun before he was one-and-twenty. Yes, it is very sad—very! And now poor old Colonel Branscomb is dying—the accounts this morning were quite hopeless—and Charlie is his next heir. Another fortune for him to squander, as he has already squandered everything he could lay his hands on."

"But I thought the estate was not entailed," remarked the lady to whom the foregoing was addressed.

"No, it is not entailed, but the Colonel has very strong ideas on the subject of hereditary right. He never would make a will; he has always believed that Charlie ultimately would pull himself together—poor old man; he must die in that belief. Charlie will make ducks and drakes of beautiful Forest Lea in no time. Oh, it is a sorrowful pity!"

The speaker, a handsome well preserved woman of fifty or thereabouts, with the exclusive stamp of the "county" about her, sighed profoundly as she concluded.

"But there is the niece—the Colonel was devoted to her, I understood," remarked the second voice.

"Yes, absolutely devoted. Poor dear child—she will miss him terribly in every way! I believe the Colonel pleased himself at one time with the idea of a marriage between Nona and Charlie, and threw them very much together—too much, when you consider what a fascinating scapegrace he is. She is a very sweet girl."

"I hope her uncle has provided for her. She was quite dependent on him, was she not?"

"Yes. It is impossible to say what he has done—something, I hope. But without a will—which he certainly has not made—I should be afraid—"

Here I, Sidney Fort, the involuntary listener to a conversation which, considering the place and circumstances, was certainly indiscreet, stirred, coughed, and otherwise made the fact of my waking presence known. The voices, which had been somewhat raised, dropped at once to a lower tone.

I was the third passenger in a first-large and important clientele. An imperative summons had come early that morning for our Mr. Rowton to take instructions for the will of a country client. The terms of the telegram admitted of no delay, and within an hour of its receipt I was on my way to Euston Station, whence I wired to "Colonel Branscomb, Forest Lea, Midshire," that "Sidney Fort, of Messrs. Rawton & Fort," had "left by the 11:45 train," and would "be with him not later than 6 p. m."

In the absence of my principal and the pressure at starting, I had no further knowledge of my client than the few data furnished by the head clerk at the office—"Old family; estate worth fifteen thousand a year; business in the hands of the firm since 1825. Mr. Rowton thought a great deal of the Colonel; rather eccentric and arbitrary, but a gentleman down to the ground; quite of the old school; never married; had nephews and nieces;" he—Fisher—had seen a young gentleman at the office, a nephew of the Colonel's.

The additional information conveyed by my fellow-passengers imparted to my expedition the interest it had hitherto lacked. I was no doubt about to save Forest Lea from the hands of the spendthrift Charlie, and possibly to endow a young and lovely girl with the fortune he had forfeited. The matter was lifted all at once from a dry detail of business into a chapter of romance. I am, notwithstanding my profession, somewhat imaginative, and by the time the train stopped at Westford, the station for which I was bound, I had drawn a sufficiently fanciful sketch of the position.

Little, however, did I guess how the events and experiences of the ensuing week were to color and influence my own future life.

My traveling companions also alighted at Westford. I saw them, attended by a maid and a footman, and obsequiously escorted by the station-master and porters, drive off in a wagonette with a pair of well-groomed roans; and then I was accosted by an elderly groom with a cockade in his hat.

"Mr. Fort, for Colonel Branscomb's, Forest Lea, sir?"

"Yes," I replied. "How is the Colonel?"

"Very bad, sir," answered the man, and other trophies, telling of the Colonel's love for sport, and carpeted with tiger and other skins spread on the polished oak floor. It was altogether an imposing and appropriate entrance to the fine old mansion.

Here, amongst the distinctly masculine elements, I was not long in detecting the subtle signs of the presence which had just pervaded my waking dreams of Forest Lea. Set on the ample old-fashioned window-ledge were old china bowls heaped with rich crimson and golden roses, and the wide fireplace was filled with grace fully grouped ferns. A shady ha wreathed with green leaves lay on a little spiral-legged table, close to a large old-fashioned screen which shut off the staircase; and near the hat had been thrown a pair of tiny gauntlet gloves, which could never have fitted poor Colonel's hands. A little black and-tan terrier, nestled in one of the fur rugs, roused itself and came up to me, nestling its cold nose in my offered palm, and looking up into my face with the wistful appeal of its sociable nature. Evidently it was a lady's pet, neglected or forgotten in the presence of sad and overwhelming cares.

A grave middle-aged man-servant interrupted my observations with a respectful greeting.

"Dinner will be served at 7 o'clock, sir," he said. "Will you take any refreshments now—brandy or soda, or sherry and bitters, sir? There is tea in the drawing-room still." Then, as I declined all his hospitable suggestions, he added, "I will show you to your room, then, if you please, sir. The Colonel is sleeping; the doctors are most anxious he should not be disturbed. We had Sir Alfred Cox down from London this morning. I was to say that the Colonel might not be able to see you for some little time. He has had no sleep before this for eight-and-forty hours—he has had such violent pains—and now that the sleeping-draught has taken effect the medical gentlemen make a great point of—"

"Oh, certainly—I quite understand! We must hope that this sleep will be a turning point in the illness," I said cheerfully. "Of course it is of vital importance that the Colonel should not be aroused. Sleep is often the best medicine."

"The Colonel has been counting the hours until you could be here, sir," the man went on, as he unpacked my portmanteau and laid out my apparel. He sent for the Bradshaw as soon as your telegram came, and ordered the dog-cart himself. He only dropped off as you turned into the avenue. Is that all I can do for you, sir? You will find the morning papers in the library."

There was a suppressed interest and excitement in the manner of the man, who was evidently an old and confidential retainer. My arrival and mission were, as I could see, matters of supreme importance and curiosity to that anxious household.

The butler was waiting for me again in the hall as I descended the stairs. He threw open the door of the room on the right, and ushered me in with the announcement:

"Mr. Fort."

It was with a momentary and uncomfortable thought of my morning dress that I found myself in the presence of a lady—a fair slim girl whose white gown made her at once a conspicuous point in the sombre, heavily-furnished room. She was seated in a large leather chair at the table in the center of the apartment, her hands folded over the closed volume in her lap, and her eyes fixed upon the door. Large limpid blue-gray eyes they were, I saw as I came nearer, searching mine with an anxious questioning gaze.

This then, was the "Nona" of whom my fellow passengers had spoken—the ideal about which I had woven so many imaginings. A very fair maiden, the fairest, sweetest—I decided on the instant—whom it had ever been my lot to meet, although the lovely eyes were ringed with dark shadows as from watching and weeping, and the white gown had been put on without the addition of a single flower or ornament.

She rose as I advanced towards her and bowed gravely. Once, I thought her hand stole out with a hesitating gesture—as if she would have offered it to me. But it was withdrawn almost instantly, and rested on the table beside her, as she stood, a graceful drooping figure, with that indescribable and exquisite grace of delicate refinement which is inherited—never acquired. A very gracious chatelaine, I thought, if the sleeping colonel upstairs should so will. And with the thought there came a strange dumb thrill of pain, as if the fair vision were floating away from me into the dim shadowy distance.

Some conventional remark as to the weather was the only thing which occurred to me, and seemed for its commonplaceness terribly out of harmony with the spirit of the occasion, especially as it was met by another long, troubled, almost trembling look into my face.

ROBBER BAND SCATTERED.

Lieut. Moore's Detachment Defeats Brigands.

SOLDIERS ARE RE-ENLISTING.

It Is Believed Gen. Otis Can Raise Four Regiments of Volunteers at Manila, Instead of Two If Desired—President Sends Instructions.

Advices from Cebu, in the Philippines, say that Lieut. Moore, with a detachment of the Twenty-third infantry, has defeated a robber band in the hills. Seven bandits were captured and five killed and their fort destroyed. The Americans lost one man killed and had none wounded.

It is believed at the war department that before the transports now at Manila are loaded, many more volunteers will elect to remain and enlist in the new regiments to be organized there. The question of enlisting another volunteer regiment in the Philippines, making four instead of two, which was believed to be the best that Otis could do a month ago, will be left to Gen. Otis. If he finds enough men willing to remain to form an additional regiment, he will be authorized to select officers and organize it.

Col. Bell has enlisted about 500 men for the Thirty-sixth infantry. Col. Wallace has about 400 for the Thirty-seventh. Col. Lockett has over 400 applications for the cavalry regiment he is forming.

Gen. Otis has been cabled to send the volunteers home as rapidly as possible, it being the desire of the president to have no delay in the matter.

MEETINGS ARE AT AN END.

Closing Sessions of Epworth Leaguers—The Resolutions Adopted.

With Sunday's meetings the convention of Epworth leaguers at Indianapolis practically ended. The last day of the meeting was the busiest of the four. The visitors got up in time for holy communion, which was observed in every Methodist church in the city at 6:30 o'clock. Four hours later 120 visiting clergymen preached on the spiritual life in as many churches. The several bishops occupied pulpits and drew more people than could be accommodated.

The resolutions adopted express wishes for the heartiest co-operation of Great Britain and America in all lands and upon the sea, condemn the decision of Attorney-General Griggs with reference to the anti-canteen act; deplore the encroachments on the Sabbath; protest against the seating of Congressman-elect Roberts, which it is averred would be an official recognition of polygamy; indorse the good citizenship movement and pledge the members of the league anew to the world's conversion.

STRIKERS USE EXPLOSIVES.

Street Car at Cleveland, Ohio, Blown from the Tracks.

At Cleveland, Ohio, July 23, a Euclid avenue car loaded with passengers was wrecked by an explosion of nitroglycerin or gun cotton.

Four companies of the Fifth regiment from Cleveland, the First Ohio cavalry and the naval reserves are guarding the property of the street car company and patrolling the streets.

The state department is prepared to take up negotiations looking to a settlement satisfactory to Italy for the lynching of five Italians at Tallulah, La.

WILMINGTON RETURNS FROM THE AMAZON.

The navy department has made public the report recently received from Commander C. C. Todd of the Wilmington, relating to the cruise of that vessel up the Amazon. The Wilmington proceeded 2,300 miles up the river, investigating the topography and natural resources of the country; made a collection of animals for the Zoological park in Washington and obtained a series of photographs of the towns along the river, the natives and the scenery. The valley of the Amazon is an immense area of low lying land, interspersed with innumerable waterways, which, during the rainy season, from May to December, overflow almost all of the intervening country. The towns, of which there are few of large population, are built on the higher bluffs along the river. At certain points where the country is above the average high-water level there are small plantations where cocoa, grain and vegetables are grown for local consumption. Nearly all of the native houses are built upon piles to raise them above the flood level.

class railway carriage, traveling from London towards a country station in the midland counties. I had at starting withdrawn into the farthest corner of the carriage, and, being sleepy from the previous night's burning of the midnight oil, had disposed myself to utilize the enforced idleness of the journey in recouping exhausted nature. I believe that the two ladies, in the interest of their subject, had quite forgotten that they were not alone. With my newspaper spread over my face I looked, as to all intents and purposes I was, up to a certain point, a dummy. The soft murmur of the feminine voices had had at first a soporific effect; but the journey was somewhat long, and, the demands of nature satisfied, I awoke to hear the far-end of a conversation which, strange to say, had a particular interest for me.

I was the junior partner, lately admitted, of a firm of London solicitors. One of my seniors was on the Continent, the other was laid up with one of the serious bouts of bronchitis which had been the primary cause of my initiation into the secrets of a melt these flakes of dandruff in the scalp. It goes further than this; it prevents their formation.

It has still other properties: it will restore color to gray hair in just ten times out of every ten cases.

And it does even more: it feeds and nourishes the roots of the hair. Thin hair becomes thick hair; and short hair becomes long hair.

We have a book on the Hair and Scalp. It is yours, for the asking.

A Compliment for Smith.

The discrimination between adjectives of one degree and another and between adjectives and adverbs is a sore trial to many people. Two or three days ago there were two ladies walking down street, gossiping away to their hearts' content. A man came limping along; he had hardly passed them when one of the ladies turned to the other and said: "That's Mr. Smith. You know he has a wooden leg." "You don't tell me that was the Mr. Smith that has the wooden leg?" "It is." "Well, he walks just lovely."—Detroit Free Press.

Bullet-Proof Cuirass.

The latest bullet-proof cuirass hails from France, and is the invention of M. Theraud. Its essential features are a shield of metal filled with an outer and inner lining (the composition of which is not stated), the whole apparatus weighing less than eight pounds. According to good authority, it was recently tested with a Mauser rifle, which was fired from a distance of about 70 yards. The bullet tore the front of the cuirass and made an indentation in the metal plate, but did not penetrate it.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 7445]

"I was a sufferer from female weakness. Every month regularly as the menses came, I suffered dreadful pains in uterus, ovaries were affected and had leucorrhoea. I had my children very fast and it left me very weak. A year ago I was taken with flooding and almost died. The doctor even gave me up and wonders how I ever lived."

"I wrote for Mrs. Pinkham's advice at Lynn, Mass., and took her medicine and began to get well. I took several bottles of the Compound and used the Sanative Wash, and can truly say that I am cured. Obituary.

Mrs. Caroline Meyer was born at Mar-Kranen, Wertenberg, Germany, October 8, 1838, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry Bohmer, July 20, 1899—aged 60 years, 9 months and 12 days.

Mrs. Meyer came to this country with her parents in 1855 and was married to Gustav Meyer the same year. In 1857 they moved to Barrington, where she has since made her home.

This union was blessed with ten children, four of whom have preceded their parents to the other world. She leaves one son, five daughters, four brothers and one sister to mourn her loss.

Mrs. Meyer was afflicted by a stroke of paralysis a few weeks ago, from which she never recovered. She was a devoted member of the Salem Evangelical church and was deeply concerned in the spiritual welfare of her children.

The funeral services were held at the Salem church at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Interment in Evergreen cemetery.

GEO. KRUEGER IN JAIL.

Accused of Committing the Double Murder.

EXCITEMENT RUNS HIGH.

Two Bullets Found in Wife's Head at the Post-Mortem.

The body of Mrs. Bertha Krueger, who was supposed to have killed her mother on July 16 and then committed suicide, was exhumed Thursday at Fairfield cemetery under the direction of Coroner Knight and State's Attorney C. T. Heydecker.

Krueger was a silent witness of the gruesome proceedings at the cemetery. He sat beneath a tree at the head of the grave, while Coroner Knight and Dr. Foley went about their work. He industriously applied a red bandana handkerchief to his eyes, while his father and four of his brothers stood among a crowd of neighbors, intent on the progress of the examination. When Dr. Foley found the first bullet lodged in the brain, Krueger quietly arose and walked away. His father, William Krueger, and brothers, Fred, Henry, Dick and William stood beneath the trees until Coroner Knight triumphantly produced the second bullet. The skull was removed and taken to Waukegan.

The finding of the second bullet disposed of the suicide belief and the state's attorney at once put Krueger under arrest. The prisoner was taken before Justice Huntington and remanded to the county jail at Waukegan to await the action of the Lake county grand jury.

Neighbors of the Krueger's have already arrived at a motive for the horrible crime, if it shall prove to be murder. They point to the fact that the farm on which Krueger lived was owned by his wife's mother; and that he is the legal successor to the property upon their deaths. It is capable of proof that Mrs. Voss was about to lease the farm to August Pohlman's brother, and that this would throw Krueger upon his own resources. He had announced to several of his friends that he expected to leave the farm, and that his wife was going to leave him in consequence of their disagreements.

It is reported that Mr. Krueger will be given a hearing August 4.

Chautauqua Letter.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., July 17. At the "Athens of America" this is a year of reunions and renewal of old acquaintances for the observance of the quarter centennial will draw hosts of former Chautauquans again to the shores of the historic lake. The year is likely to record the visit of more first comers than have ever before become residents of the assembly town in any season, the result of a wholesome curiosity to visit the place, which for twenty-five years has held so unique a place in the field of popular education. The passing years have each seen bettered conditions, but it is apparent that Chautauqua has never in its history been so well prepared to meet its guests, for the force of the reorganization has been directed towards utilitarian improvements, as well as the offering of a little less than extraordinary series of intellectual and recreative events.

At the opening of the 26th assembly Bishop John H. Vincent, chancellor of Chautauqua, presided at the devotional hour and was succeeded by Dr. Armory H. Bradford, associate editor of the Outlook, Dr. O. S. C. Wallace and others of equal note in this field of literature and pedagogy.

The 8th annual convention of elocutionists met here and their most famous members gave readings in the amphitheater. There are but a few of the well-known readers who did not appear at this meeting.

To the stranger Chautauqua is an open book from the new permanent and daily bulletins and guide-boards, which give directions to all places of public interest and informs one of the customs which prevail throughout this typical modern city.

William Armstrong, musical critic of the Chicago Tribune, takes part in the musical department of the general program this year. Mr. Armstrong's writings are recognized as the striking of a new note in the field of musical literature, and he has given two of his four lectures which treat on American and British modern composers and artistic temperament appeals to a large number of musicians and the musically inclined.

No lectures have been more successful and better attended than the series of Shakespeare's comedies delivered by Prof. E. T. Winchester of the Wesleyan university. Prof. Winchester is equipped with a thorough knowledge of the whole subject, but has learned the secret of suppressing in his lectures the technical details, and giving prominence to the essential generalities which the readers of Shakspeare should know. In consequence these lectures have been well attended. The last lecture dealt with "A Winter's Tale," as representing one of Shakspeare's late, if not the latest, works.

One of the most interesting and startling lectures of the season was delivered by Prof. Alcee Fortier of Tulane university of New Orleans. The lecture was on the "Creoles of Louisiana." The word Creole is used to designate the descendants of the ancient French and Spanish population of Louisiana. This lecture has caused no little talk here. Such an attack upon the writings of one of our most popular authors as Mr. Cable is unusual, but Prof. Fortier is possessed with accurate knowledge and there is scarcely any tendency to dispute his statements.

Dr. W. L. Hervey, of the New York city school board of examiners, who is on the general program twice during the assembly, has for one of his subjects "The Working Together of School and Home," a subject in line with a series of lectures delivered by him last year. Dr. Hervey is an instructor in the school of pedagogy.

Mrs. Sarah E. McCullough of Muncie, Ind., is at the Carey cottage for the season. Mrs. McCullough is a vice-president of class 94, Chautauqua Literary and Scientific circle.

Miss Howard, principal of an Episcopal school in Knoxville, Ind., has taken a cottage on Miller park.

Mrs. J. R. Hawes of Elgin has arrived and, as usual, is occupying the Elgin on Pratt avenue. She is accompanied by a friend, Mrs. Mary L. Gifford, who expects to sail for Corea on August 21 from Vancouver.
