The regular monthly meeting of the Athletic club was held Friday night and George Stroker was elected treasurer and Henry Harnening a member of the executive committee to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Henry Stroker.

The personal property tax is still warmly discussed by our people and the agitation promises to bear good fruit. Some who scheduled too low will probably voluntarily raise their assessment. A large number of our citizens were called before the board of review yesterday. The throwing out of the names of all persons owning personal property under $400 was done by the board of assessors, which gives them no credit for good sound sense and law. Under this act a man could have $10,000 in real estate and if he did not schedule $350 in personal property he pays no personal property tax. Many rich men have done this, and the poor honest citizen goes down into his pocket and makes up the deficiency. Let all pay their proportion in all taxes. They help make our laws and receive their full share from the benefits of taxation.

Village Board Proceedings.

The village board met in regular session Monday night, all members being present. The minutes of the meetings of July 3 and 25 were read and approved.

The treasurer's report for July showed a balance of $372.59 on hand.

The collector's report showed $33.08 collected for water tax from consumers for the quarter ending July 21.

The ordinance for the annual levy of taxes for the village was discussed, and after due deliberation it was found that $2,500 would have to be raised. Another ordinance was passed ordering a sidewalk built in front of C. P. Barnes property on Chicago avenue, rented by Dr. Alverson.

The subject of making a larger hole in the present well was discussed and the committee on fire and water was instructed to make contract for putting in a 6-inch hole at a cost not to exceed $400. The necessity of this action became apparent a short time ago when the water became very low on account of usage of water on the streets.

A petition from some of the business men praying the board to close all places of business on Sundays, except drug stores and meat markets, was referred to the judiciary committee, who will confer with the village attorney for proper instructions as to the board's power in regard to the matter. The members were in sympathy with request and will, no doubt, take proper action to make Palatine's Sundays more beneficial to the merchants.

Attest: A. G. SMITH, Clerk.

Mr. Rockefeller's monolith, cut from a solid piece of granite, to be set up in the Lake View cemetery, is receiving a great deal of hastily written admiration. One dispatch, sent out all over the country, says it is the largest monument of its kind in the world. This is palpably untrue. The Lake View obelisk is 52 feet high and weighs 80 tons, whereas the Egyptian obelisk in Central park, New York, is 68 feet 11 inches high and weighs 186 tons. In cutting memorials of this kind the ancients still beat us. There is a cut stone lying at Baalbec, where the workmen left it, that would make Mr. Rockefeller's obelisk look small. However, there is something Egyptian in this modern stonecutting of American millionaires, and one need not be surprised to see in time a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller try his hand at a pyramid.

There is a cheery though not a devotional ring in the bit of news that all day Sunday the sound of the harvesting machine was heard in Kansas mingled with that of the churchgoing bell. The crops have been delayed by the heavy rains, and, to save them, the farmers were compelled to work on Sunday, and one learns with concern that in the country districts the churches and Sunday schools were closed and all the male population went into the fields to save the grain. The Sabbatharians in the comfortable cities will wince at this, but the recording angel will probably smile and look upon it as a necessitous work without a single blemish of irreverence.

Bullfighting has really got a foothold in France, and the bull baiters have been imported from Spain. This is one of the recent attempts of the French people to do a little muscular swaggering. A correspondent of the London Truth points out that there has grown up quite a fad for English bulldogs and American revolvers, and a number of French statesmen are taking lessons in the manly art of slugging.

An effort is making to dispense with the birds because they carry and disseminate disease. Our sanitary activities will presently leave us nothing but our good health. A scientist has now discovered that false teeth are unhealthy. He says that they enable old people to eat meat, and nature does not intend that old people shall. Therefore nature causes their teeth to fall out.

B. & O. RECEIVERSHIP ENDED.

New Officers Have Taken Charge of the Road.

Baltimore, July 1.—The receivership of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad terminated at 12 o'clock last night and the property was turned over to the stockholders without celebration or formal ceremony. John K. Cowen and Oscar G. Murray were appointed receivers of the company on February 29th, 1896, by the United States court for the District of Maryland. Being familiar with the needs of the property the receivers decided that the only wise course to pursue was to practically rebuild and re-equip the railroad. The physical condition was bad, its equipment antiquated and inadequate to handle business and its insolvency was such as to seriously injure the revenues. The receivers' plans were discussed by the security holders and as a large majority agreed to the provision of enough funds to place the road in a condition to handle its traffic, they obtained permission of the court to issue certificates for the purchase, by means of equipment trusts and receivers' certificates, of new cars and locomotives and to improve the physical condition of the property. The plan also provided for the payment in full of all receivers' indebtedness, the entire floating debt of the company, represented by promissory notes and negotiable obligations and of all car trust obligations, enabling the company to begin the fiscal year of 1899-1900 with all its obligations paid. For the reason that reorganization was possible without a foreclosure, the original charter of the company remains in force, and the next annual meeting of the stockholders will be the 73d. The new stock of the company is held by interest which cannot fail to be of great help to the property and much new capital has been invested in the securities, and there is a sufficiency of money for still further improvements, which are in progress, with a view to still further reducing the cost of transportation.

NO REMEDY EQUALS PERUNA, SO THE WOMEN ALL SAY.

Miss Susan Wymar, teacher in the Richmond school, Chicago, Ill., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman regarding Pe-ru-na. She says: "Only those who have suffered as I have can know what a blessing it is to be able to find relief in Pe-ru-na. This has been my experience. A friend in need is a friend indeed, and every bottle of Pe-ru-na I ever bought proved a good friend to me."—Susan Wymar.

Mrs. Margaretha Dauben, 1214 North Superior St., Racine City, Wis., writes: "I feel so well and good and happy now that pen cannot describe it. Pe-ru-na is everything to me. I have taken several bottles of Pe-ru-na for female complaint. I am in the change of life and it does me good." Pe-ru-na has no equal in all of the irregularities and emergencies peculiar to women caused by pelvic catarrh.

Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O., for a free book for women only.

Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in a practice of over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-ru-na. Those desiring further particulars should send for a free copy of "Summer Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, O.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Brown Potato Rot.

B. T. Galloway: This disease occurs in many parts of the South, and, in addition to attacking the potato, is found to seriously injure eggplants and tomatoes. In the case of the potato, the leaves, stems, and tubers are affected. The disease usually manifests itself by a sudden wilting of the foliage and soon the whole plant may become affected, the leaves and stems shriveling and then turning brown or black. The disease reaches the tubers through the stems, producing a brown or black discoloration of the tissues and ultimately a complete breaking down or rotting of all the parts. Brown rot is caused by a bacillus, a minute organism, which multiplies in the tissues and through its action produces the effects mentioned.

Brown rot of the potato: wilting of stem and leaves and browning of tubers. Various insects, such as Colorado beetles, flea beetles, and blister beetles, serve as carriers of the disease. These insects may feed on a diseased plant, and in their visits to adjoining healthy ones infect the tissues through bites and possibly in other ways.

Treatment.—Throughout the South, namely, in South Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama, and adjacent states where this disease is known to occur, a thorough system of spraying, such as recommended for early blight, should be followed. In addition, all diseased vines should be removed and destroyed as soon as possible, and the tubers should be dug and either used at once or stored in a cool, dry place. In planting it would be well to avoid land which has just been used for tomatoes or egg-plants, and finally seed tubers from localities where the disease is absent should be used if practicable.

Disposing of Government Lands.

There is a strong growing sentiment in many sections in favor of allowing the Western states to have control of the public lands situated within their borders and lease them to stockmen, using the rental money for state improvements, such as building irrigation works, improving land, etc. The prejudice against allowing the government to cede the public lands to the states is so fixed that those who have favored this policy have reached the conclusion that they will never attain their end, but the rental proposition is a comparatively new idea, and meets with very general favor. Some of the new states have very small settled areas, and it is claimed that it is unfair that they should be imposed with the burden of policing in some cases as much as 90 per cent of the state, which is government land, and from which the state derives no visible benefit. If, however, this land should be leased for a nominal sum, it would do away with the range problem, which is becoming a serious matter in the West, now that there is not room enough for all the stockmen, and it would bring in a considerable revenue to the states and territories. Legislatures of new states are prone sometimes to do very foolish things, but it is argued that whatever they did with the money derived from the leases they could only squander the incomes while the title to the land would still remain with the general government until needed for actual settlement.

The Window Culture of Orchids.

Orchid culture is simple, but to understand the matter one must go into the principles of the culture, and know the difference in the nature of the cultivated orchids from most plants cultivated in glass houses or windows. There is no reason why one who grows window plants cannot grow orchids wherever other flowering plants are grown. I know one lady who grows cattleyas splendidly in an ordinary window. Orchids are the latest result of creative evolution in nature's floral kingdom—there are no fossil orchids—and are the most interesting of all flowering forms for the amateur to grow. Many of the most beautiful of all are to be bought at moderate prices, and an added interest in life would come to multitudes of people if they would take up the study and growing of the orchid.

To make a beginning one should secure a good manual of culture. By far the best practical manual on the subject is an English work by Barberry, orchid grower to the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, M. P., entitled the "Amateur Orchid Cultivator's Guide." An American edition of this work is soon to be issued by the Putnams, of New York. In a general way the points to be considered in the window culture of orchids are: First, that during the cooler season the plants are more or less inactive and need little water. Second, that during the warm season, when growth is more rapid, the roots should be more or less continually surrounded by moist air. Third, that provision should be made to protect the roots from becoming dry during the period of growth, yet allow a much more free contact with air than is usual in the case of most other plants; this is accomplished by the nature of the receptacle in which the plants are grown—by using a fibrous peat and moss for potting soil and by frequent waterings and dippings. Unless fresh rainwater, or other water containing the necessary fertilizing elements, is used to feed orchids there will be a gradual degeneration in the constitution of the plants; but this is a minor matter in the culture of a few plants which can be replaced at small expense. Cattleyas will usually survive a starving treatment for ten or more years. Orchids are less particular about the architectural nature of their abode than any other plants. Enclosed windows or porch conservatories answer well.—Vicks.

Bean Culture.

The small white varieties of beans are the most easily raised and most prolific, ripening better and harder. They bear distant shipping or long voyages better than the narrow or roundish sorts, or the long or kidney beans, but the latter sell much higher in market. The navy beans average twenty bushels per acre; all kinds vary in production according to the season. The narrow are considered by some the most uncertain, but in other respects the most desirable.

In growing beans, it is more an object to obtain seed than vines; to succeed requires judgment as well as a favorable season. Too rich land inclines the vines to run too much to blossom after the first pods have ripened. Growers have succeeded best upon sod plowed down shallow; the second year yielding the best, with a light cast of manure sowed broadcast. They should not be worked while the dew is on, less they become rusty. The vines have a longer root than the potato.—Up-to-Date Farming.

A Convenient Device.

The accompanying illustration will give a good idea of how a box can be constructed that will greatly facilitate the filling of grain sacks. It is furnished at the top of one side with heavy hooks, by which it can be hung onto the top of the bin boards. At the bottom of the box are other hooks that hold the bag. The grain can then be shoveled into the bags with ease and without a second person to "hold the bag."

Moles in the Garden.—Various methods are adopted to destroy or drive away moles. Some persons appear to be able to use mole traps to good advantage, while others are not so successful with them, probably because they do not give the needed attention. It is said that kerosene oil poured into a mole run, and then covered up, will drive the creatures away. Bisulphide of carbon will kill them if it reaches them; pour into the mole run about a gill of carbon bisulphide and immediately cover it over; the fumes will penetrate the runs for some distance and will kill the moles if present. Small bits of meat containing a very little strychnine will kill the animals if eaten by them. Grains of corn soaked in strychnine and water and placed in the runs are also said to be destructive if eaten.—Vick's Magazine.

The Care of Colts.—One important thing for a breeder to understand is the care of colts. Let them get all the exercise they need out of doors. Oats are the proper feed for colts, and they should have plenty of them. When a colt is brought up in a "feast and famine" sort of a way he will not make a nice smooth horse.—F. J. Berry.

TWENTY BODIES RECOVERED.

Insane Rush for a Steamer at Bar Harbor, Maine, Results in a Fearful Calamity—People Were Eager to See the Nation's Warships.

Twenty unknown dead, others unaccounted for, and fifty injured is the disaster that is indirectly chargeable to the warships of the North Atlantic squadron—a far greater fatality than ensued on these ships during the war with Spain. A landing stage at Bar Harbor, Maine, collapsed under the weight of scores of sightseers, and they were thrown into the water, many of them to their deaths.

The first regular train from Bangor, carrying about 1,000 or more excursionists, came into Mount Desert ferry. The crowd, in rushing to board the steamer Sappho, which connects the ferry with Bar Harbor, gathered 200 or more upon the landing stage, and the strain prov-

DEFENDING RIGHTS OF AUTHORS.

Miss Margaret Lee of Brooklyn has instituted a movement for the repeal of the copyright law now in force, by which the author's right to his books ceases to exist forty-two years after publication. "The idea suggested itself to me," she said, "on seeing a chance newspaper statement that several large editions of works by American authors, copyrighted previous to 1857, were soon to be issued. It seemed to me a scandalous thing that the writers, several of whom are still living, should have no profit from the transaction. Marion Harland, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, Donald G. Mitchell are names that occur to me without stopping to think, and without doubt there are many others. The law is sixty-eight years old, and is old fog to the last degree."

ing too great, it broke, throwing the mass of people into the water about the pilings. At a late hour twenty bodies had been recovered and fifty of the injured are being looked after at the Hotel Bluffs.

Most of the visitors were from Bangor, Bucksport, Brewer, Ellsworth, Orono, Hancock and the many small towns that line the East Division.

Fowl Cholera in Italy.

Italy has for the past few months been suffering from an epidemic of cholera, and since November there have been two million deaths in the neighborhood of Milan alone. That is rather an alarming state of things, though the scourge is not a visitation of the human race, but merely afflicts the barnyard. Chicken farming, it seems, is a comparatively new industry in Italy, and this outbreak of cholera among the fowls, which is probably due to some easily preventable cause, is naturally causing very serious trouble and anxiety to those engaged in rearing them. The disease has spread to the Royal Park at Monza, and two thousand birds, chiefly pheasants, have already been laid low. As pheasant is a favorite article of diet with the king, he is greatly concerned, and when he heard of the two thousand deaths in his own hen house he is said to have exclaimed: "I shall have to turn vegetarian"—an incident which ought to bring comfort and joy to the devotees of the vegetable cult. The epidemic in Italy will doubtless be viewed with considerable anxiety in countries which buy the products of the Italian barnyards. Italy's fowl exports are of a yearly value of fifty million francs.—Glasgow Evening News.

Feeding Colts.

The future usefulness of the colt depends upon nothing so much as the feed during the first year of its life, says Rural World. To be useful in any way a horse must have good bones, and, above all, good joints. Bones are built, like the rest of the body, from the feed consumed by the young animal, and if the food does not contain the elements essential to the growth of the bone, it is evident that there will be a weakness in this part of the organism. The milk from the dam contains a large proportion of the most necessary mineral substances, such as lime, but the colt seems to require much more in a short time, and may be seen trying to supplement this limited supply by taking occasional mouthfuls of soil. Probably no materials at the farmer's disposal contain more mineral or bone-forming material than bran and oats, and the colt should have plenty of these and good clover hay from the start. It is quite safe, as a rule, to give as much as two quarts of these concentrates mixed per diem as soon as the colt can be taught to eat them, and this may be gradually increased. The colt's temperament and character should be closely studied, however, and ration gauged accordingly. These concentrates and clover hay being rich in protein or flesh-forming material, sinew and tendon, as well as bone, and such are the great desiderata in colts. Feed liberally of the right kind of feed, and nature will do the rest so far as bodily development is concerned.

Inequality in Wear of Shoes.

Inequality of wear in the shoe is a fault for more than one reason, says the Maine Farmer. The horse who is prone to this method of shoeing is, without a single exception, bound to have swollen or puffed ankles. He cannot help it. Cannot any man see that wearing a shoe in this manner forces an extra strain on the lower ligaments and ankle joints? Yes, and on the other joints as well. This strain is bound to show its effects in the puffed ankle. Again, inequality of wear in the shoe is liable and often does cause corns, quarter cracks, knuckling and such ailments. The reason for the first two troubles is that the extra strain thrown on the inner part of the hoof is too much for it to stand, and, as a result of this unequal bearing and pressure, the trouble is made to appear, while in knuckling the trouble is forced by a weakness which is aggravated by the high inside heel and low outside, a complete and distinct inequality.

Clover Hay for Swine.

There are some who do not appreciate the value of clover hay for swine. It is to be regretted that such appreciation is not universal, says an exchange. It is not only valuable because of its high merit as a feed, but because of the bulk that it furnishes. No growing animal should be fed exclusively upon the grains. There should be some bulk furnished. Swine will eat dry clover hay with a relish, but the better way to feed it is to cut it up, steam it or pour hot water on it and mix with meal. Pasture, if it is the right kind of pasture, is nearly an essential in profitable swine raising. It should be clover pasture, but if it is not, it must be composed of short and tender grass.

Eternal Vigilance.—Any crumbs from the table are valuable for young chicks. Change of diet is requisite. Do not let the chicks get chilled, as they are of no earthly use after that. I hear people say, "Oh, I can't bother that way. It is too much trouble." Well, I go into poultry houses where lice get onto me in a moment. I say those people have no business to have chickens. Our chicks will show it and it pays. Eternal vigilance is the price of chicks—good ones, and I would want no others.—Mrs. Curry, in Pacific Poultryman.

Concentration of Capital.
Whether the reported agreement of two of the wealthiest and most important railroads in the country is virtually a consolidation of interests or only an understanding to lessen the rivalry, the movement shows the prevailing tendency in industrial and financial operations toward the concentration of capital and power in a few hands. That ultimately these two roads will be governed by the same policy and directed by the same brains there is no good reason to doubt, and such control will mean the swallowing up or at least the additional control of many lesser roads that are now mere feeders. The attempt is made to show that there is not the slightest danger of this combination raising the rates and therefore that the public can suffer no inconvenience or loss. But this argument is quite wide of the mark and affects only the immediate convenience of the public. What is sure to present itself to the mind of the thinking man is not the temporary effect upon rates, but the problem back of it all that is involved in such enormous concentration of power. One has only to extend the present tendency of capital to a certain point in the future to imagine a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller the virtual director of all the railroads, or of all the industries in the United States, and the real question is, Can such an aggregate of power in the hands of one man be accomplished without perils to the community? But while this process of concentration is going on there is a parallel movement in labor itself to become defensively massed. There is now an effort making to federate all the railroad employees of the United States with kindred and associative forms of labor. The employees of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad have already begun this movement. They are forming a federation of all branches of the employees of the road. On the success of this movement will depend the formation of other federations on other roads and finally the centralization of all unions in one federation representing 126,000 men. It is not possible to watch these concurrent movements without speculating upon the gravity of the ultimate outcome.

It is not unpleasant to see so many gracious things said by the press of Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth, the aged novelist, who has just died. It is true enough that she wrote a great deal more than was possible for anybody who writes at the top of his voice. But she never wrote anything that she felt sorry for afterward. Much of it was thin in the purely intellectual sense, but all of it was clean romanticism of an old and entertaining school, which never undertook to shock anybody or kick over the traces of conventional propriety. We might as well give her credit now for having written some pleasant tales that were more rivacious than Mr. E. P. Roe's without his smug canting. Thousands upon thousands of her books have been read by the generation which is passing out, and that generation must have been diverted and perhaps gently influenced, though it may never have been stimulated and was assuredly never perverted. The girl that read everything that Mrs. Southworth wrote is, so far as reading goes, as good as ever she was. Can that be said of the girl who has read everything that Ouida has written or any one of the things that Laura Jean Libby fancied she had written?

It might be a good business plan for conventions, congresses, unions and such like assemblages of people to provide a competent business manager who will keep the expenses within the resources of the committee and not speculate on the generosity and hospitality of those cities that they visit. The musical festival lately held in Cincinnati was a financial failure because its expectations were too high. The descent of the Christian Endeavorers upon Detroit has resulted in a similar disappointment. The city expected a great many more of them than arrived, and the Endeavorers expected a great deal more of the city than they received. Such vast schemes of hospitality as are involved in rushing 10,000 or 20,000 people upon a town are very apt to go wrong, and societies wishing to make a demonstration and at the same time enjoy themselves ought to proceed on business lines and not on picnic notions.

The enthusiastic Frenchmen who rushed with their hats in their hands to salute the German emperor when he visited their French schoolship evidently thought that he had come on a mission of peace and intended to make them an offering of Alsace Lorraine. When he omitted that little amenity they went back and pouted.

Might it not be a great improvement on the present method of selecting and using a presidential cabinet to dispense with that piece of furniture and let the president of the United States use the governors of the various states as his consulting and advising aids.

It looks very much as though President Kruger intended to beat time. The roll of the British drum has set him thinking and he is too sagacious an old party to try at this late day to break the British square.

The man who rode a mile a minute on a bicycle behind a locomotive belongs in the select group of unrelated beings who have undertaken to live without food for 40 days, who have climbed the highest glacier of Mount Blanc and have tried to prove the immortality of the soul by jumping from the Brooklyn bridge. He has proved once more to what enormous stress the human frame can be put when there is nothing to be gained by the putting of it.

Mr. William T. Stead, a particular friend of the czar, says that the peace conference at The Hague has counter-signed the confession of its own impotence, and democracy everywhere will recognize the imperial imbecility. All humanity can do is to wait. There will one of these days be a peace conference in Europe of the people themselves, and when they reason of righteousness all these monarchs will tremble.

It was to be hoped that the woman's international congress would escape the usual trouble of women's gatherings and be spared a disagreement. But it has followed the precedents left by so many similar assemblages. As it was intended to assemble all women who were working in diverse directions for the good of humanity, it invited the antisuffragist women to send representatives, which they did, and submitted a paper. This was received with hisses and catcalls and the speaker was treated so badly that the president, Mrs. Sewall, had to remind the body for its intolerance. The antisuffragists are now indignant at their treatment. They point out that the congress was called in the interest of all women to discuss all manner of questions affecting the sex, and they declare that the intolerance was one of the traits of the impulsive and radical members of their own sex.

The proposition to make an international park of the Thousand Islands has met with practical success so far. The scheme fits very well into the national temper at the present moment. Our government has already liberally set apart vast domains in the northwest and the southwest for the exclusive use of the nation in perpetuity, and these parks are virtually wonderlands. In adding another domain in the east the United States will have made a circuit of immense pleasure grounds which may, in the course of time, induce our people to become tourists in their own country, instead of rushing to Switzerland and the lesser natural delights of Europe.

There is some difference of opinion as to what kind of arguments should be used with Aginaldo. General Otis thinks that 30,000 men will be convincing, but General Miller is of the opinion that 60,000 men will be far more logical.

There are at this moment 28 titles of nobility in dispute in England, and the Court Journal estimates that there are between 100 and 200 unheard of Americans who are living in England at considerable expense in order to be on hand to pop into their dukedoms when the present incumbents die.

The kaiser's little coquetry with France is quite characteristic, and so is his attempt to make it appear that it is a move in the direction of peace. He thus tickles the czar and the French people at the same time.

LOVE AND LAW.

By the author of

"Is that all?" Miss Branscombe's look seemed to say, and her color came back and the frightened look faded out of her eyes. I wondered what she had dreaded.

Another gravely-eaten dinner was scarcely over when my summons came. Miss Branscombe started to her feet with a suppressed cry, and passed swiftly from the room before me.

"Only Mr. Fort, I was to say." The butler hesitated, looking anxiously at Miss Elmslie. "I beg your pardon, ma'am, but the message was particular."

"Poor dear child!" murmured Miss Elmslie, rising and looking helplessly at me. "What can I do? It—it is too late, I am afraid."

"Will you leave it to me?" I said gently. "Perhaps I can persuade Miss Branscombe."

"Yes, yes," she exclaimed, laying her trembling hand on my arm—"you will persuade her."

Those hours of anxious watching and enforced confidence had thrown down the barriers of unconventionality, and made us more intimate than months of ordinary intercourse would have done. Both the elder and the younger lady turned to me in their loneliness and their sorrow; already I had taken my place as a friend with them.

In the corridor outside the sick-room Miss Branscombe was standing in the recess of a window wringing her hands and sobbing pitifully.

"Mr. Fort," she exclaimed, "they will not let me see him! Tell him that I am here—surely they will not be so cruel as to let him die without a word to me at the last! And I was like his own child. I must—oh, I must see him again before—" Sobs choked her voice.

I placed her gently on the window-seat.

"If you will wait patiently for ten minutes, Miss Branscombe," I said, "I will come back for you."

"And Charlie, my cousin," she said—"you will not forget?"

ers; there were interviews with various personages, and commissions for Miss Elmslie, which filled up my time and gave me an excuse for postponing my departure. The truth was that I could not tear myself away. I had a confession to make to Miss Branscombe which I could not force upon her in the first hours of her sorrow, and which nevertheless must be made. It was not likely that the secret of Col. Branscombe's last will would be kept until the legitimate moment for its revelation; the executor, the rector, must act upon his instructions, one of which was to exclude Mr. Charles Branscombe from the house. I might perhaps, I flattered myself, soften the blow to Miss Branscombe, or at least I might give her an explanation which should mitigate her anger against myself, and account for what I dreaded she would regard as a breach of trust.

But Miss Branscombe remained invisible. Her cousin reported that she was quite overcome by her grief, and would not as yet hear of consolation.

The day, which had been brilliantly fine in the early part, clouded over toward the afternoon, and rain—a gentle, balmy summer rain—fell softly, but without intermission. The change was more in unison with the spirit of the moment and the hushed silence of the darkened house; and as I sat in the library, busied with some writing for Miss Elmslie, the musical rhythm of the raindrops, pattering softly down on the laurel and berberis leaves outside the open window, seemed to me like tears shed for a good man's loss.

Miss Elmslie came in and out with a hushed tread, and gave me instructions in a subdued voice, sometimes staying to talk of the dead man upstairs—of his virtues and consistent life, his trials and disappointments—and, at last, in natural sequence, of Charlie, the scapegrace, and of Nona, the child of Col. Branscombe's youngest brother.

"Poor Charlie," she said, shaking her head. "He was always the one bitter drop in Harold Branscombe's the gentle old lady babbled on of the stories of the house, I sat just behind the lace curtains at the open window, looking out over the lawn toward the encircling belt of shrubbery. It was a dark moonless summer night, and late enough now for the shrubs to show blackly against the pale sky-line.

I had quite lost the thread of Miss Elmslie's somewhat monotonous talk, dreaming as I was of many things, with a pervading sense of vague pain and unrest new to my experience, and due perhaps to the melancholy scenes in which I had just taken part.

Suddenly it seemed to me that a white shadow flitted across the bottom of the lawn toward the trees, and was lost in the darkness. Was it fancy? I wondered, looking intently toward the spot where the figure had disappeared. I was not subject to fancies of this kind, and I at once made up my mind to investigate the phenomenon.

With an excuse to Miss Elmslie, I went to the hall for my overcoat, and, letting myself out by a side door, I made my way cautiously over the grass to the spot where I had seen—or fancied I had seen—the white form appear and disappear.

There was nothing but the shadows and the trees and the pattering of the soft-falling raindrops on the green leaves. So my eyes, keen and sure as I had always considered them, had played me false. I turned back toward the house, taking this time one of two or three narrow winding paths within the wood. My footsteps made no sound on the damp grass-grown ground. All at once the perfume of a cigar was wafted toward me. Then I was not alone in the darkness; somebody else had a fancy for an evening airing—one of the gardeners or workmen, no doubt, on his way from some errand at the Hall. But the shrubberies lay in the front of the house, while the servants' offices were all, as I knew, at the back. And, besides, my educated senses told me that that cigar was of the finest quality, not likely to be smoked by any but a connoisseur. The rector was a non-smoker, and no other neighbor would, I knew, have the entrée to the shrubbery.

My curiosity was thoroughly roused, and the instinct of my profession enlisted in the discovery of the little mystery.

Presently the sound of subdued voices—a man's and a woman's—reached my ears. Then I had not been fancy-tricked—some assignation of a tender nature had lured the fitting figure hitherward—a maid-servant from the house, no doubt. But the fine Havana? Well, that was no affair of mine; I would not at all events play the eavesdropper.

It was in carrying out this laudable resolve that I turned into another path—a shorter cut to the house, as I believed, in my slight knowledge of the place. It must however have brought me nearer to the lovers, for now the manly voice was so raised that the subject of what appeared to be an angry discussion only just missed meeting my ears, and sobs from the female were distinctly audible. The course of true love was not running smoothly, I concluded, as I retraced my steps. At this moment the sobs ceased and a feminine voice took up the response, pleading, remonstrant, and I was conscious of a sudden shock which brought me to a standstill. The sweet, low tones were familiar to me—they were those of Nona Branscombe.

Nona Branscombe, my ideal of innocence and womanly purity, my impression of Una, keeping a clandestine appointment at night—with her uncle's corpse hardly yet cold, too! hoodwinking her chaperon with a pretense of illness and overwhelming grief! Oh, the shame and the pity of it! Oh, the shame and the pity!

I did not stop to ask myself why the blow should be such a crushing one to me—why a doubt of the innocence and goodness of Nona Branscombe should seem to make the world stand still, and plunge my whole outlook into darkness; I hurried blindly back to the house, losing myself half a dozen times among the tortuous shrubbery paths and shaking the raindrops from the laden branches in heavy showers as I went. I had reached the terrace on which the side door by which I had quitted the house opened, my hand was on the lock, when another applicant for admittance glided out of the shadows and stood by my side.

FALLS FROM HIGH TRESTLE.

Crowded Trolley Car Drops Into a Deep Ravine.

THIRTY PASSENGERS KILLED.

New Line to Bridgeport, Conn., the Scene of the Disaster—Thirty-Six Bodies Recovered, and Others May Be Buried in the Mud.

A trolley car containing upward of forty passengers, bound for Shelton, went over a trestle fifty feet high at Peck's Mill stream, about five miles from Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 6, and thirty dead bodies have been taken from the ruins.

Car No. 2 of the Milford Street Railroad company left Bridgeport, filled with passengers, who were taking a Sunday afternoon trolley ride for pleasure.

Most of the passengers were residents of Bridgeport, though there were some from Derby, Shelton and Ansonia, the last named the northern terminus of the road.

About 500 yards from Peck's Pond bridge there is a down grade in the road. When the car, which was loaded with about forty-five passengers, struck the eastern end of the bridge, the wheels of the forward truck on the right-hand side jumped the track. The car plunged on a huffed feet out on the bridge, the front car wheels tearing up the flooring of the trestle.

When out on the bridge fully 100 feet from the place where it was first derailed the front trucks took a quick turn to the right, and in a moment the car, with its forty or more passengers, had toppled over the right side of the bridge and fallen into the bed of the pond below.

The car turned completely over in dropping the fifty feet to the ground below and the two heavy trucks, each with a motor attached to it weighing 1,200 pounds, came down on top of the passengers and crushed the life out of them.

The few who got outside of the car as it was falling were badly injured and most of them are expected to die.

Arrest of Motorman Hamilton.

Motorman George Hamilton was arrested on a warrant issued by Coroner Donlin and locked up to await the action of the coroner's jury. He is accused of criminal carelessness in running the car too fast on the steep grade.

The veterans of '61 and '65 and their friends who are going to attend the thirty-third G. A. R. annual encampment at Philadelphia in September could not select a better nor more historic route than the Big Four and Chesapeake & Ohio, with splendid service from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis on the Big Four, all connecting at Indianapolis or Cincinnati, and thence over the picturesque Chesapeake & Ohio, along the Ohio river to Huntington, W. Va.; thence through the foothills of the Alleghenies over the mountains, through the famous springs region of Virginia to Staunton, Va., between which point and Washington are many of the most prominent battlefields—Waynesboro, Gordonsville, Cedar Mountain, Rappahannock, Kettle Run, Manassas, Bull Run, Fairfax and a score of others nearly as prominent. Washington is next, and thence via the Pennsylvania Line direct to Philadelphia. There will be three rates in effect for this business—first, continuous passage, with no stop-over privilege; second, going and coming same route, with one stop-over in each direction; third, circuitous route, going one way and back another, with one stop-over in each direction. Ingersoll's "At Last."

Did Robert G. Ingersoll die as he would have wished to die, had he been able to dictate? This question is being widely discussed in view of the quick passing of the noted agnostic. He certainly died as in his essay on "Life" he pictured ideal death, for therein he said: "At last, sitting by the holy hearth of home, as evening's embers change from red to grey, he falls asleep within the arms of her he worshipped and adored, feeling upon his pallid lips love's last and holiest kiss."

The completion of the million and a half dollar terminals of the Burlington Railroad at Quincy, Ill., marks an important stage in the development of that system. It was only five years ago that the road built into St. Louis, and established there an enormous freight yard, with a capacity of 3,000 cars. Elsewhere, at Chicago, St. Paul, Kansas City and Denver, the Burlington has facilities for handling freight and passengers that are unexcelled.

The twelfth national census will be taken next year and it is estimated that it will show a population of over 77,000,000 in the United States.

"MR. FORT," SHE EXCLAIMED, "THEY WILL NOT LET ME SEE HIM."

"I have not forgotten," I answered as I left her.

It was soon over. The Colonel had reached a further stage in the dark journey, and the clergyman who sat by his side guided the hand which affixed a tremulous signature to the deed I had drawn up in the morning. It was the Rector and a young footman, who witnessed the signature, and then the Colonel spoke this time in a whisper. "Now—send her to me. Stand by her—all of you—she will—need it."

There were old friends—old servants there, but it was on my arm that Miss Branscombe leaned as she went to that solemn parting scene—I remembered it afterwards. It was a brief and agonizing farewell, for the sands of life were almost run out, and then the new mistress of Forest Lea was borne insensible from the chamber where all that remained of the brave old Colonel was only the mortal dust—the immortal spirit had fled.

CHAPTER V.

The first stage of my work was accomplished, and I might have returned to town at once, but I did not—I lingered at Forest Lea through the next day. There were seals to affix to all the dead colonel's cabinets and draw-cup. He idolized the boy—such a beautiful angelic-looking creature—he was so like the sister poor Harold loved and never forgot—and he spared neither trouble nor expense in his education. Charlie was to be the heir, to carry on the old name. And Nona—well, he had his hopes and dreams for the dear girl. But Charlie ruined all; he nearly broke poor Harold's heart, and upset all his plans. Nothing could mend the boy; there seems to be a sort of mad fever in his blood—I don't know where he gets it. He's as wild to-day as he was six years ago. Only Nona—in her youth and inexperience, dear child!—clings to the hope of his ever being better. All the rest of us have long since given him up."

"Miss Branscombe is attached to her cousin," I ventured.

"They have been like brother and sister, you know," Miss Elmslie replied quietly. "Nona cannot give him up. But there is the dinner bell." She seemed glad to change the conversation, I thought.

Miss Branscombe did not appear at the dinner table. The evening was still wet, but close and sultry. Miss Elmslie and I took tea together in the large drawing room, which looked so empty and desolate now; and, while

Ayer's Hair Vigor

What does it do?
It causes the oil glands in the skin to become more active, making the hair soft and glossy, precisely as nature intended.

It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and thus removes one of the great causes of baldness.

It makes a better circulation in the scalp and stops the hair from coming out.

It Prevents and It Cures Baldness

Ayer's Hair Vigor will surely make hair grow on bald heads, provided only there is any life remaining in the hair bulbs.

It restores color to gray or white hair. It does not do this in a moment, as will a hair dye; but in a short time the gray color of age gradually disappears and the darker color of youth takes its place.

Would you like a copy of our book on the Hair and Scalp? It is free.

If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Vigor write the Doctor about it. Address, DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

LATEST ILLINOIS NEWS.

Governor Tanner May Attend.
Springfield—Governor Tanner may be present at the meeting of union railroad men from all parts of the state to be held in this city Aug. 16 and 17. A telegram was sent to Governor Tanner at Yellowstone park, urging him to return in time to address the meeting, and he has replied, stating that he will cut short his stay at that point and proceed on his trip, making every possible effort to arrive home on the night of Aug. 16, several days earlier than was calculated upon when the itinerary was laid out. The committee on arrangements is busy perfecting plans for the meeting, and for the successful entertainment of the 400 railroad men who are expected to be present. The meeting will embrace members of the Order of Railway Trainmen, Order of Railway Conductors, Order of Locomotive Firemen and Order of Locomotive Engineers. The object of the gathering is to express views and advance ideas to better the condition of railway employees.

Returned To Carroll County.
Joliet—Leslie A. Gilmore, the Chicago attorney, who is making such a valiant fight to get out from under the penitentiary sentence given him in Carroll county, and who was the central figure in the proceedings before Judge Dibell last week, was this morning taken back to Carroll county by virtue of the writ of supersedeas granted him by the court. Since the order was made Gilmore has been in jail here waiting for the proper papers to be made out. The Carroll county sheriff arrived this morning and Gilmore was taken before Judge Dibell and formally given again into the charge of Sheriff Oberheim, with instructions to return him to the Carroll county jail to await further developments. Gilmore is making strenuous efforts to complete his briefs and abstracts this week so as to place his case in shape to appeal to Judge Dibell for release under bond.

Married at Midnight.
Waukegan—The unusual feature of a midnight wedding of Chicago parties occurred at Hotel Washburn last night. The principals were Robert M. Bailey and Miss Marie S. Robertson. They had gone to Milwaukee by steamer, only to find that speedy weddings were no more to be had there. They then turned to Waukegan and arrived here last night. The courthouse was closed, and County Clerk Hendee was away. Finally, at 11 p. m., they were able to rouse Deputy Clerk Brockway from his bed and induce him to visit the office and make out the license. The Rev. W. R. Andereck, the Baptist minister, was also aroused, and consented to perform the ceremony, so, after a whole day of trouble, the marriage was finally solemnized. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey left early today for Chicago. Each is about 35 years of age.

Bennitt's Men Need Drilling.
Springfield, Ill., telegram: Col. Louis E. Bennitt's Egyptians need hard drilling to bring them out and show up their strength as military men. Col. Bennitt said that the regiment would be drilled both morning and afternoon, and that the rifle practice would be cut short in order to have more time for the drill. Before the end of the week, however, every man will have had a chance to shoot for two hours. Gen. Horace S. Clark, commanding the Second brigade of the Illinois National Guard, will arrive at Camp Lincoln tomorrow, and will spend the remainder of the week with the regiment. Governor's day this week will be Wednesday.

Dies from Effect of a Blow.
Freeport—Frank Bolliet died in the hospital here from the effects of a blow said to have been given him by Patrick English on July 27. Bolliet, who was a stranger in town, became involved in a saloon row with English, and the latter, it is said, in resentment of an epithet, struck the stranger a blow in the face. Bolliet fell heavily, striking his head on a cement sidewalk. He was taken to the hospital unconscious and remained in that condition for twenty-four hours. He finally recovered sufficiently to give his name and say that his home was in Ohio. He was about 45 years of age. English is in jail.

Central Illinois Assembly.
Moweaqua, Ill., telegram: The ninth annual session of the Lithia Springs Chautauqua, which will be held on the grounds southeast of this city Aug. 10 to 27, inclusive, promises to surpass all previous assemblies. The seating capacity of the auditorium has been enlarged to 5,000, and the number of tents has been increased. Large delegations are expected from several of the big cities.

Requisition Honored.
Springfield—Acting Governor Northcott today honored the requisition of Governor Shaw of Iowa for David D. Martin, under arrest in Chicago and wanted at Marshalltown, Iowa, on a charge of obtaining money and property to a total value of $1,200 by fraud. He is charged with having exchanged bogus deeds to Kansas real estate to R. W. Melick of Marshalltown.

"AS ADVERTISED."

South American Interprets This Phrase with Great Strictness.
"An advertiser has to stick to the truth in South America," said a representative of a large shipping concern to a New Orleans Times-Democrat reporter. "I know that seems incredible, but it's absolutely so. Some years ago a dealer in New Orleans sent an assorted lot of patent medicines to an American agent at Santiago, Chili. Among the stuff was a lot of toothache drops, which were warranted on the bottle to cure the worst case of toothache in ten minutes. Here nobody would take such an assertion seriously, but down there it is different. The first man who bought a bottle made an immediate application, and then pulled out his watch. When ten minutes elapsed and the tooth calmly continued to ache he was furious and at once had the agent arrested. The poor fellow was fined $1,000 and sentenced to three months in jail. Through the efforts of the American consul the imprisonment was knocked off, but he had to pay the fine, and it broke him up in business. That story is absolutely true, as can be testified to by a dozen people now in the city. It is sad to fancy the effect on commercial circles generally if such a law was enforced in the United States."

MISSING LINKS.

There are many fishes that in captivity seem to follow some definite course in their movements, as, for instance, they may swim round and round the tank in one direction. The goldfish, however, in its moving about, appears to be a sort of aimless fish; it goes down to the bottom and up to the top and criss-cross and every which way, and moving commonly rather sluggishly.

During the continuance of the National Export Exposition, in Philadelphia, next fall, the city hall will be brilliantly illuminated. This structure is the highest building in the world, towering 547 feet above the ground, and is also considered one of the handsomest buildings in the United States. At present there is a rim of lights around the base of the statue of William Penn, which surmounts the structure, and they can be seen at a distance of thirty miles. Before the exposition opens a ring of arc lights will be placed around the rim of Penn's hat, over 500 feet above the pavement, and long strings of incandescent lights will run from there to the roof of the building. Every cornice will be studded with lights, and all sides of the massive building will be emblazoned by beautiful designs in colored lights. It will be one of the most dazzling electric displays ever attempted in this country.

A member of the Louisville bar named Simmonson was in the habit of imitating the opposing witnesses, whom, when they came to be cross-examined, he harassed in every imaginable manner. The last witness he took in hand was a tall, lank farmer, with a thoughtful eye. He had watched the bawling of his neighbors in dead silence, and took the stand with perfect composure. Simmonson evidently set him down as a lout, and when the witness hesitated over some question a moment he roared: "What are y' studying about? 'Fraid of telling a lie, too, I suppose?" Without any apparent haste the country man picked up a massive inkstand and hurled it straight at Simmonson's head, catching him on the bridge of the nose and knocking him senseless. "That's what I was a-studyin' about," he drawled, in the moment of dead silence that followed the act. Needless to say, a tremendous hubbub ensued, but everybody was secretly pleased and while the judge fined the farmer heavily for contempt he subsequently remitted the sentence.—Chicago Law Journal.

Lesle Majeste in England.

Among the most notable expressions of loyalty on the occasion of the queen's birthday was that of a salesman in Leadenhall Market who displayed her majesty's portrait between two royal standards in a grove of pork and sausages, supported by two fine hams emblazoned with the letters "V. R." A loyal radical, from whom I have this information, professes himself to have been greatly shocked at this display, more particularly the appearance of the royal monogram "upon the most ignoble portion of the pig's anatomy." But I have seen a "V. R." in other positions nearly as strange. We must look in the spirit rather than the letter.—London Truth.

Now a Proper Term.

Now that the Countess of Warwick has opened her needlework shop in Bond street, London, she can with justice lay claim to being a genuine "saleslady." Her establishment so far has been crowded with the members of nobility, and each visitor has made a purchase of some sort, whether it was needed or not.

An Unique Institution.
If there were more men in the world like Elbert Hubbard of East Aurora, N. Y., it would be a good deal more prosperous and the theater of a good deal less discontent. Mr. Hubbard was and still is a prosperous stock-breeder. Some years ago, with an object in view, he established the Roycroft Shop in his little village, and began the publication of the "Phyllis," a periodical that is absolutely unique in matter and make-up. In the production of the magazine he enlisted the services of the young men of the village, and very soon they became more interested in the art preservative than they had even been in billiards. Very naturally the village girls were also interested and became enthusiastic in the art of book illustration. The "Phyllis," which is known everywhere, in its make-up is one of the most artistic of periodicals, and the books bearing the imprint of the Roycroft Shop are as nearly faultless as books can well be made. The Roycrofts now not only print, illumine and bind books, but they produce artistic pieces of furniture, beautiful things in iron, and pottery of no mean quality. About a hundred workers are engaged, and the idea is to give congenial employment to every young man and woman in the village who wants to work. Good wages are paid, and besides this profits are divided at the end of the year. If all this is not Christian Civilization in the best sense, where will you find it?—From the St. John (N. B.) Gazette.

LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 32,401
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—For some time I have thought of writing to you to let you know of the great benefit I have received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Soon after the birth of my first child, I commenced to have spells with my spine. Every month I grew worse and at last became so bad that I found I was gradually losing my mind."
"The doctors treated me for female troubles, but I got no better. One doctor told me that I would be insane. I was advised by a friend to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and before I had taken all of the first bottle my neighbors noticed the change in me."
"I have now taken five bottles and cannot find words sufficient to praise it. I advise every woman who is suffering from any female weakness to give it a fair trial. I thank you for your good medicine."—MRS. GERTRUDE M. JOHNSON, JONESBORO, TEXAS.

Robertson's lawn Thursday afternoon, the occasion being a party given by three of the Sunday school teachers of the Baptist church to their scholars. Games were provided for the children and Cora Jahnke and Ellory Thorp were awarded prizes. A luncheon was served on a long table, which was handsomely decorated, on the lawn. Before leaving all gathered in the parlors of Mrs. Robertson's beautiful home and sang "America." The annual picnic of the M. E. Sunday school was held on Thursday at Randall's lake. The young people and children left Barrington about 9 o'clock in the morning to spend the entire day in the grove and on the lake. Refreshments were served free of charge to all the Sunday school scholars. At noon all enjoyed a bountiful dinner. In the afternoon games of various kinds, swinging and boating were engaged in to the delight of both old and young. All who attended declared it was the most enjoyable picnic given by the school. Games were indulged in and a good time was had by all. A new idea for the choice of partners for supper was introduced and caused much merriment. At a late hour the merry-makers bid their hosts good night and wended their way homeward to dream over the delightful time that they had enjoyed.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. Wilson, Livestockman, Burgettsville, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

An Editor Finds a Sure Cure for Rheumatism.

A. R. De Fluert, editor of the Journal, Doylestown, Ohio, suffered for a number of years with rheumatism in his right shoulder and side. He says: "My right arm at times was entirely useless. I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and was surprised to receive relief almost immediately. The Pain Balm has been a constant companion of mine ever since and it never fails." For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

The Prevalent Pistol.

The case of the lad who recently picked up a loaded pistol and playfully shot his mother and his infant sister, killing them both, in Topeka, is unfortunately only one of hundreds of such cases that are continually reported, and they are all attributable to the prevalence of the pistol in every walk of life. There is no nation on earth which in its daily intercourse insists upon carrying firearms, except the American, and the mere familiarity with the pistol has led to innumerable mishaps that have ruined the peace of families forever. In nearly all civilized communities where law and order prevail the pistol is a superfluity and a menace. It is said that in a recent assemblage of gentlemen some one called for a Testament in order to decide a dispute, but nobody could produce one. Later, by way of experiment, a pistol was called for, and every man in the party produced one, and this was not in the west. In some of the larger cities the men who sell firearms acknowledge that their best customers are boys.

There must be something about the Hon. David B. Henderson of Iowa that transcends politics, for very few men who have become candidates for high positions have met with so little opposition as he when he was selected for the candidate of the majority for the speakership of the house. Quite irrespective of party lines and in utter obliviousness of sectional differences there was a very general assent to the proposition that he was the best man for the place in his party. To recapitulate, his services will not altogether account for this. There are other men who have served their country and the people assiduously and well, but their names have aroused all kinds of opposition. Mr. Henderson's name appears to have disarmed acrimony and taken the sharp edge off party lines. The ready acquiescence of the east in this selection of a western man to occupy what is unquestionably the most conspicuous and the most important position next to that of the executive is another significant fact. Colonel Henderson is very generally looked upon by the country as first of all a man of incorruptible character, whose talents have made him a leader of men, and it is worth recording that when such men are well advanced to the front party lines are broken into by that instinctive loyalty which every man feels for a natural and gifted leader.

Mme. Bernhardt's appearance in England in the Shakespearean role of Hamlet has opened again the old English theme, Can the Frenchman understand Shakespeare? And Max Beerbohm has uttered a good thing in pointing out that the words and phrases of the English masters are so solid that they cast shadows which a Frenchman, who desires to look through everything to the other side, cannot understand. This is an excellent characterization of the Miltonic and Shakespearean English, as it is also an abiding merit of the King James Bible. That form of literature has the charm of substance. The French have never cared for it, mainly because it lacked transparency and vivacity. Hugo, it is true, has imaginative solidity, but Hugo is not so typical of the French temperament as Rousseau and Renan and Pierre Loti, all of whom charm us with an evasive sentimentality. No better illustration of the chasm between Latin and Saxon taste can be found than in the fact that the English stage never attempts Balzac, and the French stage should never attempt Shakespeare.
