This making of hideous noises by the small boys every time a wedding party returns to town has become somewhat of a nuisance. The boys have gone to some places where they were asked to leave, but persisted in their noise until paid to leave.

Ernest Beutler had to return from the camp at Grand Haven the first of the week on account of sickness. He brought a "kissing bug" with him which had stung him on the lip. We don't see why they should need one of these insects with so many girls in camp.

Taylor of this place, was placed at the head of the organization by being elected County Chancellor. C. E. Julian was elected County Sentinel and A. S. Olms was made a member of the board of directors. Fourteen courts are represented and Palatine has the largest membership with the exception of one Chicago court.

Fire destroyed the barn back of Mrs. West's cottage in the north part of town Friday night of last week. How the fire originated is a mystery. The alarm was turned in from the stand pipe signal station and the fire department quickly responded to the alarm. The necessity of better fire protection for that portion was apparent from the start, as the fire could not be reached from the nearest fire plug and the engine was useless on account of lack of hose. The Burlingame barn was wet down and the fire smothered before the firemen had gone home. A large amount of furniture belonging to Mrs. Peters, which was stored in the barn, was totally destroyed.

The fire had its origin, it is thought, in the Merchants' cafe, adjoining the Bank of Victor, Third street and Victor avenue. A strong wind from the south fanned the flames, and in a few minutes all the surrounding houses were afire.

DEMOCRATIC CHIEFTAIN COMING HOME.

Word received from Europe is to the effect that the commander-in-chief of the Democratic party, Senator James K. Jones of Arkansas, will soon return and resume his place at the head of the national committee. He wanted to stay away until December, but at the urgent request of his lieutenants in every state, has decided to return in September.

Creek, but the town had been built in the early days of the camp and was of pine timber for the most part, and burned like paper. Efforts were made to stop the progress of the flames by blowing up buildings in their path, and the hills roared with the explosions, but the effort was in vain.

The residence portion of the city has suffered little, but the business part is paralyzed, and suffering is bound to follow.

LATEST ILLINOIS NEWS.

He Rides on a Rail.

Carey telegram: William Antholtz, who was employed as a section foreman on the Chicago & Northwestern railway up to two weeks ago, was taken from the house of Mrs. Frank Hinseman by an indignant crowd of citizens Tuesday night, given a ducking under the town pump and a ride out of town on a rail, and warned never to return, under penalty of being tarred and feathered. Antholtz has a wife and family living here, and it is charged that he neglected them for Mrs. Hinseman, the wife of one of the section hands. Citizens, who had become disgusted with Antholtz's conduct, gathered in the main street, near the public square, and, after discussing the matter, decided to give him a coat of tar and feathers. Most of the crowd came prepared with masks. Concealing their features with these, the vigilants marched to the home of Mrs. Hinseman.

Mrs. John Selbach Missing.

Taylorville telegram: Mrs. John Selbach, wife of a wealthy farmer of Bear Creek township, has mysteriously disappeared from her home, and though hundreds of people, aided by trained bloodhounds, have kept up a search for her for the past twenty-four hours, no trace of her has been found. The bloodhounds were loosed at the Selbach residence and took the scent readily, but after running a short distance toward Bear Creek, which passes close to the house, crossed and recrossed their trail without effecting any results. About two months ago Mrs. Selbach was rescued from a well on the homestead after she had clung to the pump stock for several hours, and was almost exhausted. It was first supposed she had fallen into the well, but later developments led many to believe that she jumped into the well during a fit of mental aberration. Her family and friends now believe she has drowned herself in Bear creek.

Bishop Janssen Is Upheld.

Belleville, Ill., telegram: Special meetings of branches of the Catholic Knights of Illinois and the Western Catholic Union were held here Friday to take action on the St. Patrick's parish difficulties. Resolutions were unanimously adopted denouncing the attitude of the parishioners and their sympathizers toward Bishop Janssen, expressing confidence in him, and declaring for the necessity of upholding ecclesiastical authority.

Will Be Largest in America.

LaSalle, Ill., telegram: What will be the largest bituminous coal shaft in the United States was started this morning, four miles west of LaSalle, by the Spring Valley Coal Company. Big beds of coal were located by recent borings and the new mine will produce 2,000 tons daily and require 800 men to operate it, making it the largest in number of men employed in the state of Illinois.

To Form New Church Society.

Laporte, Ind., telegram: Delegates are beginning to arrive to attend the Young People's convention of the Chicago district of the Swedish Lutheran church, which will begin its sessions here tomorrow. The convention will organize an auxiliary society, which will have the same relation to the church as the Christian Endeavor and Epworth league to other religious bodies.

For Farmers' Congress.

Springfield, Ill., telegram: Gov. Tanner has appointed the following residents of Chicago as delegates to the farmers' national congress, which will meet at Boston in October: John M. Stahl, Charles H. Dolton, W. R. Goodwin, John M. Clark, James Franks, C. J. Lindeman, Sarah Steenberg, E. E. Critchfield, A. S. Core, Edward Chandler and C. O. Mills.

Mines to Resume Operations.

Pana, Ill., telegram: President John M. Hunter of the State United Mine-workers' Association of America was here Friday and, together with the local officers, held a consultation with Superintendent Broehl and Secretary Puterbaugh of the Pana Coal company. As a result it is authentically stated that the old mine will resume operations with union labor.

Fifth Illinois at Hard Work.

Springfield, Ill., telegram: Col. J. S. Culver is putting his Fifth infantry through hard work and expects to derive more benefit from the week of duty than any other regiment in the state militia. Thursday will be governor's day, and the regular routine will be abandoned and the ceremonies incident to that occasion will be carried out.

Broomecorn Will Be Lower.

Charleston telegram: Ten car loads of broom corn were shipped from this point eastward to-day. It was last year's crop, and the price paid was only $30 per ton. The harvesting of the new crop has now begun, and the startling price, which some thought would be $100, is likely to be not over $65.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Cucumber Melon Diseases.

The April bulletin of the Ohio Experiment Station thus summarizes the report of experiments in the treatment of cucumbers and melon diseases:

The cucumber pickle industry continues to increase in Ohio and the yields of pickles have been more satisfactory for 1898 than for the previous year. The abundant rains, well distributed, and the high mean temperatures for the growing months have contributed to this end.

The downy mildew of cucumbers and allied plants, Plasmopara Cubensis, has been fully as destructive to the plants during the season named as in 1897, but owing to the earlier harvesting of the crop the actual reduction of yields has been only about one-half as great from this cause.

Anthracnose of cucurbits, Colletotrichum Lagenarium, has increased in abundance and destructiveness. A wilt of cucumbers and muskmelons, referred to a species of Fusarium, has also prevailed, besides the usual wilt disease. Phyllosticta Cucurbitacearum and Cercospora Cucurbitae have also been found spotting cucumber leaves as well as Cercospora Citrullina upon watermelon foliage.

Co-operative spraying experiments upon a commercial scale have given an increase of seventy-five bushels per acre upon sprayed, compared with unsprayed cucumber pickle vines, attacked by downy mildew. The profits from this treatment were not so large as would have accrued from similar work in 1897, for reasons pertaining to earliness of crop.

The practicability of saving the late crop of cucumbers from downy mildew, by use of Bordeaux mixture, is fully demonstrated by the experiments made. Spraying for this purpose need not be begun earlier than July 25 to August 1. If a crop of pickles or cucumbers is harvested by August 15, spraying for downy mildew is not required.

Spraying of anthracnose, downy mildew and leaf blight of muskmelons is still recommended, although some failures are recorded.

Previous recommendations as to the treatment of late tomato plants with Bordeaux mixture to prevent tomato leaf blight, Septoria Lycopersici, are again repeated.

Stock for European Plums.

In some notes on plum culture published in a recent bulletin issued by the Colorado Experiment Station, Professor Charles S. Crandall says:

For the European plums such as Lombard, Green Gage, and Bradshaw probably no stock is better than seedlings of some variety of the species from which these varieties came—Prunus domestica. These have been in common use for many years, but in recent years have been in some degree superseded by Myrobalan stocks (seedlings of Prunus cerasifera, a species of European origin). Myrobalan stocks are in common use in European countries and have rapidly grown in favor with our nurserymen, not because better trees can be grown upon them, but because it is easier to secure good Myrobalan than good domestic stocks. Seeds of domestic varieties that will produce an even stand of stocks is difficult to obtain, and the Myrobalan, which is easier to grow and less liable to injury from parasitic fungi, offers an acceptable substitute. Some nurserymen import the seeds and grow their own stocks, others find it more profitable to import the seedlings. They are usually received during the winter, planted in nursery rows in spring, and budded in July and August. In the south the stocks in common use are the Marianne plum and peach, and very diverse opinions as to their relative merits have been expressed. Probably the differences arise from varying local conditions, for the testimony at hand indicates that, on the light and dry soils the peach stock does best, while the Myrobalan is better suited to the heavier and more moist soils. Even at the north the peach meets with some favor as a stock for plums on light soils, but it is too tender for districts where severe winters are common. For the native varieties, Wolf, Weaver, De Soto and other derivatives of Prunus Americana, the natural inference that Americana stocks would be best seems to be borne out by experience, but the degree of success may depend in a measure upon the seed used. The species is extremely variable in general habit and rapidity of growth as well as in the fruit produced.

Study the Soil.

For the economical application of fertilizers it is necessary to make something of a study of the soil. Clay soils as a rule contain sufficient potash but they are likely to need either nitrogen or phosphoric acid and are usually benefited by both. Complete fertilizers should not be applied by the farmer without reservation. They are only complete as they meet the requirements of his soil. On clay soils bone meal is usually a very effective fertilizer. It supplies phosphoric acid and potash and also lime, which usually exerts a beneficial mechanical effect on clay. Acid phosphates or South Carolina rock acts in the same way except that it contains no nitrogen. The average sandy soil is always deficient in all of the three principal fertilizing constituents. It is not only necessary to supply the soil therefore with nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash but organic matter will prove beneficial as well. If barnyard manure is not available plowing under green crops will serve the result. By a systematic method of rotation and pasturage together with the use of commercial fertilizers, sandy soils can be brought to the highest state of productivity. In the determination of what kind of a fertilizer and how much shall be applied to a particular soil the farmer must be his own guide—he must make his own field experiments and profit by them from year to year. Field experiments conducted in his same locality but on a heavy black soil, whereas his might be a light sandy soil, would be of little or no benefit to him. In a general way sandy soils are leachy and non-enduring while clay soils are of an enduring fertility, mainly because they do not wash excessively nor allow the water to leach from them the plant foods which they contain.

New Outlet for the Potato Crop.

Miners who have passed the winter in the Klondike, refer to a brand of evaporated potatoes sent from Canada which have proved very satisfactory as a substitute for fresh vegetables, says the Rural New Yorker. We learned that the Canadian company has various factories in this country and in Canada. One factory is run at Mayville, Mich. It started last fall with evaporated apples, and then made apple cider and apple jelly. When the apple season was finished, they began evaporating potatoes and kept at it nearly all winter, through the very coldest weather. The same company, we are told, evaporated peaches in Georgia earlier in the season. One of our friends in Mayville gives us the following information about this business:

"How are potatoes canned?"

"They are first washed and then put in a large vat or steamer and steamed just enough to loosen the skins. Then they are taken out and peeled by women and girls. After this they are cooked until thoroughly done, and then run through a machine shaped like a colander. They come through this in long, white strings very much resembling long worms or shredded cocoanut. After this they are evaporated and put up in tin cans and sealed air-tight."

"About how many potatoes were canned during the season?"

"Last year's run was about 5,000 bushels."

"Does this make any difference in the potato market for the neighboring farmers?"

"Yes, I think it does, although the farmers have no trouble in selling all the potatoes they grow, to the shippers. The canning factory helps to raise the price. Last winter, when the factory first started, the shippers were paying only 20 to 22 cents a bushel for potatoes. The factory's first contract was for 3,000 bushels at 25 cents. Of course the canners want the highest quality of potatoes. It is understood here that the factory had a contract with the United States government for all the potatoes that were canned last winter."

A New Ramie Plant.

The Agriculture Ledger of Calcutta, India, announces the discovery for the government of a plant described as similar but superior to ramie. Ramie furnishes an extremely fine, strong and valuable fiber, suitable for making fine, high-class textile goods, and the only thing which has operated to prevent its culture extensively in this country is the fact that it has to be degummed, which is always a costly process. This new kind of ramie, if it can be so called, is free from gum, and therefore does not, in its production, present that difficulty. The department of agriculture is investigating the subject, and is arranging to procure seed for trial and distribution. Mr. Jared G. Smith of the department states that a ramie which does not require degumming would, in all probability, prove a highly valuable acquisition, and its introduction might be the means of starting a new line of industry in the United States. Such a plant, he says, might to some extent replace hemp.

When beets are grown on soil not suitable to them they show it in their stumpy form and in having much of the beet developed above the ground rather than in it.

LIGHT UNDER THE RED FLAG.

Anarchists Lift Their Banner in the Streets of Paris.

POLICE BATTLE WITH THE MOB

Altars, Pulpits and Pictures Torn Down and Burned by the Mob—Even the Host Desecrated—Sixty Policemen Wounded.

Paris was the scene of most serious disturbances Sunday, Aug. 20, recalling some aspects of the commune.

The prefecture of police gives the following statistics of the riot: "Three hundred and eighty persons were injured. Three hundred and sixty were taken to the hospitals. Fifty-nine police agents were wounded, besides Commissaries Goulier and Dolmine. One hundred and fifty persons were arrested, of whom eighty re-detained in custody."

The church of St. Joseph was pillaged and sacred images destroyed by the mob. Altars and statues were hurled to the floor and smashed, pictures were rent, candlesticks, ornaments, and the Host from the high altar were thrown down and trampled under foot. The crucifix above was made the target for missiles, and the figure of the Savior was fractured in several places.

An attempt was made to fire the choir of St. Joseph's with petroleum and the firemen were called in to quench the flames. Other sacred edifices were assailed. Two cafes were wrecked.

Large bodies of anarchists paraded with red flags. The attempts of the police to seize these emblems of revolution marked the commencement of hostilities.

In the Avenue de Taillebourg there was a fierce conflict. The police had to draw their swords against the anarchists, who assailed them with stones. Four policemen were wounded, two so seriously that they had to be taken to the hospital. During the fighting M. Goulier, commissary of police, was stabbed twice with a knife.

During the evening an attempt was made to raise a barricade in the Place Strasbourg. A strong police force, supported by infantry, cleared the street. Thirty of the police and soldiers were hurt.

The Journal du Peuple, edited by Sebastian Faure, anarchist, published a manifesto denouncing the military party, the anti-Semites, the monarchists, and the priests, and urged its supporters to meet force with force. The paper called on all anarchists to demonstrate against the priests and the Jesuits.

Rennes inhabitants declare the attack on Labori was planned and executed by the police in order to influence the trial in favor of Dreyfus, and say that when Labori fell his first words could not have been better chosen to serve the cause.

OUTLAW BAND DISPERSED.

Soldiers Under Lieut. Cole Defeat the Enemy.

Lieut. Cole, with eighty men, encountered 100 native outlaws occupying an entrenched position in the mountains near Angeles, in the Philippines. The Americans attacked, and the fight lasted two hours. Nineteen of the bandits were killed. The Americans had three wounded.

In another skirmish one American officer was killed and one wounded.

MILES GOING TO THE FRONT.

Commanding General Will Direct Operations from Manila.

Major-Gen. Nelson A. Miles is going to the Philippines. He will start the latter part of October. He will not take command of the forces in the field, nor will he supersede Gen. Otis. He will, however, act in his capacity of general of the army and will have a supervision over field operations.

Nine Soldiers Were Drowned.

A reconnoitering party of the Twenty-fourth infantry, under Capt. Crane, while crossing a river in the Philippines, were thrown into the water and nine men were drowned. Capt. Crane was saved.

Victims of Hurricane Buried.

Has Foothold in Italy.

Hog Feeding.

'From Farmers' Review: The experiment station of the Kansas Agricultural College has, from time to time, by bulletins, short articles for the papers, etc., shown the value of feeding to fattening hogs something besides those highly starchy feeds, corn and kaffir. In feeding over 200 head of hogs experimentally, not a case has come up where the results were not most favorable to feeding some feed rich in protein, along with the corn and kaffir. But what is intended to be brought out in this item is not the pecuniary gain from feeding such feeds as alfalfa hay, skim-milk or soy bean meal with the other feeds, but it is the humanity of doing so. Putting a hog in a small pen and giving it no feed but dry corn and kaffir and water is inhumane. Hogs so treated when you come to the pen will walk away as far as they can and eye you as though they know you were responsible for their pains of digestion, the annoying lice and all the other unfavorable conditions of the young hog that is being starved on carbohydrates. Protein is the source of the blood, bone, hair, muscle and nerve. Take away this supply, and what has the poor hog to live for? Their hair drops out, their belly bows up as well as the backbone; great rough wrinkles of hide seem to work out on the tail, but instead of wrinkles working out the body has drawn up and left the hide, like the insect that pupates in one end of the worm, as we say. The hog has a cough, and undoubtedly if such a hog could read and had access to our family papers, and not the experience of many persons, it would send for remedies for a dozen different complaints. Dumb animals have a spirit, as we say, as well as human beings, and if this element of their nature is destroyed by unfavorable circumstances and conditions, they are subject to the same moods; and it will require a great effort to bring this spirit back; yet until this is done they will not grow and fatten. If the hogs are fed the proper feed and treated kindly, they come to meet you when you approach the pen, and have an appearance of perfect content which is as different from the above described condition as day is from night. Feed your hogs a variety, and make sure that you know that the feed contains the proper elements to insure a good healthful condition.

J. G. HANEY.

Value of Oats.

It seems to me that the value of oats as a hen food is not as fully appreciated as it should be, or more people would write about it and recommend it more instead of so many of the things that are hard to get and costly in price, writes Mrs. May Taylor, in Journal of Agriculture. For several years I have advocated a liberal ration of oats as an egg food, and it is good for the little chicks, too, if it could be had chopped finer than the ordinary chop which we get at the mill. I don't know that the real grain of the oat ought to be chopped any finer, but the husk should be; it ought to be cut and not crushed and ground; there is too much waste about it as it is prepared now. The steel-cut oats and the rolled oats are all right, but the farm flock don't get any of it; it makes things about the place too much out of tune for the farmer to sell good oats for 25 cents per bushel (sometimes more), but very often considerably less) and buy it back at three pounds for the same price. For a cooked food for hens we have never tried anything better than to make the bulk of the mash of boiled oats, and for growing chicks we believe there would be nothing better if it could be had in shape to be easily prepared, as it is too coarse as it comes from the mill, to make good "Johnnie cake" or "pone," and to feed it dry or mixed with water and fed raw; there is too much waste about it. Hens that eat very much uncooked oats must have plenty of sharp grit—the raw husk is very sharp and unyielding.

Watering the Cow.

No dairyman who makes a study of his business is satisfied with watering his herd once a day. If his cattle can be induced to drink two or three times a day he is glad of it. All the cattle may not be equally thirsty at the same time. Cows require an immense amount of water, as every farmer boy has noticed. Experiments have shown that the average milk cow needs about eighty-one pounds of water a day while in milk—this is nearly ten gallons—and over fifty pounds while dry. Of this the cow in milk takes rather more than two-thirds as drink and the rest in her food, while the dry cow takes rather less than two-thirds as drink and little more than one-third in her food.

Dispose of the Old Roosters.—Get after the old roosters now. Bake one and boil another and fry a third, and if there are any more of these now worthless creatures around, keep boiling and baking and frying till the last one has crossed the Elysium river. We sometimes think if the chicken-stealing dorkies of the South could visit our hencoops once a year about this time, their coming would be a blessing. If they would confine their attentions to last year's roosters.—F.A.

The Distribution of Wealth.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie's statement that a man ought not to die rich and his determination to try and get rid of all his wealth before death overtakes him have been received with much incredulity. But there is certainly a growing disposition on the part of our rich men to return some portion of their wealth to the community in which they made it. The list of magnificent bequests that have been made within a year will bring this to view. Most of them have been made in favor of public institutions and charities. The late Mr. Robert C. Billings left $1,500,000 to be distributed in this way. A careful computation of the money given within ten years by rich men and women to public charities and educational enterprises would make one of the most astounding of exhibits. This munificence is assuming an American largeness and is already attracting the attention and eliciting the admiration of foreign countries.

Senator Chauncey Depew, once more upon his native heath, rosy, vivacious, voluble and clear headed, proceeds to deliver with inimitable grace his little lecture, in the shape of an interview, on his summer tour. Some of his observations are worth listening to again, because they are as sagacious as usual, and time cannot rob them of their perennial charm. His facile sketch of the difference that he once more observed existed between France and England is informing and filling. France clings to the usages, the glitter and the frivolity of the empire in spite of her republican pretensions. Her people shout and sing republicanism, but do not take kindly to its simplicity. They are democrats in the street, but imperialists at the theater, the horse race and the military review. Over in England the turmoil and uncertainty of the continent do not disturb a hair. Our Chauncey finds once more that finances, society, politics, institutions, move straight along, unperturbed, as they have always moved. Year after year he makes his annual visit, and the same hands are stretched out to receive him, the same barber or the same barber's son shaves him, he is put up in the same room, waited upon by the same maid or the same maid's daughter, he is handed the same candle or the same candle's stump, he eats the same kind of chop, and the same muffins and toast turn up regularly, and he finds the same men discussing the same things in the same old way, and thus the tight little isle jogs steadily on, utterly unaware that dynasties are trembling on the brink and the mad world is considering whether it shall erect barricades, and go backward or jump suicidally into dangers that it knows not of.

The Present Idol of Paris.

The present cabinet of France is probably the most incongruous assemblage that was ever seen even in that anomalous country. Milleraud, the secretary of commerce, is a rampant socialist, of the most flaming dye, and General the Marquis de Gallifet, secretary of war, is chiefly celebrated for having shot thousands of socialists during the days of the commune. This general is the most romantic and theatrie of all the men in the new cabinet, and consequently comes nearer to the hearts and imaginations of the Frenchmen than any other of the new dignitaries. He is 70 years old, but is hale and handsome, and his life has been one long series of dare-devil excitement both in war and in love. He went to Mexico with Maximilian and there an exploding shell tore open his abdomen, and it was stated in the French papers at the time that he carried his entrails in his hat until he found a surgeon. A silver plate was attached to his stomach and he grimly declares that he experiences all the fluctuations in the value of that metal. His conduct during the Commune appears to have been nearly forgotten by the socialists, and this only shows what poor memories the Parisians have. During the fight in the streets of Paris he succeeded in penning up a large portion of the population in a corner and then turning his artillery upon them. He killed men, women and children without mercy and afterward boasted of it. This man is one of the new heroes of the hour and is associated with conservatives, socialists, red republicans and men whose sympathies are obviously with imperialism. But such is the romantic idolatry of the French people for militarism that this man wears his questionable honors with more pomposity and success than any of them.

According to late reports, the great Chinese wall is to come down. For centuries it has been something more than a barrier—it has been a reproach. It has passed into a proverb and a symbol of barbaric exclusiveness among civilized nations. Now it is to come down. How much of a job this implies can be roughly imagined if one will fancy a wall of masonry about 75 feet high, starting, say at Portland, Me., and running westward through the northern part of New England and New York, skirting the upper part of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois and then extending down the Mississippi to New Orleans and winding by the edge of the gulf to end at Charleston. The job of getting rid of such an obstruction is enough to make the ordinary contracting engineer's eyes stick out with prospective fatness. And in getting rid of memorial obstructions China naturally turns to the United States. A Chicago engineer, Mr. Frank Lewis, is going to China in the employ of a Chinese syndicate to make preliminary estimates for this job.

The people of the country will watch with a good deal of interest the investigation that is about to take place of the pension bureau. There is a well grounded belief that the pension agents themselves are more interested in the investigation than anybody else and have had some influence in bringing about the charges that have been made against it. The pension system of the United States, one of the noblest monuments of a nation's gratitude, is incumbered with a great deal of outside fraud. It is notorious that hundreds of lawyers of a very small caliber make a business out of it, or out of the pension victim, and one wonders whether they are to investigate the pension office or the pension office is to investigate them.

The trustees of the Chicago Woman's Temple must be credited with having given a new turn to the endless chain. In order to raise funds to pay the debt on their building they have issued a tiny book containing 100 coupons, each coupon representing 10 cents. A coupon is to be torn out by the person receiving the book and mailed with a dime to the temple treasurer. The book is then passed on to a friend and its travels continue until the coupons are exhausted. The mere novelty of this device has succeeded admirably and the debt will undoubtedly be paid.

The medical aspects of Christian Science are arousing considerable opposition. A movement has been started in New York looking to legislative action. It takes the shape of a public meeting to discuss a bill about to be introduced at Albany to prevent any but regularly licensed physicians from attending sick persons. As Bishop Potter, Archbishop Corrigan and Robert G. Ingersoll have been invited to address the meeting, it would appear that the opponents of Christian Science expect to unite both faith and unbelief in the onslaught.

A proposition to found a "club for decent men" is being discussed. One might at first sight infer that this was a sly arraignment of all men's clubs for being indecent, if it had not come to light that the movement was started by a woman who demands that the new club shall educate men to give up their seats in cars to women.

Under the terms of an old and firmly established law no naturalized citizen can be raised to the peerage in Great Britain. In view of the very general impression that William Waldorf Astor became a British subject for the purpose of becoming a "peer of the realm," he is now very much in the attitude of the "come on" who invested in green goods. He has bought a gold brick.

The delegates to the international peace conference at The Hague seem to have completely overlooked one important matter—no provision was made for restraining Mr. Stead from writing a book about it. They should have arranged for an international writ of injunction.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. WILSON, Liveryman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Zimmer returned from their wedding tour Wednesday and called on friends in our village. A reception was held at Long Grove at the home of the groom's parents on Wednesday evening.

The Wauconda camp, M. W. A., will hold a picnic at Ford's grove on September 7. We have had no public demonstrations in our village since May 30 and doubt not but it will be largely attended. Watch for further notice.

The social on the school grounds last Saturday evening was very well attended and the supply, although exceedingly great, gave way before the demands could be filled. The gross receipts amounted to $25 and after all expenses had been deducted their remained $16, which was given to Rev. D. C. Dutton, the M. E. pastor, in whose interest the social had been conducted.

Last Tuesday four more of our young men went to Chicago and enlisted in the 37th regt. U. S. vol. for service in the Philippines and left for San Francisco Wednesday evening. They are Norman Granger, Oscar Fleming, Wm. Hodge and Paul Rieger. All were industrious young men and we are sorry to see them leave on such a trip, but they were longing for adventure and the entreaties of relatives and friends could not change their decision. We doubt not but that they will have plenty of adventure, but hope they will pass safely through all and after the Philippines have been subdued, return home and relate their thrilling experiences.

While crossing the lake Sunday Claude Pratt, accompanied by two young men from the city, took an unexpected bath. They had rowed but a short way from the pier when an oar-lock broke and one of the oars fell into the water. The oarsman made a lunge for the oar and, in doing so, tipped the boat and the three occupants went sprawling into the water. Charles Wicke of Des Plaines, who was fishing near by, had just pulled up anchor and was starting home for dinner, when he heard the cry, "Help, or we'll drown." With all his might he pulled for the capsized boat and soon had one of the occupants safely within his boat and another boat came out from the pier and rescued the other two. The boys had intended taking a bath at Pratt's point, but they called this enough and returned home to spend the rest of the day quietly.

Judge Fitch's court was the scene of another interesting lawsuit Monday between two parties from Long Lake, in which W. G. Wetzel was plaintiff and Lyma R. Giddings defendant. The suit was brought for reversion of property owned by W. G. Wetzel and leased by L. R. Giddings, who he claimed had not lived up to the terms of the lease and therefore must leave the place. Judge A. C. Story of Chicago, assisted by H. B. Burritt, conducted the case for the plaintiff, while Frank E. Bryant of Chicago, assisted by Lawyer Burnham of our village, took charge of the defendant's case. The case was called at 11 o'clock and continued until noon, when an intermission was taken for dinner. The trial was resumed at 1 o'clock and lasted until 2:30 o'clock, when all the testimony was in and both sides were heard. Judge Fitch then rendered his decision in favor of the defendant.

Of Interest to Botanists.

BARRINGTON, Aug. 24, 1899. EDITOR REVIEW: My attention having been called to the existence of a rare tree growing near the road on Mr. Hollister's farm, north of town, and as it was a stranger to me I sent specimens of the bark, berry, seeds and a seedling to Montreal to be named. If you will publish the following description of it for the benefit of amateur botanists like myself I will be grateful. I give description in full:

The tree referred to above is a valuable native timber tree called "Hackberry," "Sugarberry" or "Nettle" tree. It is known to botanists as "Celtis Occidentalis." The leaves of this tree are ovate lanceolate. They are sharply and coarsely serrate, taper-pointed, the characteristic thing about them is that they are usually rough above and usually soft and pubescent beneath. The flowers appear in April and May, are small and white, and are produced singly. The fruit is a small, round, sweet and edible drupe. It is a dark purple when fully matured and remains on the tree throughout the winter.

Hackberry is usually a small or medium-sized tree in the West, but towards its Southern limits it reaches large dimensions, frequently growing to a height of one hundred feet, with a stem diameter of two or three feet. In general appearance this tree resembles the white elm, but the branches come out at nearly right angles to the stem, and the bark is rougher than the elm with deep parallel grooves. It is distributed from Ontario west to the Lake of the Woods. It is found in South Dakota and Colorado, and runs as far south as Georgia and Eastern Texas.

The Hackberry is easily grown from seed, which should be sown as soon as ripe, or stratified and sown in the spring. The wood is not as strong or tough as the elm. It is somewhat coarse-grained, light brown with yellowish sap wood. As a rapid growing tree for park and street planting, the Hackberry is one of the best trees. It is exceedingly graceful in winter and very attractive in summer. One of its features is that it endures draught exceedingly well and owing to its habit of branching it is not liable to split at the crotches. The wood, though not equal to the elm, is sometimes substituted for that tree for carriage building and implement manufacture.

LOVE AND LAW.

By the author of BONNY'S LOVERS

My heart sank as I remembered the incident of last evening, the evidently clandestine meeting in the shrubbery at Forest Lea. Could this journey be connected with that meeting, and could the timid, modest girl I had known at Forest Lea be capable of planning and carrying out secret arrangements, surrounded by so many difficulties in her circumstances? What did it mean?

The endless green panorama still flitted by; not a sound, save the occasional rustling of a newspaper, broke the silence of the railway carriage; the passengers were either sleepy or unobscurable. An irrepressible desire to speak to Miss Branscombe possessed me—I could bear the situation no longer. I turned toward her with the paper I had been reading in my hand, intending to offer it to her. She was already occupied with a book—one of those thin paper-covered volumes bought at book-stalls—and she did not raise her eyes from it or otherwise appear to have noticed my movement. There was no doubt of her wish to ignore our previous acquaintance. And a conclusive further proof of her identity was given me in her dress, which I now had the opportunity of seeing more distinctly. It was of a brownish shade, and the pattern a little check—a simple girlish costume which I remembered she had worn in the morning of the day Col. Branscombe died. Could I forget the least detail connected with her?

A sudden inspiration flashed through my mind. Miss Branscombe had sought this method of communicating with me privately, away from her family circle, and the reserve she maintained was necessary for the moment in the presence of our fellow-passengers, some of whom might be known to her by sight at least. When the proper moment arrived she would explain herself. I as she had entered it—swiftly and suddenly.

I sprang after her. "Just starting sir—time's up," called the porter.

I gave little heed to the warning; but a stream of passengers, just arrived by the branch line interposed between me and Miss Branscombe, the whistle of the express sounded, and the remembrance of Col. Branscombe's will, left behind me in the carriage, recalled me to my duty. I dashed back just in time, mad with disappointment and baffled curiosity, and regained my seat in a condition which roused my somnolent fellow-travelers.

"Young lady not coming back, sir?" said one of them, a portly squire, with a humorous twinkle in the corner of his eye. "She's left her cloak and her book"—pointing to the latter, where it lay on the floor. "Not coming back—eh?"

"I suppose not," I answered as indifferently as I could, stooping to pick up the dropped volume. On the fly-leaf was written in pencil the name "Nona Branscombe."

CHAPTER VII.

"Five minutes past four," I said to myself as I sprang out on to the platform at Euston Station. "I shall just have time to report myself at the office before Rowton leaves, get a feed somewhere, and catch the 6:30 back to Forest Lea. Here, hansom—as fast as you can drive to Chancery Lane!"

My plans had been rapidly formed in the time which elapsed between Miss Branscombe's disappearance at Molton Junction and my arrival at Euston. If Miss Branscombe intended to return to Forest Lea that night, reference to Bradshaw had shown me that it must be by the 6:50 train from town—there was no other stopping at Westford; and if she did not return old fellow done—left everything to that rip of a nephew?"

"No," I answered unwillingly. Nora's name had become a sacred word to me, and I hesitated to pronounce it in such a presence.

"No? Then what has he done with the estate? I thought he had no other relations."

"He had a niece," I replied, fumbling for the key of my bag. "Oh, here it is!"—taking the key from my pocket. "Jennings must stay and make the copy, and send it down."

"A niece?" interrupted Rowton. "Who is she? Never heard of her. What's she like? Young or old? Does she come in for the land and all? Why don't you speak out, man?"

"I—I will in a moment," I rejoined. "What on earth is the matter with this key?"—holding it up to the light. "Something in the barrel—dust, I dare say," suggested Rowton carelessly. "But about the niece—I'm interested, Fort. Is she young and beautiful, and an heiress?"

"It's the lock," I exclaimed; "the key's right enough, and yet the bag has scarcely been out of my sight. What the—" I stared at my partner, whilst I felt every vestige of color leaving my cheeks. "This bag isn't mine; it's—it's—look at this"—pointing to a half-effaced label of a foreign hotel adhering to the bottom of the Gladstone. "I have never been at Venice, and"—examining it more closely—"this is not my bag; the key doesn't fit."

"Whew—w!" whistled my partner. "A case of 'exchange' no robbery. You've bagged somebody else's, and he's bagged yours"—laughing at his own pun. "Awfully disgusted he'll be when he sees the documents."

"It's an impossibility," I ejaculated. "The bag was put into the carriage and taken out again by my own hands, and it never left my sight throughout the journey. It was on the opposite seat. I can swear there's been no mistake. It's a robbery! Send for the police!"

The words died on my lips. A terrible suspicion darted into my mind. Nona Branscombe had carried a black bag—a Gladstone, the facsimile of mine—and I had deposited it beside my own on the vacant seat. In her precipitate flight she had taken the bag, leaving cloak and book behind her, and, as I remembered now, effectually covering up the Gladstone she had left. In her agitation she had evidently exchanged the bags by mistake.

"Robbery? Nonsense—it's a case of exchange!" persisted James Rowton. "Can't you remember who had the other? Did he come all the way?"

"Yes," I said confusedly, putting my hand to my head. "I remember; she got out at Molton."

"She," echoed my partner. "Was it a woman? And with a Gladstone?"

"Yes," I answered, heartily vexed with myself for the involuntary admission. "It was a woman. I'll go back to Euston and wire to Molton at once. The mistake may have been discovered and my bag left there; and I will follow the message by the first train."

"Off again?" exclaimed Rowton ruefully. "There's a week's fag here"—pointing to a pile of documents which filled the table.

"Can't help it!" I retorted. "The funeral takes place the day after tomorrow. I must be present to read the will, take executor's instructions, and so on; and there is other business which must be attended to."

"Can't I run down?" proposed Rowton. "Is the heiress there? I should like to see her."

"I must find the will," I replied. "There's no time to be lost. The Colonel gave me special instructions; I am bound to be present—other things must wait."

"You're off then?" said Rowton, reluctantly. "Well, ta-ta, old fellow! Wire when you've got the bag. It's an awful joke, though—such a sell for the lady."

"Don't let the chief hear of it," I stopped to request as I left the office, the fatal bag in my hand—"it would upset him."

"All right," nodded the chief's nephew. "It was an awfully flat thing to do; you know, Fort—to let a woman run off with the old Colonel's will. And a steady-going fellow like you, too! Now, if it had been I—"

I stayed to hear no more. My hansom was waiting, and my Jarvis received his instructions to hurry back to Euston with the equanimity of his order. What did it matter if all the world had gone mad so long as his fare was a good one?

My message was soon dispatched, and whilst I waited for the answer I made my way to the refreshment room. But, notwithstanding my long fast, I was too fevered and excited to eat, and could only swallow a glass of wine and break a biscuit. Then I hovered impatiently about the door of the telegraph office, musing on the complication which this unlucky accident had brought into the whole affair.

Two corners of the triangle are attached to twigs, but the other corner, which terminates in a single thread, is held by the spider, perched on a neighboring twig. When a fly strikes the web the spider loosens his hold and the elastic threads instantly entangle the victim.

"IT WAS NONA HERSELF."

knew what fruitless attempts she had already made to enlist me on her side.

This idea did not perhaps remove the primary and greatest difficulty of the situation, but I hailed it eagerly. It gave Miss Branscombe the loophole which my love demanded. I was content to wait my lady's pleasure—nay, I was more than content—I forgot all the doubts and fears which had harassed me a moment ago in the rapacious delight of the thought that she trusted me, she turned to me for help in her difficulties. A man in love will forgive any indiscretion of which he is himself the object and by which he profits.

The train sped on, the afternoon shadows lengthened. The express stopped at few stations on its rapid journey, and, as one after the other of these halting places was passed without a sign from Miss Branscombe, I began to conclude that her destination was the same as my own—or, was she only sitting out the fellow-passengers, not one of whom had left us?

The question was presently answered in a startling and unexpected manner. Molton, a large busy junction, was reached. We were on the point of leaving it again after a three minutes' halt, when Miss Branscombe, with a hurried glance at the platform, started to her feet, and before I could assist or prevent her, she had snatched her bag from the opposite seat, beckoned to a passing porter, and left the carriage from that mysterious errand—which I could no longer flatter myself was in any way connected with me—then my presence at Forest Lea might be urgently needed. Such testimony as I could give as to Miss Branscombe's movements might be of the utmost consequence if she was to be saved from some unknown villainy of Charlie Branscombe's. I shuddered at the thought of her possible danger in his hands, and urged my caddy to swifter speed over the rattling London streets.

James Rowton received me with open arms.

"Awfully glad you've come back, old man; the chief is still laid up, and I find myself up to my ears in work." The junior was not fond of work. "There's that case of Rose versus Emery—you know all about it, I suppose, and old Mrs. Entwistle's estate, and Sir Everard Brimbone's settlements—they are all on me like a pack of wolves. Morton, from Morton and White's, has been in three times today. Sir Everard wants the thing pushed on—marriage comes off at the end of the month. Wish people wouldn't get married! Fagged to death—ugh!"—rising and stretching himself. "Well, what's your news? Old man dead?"

"Yes," I said laconically, for his tone jarred upon me. "Colonel Branscombe's will is here"—pointing to my Gladstone bag. "We'd better take a copy, I suppose."

"Yes, I suppose so. What has the

The Modern Bow.
The probability is that the origin of the custom of bowing can only be found by going far back into the ages of antiquity, when prostration was the attitude of the slave before his master. What we now call politeness began in servility. There can hardly be any doubt but that the practice of bowing the head originated in exposing the neck to the stroke of the sword. From its earliest literal meaning it took a figurative one, meaning first submission, then deference, then mere politeness. Herbert Spencer says "the nod or bow of modern politeness is the last relic of the prostration of ancient servility." In the same way we shake hands with the right hand instead of the left because the right was the sword hand, and the giving of it into the hand of an enemy was a sign of peace and good faith. Taking off the hat, too, is a relic of doffing the helmet and so leaving the most vulnerable portion of the body undefended as a mark of confidence on entering the dwelling of an ally or a friend.

DR. SANARELLI OF MONTEVIDEO UNIVERSITY.

He Is Soon to Visit the United States on a Tour of Investigation—Regarded as Europe's Greatest Authority on Yellow Fever.

Dr. Giuseppe Sanarelli, discoverer of the bacillus of yellow fever, who is soon to visit the United States to study the effects of his serum, has been foremost in the investigation of the causes and possible preventives of this disease. Though barely over 30 years of age, he is the head of the great institute of experimental hygiene founded by the University of Montevideo and the important results of his original researches have made him an authority on yellow fever, typhoid and cholera. His institute was the first to have under cultivation the bacillus of yellow fever, and he has been conducting experiments for some time by which to discover, if possible, an antidote. The effect of his serum as a preventive is being watched with interest in this country. After taking his degree in the University of Sienna in 1889 Sanarelli studied at Pavia and at Paris and also in Germany, making a specialty of the study of typhoid and cholera and one or two other maladies diffused by the supply of impure water. At the Pasteur Institute he gave particular attention to the water of the Seine and the water supply of Versailles. He isolated the vibron of cholera and discovered the cause of its relative harmlessness. The results of these investigations made him known among scientific men, and his further researches have brought him into prominence. His appointment to the chair of hygiene in the University of Sienna in Italy followed. The offer of a department devoted solely to original research along the line of the Pasteur Institute at a salary of $5,000 a year induced him to go to the University of Montevideo, where he has attracted wide attention.

FASHIONS CHANGE.
And It Is Now the Fashion to Get Unmarried.

New York Tribune: A group of little girls, from 12 to 14, were talking with each other one day on Bailey's beach at Newport, a few days ago, and a stranger curious to hear what the children of the elect conversed about, took a seat on the sand in their neighborhood. They were talking of the future, as children of their age are wont to do, and, of course, the prospective bridegroom came in for a large share of their attention. "Yes, I shall marry," announced unquestionably the beauty of the party, a lovely girl of 13, "but," she added with calm conviction, "I do not think I shall stay married long. I get tired of people so easily. I shall probably get a divorce after a few years. Her sentiments did not seem to excite any surprise or disapproval, but one of the group said timidly: "My mother thinks it is very wrong to be divorced. She says it is a solemn vow for better or worse, and if it is for worse, why people must stand it." The other laughed mockingly, and the first speaker who seemed to be the spokesman for the party answered with the wearied air of a woman of the world, which she had successful copies from some admired friend of her mother's. "How funny you are, Margery, with your old-fashioned ideas. Fashions change in marriage like in everything else, and just now it is the fashion to get unmarried whenever you want to."

Saved by a Tornado.
In 1780 Grenada, in the West Indies, was visited by a tornado with singular effects. Unlike similar phenomena this was to the inhabitants a providential deliverance from a pest which threatened their economic ruin. Some time previously the formica saccharivora, a species of ant, appeared in such numbers as to make the annihilation of the sugar cane a question of a few weeks only. After in vain trying many expedients and offering large rewards for a remedy against the plague, the helpless people resolved to abandon their homes in a body and betake themselves to another island. By this famous tempest Providence accomplished in a few moments what man, with all his appliances, had failed to overcome. The ant was exterminated.

WOMEN'S SHAKESPEARE CLUB.

Has Celebrated Its 25th Birthday—Intelligent Perseverance.

Woman lovers of Shakespeare will be interested in the Shakespeare club of Manchester, N. H., which celebrated its twenty-fifth birthday recently, says Harper's Bazar. Its founding dates from 1873, when a class of six Manchester women was formed for the study of the works of this immortal poet. Their work, under the leadership of Mrs. Irene Hughes, was thorough and helpful, and when a few years later another circle of six women of kindred aims met to form the Manchester Shakespeare club, the organization became at once an influence that was entirely disproportionate to its small list of members. The membership has increased slowly; it stands today at only twenty-five. Of the original six members five are still connected with the club, one having died in 1887. The club is perhaps unusual in these days of varied and conglomerate club motives in its resolute adherence to its cause of being. It organized for the study of Shakespeare and this has been pursued with discriminating industry and intelligent perseverance for a generation. The year book of the club for the coming season of 1899-1900 shows the same rigid adherence to the subject. The club meets weekly and through November "King John" will be studied, divided into four meetings, the topics of which are as follows: 1, acts 1 and 2; 2, acts 3, 4 and 5; 3, analysis of the play; 4, magna charta. December is devoted to the same careful analysis of "As You Like It," January, "Richard III," with a supplementary lecture. In February, March and April, "Othello," "Twelfth Night" and "Julius Caesar" are taken up respectively.

CUBAN WOMEN

Grow Old Quickly, but Keep Their Glorious Eyes to the Last.
As a rule, the Cuban woman is round in figure and pretty in feature. Her face is seldom vivacious—one looks in vain for the beauty of expression. Her hair is often a "glory" to her, and is sometimes of that black-blue shade only possible with the daughters of southern Europe and their descendants, though occasionally the Cuban girl varies the programme by being blonde, and, to be plain, rather fat. This lady is often a woman at 12, and the mother of a large family at 19 or 20. So pretty in her youth, in age she becomes either lean and dried or fat and unwieldy. She fades early, and, for want of strength of character, is apt to lose control of her husband, who, nevertheless, still continues to need such control as badly as any man of his times. But, whatever she may grow to seem, her eyes never fade. To the last, through all vicissitudes, they are big and black.

CANADA'S GREAT POLITICIAN.

Wilfrid Laurier, premier of Canada and leader of the liberal party in the dominion, has obtained world-wide fame as one of the nineteenth century's most forceful statesmen. His declaration in the house of commons that the Alaskan boundary dispute with the United States can be settled "only by arbitration or war" is thoroughly in line with his customary aggressiveness, though it is also characteristic of him that he followed this seemingly belligerent statement with the pacific assertion that "we must find some means of bringing about a peaceful settlement." Those not in accord with his political views say that in his personal appearance he affects the actor, and adds that he lives up to the resemblance by making theatrical official utterances. However this may be he has a remarkably strong hold upon the affections of the Canadian electorate, as is evidenced by the fact that of his fifty-eight years practically half have been spent in official life. A native of St. Lin, Quebec, he is a lawyer by profession, but a politician and statesman by long vocation. His liberalism is declared to be of the strictly British type, and signal appreciation of his services was evidenced by Queen Victoria when she conferred knighthood upon him June 19, 1897.

Artists' Conception of the Noble Steed Not Always Natural.

The artist's horse of today is an altogether different creature from the artist's horse of a century ago. In years gone by his neck was arched, his rump well rounded and his whole bearing pompous and melodramatic. Frequently in the good old days he reared on both hind legs after the fashion of a grizzly bear. But things have changed now, and the pictorial, or marble, steed has altered his quondam poses for brisker and more businesslike attitudes. While the modern metamorphosis may lack the heroic features which formerly characterized our good old friend, we believe the artistic horse of the present day is much more accurate. They say the change is due almost entirely to the revelations of the instantaneous camera. This infallible portrait maker has caught the steed in action and shown us exactly how he looks. It has also shown us that when he runs he doubles up like a jackknife and throws grace to the winds. It has likewise demonstrated the fact that old-time artists had erroneous ideas as to how the brute handled his feet and used his legs. Indeed, photography has shown us so many things about moving that strict accuracy in their portraiture is almost ridiculous.

ROBERT DOWNING

Robert Downing was recently interviewed by the press on the subject of his splendid health. Mr. Downing promptly and emphatically gave the whole credit of his splendid physical condition to Pe-ru-na, saying:

Robert Downing, the Tragedian.
"I find it a preventive against all sudden summer ills that swoop upon one in changing climates and water. It is the finest traveling companion and safeguard against malarial influences. Remember that cholera morbus, cholera infantum, summer complaint, bilious colic, diarrhoea and dysentery are each and all catarrh of the bowels. Catarrh is the only correct name for these affections. Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. Dr. Hartman, in a practice of over forty years, never lost a single case of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or cholera morbus, and his only remedy was Pe-ru-na. Could Not Eat, Drink or Sleep

OFFICE OF SINGER SEWING MACHINE CO. FORT ATKINSON, WIS.

Restored to health, after submitting my case in vain to several physicians, I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of Zaegel's Genuine Swedish Essence, hoping thereby to induce others to try it with equally good results.
During my sickness I could neither eat, drink or sleep, and in a short time lost no less than 25 pounds. Everything was done for me, but all in vain; I was growing weaker from day to day until a friend induced me to try the above remedy. After a few doses my stomach retained food, my appetite returned, and as I grew stronger I again enjoyed good sleep at night and began from that time on to steadily improve, until I am now entirely well and have my former weight.
Would not do without it for several times its cost.

One of which attracted special attention was a wood sawing contest, in which several of our popular young ladies participated. A new money order has been devised and will be introduced by the post office department about the first of September. The present form of money order is cumbersome, unhandy and unsatisfactory. The new plan is to have the advice under the money order and a sheet of carbon paper between them so that in filling out the money order the advice is made out at the same time the order is dispatched. Attached to the advice is a receipt, which will be given to the remitter. Under the present system no receipt is given to the purchaser. The new order will not contain any notched edge to tear off which has been a source of annoyance to postmasters and employees.

Lines-Robertson Nuptials.

Miss Nellie Lines, eldest daughter of Mrs. Flora Lines, and Mr. Frank Robertson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's mother on Grove avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. W. L. Blanchard, of the Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. Miss Bennett of Des Plaines played the wedding march, also a soft musical accompaniment to the ceremony.

The bride was dressed in white silk, and was attended by her sisters, Leila and Gladys, one in the capacity of bridesmaid and the other as flowergirl. The groom was attended by Mr. Harry Johnson of Chicago. Bennie and Percy Leonard, nephews of the groom, acted as ribbon boys.

The parlors were beautifully decorated in pink, white and green, and the ceremony was performed under a double floral arch, tastefully arranged between the two parlors. A very acceptable collation was served by an Elgin caterer and his liveried attendants. The presents were numerous and among them was a check for $500 presented by the groom's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left on the 5 o'clock train for Oconomowoc, Wis., where they will spend two weeks. On their return they will reside in Barrington and expect to be at home to their many friends after October 12.

Picnic a Success.

The second annual picnic given by the Barrington Social and Athletic club at Lake Zurich last Saturday was a success. The day was beautiful and the crowd began to gather early in the afternoon to witness the ball game between the Arlingtons and Algonquin Indians. The game was called shortly after 3 o'clock and was one of the best games ever played on the grounds, the score being 5 to 4 in favor of the Arlington Heights team.

Ninety-six couples enjoyed the dance at the pavilion in the evening. Leone's orchestra furnished music.

The club is to be congratulated upon the success of their second annual picnic.

HE RIDES ON A RAIL.

Wm. Antholtz of Cary Escorted out of Town.

WARNED NOT TO RETURN.

Crowd Takes Him from the Home of Mrs. Frank Hinseman and Punishes Him.

William Antholtz, who was employed as section foreman on the Chicago & North-Western railway at Cary up to two weeks ago, was taken from the house of Mrs. Frank Hinseman, who lives there, by an indignant crowd of citizens Monday night, given a ducking under the town pump and a ride out of town on a rail. He was warned never to return under penalty of being tarred and feathered.

Antholtz has a wife and family living there and it is charged that he neglected them for Mrs. Hinseman, the wife of one of the section hands. Citizens, who had become disgusted with Antholtz's conduct, gathered in the main street, near the public square Monday evening, and after discussing the matter, decided to give him a coat of tar and feathers. Most of the crowd came prepared with masks. Concealing their features with these, the vigilantes marched to the home of Mrs. Hinseman.

As expected, Antholtz was found there, and was ordered out with scant ceremony. He was taken in charge by the crowd, after he had made a bold attempt to escape. Force was used in overpowering him, and in the scrimmage several members of the crowd lost their masks. Because of this it was decided to change the form of punishment to be given to Antholtz.

He was marched down the main street and hauled up in front of the town pump. By this time the news of the affair had spread and most of the residents of Cary were following in the wake of the odd procession.

Two members of the crowd held Antholtz under the spout of the pump with his face upturned while others took turns at working the handle. Each man in the original crowd administered a dose of fresh water via the pump spout and Antholtz was finally removed from his humiliating and uncomfortable position nearly drowned by the constant stream of water which had poured into his face.

But with this the citizens had not ended their work. There was much talk of tar and feathers in spite of the fact that Antholtz recognized several of his tormentors. The leaders of the crowd discouraged this proposition, and Antholtz had just expressed his joy at avoiding the ordeal, when some one proposed a ride astride a rail. A thin hickory rail was soon tore from a fence, when Antholtz was invited to take a seat on it. He declined and started to struggle again. But he soon found it useless to struggle with his captors and was put on a rail.

With loud hooting and shouting, which awoke the residents of farms near town, the procession moved away from Cary and continued for a mile. Antholtz, astride of the rail, was tantalized and jeered unmercifully. When he was finally allowed to get down from his uncomfortable mount he was told in no uncertain language that his presence in that community was no longer desired. A coat of tar and feathers was promised if he returned.

Antholtz assured the vigilantes that he had seen Cary for the last time and that he would put distance between himself and the village just as fast as possible. With a parting threat the crowd dispersed and the former foreman disappeared into the woods. Mrs. Hinseman is still there, but she will be asked to leave, it is said.

Antholtz formerly lived at Barrington and was employed at South Milwaukee, Wis., until a year ago when he went to Cary. Mrs. Hinseman's husband was employed in Antholtz's crew gang and went there about the same time. Antholtz was requested to resign a few weeks ago and since then he has spent most of his time with Mrs. Hinseman.

Ex-treasurer James McDonough of Highwood admitted a shortage in his accounts of $1,078, waived examination and has been bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $1,500 on the charge of embezzlement. He has filled the position of village treasurer of Highwood for nine years, previous to this year when it developed that there was a shortage in his accounts. Edward E. Welch, one of his bondsmen, was appointed to the office by Mayor Hogan. Mr. McDonough's bondsmen were very lenient with him and gave him time to make good the shortage. This he was unable to do however, and his arrest followed.
