Libertyville to Janesville.

Janesville, Wis., is the object of the new road now in course of construction between Libertyville and Fox Lake. The following clipping from the Harvard Herald indicates that the St. Paul company intend to push the line through as soon as possible: "The people of Walworth have had some broad hints the past few days that there is something in the future. The good news came in the form of a request, which was for bed and board for nine surveyors. It reached a climax when the chain men arrived there, making their way through corn fields and pastures.

They created no small amount of excitement. The on-lookers began to wonder where they came from and what they intended doing. Their mission was soon made manifest. They were out on a pilgrimage for the St. Paul railroad and said the iron horse would speed over the course that they were chaining out.

The proposed road starts at Libertyville, Lake county, and the intention is to carry it through to Janesville. A small piece of railroad is being built between Libertyville and Fox Lake by what is known as the Cook, Lake and McHenry County Railroad Co., but this will be purchased by the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co. at a meeting next month. The survey is made from Fox Lake on through the northern part of McHenry county, striking a little south of Spring Grove and Solon.

It is estimated that this will lessen the distance between Chicago and St. Paul over the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad by about fifty miles. No doubt it is to establish better passenger service between Chicago and St. Paul that this new road is planned.

CHAPTER IX.

She was seated in the breakfast toom, and alone, when I entered it the next morning. She was pale and subdued, but the languor had gone from her manner, and an unmistakable crimson dyed the pure ivory of her cheek as she greeted me. Now, then, the explanation was coming.

"I-I want to speak to you, Mr. Fort," she said hurriedly, with ther eyes on the ground. "I-I-wish to tonsult you professionally."

I bowed and waited patiently. What was coming? Miss Branscombe turned to the window and back again.

"It is-about the will," she went on. "I want you to tell me what I can do -legally-to alter it? I know that my iear uncle"-falteringly-"has made me his heiress."

"You will believe, Miss Branscombe," I could not help saying, "that I had no power, even had I the wish, to alter this."

"Yes," she said, with another blush, "I believe it. I ought not to have asked it of you. But now what can I so? I want to give Forest Lea to my cousia."

"That is impossible," I replied. "Impossible-how? It is mine, is it not?" "Yes, but it cannot be alienatedthat is, it belongs to you and your heirs."

"I can make my cousin my heir. I can execute a-a deed of gift." Mr. Charlie had instructed her well!

"I believe not. I must look over the will again to be quite sure, but I think-I fancy-by its terms, you have no power to make a deed of gift. Will you let me have the will?"

"I?" The surprise was well feigned, if not real. "The will?"

"Yes: it is in the black bag which you exchanged by mistake for your ing, for the first time since my uncle's death. No, not for the first time," she corrected herself hastily, as the remembrance of that rencontre at the side door evidently recurred to her, and a deep flush mounted to her white forehead. "It was our first meeting yesterday, and I know nothing of a black bag, or of my uncle's will."

"Allow me," I said quietly, as I left the room. In a couple of minutes I returned with the casus belli-the Gladstone-in one hand and her dust cloak and book in the other.

"You left these," I said, presenting the last-mentioned articles, "behind you in the carriage."

"My cloak!" she exclaimed, and, examining the volume, "This is mine, too; but I have not seen either of them for some days. And this bag I never saw in my life."

I bowed. What else was left me? It was evidently Miss Branscombe's pleasure to ignore the occurrence of yesterday, and how could I press it on her? She was exceedingly displeased; she rang the bell for her maid.

"Will you take these away?" she said to the woman, pointing to the cloak and the book.

"And the bag," I suggested with a persistency which was as stupid as it was useless.

The woman looked at the Gladstone, then at her mistress, and then at me. "Shall I give it to Austin, or take it to your room, sir?" she asked civilly. My eyes were fixed upon Miss Branscombe. She stood, her, slight figure still drawn up in dignified silence, and her face turned away, as if she had no more to do with the subject.

The maid waited. She was a small, dark woman, just past her first youth, with, as I noticed now, a certain keenness of expression beneath the wellown yesterday." I explained boldly. It trained civility of her manner-a perwas possible that she had not yet dis- son of experience, I could judge. A

"Oh, yes, at Ilminton! You can leave the bag there and go, Woodward," directed Miss Elmslie. "Nona, my child, how pale you are! Let me give you a cup of coffee; you should not have come down to breakfast. I was surprised, when I passed your room, not to find you. Here, dearest, drink this, and let me see a little more color in your cheeks."

Miss Branscombe obeyed so far as putting the proffered cup to her lips went, but I observed that throughout the meal she only played with her food, and she did not address a single word to me. She resented the want of tact'l had shown in regard to what, I was now convinced, had been an accidental and-to Miss Branscombe-an awkward meeting. She was evidently determined to ignore the whole matter, and, but for the paramount consideration of the missing will, I must of course have followed her lead. But with that in the question, and Colonel Branscombe's fureral fixed for the morrow, what was to be my next step?

CHAPTER X.

The good old Colonel was laid to rest in the family vault, and the neighboring gentry who assembled to pay the last token of respect to the man who had filled so honorable a place among them were duly received at the Lea, and left it again with little gratification of their curiosity as to the next owner.

I had made searching investigations at Molton. I had 'exhausted every means at my command in the unsuccessful attempt to trace the missing will. I lingered at Forest Lea for an opportunity of making one more effort toward inducing Miss Branscombe to solve the mystery of which she undoubtedly held the key. It came-the opportunity-upon me suddenly, and, strange to say, by Miss Branscombe's own action.

It was the day after the funeral, and I was gloomly pondering the awkwardness of the situation, when a shadow across the French window, which stood open disturbed my meditations. I looked up to find Miss Branscombe, alone, looking in upon me. I rose instantly.

"You have something to say to me. Will you not come in?" I said impulsively, answering a certain appeal in the wistful eyes-they looked larger than ever out of the pale, sad face. She came in at once and stood on the mat just within the door.

"Mr. Fort," she said, "you are going away tomorrow, Cousin Emma tells me. Have you found the the will?" "No," I answered; "it is still missing."

"It was in the bag which you lost?"

Annual Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

ETERANS AT PHILADELPHIA.

PRESIDENT MEETS COMRADES.

Tremendous Ovation Accorded McKinley on His Arrival from Washington-National Association of Naval Veterans in a Great Parade.

The annual meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic began at Philadelphia, Sept. 4. Comrade McKinley received a tremendous ovation from the thousands of old soldiers gathered for the encampment when he arrived from Washington.

The Grand Army was officially welcomed at the Academy of Music by Gov. Stone and Mayor Ashbridge.

The parade of the National Association of Naval Veterans aroused the greatest enthusiasm. The first division was composed of the United States naval brigade, Capt. T. J. Jewell, brigade / commander, including marines and seamen of the United States ships New York, Indiana, Texas, Brooklyn, Massachusetts, Nashville and Detroit, and the marines and seamen of the League island navy yard.

In the second division were the officers and men of United States revenue cutter service. The third division' was composed of carriages containing the officers of the warships anchored in the Delaware river. The fourth division was composed of the National Association of Naval Veterans, United States of America: In the fifth division were the independent organizations of naval veterans.

Forty thousand Grand Army veterans passed in review before President McKinley at Philadelphia Sept. 5. Rockford (Ill.) post, the head of the line, passed the stand at 11 o'clock and the last veterans limped by at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

During the day the president visited the north Atlantic squadron anchored in the river.

In the evening, at the Academy of Music, President McKinley addressed a large audience. Later, at a banquet at Odd Fellows' hall, where the president was a guest of three Grand Army posts, he spoke briefly.

The presidential party boarded a special train and left for Washington about midnight.

Mistaken Sound.

Madame de Navarro has recorded in "A Few Memories" the greatest lesson she ever received against too much realism. In a certain drama, the heroine, under great excitement, suddenly stops to gain composure, as she hears the approaching carriages of the guests. "Hark!" she says. "I hear the wheels of their carriages." We obtained the effects of approaching wheels, but, try as we would, the stamping of the horses' feet upon the gravel before Clarisse's door we could not manage. At last a brilliant idea struck me, which the stage manager promptly indorsed. It was that we should have in a donkey from Covent Garden to trot up and down behind the scenes on the gravel especially laid for him. We were decidedly nervous on the first appearance of our four-footed friend, whose role was to counterfeit the high-stepping horses of the brilliant French court. When his cue was given, there was only an ominous silence. I repeated the word in a louder voice, when such a braying and scuffling were heard as sent the audience into roars of laughter. Although it was one of the most serious situations of the play, I could not help joining in their mirth until the tears rolled down my cheeks.

A Shining Example.

"Do you think that a good national policy ?"

General Manager Underwood of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, has a plan to unify and simplify the titles of officials. Several of the officers have duties to perform which are not shown by their official designation, and on July 1st the following changes will be made: Harvey Middleton, now general superintendent of motive power, will be mechanical superintendent in charge of all shops, and the construction of and repairs to locomotives and cars. David Lee, engineer maintenance of way, lines west of Ohio river. will be superintendent maintenance of way, trans-Ohio division, and D. A. Williams will be superintendent of stores.

"MY CLOAK!" SHE EXCLAIMED.

covered the substitution-just possible quick conviction came to me as my -and in her presence my faith was capable of any stretch.

Her eyes-fixed full upon me-expressed nothing but the most unqualified amazement.

"That-I-exchanged - yesterday?" she repeated slowly. "What do you mean, Mr. Fort?"

I had made the plunge; I was bound to ge on.

"When you left the carriage at Molton Junction yesterday," I replied, "you took with you my Gladstone bag in place of your own. You have not discovered the mistake, evidently. I will restore you your own property; it is up stairs."

"Stay," she said, as I was about to leave her. "I have not the least idea what you mean. I was not at Molton Sunction yesterday; I have no black bag: Mr. Fort, why do you speak so strangely? I do not understand you."

Her nervousness had-disappeared; she was simply astonished, not as yet indignant-that was to come presently."

"I hardly know, Miss Branscombe," I replied, "what you wish me to say. If it were not for the bag, which, as you must see, it is imperative I should recover, I should not allude to our meeting of yesterday."

"Our meeting!"-and now her tone was tinged with hauteur, and she drew herself up with a dignity which set well on her. "We met here, lott even- spoke; she showed no consciousness.

eyes met hers-this woman was in the secret, whatever it might be. She was Nona's confidante and assistant. Nona was indeed helpless in the hands of her unscrupulous cousin and this artful Abigail.

"Shall I give it to Austin, sir?" repeated Woodward; and at that moment Miss Elmslie entered the room.

"What is it?" she exclaimed. "Your bag? Oh, I am so glad you have found it, Mr. Fort! How did it get back?"

"Unfortunately, this is not my lost property, Miss Elmslie," I explained. "It is the lady's."

"How odd!" she ejaculated, turning it around and examining it curiously. 'Have you opened it?"

"No; my key does not fit, and I have hesitated to break it open. hoped to restore it to the owner."

"You will have to open it, will you, not, unless you get some news of your bag soon? There may be an addressinformation inside."

"Exactly!" I hailed the idea, Hitherto I had been so fully occupied with the certainty that the Gladstone belonged to Miss Branscombe that I had not thought of this simple proceeding. "If you have a bunch of keys in the house I might try them after breakfast, and, failing that, I could find a locksmith somewhere, I suppose?" I glanced at Miss Branscombe as I

"Yes," I returned, briefly.

"But there is generally more than one copy of a will, is there not?"

"Generally; but in this case there had not been time to make another copy."

"If it should not be found, what will be done?"

"I can bardly tell; there are two or three oburses open. But it must be found, Miss Branscombe"--I tried to speak severely. "It is incredible that such an important document should be accidentally missing for any length of time, and in the face of the efforts I am making to recover it."

"But if it should be really lost, then I cannot inherit my uncle's estates? Is it not so. Mr. Fort?"

"In that case," I admitted, "there would be-ahem-difficulties."

Never was a man in a more painful position. Here was I, under the eyes of the woman I loved, forced either to play her hand-which was showed, in her simplicity, all too plainly-or to perjure myself in order to save her. My lawyer-like tact and presence of mind utterly deserted me.

"The will must be found, Miss Branscombe," I repeated weakly. "Its suppression amounts to-to felony!"

My voice faltered as I uttered the veiled threat; I felt like a brute-with that pathetic glance full on me, too and the droop of the young figure in its clinging black garments, telling sc eloquently of past and present suffer. ing, straight to my heart. My darling-how could I torture her? She bore my last stroke without a change of countenance; she could not well be paler, it is true, but the eyes still looked unflinchingly into mine. My brutal insinuation-as I now felt it to be-had passed her by.

VANISHED AS OTHERS CARRIES MEALS TO WORKMEN.

How an Enterprising Pennsylvania Boy Is Making His Fortune,

From the Philadelphia Record: Thos. Mintzer, a 14-year-old lad of Conshohocken, is probably the most energetic youngster in Montgomery county. Through his own devices he earns $15 a week and only works on an average of six hours a day. His business is meal carrier. About three months ago Tommy called on the employes of the different mills and offered to carry their meals for 15 cents a week. As many of the mills are running night and day his offer included suppers as well as dinners. Most of the employes were paying 25 cents a week for the same service, and the boy's offer was promptly accepted. At first Tommy was able to carry the dinners in a large express wagon, which was hauled by a goat, but as he steadily gained customers it became necessary to get a large push cart, which he fitted up with shelves. His business finally increased so much that he had to hire a horse and wagon. His customers now number 130. In order to give general satisfaction Tommy starts out with the dinners at 11 a. m. and delivers those that are farthest away. He then makes a second collection at 11:45 o'clock, and, as these customers work in mills near their homes, the boy manages to have all the dinners delivered by 12:05 noon. His weekly collections average $19.50 and as he pays $4.50 for the use of the horse and wagon it leaves $15 clear, which is more than some of his oldest customers earn in the mill.

DR. KEIL'S DREAM OF JUSTICE AMONG MEN. His Old Missouri Colony Is Only a

Memory-Prospered for a While but Was Finally Killed by Accumulation of Vast Wealth.

(Special Letter.)

Few of those who read the books of Bellamy and who dream of an ideal commonwealth, where each citizen is equal to every other citizen and all are alike rich with a common fund, are aware that those ideas embraced in the maxim-"equal rights to all and special privileges to none"-were once actually applied in the establishment and subsequent existence of what is historically known as the Bethel Colony, founded and operated on the winding shores of North river, in Shelby held and preached tenets of faith that

R. McAnally (now deceased), the erudite editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, in an editorial on the subject of communism, asserted that the Oneida community in New York, the Bethel Colony and its off-shoot, the Aurora (Ore.) Colony, were the notable instances of the application of the theory of communism upon American soil. Aside from this slight mention the fame of this singular experiment has been confined to fireside narratives, as the historian of its achievements seems to have been omitted from its caravan, or left behind in the long journey. Like nearly all modern co-operative schemes of similar character this was conceived and planned in the brain of a religious enthusiast, who doubtless dreamed that he was a chosen power to usher in a brighter day for human. kind. Dr. William Keil, the founder, prophet, priest and king of this western Utopia, was a Methodist preacher of German descent, who labored among his race and kindred in portions of Pennsylvania and Ohio; how long he continued in the ministry or how successful were his labors can not be ascertained, but for some reason, presumably that of preaching strange doctrine, he was "hauled upon the carpet" by his ecclesiastical superiors, by whom he was deprived of his ministerial authority. He then formulated this communistic scheme, organized this society, and with his followers emigrated westward and founded this colony, which survives its wreck so far as appearances are concerned, in the present town of Bethel, where the quaint buildings of the early colonists are still pointed out to the inquisitive traveler. These colonists secured by entry or purchase a large tract of valuable land. 1,100 acres of which was inclosed as the common field where the individuals labored under the direction of overseers appointed by Dr. Keil. A common boarding house was erected, where the unmarried male members of the community resided, and a common storehouse was kept where the families were supplied with their allotted portions of provisions, the storekeeper managing the accounts and supplying the necessaries according to the communal regulations. The attention of those frugal people was directed toward manufacturing, and in the palmy and prosperous days of the enterprise Bethel was a miniature Lowell; cloth was spun from the wool of the colony sheep, which roamed in vast herds over the virgin prairies, attended by the designated shepherds, and the skin of wild deer, which had not then disappeared from our horizon, were made into hats and gloyes. Distilleries and breweries were in operation, where the bloom of the fields of rye and corn was preserved in the translucent glow of red liquor and lager beer, the influence of which can county, Mo. Several years ago Dr. D. ] must have been a cross between the apostles' creed and the teachings of the Koran. Dr. Kell claimed to be inspired, like the Apostle Paul, and the older colonists acquiesced in this assumption and rendered him the homage due to a superior creature. The observance of religious ceremonies he rigidly enforced. Each Sabbath morning the inhabitants were zealously rounded up by the primitive policeman or burgemasters, and this may in part account for the immense attendance of the famous old church. East of Bethel and down the picturesque North river was erected the mansion house of Dr. Keil, where he lived and dispensed the hospitality of a feudal monarch. The house, with its numerous appurtenances, was called "Elim," was built by the common labor, and was a part of the possessions of the colony, but it was designed and used as the residence of the leader or governor. A commodious hanquet hall served its purpose, and there is a tradition that Dr. Keil lived and regned here in this western wilderness after the fashion of the great King Solomon, with perhaps the major portion of Solomon's wives and concubines left out.

Perhaps the crowning work of these industrious people, from an architectural standpoint, was the erection of the colony church, which until recently stood in simple grandeur as a memory of better days. This edifice was constructed of brick and stone, after the type of churches in the fatherland. It was paved with tiling, provided with an organ loft. It was crowded each Sunday with the colonists, who, in the zenith of their power, numbered perhaps a thousand souls. The type of religion can not be well defined or classified, as Dr. Keil was the leader in things spiritual as well as temporal. From the information that is attainable he seems to have preached a sort of polyglot utilitarian doctrine of former days.

Tales of the natural beauty and fertility of this region were borne to the ears of the leader of the colonists and around his fireside were discussed the plans and hopes of future domain beyond the Rockies. Under the direction of Dr. Keil an infant colony had been formed by the prospectors, to which had been given the inspiring name of "Aurora," and though the dreams of its originators have faded, like the gleam of the borealis the town still flourishes in the state of Oregon. The vision of the Bethel colonists was broadened by this enterprise, and their gaze turned toward the sunset. In their rude plastered houses they thought much about the distant valley of the Willamette whence came the difficult to describe, but if all accounts good tidings from their brethren. It are true there were many pious couls was the day of the ox team, and the among them, even though their leader. journey would consume months of time, yet many wished to undertake it.

Among others who caught the western fever was a favorite son of Dr. Keil, who dreamed fond dreams of the land, of promise. After much solicitation his father consented that he might go, and he began preparing for his departure from the mansion house upon a journey that would span half the continent, but which seemed to him as the coming of a holiday. The newly awakened flame of ambition burned with increasing fervor in his youthful blood, but there came a fateful hour in which he was seized with another fever, deadlier and more ardent than the first, which added its fire to the flame of the other, increasing rather than diminishing the glow. In his delirium the long-cherished Aurora was more real than ever to his disordered fancy; he "babbled o' the green fields," he saw the somber beauty of the cascades, and could hear the surf beat on the distant sea; there may have been a fair-haired German girl whose beckoning hand allured him; at least he exacted a promise from his father that in the event of his expected death he should be buried among the scenes where his mind and heart had already lingered.

He died; and amid the gloom which pervaded the mansion house at Elim his father made haste to fulfill the vow to his lamented son. An emigrant train was organized among the colonists who wished to depart, the body was encased in an iron coffin containing alcohol, placed in the front wagon of the train drawn by six mules, and amid the lamentations of the remaining members of the colony there was begun what is perhaps the strangest and most stupendous funeral march in the history of our land. / After montas

Don't Like Them.

It is interesting to know that there are some people who very strongly object to being photographed. The late Empress of Austria was one of these, and for many years before her death eluded the vigilance of all photographers. The dislike of the late Empress Elizabeth to the camera is shared by the ex-Empress Eugenie, who has not been photographed for thirty years. Three decades have passed since John Ruskin was photographed, and only once has John Hare allowed himself to be thus victimized; this was after a performance at Balmoral and by the express desire of Queen Victoria. Miss Marie Corelli is one of the very few people who have never sat to the camera.

encountered in that city a condition of things which must certainly set humanitarians and sanitary experts to thinking. In the tenement districts are found "cellar flats," dark, noisome, foul and pestilential. Over 4,000 persons are said to inhabit these reeking caves under houses and shops. Whole families are found living in one or two rooms that / have practically" no light. Foul drains and leaky plumbing furnish moisture and mildew, and malarious exhalations of the rain soaked soil come up through rotten floors. Sickness and disease abound in the cellar flats, and the little children that try to grow up in them are apt to succomb to diphtheria. This condition seemed to be nobody's business in particular, until attention was called to it by a public spirited Chicago woman, and the health department of the city is now moving in the matter, compelling the landlords to either close up the tenements or put them in sanitary condition. It ought to be the duty of health boards in great cities to see that no such conditions exist. Many people will learn with surprise that there is a diamond field in the great lake region of this country. This region, according to Professor William H. Hobbs of the Madison university, is about 600 miles in length by 200 miles in width, with its longer axis trending almost exactly northwest and southeast, and it embraces in all eight localities in Michigan, Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois and Minnesota, where diamonds have been found. Professor Hobbs, in a recent number of The Journal of Geology, has an interesting paper giving an account of the different discoveries of diamonds in this region to date and says that 17 well identified diamonds, varying in weight from one-half karat to more than 21 karats, have been discovered in the region referred to. The publication of Professor Hobbs' report will probably cause the farmers and others in the lake region to carefully examine all the pebbles they run across, but there is some doubt as to their finding gems in sufficient quantities to make them all millionaires.

there come to the hearts and pockets of the American people an appeal so eloquent and significant as this in behalf of Porto Rico, and the liberality of our response will demonstrate to those who so lately became citizens of the United States that the new flag that floats over the Island is more than a sentimental emblem of abstract principles, that it brings with it new consideration by the government for the people and the desire to extend to them the benefits of civilization and humanity. It is interesting to speculate as to what the horse really thought of the bicycle, if he thinks at all, and how he regards the automobile, which is relegating him to the state of "innocuous desuetude." Some light has been thrown on the question, which indicates that the horse is not an indifferent spectator of his dethronement, but experiences all the varying emotions of rage, hate, grief and despair. Recently a festive cyclist in a western town amused himself by riding in circles around a slowly ambling horse. The animal lured the wheelman on by pretended indifference until at last the hated machine was within reach of its heels, and then it lashed out with all the force of pent up rage and hate, landing heavily on both wheelman and wheel. As an isolated case this is perhaps not alarming, but what if the incident marks a new attitude of the equine family all over the land? It may be that they propose to adopt this plan of getting even and inaugurate an aggressive campaign of demolition against the bicycle and the automobile. A new and somewhat peculiar illustration of the old adage about marrying in haste to repent at leisure is furnished by one John Bentz of Covington, Ky, On Aug. 2 he obtained a decree of divorce from his wife on the ground of desertion and two days later married another woman. His inordinate haste aroused the indignation of the judge who granted the decree, and the latter immediately called the case again in open court and set aside his former judgment. Mr. Bentz thus finds himself possessed of one more wife than the law permits, and nobody will have any great amount of sympathy for him in his predicament. The moral sense of the public is becoming shocked at the frequency with which the divorce court's "funeral baked meats furnish forth the marriage tables."

The popularity of golf in England is proving a blessing to the farmers and landholders in the near vicinity of large towns. In many places almost fabulous sums have been paid for club grounds, and lands which had hitherto been considered worthless for agricultural purposes have acquired Arrangements for taking the census of, Cuba are now practically completed and it is expected that the work will be finished by December next, in order that congress may have before it the data it will need to enable it to legislate intelligibly concerning the island. The census will not be as exhaustive and as complete as that to be taken in the United States next year, but it will doubtless answer the purposes for which the inquiries are made. No attempt will be made to collect manufacturing or mortality statistics, but the exact population of Cuba, as to which there is much uncertainty, will be ascertained. The enumerators will endeavor to find out how many adult males there are, and what proportion should be classified as whites and as blacks. That may be difficult to ascertain, for the two colors shade into one another more than they do in the United States. An attempt will be made also to find how many of the inhabitants can read and write and how many are landowners or taxpayers. With this information at its command the national legislators will be better able to tell how to establish in Cuba that stable government which has been promised the people of the island. In nearly all of the larger cities of the country the long suffering people are crying out against the prevailing smoke nuisance. There is a general consensus of opinion as to the causes and the remedy, but there is not much encouragement held out that the nuisance will be abated. In some quarters it is claimed that much of the smoke from locomotives is due to the fact that they are compelled to draw too heavy loads. This, with the use of soft coal and the lack of smoke consumers, fills the atmosphere with coal gases and dust in the neighborhood of railroads. The smoke from manufactories comes from the same/causes. Furnaces are forced to their utmost, the poorest quality of coal is used, and incompetent firemen are often employed. The result is an imposition on the rights of residents and a source of unhealthfulness. The worst feature of it is that the evil is constantly growing, and no effectual steps are being taken to check it. Uncle/Russell Sage, who the other day celebrated his eighty-second birthday by getting down to his office a little earlier than usual and working a little harder than usual, thinks he has discovered the secret of longevity. "My theory for long life," says the venerable financier, "is that temperance lengthens the days of all. Plenty of. sleep and escape worry as much as possible. Worry and lack of rest break down the strongest of men." Uncle Russell never walked the floor. He always "let the other fellow walk." Thus Uncle Russell is a hale and hearty octogenarian, while the "other fellow" is probably dead or in feeble heålth.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Cost.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. ] went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble. I shall not be without it in my house hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.-G. H. WILson, Liveryman, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

THE BOOBINGLES.

"My dear," said Mr. Boobingle,glancing up from his paper, "I remark a considerable decline in the stock market. If this continues much longer, you will have to do without your new bonnet."

"Indeed, I shall not, Mr. Boobingle," rejoined his wife, "for the last four years you have remarked the very same thing at just this time when the spring styles commenced to appear, and I have made, unmade and remade my old hat times enough. This time I must have a new hat."

"But you look so charming in that one, it becomes you so well," said Mr. Boobingle, having as usual recourse to flattery to gain his point; "and I am sure you never can find anything half as suitable for your style of beauty."

Mrs. Boobingle appeared touched by this delicate compliment, remembered, however, that she had been caught by such remarks on several previous occasions, and resolved therefore to be wary.

"Thank you, my dear, for the complinent," she replied, sweetly, "but I really think I can find a bonnet that will look just as well and at the same time be new. I am sick and tired of that old thing."

"But, my love," exclaimed her husband, "when you bought it you said it was perfectly sweet."

"So it was at that time," replied the spouse, "but we must change our ideas with the times, and when I was in town today I saw some real dears of bonnets."

"I presume you call that frightful monument the minister's wife wore last Sunday a real dear," said Mr. Boobingle, sarcastically. "The price of it may have been high enough, but it, obstructed my view to such an extent that I could not see the front part of the church at all."

"I hope I have better taste than Mrs. Goodman," replied Mrs. Boobingle, modestly. "It really is pitiful the way she dresses."

"How much do you think you would need for a hat that would suit your ideas?" asked Mr. Boobingle, seemingly submitting to the inevitable.

"I think I-could get along with $35." she responded, laying down her needle-before being admitted to the club, was obliged to take a solemn oath never to marry and to forswear all intercourse with the gentle sex. For about two years the "Bowlers," as the town people dubbed them, thrived, and the dearest wish of each sprouting adolescent was to become a member of this celebrated organization and thus enjoy the luster which it lent to all who belonged to it.

All went well with the "Bowlers" until one day an awful event occurred, an event which brought a blush of shame on the unsullied brow of every member. This blow came wrapped up in a pure-white envelope and read as follows: "Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sweetyouth invite you to the marriage of their daughter, Susan Sweetyouth, to Mr. Buncombe Bowler, Feb. 11, 188-.' Buncombe Bowler to be married! Betrayed by their president! Such were the thoughts that traversed the confused minds of the Bachelors, each one of whom had received one of the handsomely engraved invitations, and one and all they hurried to the house of the founder of their anti-marriage club.

Here a jumble of reproaches, appeals and threats fell upon the dazed head of the "Bowler" chief, but all in vain. Under the hypnotic spell of Susie Sweetyouth's mystic charms Buncombe Bowler remained steadfast and persisted in staining the fair name of the organization which bore his name.

The Bowler-Sweetyouth nuptials took place with great eclat and the dishonored Bachelors attended in a body. After the ceremony they betook themselves to the clubrooms, where they held a solemn autopsy over the remains of the Bowler Bachelors' club, now only an all too prominent mark for the jokes of the village wags, and disgraced in the eyes of the world. The club only survived the blow for a period of two weeks, when the treasurer eloped with a deacon's daughter, taking with him the funds of the club, amounting to $6.75, and all the table linen, which shortly afterward graced the table of the happy pair.

The Bowler Bachelors' club was no more. Gradually and without apparent heed to the solemn vows they once had taken, they succumbed one by one to the charms of the maidens of Lowdown Heights, until finally they had all united their budding destinies with some one of the sex which they had previously feigned to scorn.

It was at this critical juncture that Buncombe Bowler again rose to the occasion and suggested reforming the old club on new lines. Forgetful of the perfidy of their former chief, the now staid benedicts allowed themselves to be induced into joining the new organization, which was called the "Hearty Eaters' club," in honor of their president, Mr. Buncombe Bowler, whose talents in the gastronomical line were without rival. There was one thing. however, which the members insisted upon-and that was that their old treasurer, who had lately returned to town, bringing with him his wife and the table linen, be blackballed, for, while they could pardon a man for running away to get married, they could not overlook his using the sacred anti-marriage table linen of the "Bowlers" on his bridal table, and Mr. Quickaway was therefore refused admittance to the new club.

Strict Quarantine Established Against New Orleans.

ONE DEATH FROM THE DISEASE

Board of Health at Indianapolis Receives Report of a Death from the Plague in Knox County-Precautions Against Its Spread.

News was received at Mobile, Ala, that three cases of yellow fever and one death had occurred in New Orleans. The board of health was immediately called together, and a strict quarantine was declared against the infected city.

An autopsy held at New Orleans on the body of young F. Adolph snowed the death to be due to yellow fever.

Yellow Fever in Indiana.

The Indiana state board of health received a report of a death from yellow fever from the health officials of Knox county. The report did not give the name of the man. He recently arrived from Cuba. The conditions are favorable for a spread of yellow fever, but elaborate precautions have been taken by the health authorities.

Out Live Stock

It is doubtful just what position the American stock interests will hold at the Paris exposition next year, as there is a manifest desire among Americans to keep their high-priced breeding stock at home. They are in favor of sending fat cattle that may be killed at the end of their time of exhibition, but they are too fearful of contagious diseases to risk animals that must be returned to this country. It is said to be a fact that stock diseases are far more prevalent in Europe than in this country. America has, at great expense and after years of warfare, exterminated some of the worst diseases, and it is not probable that either the Secretary of Agriculture or the leading stockmen of the country want to give the said diseases a chance to re-establish themselves on our soil. The possibility of contagion at Paris is very great. Animals will be brought from all parts of Europe, and it is possible that more or less disease will be brought with them.

The government is making slow but sure progress in its investigations of hog cholera and swine plague. Since 1891 this work has been going steadily forward. Progress has been impeded by the fact that one serum could not be produced that would be equally efficacious as against hog cholera and swine plague. Nevertheless it was found that by injecting animals with both kinds of serums or the products of hog cholera and swine plague, a very large percentage of the animals was saved. A report on the tests made in Page County, Iowa, says: "To give the general results with the work carried out under the direction of Dr. Dorset, it may be stated that out of 196 animals treated with the mixed serums 161 were saved, or about 82 per cent. The disease existed on all of the farms where treatment was carried out, a number of animals had already died, and about 50 per cent of the animals treated were ill at the time of injection with the serum. In the check herds there were originally 429 animals, and the disease had begun both in these check herds and in the treated herds about the same time. In the herds which were not treated, only about 15 per cent of the animals recovered. Comparing these two sets it would appear that the serum had reduced the mortality about 67 per cent. It is understood, of course, that all of the animals were under the same conditions after treatment as before. As a rule. the animals appeared to begin to improve very shortly after the injection of the serum. One herd was treated with a culture alone without serum. Only 40 per cent of the herd so treated was saved. In another case a herd which was in very poor condition at the time of inoculation was treated with a mixed swine plague serum and a dead culture. Eighty per cent of these animals was saved, while in a third similar case where the condition of the animals was very poor, only 30 per cent was saved."

HIS BREAST SWELLED WITH CON-SCIOUS PRIDE.

work, and preparing for the struggle which she knew was sure to come.

"Thirty-five dollars! My dear, do you think I have been up in the Klondike or used to be cashier in a bank? Thirty-five dollars, indeed! Why, my hat never costs over $5."

"Yes, but your hats have no trimming on them and therefore are not so expensive."

"Well, I should say not. Great Joseph, $35 for a hat!" And Mr. Boobingle blew a long whistle to signify his surprise.

"Now, dear, you know I paid $40 for my last bonnet, which you like so well," replied his better half, thus turning his own weapons against him, "and besides I must tell you what Mr. Neighborly, who lives just across the street, said about you, dear Blodgett. Mr. Neighborly said he thought you were the best man to your family he ever saw."

Mr. Boobingle appeared nonplused for a moment, but soon asked timidly: "Don't you think, darling, you could get along with $10 this time and next fall you can find just the prettiest hat you can find?"

But his wife was resolute. Only too often had the looked forward to that fallacious "next year," only to find that when it had at last arrived it was still next year, and did not produce one of those round pasteboard boxes, which usually contain some "creation" dear to the feminine heart.

"What an idea!" she exclaimed. "A fine hat, indeed, I would have if I had to buy it with that sum. _ Why, you would be ashamed to be seen with me attired in such a rig. No, sir, I must have $15 or nothing. But understand, Mr. Boobingle, that if I cannot have a new bonnet I shall insist upon your resigning from the 'Hearty-Eaters' club and saving your dues, which, as I understand, amount to $50 per year."

This club was composed of a lot of convivial spirits, who, in their younger days, had belonged to an association which rejoiced in the euphonious name of the "Bowler Bachelors." The Bowler Bachelors' club had been started by a man named Bowler, and each member, raising the wind are unable to stop it.

All these thoughts came to Mr. Boobingle as he meditated over the ultimatum of his wife, and he decided finally that, rather than abandon the "Hearty Eaters," he would yield his point and allow his wife to have her new bonnet.

"My dear," said he, wishing to appear magnanimous rather than beaten. while it will be quite a struggle. I feel that I must keep up the reputation of my family in all matters, therefore you may have your hat."

"Oh, you dear, good Blodgett!" cried Mrs. Boobingle, rushing into his pudgy arms and embracing him. "I knew you would let me have my bonnet, and I promise you it will be a 'dear.' "

And it was a dear, as Mr. Boobingle learned to his sorrow. When on the following Sunday he accompanied his wife to church, his breast swelled with conscious pride as he observed the effect of Mrs. Boobingle's "creation" on the female portion of the congregation. hut his pride turned to dismay when he received the next day a bill thus worded: "For one hat, $50; paid on account, $35. Please remit balance." And that evening, after a rather stormy interview with his wife, as Mr. Boobingle slowly wandered toward the Hearty Eaters' club, he thought to himself that everything was costly in this world, even a "dear of a bonnet."

Wood Floors in Poultry Houses

We notice that a contemporary objects to board floors in poultry houses, because they get wet and soaked with filth from the poultry droppings. Whenever that condition arises, it is a positive proof that the poultry house is overcrowded, or lacks light and ventilation, or is not cleaned out as often as it should be. The writer of this has a poultry house that has been in use for some years, but in it no such condition has arisen as is described in the said journal as a necessary consequence of having a board floor. The building is 12x20 feet and is well lighted on the east, south and west. In summer two of the sashes are taken out and wire screens put in. In this house not to exceed fifty fowls are kept at any one time, and generally the number does not exceed twentyfive. The light and ventilation keep the floor dry in all seasons. The droppings become soon dry and the house is cleaned out in large part by sweeping, the shovel being used only immediately under the roosts. It is better to have the floor of matched lumber, as there are then no cracks to annoy in cleaning out the house. As to rats, there is no danger at all if the floor is so built that it will be a foot or two above the ground. There is no point of support at which a rat could begin operations to gnaw his way into the poultry house.

Economical Feeding.-An economical food is early-cut hay, silage from mature corn, oats and peas. An uneconomical way is to give the herd late cut hay, silage from immature corn, roots, new and untried crops. The reason for the early cutting of hay is because you get more digestible protein or milk forming food than in a late cut. Mature corn only should go into the silo; otherwise it causes an expensive watering of stock. Corn has proven to be more digestible when it is cut just as the kernel begins to glaze. Experiments have proven that the silage of everything is the most economical way of handling the grain crop, owing to the amount of milk given and the amount of butter produced being more on the food from the silo than in other ways of harvesting It.--Prof. J. L. Hill.

A New Firm.

A new law firm has been constituted in Waukegan by Attorneys R. W Coon and J. K. Orvis entering into partnership and consolidating their respective business. The new ar rangement went, into effect September 1, and the members of the firm will occupy offices together as soon as the necessary arrangements can be perfected.

R. W. Coon, the senior member of the firm, is an attorney of many years practice in other counties, and for some time previous to his location in Lake county he was states attorney for Boone county. Upon entering the journalist field of Lake county as editor and proprietor of the Gazette, Mr. Coon laid aside his law practice owing to the pressing demands upon his time made by his newspaper business, but retiring from the Gazette after twelve. years of successful management of the paper, he resumed the practice of his profession with the same success attained in former years.

Mr. Orvis, the junior member, has been located in Waukegan several years, establishing an office here immediately after his graduation from University of Wisconsin. He is a young man of excent attributes and an indomitable hustler, which with his educational preparation has brought him a renumerative business. The new firm will be a strong one.

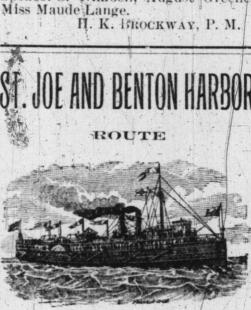

The future location of the firm will be in the Mohrmann block on Washington street, where they will occupy the office rooms on the second floor of the building.

He was born with an imperfect heart, the valves, if and vacant lots within the village re- any, not separating the venous from the arterial blood. Physicians claimed he could not live to the age of fourteen, but he more than doubled that age: The mixing of the two bloods caused him to liave a complexion that changed with the weather. On pleasant days the arterial predominated and he was fairly white; in cloudy weather the yenous predominated and he changed to a blueish color. There is no record of a case of this kind where the subject lived to such an age. His imperfect heart did not effect him mentally, as he was one of the best read young men in Sycamore.
