BARRINGTON, ILL. OCTOBER 14, 1899.

$1.25 A YEAR.

PALATINE LOCALS.

A. G. SMITH, Local Editor

Woodmen meeting to-night.
Every house in Palatine is occupied.
Will Filbert returned to New York yesterday.
Mrs. Milton Foskett has been quite ill this week.

Bert Bennet has moved into Louis Leiseberg's house.

C. Julian and family drove to Elgin on a visit Tuesday.

Attorney M. D. Brown of Chicago was in town Tuesday.

George Ruppeter returned to his home in Arizona Tuesday.

When you wish to subscribe for any periodical call on A. G. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Heise of Lake Zurich were in town Wednesday.

The Literary society will meet with Philip Matthei next Friday night.

Charles Morris is slowly recovering from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

J. W. Harris of Arlington Heights visited Ernest Bentler and family Sunday.

The Athletic club will give a dance in Batterman's hall Thanksgiving evening.

Miss Ida Smith of Nunda visited relatives and friends here the first of the week.

About fifty people came home from the Chicago day celebration at midnight Monday.

Ralph Sutherland of Nebraska is visiting with his aunt, Mrs. H. C. Matthei, and family.

A Park Ridge gentleman has rented M. D. Brown's residence in the east part of the village.

Mrs. L. French returned Friday from a visit with her niece, Mrs. Flora Joiner, in Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Downing have been entertaining their granddaughter from Iowa this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Blockway and Miss Lombard of Barrington visited with Palatine friends Sunday.

Mrs. Ann Schaeffer of Chicago has been visiting with old friends and acquaintances here this week.

Mr. Clark shipped a car-load of pigeons out of Chicago the first of the week to stock his pidgeonery.

Dr. Black entertained his father and mother from Kalamazoo, Mich., a few days the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. George P. Kimball of Pasadena, Cal., were guests of Mrs. H. P. Williams Monday and Tuesday.

Mrs. Cooper went to Lake Bluff Thursday to stay with her daughter, Miss Deborah. They will return to Palatine for the holidays.

The REVIEW has printed wedding anniversary invitations in silver for the 25th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Keyes' marriage to be held next Wednesday at their home here.

Mr. Armstrong, engineer for the Chicago Varnish Co., spent Sunday with Engineer John Bergman, and also visited with Henry Bicknese at Plum Grove. He proved himself quite a hunter while here.

The following appointments were made by the Rock River Conference Tuesday: Rev. F. B. Hardin, Palatine; Rev. W. H. Smith, Nunda; Rev. T. E. Ream, Grace church, Rockford; Rev. J. B. Robinson, Barrington.

Mrs. Barnett of Chicago lectured on the moral effect of lynching at the Methodist church Friday night. The audience was not large but it listened to a very instructive lecture delivered in a manner that received most favorable comment from those present. Mrs. Barnett has lectured in the large cities of America and Europe, and Palatine feels highly favored by hearing her truths in regard to a disgraceful existing evil. The Literary society would do well to give the public more such treats, if the people show a desire for them.

A gentleman from Chicago has been looking at the James Wilson property in the north part of town with a view to purchasing.

The Ladies Concordia society will hold their big bazaar in Hunnerberg's hall next Thursday and Friday. A grand dance will be held on Friday night. Admission to hall 25c, children 10c. The 25c ticket entitles the holder to a chance on a prize.

Prof. C. H. Cutenesky of the German Lutheran school has severed his connection as teacher of that school and soon starts for Rochester, Minnesota, where he has been engaged as teacher at a much larger salary. A teacher has not been engaged in his place.

Doctors Davis and Muffat expected to perform an operation on Mr. Filbert's head Thursday, but after examining the wound they found that it was not in a condition to have the silver plate placed in the skull. The operation will be performed in about six weeks. The doctors are hopeful of a complete recovery. The patient can now move his right leg, and the physicians hope that when the brain goes back into its place that the paralysis in the right side will disappear. At present the brain protrudes above the inner membrane, but will probably gradually be drawn back to its position as the wound heals.

Death of John Allard.

John Allard, one of Palatine's oldest and most respected citizens, died last Sunday night at his home in this place of heart failure.

The deceased had gone to Barrington Sunday morning to attend a sick horse and did not return home until the afternoon and ate nothing while away. He ate a hearty supper and, after talking with his wife and daughter a short time, he retired to bed. About 11 o'clock Mrs. Allard heard him make a noise and went into his room with a lamp, but found him lying quiet, and supposing that he was asleep, she returned to her bedroom. Bert Pierce came home on the midnight train and when he came into the house Mrs. Allard told him to see how grandfather was, as she had not noticed his usual heavy breathing. He went into the room and looked at his grandfather and told her that he was sleeping well. He was indeed sleeping well, for the death angel had come and carried him to the land of everlasting rest. They did not discover that he was dead until Monday morning, when they attempted to wake him.

John Henry Allard was born in Batavia, Genesee county, N. Y., June 26, 1825. His parents came to Geneva, Kane county, Ill., in 1836 and John, after working out his time with a farmer near his old home, came to Chicago. From Chicago he walked to Geneva to reach his parents—a bare-footed and penniless boy. From Geneva he went to Aurora to take charge of a harness shop.

He enlisted in the war against Mexico, having charge of a commissary wagon under Scott and received an honorable discharge, after which he returned to Geneva. He then hunted and trapped with the Indians from Geneva to Chicago until his marriage to Miss C. A. Matteson of Geneva on June 18, 1854. He worked in the flour mill at Geneva for several years and practiced veterinary surgery at the same time. He next went to Carpentersville to take charge of the flour mill at that place.

He came to Palatine July 8, 1867, and opened up a harness shop in the upper part of what is now Wm. Scherling's wagon shop. The inside work impaired his health and he devoted his entire time to veterinary surgery. He soon gained a reputation in this profession and he was called for many miles around. He was veterinary surgeon for the West Chicago Street Railway company for one year. He was elected town assessor in 1868 and served until 1896, with the exception of two years. He was town collector in 1898.

He left besides a widow, one son and two daughters—Henry Allard and Mrs. Ellen R. Pierce of this place and Mrs. Anna A. Daniels of Hudson, Ia.

The funeral services were held in the Methodist church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. F. B. Hardin preaching the funeral sermon. A large congregation of old settlers were present. A quartette, composed of Mrs. W. L. Smyser, Miss Martha Bollman, Rev. F. B. Hardin and Will Mosser, rendered appropriate selections.

The remains were laid to rest in Palatine cemetery.

Bank Robber Identified.

The Palatine bank robber has been identified as Dr. W. L. Lewis a young man who, as he proved himself to be here, was well educated and of good parentage. He was identified by his brother and an uncle. The young man spent most of his life in Wisconsin, but was in Chicago a few weeks before the robbery here. He sold mining stock to Chicago parties who found out that he had defrauded them, and when accused he promised to make the matter right. It is said he came out to Palatine to raise the money.

He was a single man and his mother is a widow in poor health. The young man became addicted to the morphine habit and went to Klondike to overcome it. He returned, but soon fell into the habit again and his friends began to realize that he was no longer responsible for his actions. His statement in regard to Mr. Filbert is proven false, as the people here knew it was, and the identity is a great relief to all who are acquainted with the facts in the case.

The body was exhumed at Downing yesterday and positively identified as that of Dr. William Lewis by Dr. S. D. Lewis of Milwaukee, a brother of the dead man, and by C. A. Partridge of Waukegan. The identification was established mainly by the gold fillings in the man's teeth.

Dr. Lewis' body will be taken to Honey Creek, Wis., for burial in the family burial lot.

Prosperity is Here.

Anyone doubting it can be convinced by visiting any of the towns in western Iowa and Minnesota on the lines of the Chicago & North-Western Railway. People in the immediate vicinity of these towns are quick to see the advantage and are already in advance of the railroads, building stores, residences, elevators, lumber offices, etc., etc., but there is room for more. The country is splendid, and will in all cases amply support all lines of business and trade, and in most of the towns the best locations are still open.

Lots in these towns cannot help but be safe and paying investments, as they are still on the market at the original low prices. For particulars address, J. F. Cleveland, land commissioner, Chicago & North-Western Railway Company, Chicago.

FOR RENT—The O'Connell farm, near Barrington Center. Apply to M. C. McIntosh, Barrington.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK

DEMOCRATIC LEADERSHIP.

Congressman David A. De Armond of the Sixth Missouri district, and Congressman J. D. Richardson of the Fifth district of Tennessee, are the leading aspirants to the leadership of the democratic minority in the house of representatives.

The opening of the Fifty-sixth congress will be notable in one particular, that both democrats and republicans will change leaders.

It is already settled that David B. Henderson of Iowa shall succeed Thomas B. Reed of Maine as speaker.

It is strange that there should be more determined rivalry for the leadership of the minority than the majority.

In the case of the democrats there are three aspirants for the place held by Bailey—the two mentioned and Congressman John H. Bankhead of the Sixth district of Alabama. The fight is considered to be between De Armond and Richardson, however, and Bankhead is thought to have a chance only in the event of a deadlock in the democratic caucus.

Congressman Joseph Bailey of Texas resigned the democratic leadership in the house at the close of the last session.

THE CARTER CASE.

The president has approved the sentence imposed by court-martial on Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., and a formal order has been issued from the war department directing the execution of the sentence. Capt. Carter was arrested at the New York Athletic club and taken to Governor's Island. He will be sent to Fort Leavenworth to do hard labor.

The verdict of the court was as follows: "And the court does therefore sentence the accused, Capt. Oberlin M. Carter, Corps of Engineers, U. S. A., to be dismissed from the service of the United States, to suffer a fine of $5,000, to be confined at hard labor at such place as the proper authority may direct for five years, and the crime, punishment, name and place of abode of the accused to be published in and about the station and state from which the accused came or where he usually resides."

MAY MANAGE NEXT CAMPAIGN.

Henry C. Payne, who may manage the next national campaign for the republicans, has had training under Hanna. During the contest of 1896 he was one of Senator Hanna's chief lieutenants and paid special attention to the work in the western states. Senator Hanna has high appreciation of Mr. Payne's skill, and the general impression is that should the present chairman retire he would be succeeded by Mr. Payne in the management of the next presidential campaign. Since 1872 Mr. Payne has served consecutively as secretary and chairman of the Young Men's Republican club of Milwaukee, secretary and chairman of his county committee, and the same offices in the state central committee of Wisconsin. Since 1880 he has been a member of the national committee, and for ten years he was postmaster at Milwaukee.

It is impossible to dwell too strongly upon the marvelous record made by Sig. Marconi while reporting the international yacht race by wireless telegraphy. He gave three especially notable demonstrations of the value of his invention and put the New York Herald and the New York Telegram far in the lead of all competitors. The relative positions of the yachts at 12:20 o'clock were flashed into New York by wireless telegraphy at 12:23, while the papers that relied upon other methods of communication received precisely the same news at 1:25 o'clock, and it was only by making the most extraordinary efforts that they succeeded in getting it within that time. From the beginning to the end of the race they were from an hour to an hour and a quarter behind the papers served by Sig. Marconi.

WAR BEGINS IN SOUTH AFRICA

Ultimatum from the Boers precipitates Hostilities.

BOTH ARMIES IN POSITION.

Transvaal Forces Are Expected to Begin the Attack—Invasion of Natal Not Feared—Joubert Is Apprehensive of the Result of War.

Hostilities in the Transvaal may be said to have begun. The Boer government sent an ultimatum to Great Britain Oct. 10, which was at once rejected. The ultimatum demanded the removal of British troops from the frontier, and declared that failure to assent to the terms of the ultimatum by 5 o'clock p. m. on Wednesday, Oct. 11, would be construed as a declaration of war.

The first Boer attack will probably be on Mafeking. The British are well prepared for defense at all other points. There are no fears of a successful invasion of Natal. Gen. White has 15,000 troops of all arms at his disposal—not enough to defend the whole frontier, but sufficient to prevent any serious advance into the colony.

Until the arrival of the army corps it is probable that the British will everywhere remain on the defensive.

The only serious feature of the situation is the danger of a Boer rising in Cape Colony and Natal. Kruger is evidently relying on this help, and his ultimatum is designed to precipitate war, for if the Dutch have decided to rebel it is certain they will act before the arrival of Buller's 50,000 troops.

An ultimatum similar to the Boers' is expected soon from the Orange Free State, as it is believed the Orange Free State is bound by treaty to help the Transvaal under the present circumstances.

The London Chronicle insists that the foreign powers, especially Russia, are threatening to take advantage of Great Britain's preoccupation in southern Africa.

News from the scene of the war is scanty. Commandant-General Joubert is credited with declaring that he would die fighting, but that the Boer forces are inferior to the British, and that nothing would save the country after the first shot was fired.

CHURCH TO HAVE PROPERTY.

Government to Turn Over Valuable Holdings to the Archbishop.

First Washington Regiment Home.

The First Washington infantry and the Third artillery arrived at San Francisco on the transport Pennsylvania.

M. Cambon's Probable Successor.

M. Gerard, French minister to Belgium, is said to be the probable successor of M. Cambon at Washington.

ACTIVE CAMPAIGN ORDERED.

General Advance in the Philippines to Be Begun at Once.

A general advance along the lines is indicated by official and press dispatches from Manila. This is also the understanding at the war department, and the expectation is that there will be some heavy fighting within the next few days.

According to statements made at the war department, no more towns are to be taken and then abandoned. It is proposed to make the advance permanent.

BLOW TO TRUSTS IN INDIANA.

Judge Ryan Overrules Demurrers to Suit for Injunction.

In the injunction suits brought by the Window-Glass Workers' National association, enjoining Indiana manufacturers from transferring their plants to the combine, Judge Ryan overruled all demurrers set up by the trust, and held that it was within the jurisdiction of the courts to rule on the case, and that the case was sufficient for action.

New Name for Indians.

At a recent meeting of the Anthropological society in Washington the name "Amerind" was proposed as a substitute for the various terms now employed to denote the Indians, or red men, or America. The new name is compounded from the leading syllables of the phrase "American Indian," and the working ethnologists of the society, led by Major Powell, were practically unanimous in approving the word Amerind, and recommending its adoption. The adjectives derived from the new name would be "Amerindic" and "Amerindian."

His Philosophy.

"That's the best I can do for you," said the theatrical manager. "You've been idle all season, so far; now, will you stay idle the rest of the season, or take this small part?"

"I'll take it," said Lowe Comerdy; "in this case a small role is better than a whole loaf."—Catholic Standard and Times.

TWO-PIECE SUIT, AUTUMN STYLE

No. 350. This fashionable Autumn Style Ladies' Two-piece Suit, consisting of jacket and skirt, is made of fine quality plain navy blue or black suiting cloth. The jacket is made tight-fitting with velvet collar, double-stitched seams, fly front, lined with high colored silk serge, and faced with black silk serge; the skirt is made in the new and popular tunic effect, with two rows of mohair braid, which is applied in serpentine effect, as shown in the illustration; lined with fine quality percale and bound with velvet. The fabric is of sufficient weight to admit being worn all seasons, and being thoroughly shrunk before making, will hang nicely and fit smoothly after months of wear as the day purchased. The chain of perfection has no missing links; from the time the cloth is placed in the hands of the cutter it passes through none but the hands of artisans until completed and ready for wear. If you are not already one of our customers let this suit be your initial order—there's value in it you'll appreciate. Sizes, jacket 32 to 42 inches bust; skirt 22 to 30 inches waist; length 39 to 44 inches.

THE CARY SISTERS.

THEIR EARLY LIFE ON THEIR OHIO HOMESTEAD.

The Quaint Old House Still Standing Where They Lived During Their Youth—Amid Many Trials They Persevered in Writing.

(Special Letter.)

About eight miles north of the Cincinnati postoffice, on the Hamilton electric line, is a pleasant country home which the passer-by is likely to notice twice, even though ignorant of its identity. In the middle of a large fenced yard or lawn set with shade and fruit trees, starred with peonies and lilies, and thick-grown with lush blue grass, stands a commodious, old fashioned brick house, the whole structure, barring its green shutters, as white as paint and whitewash can make it, and showing pure as a snowbank from among the verdure and the flecking shadows. It is a house of sixty years ago, the heavy, many-paneled doors and square, small-pane windows imparting a flavor of quaintness, while a row of white brick pillars in a rear angle of the walls supporting an overhead piazza adds picturesqueness. A hooded well hard by, furnished with bucket and windlass, is in keeping with the house, and looks so inviting that the stranger feels he may, on the plea of thirst, enter the grounds with perfect propriety.

To do so is worth his while, especially if he has in him any strain of sentiment, for this immaculate old homestead and its rural surroundings are the once famous "Clovernook"—the nursing place of the Cary sisters, who fifty years ago stood in the forefront of that interesting literary group that had sprung up in the Ohio valley, presaging an intellectual life in the West.

Among the relics kept in the old house, which the interested visitor may see for the asking, is a parchment government deed, dated 1814, signed by James Madison, and entitling Christopher Cary (the grandfather of the poets) to 360 acres in Hamilton county, Ohio. Christopher's son Robert took possession of these acres, and here in 1820 and 1825 were born Alice and Phoebe, the two sisters who were destined to make the family name noted. There were other children—nine of them all told—but they seem not to have been literary. One of the flock, an elder sister, Alice speaks of as a companion to whom she confided her crude little verses, and who, in turn, confided stories of her own composing; but this sister died when the budding poet was yet a mere child. Then as Phoebe's mind unfolded, she and Alice grew together by the force of kindred tastes, and all through girlhood these two lived together and alone in the little ideal world which they built up. It was no easy thing to do. Life in the West in those days had not passed the pioneer period, and in pioneer life there was little time for cultivating the muses, and scant opportunity to acquire the education and training essential to literary art.

The actual schooling the girls got was meager; an insatiable appetite for reading and tireless attempts at literary performance did the rest, and this culture had to be snatched as best the aspirants could in a household, where work was never ended, and it was a struggle to provide the comforts of life.

The publications that struggled for existence in the Ohio valley a half century ago had, as a rule, a very kindly attitude toward literary beginners, and so the sisters, first Alice and then Phoebe, soon found their way into various columns. The harvest was chiefly "fame," flavored by an occasional mention, but it brought them into the atmosphere for which they longed. They became known to, and, in a personal way, came to know people who thought and aspired as they did. Kindly letters of good-will and praise, not only from nearby friends, but from across the mountains, found their way to the country home. The stimulus quickened them to a new growth, and, within ten years after their first appearance in print, this pair of wild flowers was fairly famous. Ere that, pecuniary reward, in a small way, spurred them on, and, to help matters, the father, as a remedy for domestic friction, built another house, and went thither with the stepmother, leaving the first house to the five surviving children of the family, with Alice at their head, and mistress of herself, so far as duties would permit.

In 1850, after Alice had lived thirty and Phoebe twenty-five years on the old home place, and nearly a score of these in the house now standing, the inseparable sisters, who did what so many western aspirants have since done—namely went to seek their fortunes in the great city of New York. Said Alice afterward: "Ignorance stood me in the place of courage. Had I known the world as I have learned it since, I should not have dared; but I didn't. Thus I came." Once committed to the venture, there was no turning back, and so, with poverty threatening them, and with little capital of any sort, save the talent and unconquerable will power that had characterized them from the first, they entered the struggle for a livelihood. Alice wielded by far the more prolific pen. Then, as now, prose was more lucrative than verse, and her first work was to collect a number of stories and sketches into a volume, which she called "Clovernook; or, Recollections of Our Home in the West." This was published in 1851, and proved a pronounced success. It was industriously followed by others—first, a novel, "Hagar; a Story of To-day," then another series of "Clovernook" stories, after which, with a volume of verses sandwiched between, came "Clovernook Children," a juvenile book. In 1855 a collection of her poems, complete up to that time, was issued; then another novel, "Married, Not Mated," followed in turn by more poems; then "A Lover's Diary," "Snow Berries," and still a third novel, "The Bishop's Son," making in all a collection of considerable bulk, which, as it circulated widely in its day, made the name of Alice Cary familiar, not only throughout reading America, but in England, also.

During these years Phoebe was not idle, but contributed extensively to the periodicals verses of many kinds, these in the collected form numbering something over two hundred. Of the quality of the work done by them little need be said here. The more critical taste of to-day would not rate it as it was once rated, but it met the needs of a prevailing taste, served its purpose, and was well worth living for. Considered as part of the literary movement in America, it has a permanent historic interest, and the achievements of the two unaided country girls must have an interest as abiding as that in the triumphs of the human will and soul.

In New York city the sisters got the social life they craved. Their home at No. 53 East Twentieth street, which has been described as delightfully artistic and literary, was a kind of salon where they held Sunday evening receptions, and brought together the distinguished literary people of the day. But, though all this was charming, Alice, especially, was not content, and yearned back for the old, simple country life with a homesickness that grew through years of sickness and suffering. Melancholy by nature, the struggles of her early life, the loss of those she loved, and, perhaps, an unhappy affair of the heart, tintured her whole life with sadness. A pathetic reflection of her characteristic mood is a letter written to Mr. W. D. Gallagher, which Mr. W. H. Venable published in his "Beginnings of Literary Culture in the Ohio Valley." This spirit was with her to the end, and, when, in 1870, cancer, paralysis—terrible ministers of death, dragged the brave woman out of the world, she felt, if one may judge from the evidence, that her half century's sojourn here had been quite long enough. In a little less than a year and a half Phoebe followed her, and so passed away these two sisters whose kinship of spirit, as Mr. Venable, their best biographer, has said, "is memorable in the annals of human tenderness and fidelity." In beautiful Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn, not far from the Fifth avenue entrance, the two and a younger sister, Elmina, lie in one inclosure, their resting place marked by a massive granite monument some six feet high, on the base of which is the name Cary, and on three faces the three given names with dates of birth and death.

Greatest Varieties of Industries.

"Quincy, Ill., claims distinction on several accounts. It has a greater variety of industries than any other city, and its 400 factories produce everything used in life from the cradle to the grave. Quincy has the largest engine governor works in the world. They turn out 10,000 governors a year, or at the rate of thirty-three every working day. There are two shops, one 200x40 feet and the other 180x60 feet, and plans are now being prepared for doubling the capacity of the works by building another large shop. Robert W. Gardiner, the inventor of this governor, started in life a mechanic and is a millionaire now.

Quincy also claims the unique distingtion of having two rivers, one underneath the ground and one on the side. The city is located on a high bluff, 100 feet above the Mississippi, and several years ago, a subterranean river was discovered under the city. The discovery was made in boring an artesian well. The underground stream was struck at a point 300 feet below the surface of the ground, and it has not yet been discovered where it comes from or whence it goes. Electric lights have been let down to it, which reveal the fact that it flows through a cavern, the top of which is thirty or forty feet above the water. The current in this underground river is swift and the water is ice cold. Notes corked in bottles have been set adrift in it, but none of them has been heard from.

REMARKABLE ROADS.

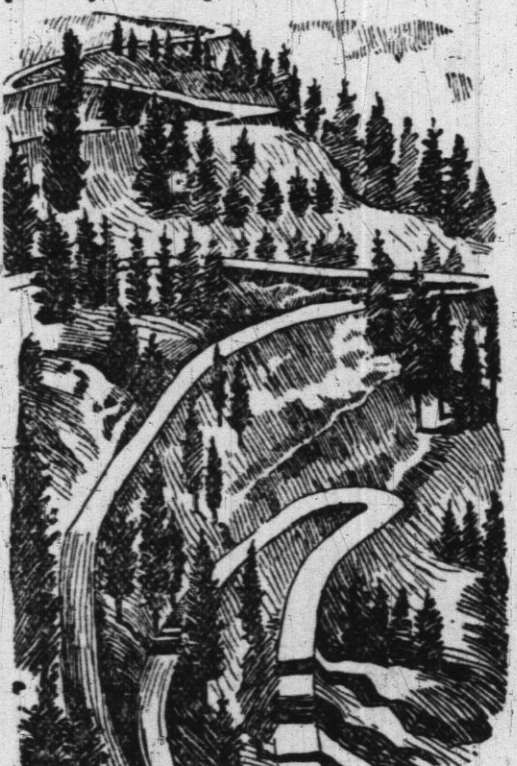

Corners like these are not encountered every day. The first picture represents the final stages of the Stelvio pass, the highest road in Europe, and 9,055 feet above the sea; the windings

STELVIC PASS: AUSTRIAN SIDE, through the pine woods are those of the Maloja pass which leads from the southern limit of the Engadine to the world-famed Lake of Como. In the former case these curious zigzags are typical of the last twelve miles of the ascent on either side. The Maloja, on the other hand, is a single ascent—or descent as the case may be—the Engadine, to and from which it leads, being a lofty plateau, with 60 miles or more of comparatively level road.

Has the bicycle a place in a region such as this? The many who have not betaken themselves thither awhile would probably say "No;" the few who have would answer with an emphatic "Yes." The corners may look bad; as a matter of fact, they are worse than would appear from the photographs themselves; but men have steered a tandem round all the Stelvio curves on the Italian side, which is even steeper than the Austrian, shown herewith, and what a tandem can do in this direction, the single can do still more easily. It requires a certain amount of nerve, for the road is none too wide, is without railings at the edge, and on the Italian side is covered with loose stones.

But the end attained is not one to be spoken of lightly. The scenery is almost unrivaled in the Alps, which is saying much, and the laborious ascent is amply rewarded from that reason alone. Then follows a descent of unmitigated glory. For 87 miles can the cyclist ride to Tirano, with feet upon the foot-rests almost the whole way. It may be doubted whether anywhere else there is a ride to equal this joyous progression from the ice-cold summit of the Stelvio to the Italian valley in which Tirano nestles, during which journey one experiences all the varia-

ZIGZAGS ON MALOJA PASS. tions of scenery and verdure which are furnished by a fall from over 9,000 to 1,500 feet.

Job and His Bulls.

A mother was trying to explain to her 5-year-old daughter of the efficacy of prayer, relates the New York Commercial Advertiser. She chose the trials of Job as an illustration. After pointing out how the prophet had got rid of his many afflictions by prayer, she asked the child: "Now, what did Job do when he had bulls?" The youngster replied promptly: "Guess he scratched."

FIERCE BATTLE NEAR IMUS.

Insurgents Meet Our Troops in a Hand-to-Hand Struggle.

SEVEN AMERICANS CAPTURED.

Rebels Attempt to Rush the Line of Defense Held by Gen. Grant's Soldiers—New Tactics of the Filipinos Cause Comment.

Filipino rebels met the American soldiers in a hand-to-hand fight near Manila Oct. 6. They were defeated. Twenty-five of their dead were found by our soldiers, but the American troops are marvelling at this latest exhibition of the boldness of the rebels.

Gen. Fred Grant, in command of six companies of the Fourth infantry, and Reilly's battery, started out to clear the country of the insurgents. The Filipinos surrounded seven of Grant's men and captured them. Then the general decided upon a more effective movement. His men swept the insurgents from their position on the west bank of the river, near Imus. The Filipinos were driven toward San Francisco. Gen. Grant's men then proceeded to Binacayam and took possession of that place.

Capt. Brown's battalion, on the right of the river, had a terrible hand-to-hand fight with the insurgents. Sergt. King killed a Filipino during this struggle as the rebel was trying to shoot an American officer. The Filipinos kept up the hand-to-hand fight for some time, but finally broke and ran toward San Francisco. The Americans pursued them for some distance.

The American officers regard the fighting as important because it has shown a disposition on the part of the Filipinos to stand up and make a close fight. The officers predict that hereafter it will be a great deal more dangerous to storm insurgent positions.

A number of Americans were seriously wounded during the fight, but no fatalities were reported.

Platform of Massachusetts Republicans.

The Massachusetts republican state convention nominated W. Murray Crane, Dalton, for governor. The platform declares in favor of establishing the gold standard by law. Trusts are opposed. The national administration is indorsed in all departments, as well as the administration of Gov. Wolcott of Massachusetts.

Same Issues as 1896.

Senator James K. Jones, chairman of the democratic national committee, says William McKinley and William Jennings Bryan will again be the opposing presidential nominees in 1900, and that practically the same issues will rule as in 1896, with the addition of "imperialism."

Sent at Dewey's Request.

Admiral Dewey says: "I want Aguinaldo and the Filipino insurgents to know that it was at my request that President McKinley ordered the naval re-enforcements to our Asiatic squadron, now stationed at Manila."

Kansas Law Declared Unconstitutional.

The Kansas supreme court has declared unconstitutional the law providing for a tax of 10 per cent upon policies of insurance held by citizens of Kansas in companies not authorized to do business in Kansas.

Mules Die en Voyage.

The United States transport Siam, which left San Francisco Sept. 9, with upward of 350 valuable mules, arrived at Manila with only nineteen of the animals alive. Severe storms caused the death of the mules.

Forest Fires in Wisconsin.

Forest fires near Oconto Falls, Wis., have destroyed six farmhouses and a large amount of hay and miles of fences. Unless rain comes at once a large amount of property will be destroyed.

Train Strikes Trolley Car.

One man was killed and four persons injured in a wreck on the Trumbull electric line at Warren, Ohio. A car containing twenty-three persons was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio train.

Jubilee of Christian Church.

The jubilee convention of the Christian church, which meets at Cincinnati Oct. 13 to 20, will attract the leading lights of that denomination. The convention is international.

Carnegie Gives Another $50,000.

Prominent Kansan Is Dying.

F. G. Adams, secretary of the Kansas Historical society, is ill, and, owing to his advanced age, fears are entertained that he will not recover.

Sword for Capt. Chadwick.

At Morgantown, W. Va., Gov. Atkinson presented a magnificent jeweled sword to Capt. Chadwick on behalf of the people of the state.

TROOPS CAPTURE NOVELETA

Rebels Resist the American Advance with Desperate Bravery.

The American troops are camping at Noveleta. In the fighting that preceded the capture of the town one American captain was killed and two lieutenants and fifteen privates received severe wounds. The rebels fought with the same bravery which has characterized their resistance during the recent engagements.

NEGROES REPULSE REBELS.

Colored Troops Win Fresh Laurels in the Philippines.

An insurgent band attacked the American line on the outskirts of Manila between blockhouse No. 5 and La Loma church Oct. 9. The American forces, consisting of the Twenty-fifth infantry (colored) and Battery E of the Fourth artillery, repulsed the attack. Three Americans were wounded.

Want Schell to Resign.

The northern Minnesota Methodist conference by resolution accused Edwin A. Schell, national secretary of the Epworth league, of misdirecting $500 of the league's money, and recommended his immediate resignation.

Prominent Southerners Fight Duel.

Dominick C. O'Malley, proprietor of the Evening Item, and C. Harrison Parker, a prominent politician, fought a duel on the street at New Orleans. Both were seriously if not fatally wounded.

Admiral Dewey in Vermont.

Admiral Dewey arrived at Burlington, Vt., Oct. 10. There was no incident of note on the journey from Washington beyond the constant manifestations of enthusiasm at every station.

Want Army Canteen Abolished.

The Methodist Rock River conference adopted temperance resolutions scoring Attorney-General Griggs and calling on President McKinley to banish the canteen from the army.

Congressman Roberts in Trouble.

Congressman-elect Roberts of Utah is to be charged with two felonies, of which polygamy forms the base, and two misdemeanors for unlawfully living with his two plural wives.

Fire Damages Packing Plant.

The oil house tanning room and one small beef cooler at the Schwarzschild & Sulzberger packing plant at Armourdale, Kan., were destroyed by fire. The loss is $100,000, fully insured.

Must Wait on Transvaal.

The British government has postponed action looking to a settlement of the French shore question until the difficulty with the Boers shall have been adjusted.

Flood Victims in Italy.

Forty persons were reported drowned by floods, following severe rains, in the province of Salerno, Italy. A number of small villages and factories have been destroyed.

Smallpox at Franklin, Ind.

Smallpox has broken out in Franklin, Ind. The case is that of Solomon Jackson, a soldier in the late Spanish-American war, who served in Cuba for some time.

Locusts and Grasshoppers.

The agricultural department is making a systematic study of locusts and grasshoppers. Every year since the invasion of certain western states, particularly Kansas and Colorado, by the Rocky mountain locust, or western grasshopper, in the years 1874 and 1876, the division of entomology has sent an agent into the field in the western states each summer to study grasshopper conditions for the purpose of enabling the department to predict, if possible, a future invasion and to warn farmers well in advance.

This year's investigations, made by W. D. Hunter, have been of special interest on account of a slight outbreak of the locust in North Dakota and on account of an unusual abundance of local nonmigratory species in different western states. Moreover, a rather large swarm was seen in flight in early August, the exact settling point of which it is now difficult to approximate.

Earlier in the summer a statement was published in certain western newspapers to the effect that it was considered by entomologists that the Turtle mountain region in North Dakota and Montana probably was a permanent breeding ground of the destructive migratory grasshopper, a statement which occasioned much alarm and indignation on the part of railroads and other landowners in that part of the state. This region, therefore, was carefully traversed and scrutinized by Mr. Hunter, who reports that the migratory grasshopper does not breed permanently in the Turtle mountains north of that immediate vicinity. The ground is perfectly unsuited to breeding, and, moreover, swarms descending farther east have been traced from far to the northeast of that place.

A practical and efficient work is being accomplished by the Cuban Educational association in bringing young men from the Antilles and placing them in our American colleges, academies and public schools. The influence for good in this movement will be far-reaching in turning the attention of the Cuban and Porto Rican youth from militarism to the pacific methods of our people and government. The importance of the work has been national, and officers of the army and navy and civil attaches of the government have heartily co-operated in it. It has been demonstrated that most of the young men and boys who have been placed in schools here by the association are bright, ambitious, impressionable and winsome, worthy of the best work of the American educator. The parents and guardians of these boys are more than grateful because the way has been opened for them to come to the United States and complete their education. Many of these people are willing to mortgage their futures that their boys may become beneficiaries in our educational institutions, knowing that such tuition will aid in the development of the boys and set them thinking how best to advance the interests of their own country. Thus far the association has young men and boys at schools in New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Alabama, Ohio and Michigan, and it is expected before next year to have Cuban and Porto Rican students in every state in the Union. The movement thus to acquaint the young generation of these islands with our mode of life, customs and civilization while affording them an opportunity to secure an education is worthy of all encouragement.

In spite of the confusion of architectural styles and the ugliness of the skyscrapers as seen in many cities in this country, the prospect for American architecture is not so dark as many native critics have insisted. Leopold Gmelin, formerly instructor at Karlsruhe and Munich, editor of Kunst und Handwerk and a recognized authority, contributes to a recent issue of The Forum an article in which he declares that the change in the conditions of American architecture since the close of the last decade "has created a complete revolution in German professional circles regarding the status in America of this branch of the art." The writer does not attempt to deny the bald unattractiveness of the towering office building, but he points out that, these structures having been made necessary by business conditions, the American architect cannot be held responsible for them. Rather he is to be praised for the skill with which he has succeeded in breaking the monotony of the great facades of these structures. American architects, moreover, in Mr. Gmelin's opinion, have demonstrated great talent in adapting and developing the modern Romanesque style made popular by Richardson. The beauty and originality of design—as, for instance, in the skill shown in the treatment of the interiors of private residences—indicate a faculty for further advances along independent creative lines.

On Remembering Jones.

While it is gratifying to note the whole souled enthusiasm with which we as a nation are receiving Admiral Dewey, is it not a pity that some of the surplus adoration which is being lavished on that modest naval officer could not be thinned out and spread around where it would do more good? For example, we readily attribute to Dewey not only bravery, but all the other virtues on the calendar, yet we are apt to be slow in seeing merit in the characters of the men we meet every day. To the man whom we know only through the printed word we give extravagant praise, to our next door neighbor niggardly recognition or worse. Can we sing psalms easier than speak kind words?

Why not save some of our enthusiasm, which the hero of Manila bay can very well get along without, for John Jones, who needs it? But Jones hasn't smashed any Spanish fleet. No, but he has trudged steadily along in the straight and narrow path of good citizenship for forty odd years and shoed a family of five children along in front of him; he has paid his debts and kept out of mischief; he has been kind to his wife and obliging to his neighbors. It would only embarrass Dewey to hear you hurrah for him until you were hoarse. But if you should casually remark that Jones was a very decent man and a good citizen and he should hear of it Jones would feel pleasant for days afterward. He would tell his wife about it, and she would be proud of him. Jones would think well of you, too, and nominate you for assessor some day if he got the chance. He would try harder than ever to live up to what he thought was your idea of him.

And all this could be accomplished without detracting from Admiral Dewey's glory in the least. In fact, if a lot of people were to scatter their enthusiasm in this way it might remove the taint of hysteria from our welcome to "the third admiral" and, by adding dignity, lend it potency.

While entertaining a large party at dinner recently a New York man, who was single, upon being reminded by his guests that there was no hostess, promptly proposed to a young woman who was one of the party, and his proposal was accepted. All this occurred just before the dinner was served and in the presence of the entire company. While promptness of the host in securing a hostess to grace his feast is commendable, the incident will not commend itself to the average lover. Unless the other members of the party discreetly turned their backs the chances are that the New York man missed practically all the exercises that usually go with an acceptance of that sort and that are among the most enjoyable features of such an occasion.

Few people, even those most interested, are aware of the inroads made by oleomargarine upon the butter trade. The pure food department of Pennsylvania reports that during the past year there has been sold in the United States 87,000,000 pounds of oleomargarine, over four times as much as was sold in 1888. As a result of the large increase in the manufacture of this product it is also stated that there may be a falling off in the cows numbering 4,309,000, worth in the aggregate $12,927,000.

It is announced that Miss Mary Crocker of San Francisco has just received $3,000,000 from the executors of her father's estate. San Francisco is a considerable distance from Europe, and the railroad fares are high, but a good many titled foreigners will manage to get there even if they have to beat their way.

A WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

A WELL KNOWN VIRGINIA EDITOR Had Almost Given Up, but Was Brought Back to Perfect Health by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

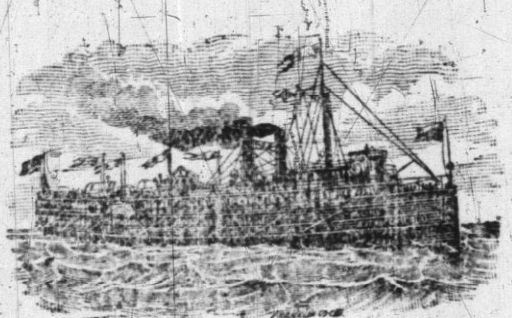

From the Times, Hillville, Va.
I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow-sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man today and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. R. MOORE. This remedy is for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

At a Pittsburg fair to be held the first week in November will be an exhibit showing the evolution of transportation in this country. Among the models will be an American railway train of 1829. One of the original cars has been preserved after serving a farmer for 17 years as a chicken coop. A six horse Conestoga wagon, as big as three modern vehicles, will also be reproduced.

It is intimated that the University of Chicago will confer the honorary degree of LL. D. upon Admiral George Dewey when he visits that city. As this institution has not been lavish with such honors, having conferred the degree upon but one person, President McKinley, it will be a marked and no doubt appreciated distinction.

The Great Ruby

Is probably the strongest melodrama ever given in America. Originally produced at the Theater Royal, Drury Lane, London; it was brought to America with all the scenery and effects used in the London production by Augustin Daly and given in his theater all last winter, where it scored a tremendous hit, remaining there all winter. It is a most stirring play, possessing a multitude of big scenes and presented by a great cast. It commences a run at McVicker's theater, Chicago, Sunday, Oct. 8.

Traveling on the Burlington Railroad on the way to Denver, a little town called Atlanta, near Hastings, Nebraska, is pointed out as a point of interest because of the corn cribs built there along the tracks. In all there are twenty-four separate cribs, 12 feet wide and 12 feet high, with a total length of 5,964 feet, or a distance of nearly a mile and a quarter. This year's enormous crop (three hundred million bushels for the State of Nebraska) will test their capacity. Everybody seems prosperous in Nebraska. Nobody complains but the bankers, who find it hard to lend their money. Nobody wants to borrow it.

The earnings of the Chicago Great Western Ry "Maple Leaf Route" for the third week in September, 1899, show an increase of $3,747.50. Total increase since beginning of fiscal year (July 1st) to date $226,375.16.

LOVE AND LAW.

By the author of BONNY'S LOVERS

"Was this what you were working for?" I demanded, with a sudden jealous suspicion.

"Perhaps I was!" she answered loftily. "I hope she will never be sorry that she chose wrong."

"I hope not!" I assented cordially. "A real gentleman," repeated Miss Woodward—"as free-handed and free-spoken as a prince—a gentleman who knows how to treat a woman, even if she is only a servant—a gentleman I'd work my fingers to the bone for, and so would a good many more!"

"You did your best for him," I could not help saying. "You have nothing to reproach yourself with."

It was true, as Widdrington had said, that all the women were fascinated by handsome, dare-devil Charlie. What wonder that Nona had felt his power? I could only be thankful that the fascination had not gone deeper.

"No; I've nothing to reproach myself with," the maid assented. "And I'll pray night and day for my young lady, that she may see her mistake before it is too late."

And with this parting shot the resolute virago marched sternly from the room without a word of farewell civility.

I finished my interrupted letters, and then sought Nona. She met me with a dismayed face.

"Such a strange thing has happened," she exclaimed. "Woodward has left at a moment's notice. She would not give any explanation of her going; only said that she was sorry to inconvenience me, but circumstances obliged her to leave at once; and she has gone."

"The most extraordinary proceeding," chimed in Miss Elmslie. "I told Nona that she could insist upon Woodward's remaining until she had found another servant. If it had not happened that a young girl from the village is at liberty to take her place at once, it would have been most inconvenient and awkward; and Woodward was helping it all. And that man Tillott was a detective. How strange it all is! I feel as if I were in a dream. The will was really stolen then, not lost, and—now I understand; you puzzled me so when you persisted you had seen me at Molton, and that I had taken your bag. I was puzzled, and—and a little angry"—blushing.

"Yes, you were thoroughly mystified," I agreed.

"Oh, I do hope," said Nona, "that man, Widdrington, will never, never find Charlie—poor Charlie, who was my playfellow and friend, and my poor uncle's pet and darling, treated like a common thief. You will not allow it—promise me you will not."

"It will not be so bad as that," I assured her. "Of course he must be made to surrender the will. However, we will not talk about him any longer. This is my last evening, you know, and I have a thousand things to say. The time is too precious to waste, my darling."

I left the Rectory on the following day. The next few months were passed in a dream of happiness which left me little thought for Charlie Branscombe or his concerns. Occasionally, it is true, I was brought into relations with Widdrington, for my connection with the office could not be abruptly terminated, and in the matter of Forest Lea I felt that I had a special responsibility to discharge. The detective was actively following up clue after clue as they came into his hands. His pride and his professional interest were thoroughly roused by his first failure, and he was bent on completing the case in which he had already worked so hard. Mr. Charles Branscombe had not left England—so much Widdrington was sure of. Probably want of means had prevented his going far from home and the numerous friends and adherents who were always ready to help him.

"I shall run him down yet," Widdrington confidently asserted. "He must be starved out sooner or later."

"WHERE'S THE YOUNG FELLOW GONE TO?"

was such an excellent maid. I suppose she has had some quarrel with the servants—and she never had a good temper."

"I wonder," began Nona, and then stopped suddenly.

"What do you wonder?" I asked.

"Nothing," she laughed, "only an odd idea of mine."

"Tell me your ideas; I like to hear them all."

"I was wondering whether Tillott's leaving had anything to do with Woodward's. I know she liked him, and thought him a great improvement on Charles; but then he was so much younger. Of course it was very silly of me to connect the two events."

"I don't know about that. I think it was very sagacious of you," I answered.

"Then there is something. What are you laughing at? What is it?"

"You are right, my dearest. Woodward's, and Tillott's departures do hang together."

And then, Miss Elmslie having discreetly retired, I told Nona the whole story from beginning to end, only enjoining on her the secrecy which the dear little indiscreet Miss Elmslie could never have been trusted to preserve.

Nona's astonishment was unbounded. "What a plot!" she exclaimed. "It is like a book; and Woodward, who seemed so quiet and so respectable,

In the meantime Forest Lea was shut up and deserted, at the Rector's constant regret; and only a vague impression of the truth floated about the neighborhood, where my darling still remained, under the friendly protection of Mr. and Mrs. Heathcote.

She had promised to be mine in the summer, when the first anniversary of the good old Colonel's death had come and gone. Then we were to have a pretty wedding in the village church—a wedding all flowers and sunshine, such as became our hopes and our happiness.

I was fully occupied in preparing for that supreme event. I was refurbishing my newly-acquired home—a lovely old house in Kent, amongst the hop-gardens and woods of the Weald—and sparing no pains to make it a fitting nest for the sweet, gentle dove who was to preside over it.

In such happy occupation, with frequent visits to the Midshire Rectory, the months passed quickly away. I had no personal part in the next act of the drama which concerned Mr. Charles Branscombe, and must leave its chronicle to another pen.

CHAPTER XVI.

A little maid in a blue cotton gown and a white muslin cap was picking peas in a cottage garden. She was taking her work in leisurely fashion, sitting on a three-legged stool with her basket in her lap, and gathering the plump pods as they dangled close to her hand. The vines grew high that year, and the little maid as she sat was almost hidden in the green valley; not so much hidden, however, but that a hot and flustered police officer saw her as he tramped heavily up the path, and blurted out an abrupt question—

"Where's the young fellow gone to?" She looked up with a pair of tranquil blue eyes, growing round with astonishment, as she repeated after him, in a strong country accent—

"Young fellow? What young fellow d'ye mean?"

She looked so fresh and so pretty, and the yellow fringe which peeped out from under her cap was so infantile in its innocent simplicity, that Mr. James Brown felt a momentary impulse, in spite of his frustration, to chuck her under the cool rounded chin, and even perhaps help himself to a kiss from her red lips. If he hadn't been so hot and so worried—where the deities could that young rip have got to?—he would certainly have taken advantage of his opportunities. As it was he pursued his investigation and resisted the temptation.

"A young fellow in a light tweed suit—he was making straight for here," he explained. "I saw him before me over the fields not ten minutes ago, and I'll swear I hardly lost sight of him. He must be in the house; there isn't another place this way—not even a shave of wood to hide him—and Smith and Varley would have stopped him further down. He must be in the house."

"Maybe, ye can ask," retorted the damsel indifferently, reaching out her hand towards a group of pods, as if dismissing the subject.

The door at the cottage stood wide open; a black cat was dozing in the sun; all was quiet and sleepy; there was not a sound about the place. The officer's loud knock brought a stupid servant-girl with a snub nose and a wide-open mouth to answer his reiterated question.

"Where's the—the young gentleman who came in here just now? I want to speak to him."

"There's no young gentleman here," she replied—"only my master and misses, and they're both old."

"Where are they? Tell them Mr. James Brown wants to speak to them."

The girl preceded him into the parlor at the end of the passage, after knocking at the door, and gave his message verbatim—

"Mr. James Brown wants to speak to ye."

A decent old man of the retired tradesman class, disturbed in his afternoon nap, looked up with blinking eyes at the impatient constable, whilst his comely old partner put down the stocking she was darning, and prepared to interview the visitor.

"Good afternoon, sir," she said, civilly. "Won't you take a seat; it's warm walking."

Was it real innocence or only a sham? Mr. Brown was not going to be taken in; these people were probably allies of Mr. Charles Branscombe—old servants or something of that sort. The old gentleman's yawn was too demonstrative, and he did not mean to let the old lady's civility put him off the scent—he was quite up to that game. He glanced sharply around the room, behind the old man's ponderous arm-chair, at the cupboard door, even up the chimney, before he answered in his most official tone—

"A young gent entered this house about ten minutes or maybe a quarter of an hour ago, Mr. Charles Branscombe by name. I've got business with him—very particular business, if you'll let him know."

"Mr. Charles Branscombe," echoed the old man; "he's not here, and hasn't been, to my knowledge."

"Then it's without your knowledge," retorted Mr. Brown, who was getting cross. "I'll take my davy he's somewhere on the premises; and, as I hold a warrant for his apprehension, I shall have to search for him—with your leave or without it."

"You're an ill-mannered upstart—that's what you are," exclaimed Mr. Walker, very wide awake now, and starting up to face Mr. Brown. "And I dare you to search my house—warrant or no warrant, I'm an honest man, and I've nothing to do with your scamps; and if I was ten years younger I'd kick you out faster than you came in—that's what I'd do"—warning as he went on.

"Hush, Samuel!" interposed the dame, laying her hand upon his arm, as he shook his fist in the intruder's face. "Never mind his manners—it's only his ignorance. We don't mean to resist the law; if he's got a warrant, let him show it, and he's welcome to search if he likes. He'll soon see it's no use. My husband is old, sir"—aside to Mr. Brown, as the old gentleman walked to the window, and wiped his forehead with his handkerchief—"and he's apt to be hasty when he's waked sudden out of his sleep. Let us see your warrant, if you please, sir."

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE.

One of the Grandest Offers Ever Made.

The first five persons procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book from their grocer will each obtain one large 10c package of "Red Cross" starch, one large 10c package of "Hubinger's Best" starch, two Shakespeare pictures printed in twelve beautiful colors, as natural as life, or one Twentieth Century Girl calendar, the finest of its kind ever printed, all absolutely free. All others procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large 10c packages of starch for 5c, and the beautiful premiums which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "Red Cross" starch and the celebrated "Hubinger's Best" cold water starch. "Red Cross" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the twentieth century. It has no equal, and surpasses all others. It has won for itself praise from all parts of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles by Mr. J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had twenty-five years' practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best," which are the finest starches on the market today.

The jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes, while the careful housewife has adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures which are being given away in introducing "Red Cross" and "Hubinger's Best" starch.

Defective Hearing on Railroads.

Attention is called in medical journals to the desirability of testing railway employees for defective hearing as well as for color-blindness. A recent examination in Europe developed the fact that out of eighty-two firemen and engine-drivers only three possessed perfectly normal hearing. It is suggested that there should be a standard of hearing power for the examination of employees who have to depend upon sound signals.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. FOR THE FAMILY.

"I take pleasure in praising your valuable remedy CASCARETS, and my whole family received relief from the first small box we tried. I certainly recommend CASCARETS for the cures they make and trust they will find a place in every home. Yours for success." PETER WEBB, JR., Palm Grove Ave. McKeesport, Pa.

FOR CHILDREN.

"I shall never be without CASCARETS. My children are always delighted when I give them a portion of a tablet, and cry for more. They are the most pleasant medicine I have ever tried. They have found a permanent place in my home." Mrs. JOHN FLAHER, Box 666, Michigan City, Ind.

FOR PILES.

"I suffered the tortures of the damned with protruding piles brought on by constipation, which I was afflicted for twenty years. I ran across your CASCARETS in the town of Newell, Ia., and found what I needed. I have found a permanent place in my home." 1811 Jones St., Sioux City, Ia.

FOR HEADACHE.

"Both my wife and myself have been using CASCARETS, and they are the best medicine we have ever had in the house. Last week my wife was frantic with headache for two days. She tried some of your CASCARETS and they relieved the pain in her head almost immediately. We both recommend CASCARETS." CHAS. STROUD, Pittsburgh Safe & Deposit Co., Pittsburgh, Pa.

FOR BAD BREATH.

"I have been using CASCARETS and they are simply wonderful. My daughter and I were bothered with sick stomach and our breath was very bad. After taking a few doses of CASCARETS we have improved wonderfully. They are a great help in the family." WILHELMINA NAGEL, 1317 Rutledge St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

FOR PIMPLES.

"My wife had pimples on her face, but she has been taking CASCARETS and they have all disappeared. I had been troubled with constipation for some time, but after taking the first box of CASCARETS I had no trouble with this ailment. We cannot speak too highly of CASCARETS." 6700 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

The number of men who fail on account of lack of courage is enormous, says Shoe and Leather Facts. The number who would refuse to let go of a dollar if they knew positively that it would bring back two is astonishing. Such men merely exist; they don't live. They never really amount to anything. The men who win are the men who think out the right course to pursue, and then back up their convictions with their last penny and their last ounce of energy. The first goods that John Wanamaker ever sold brought him $35. He delivered his goods in a wheelbarrow. He collected the $35 and went directly to a newspaper office and planked it down for advertising space. Some men would have spent $1.50 for some cheap dodgers and "saved" the rest. They would have been wheelbarrow merchants today.

The accidents occurring from the use of the corn shredder since it has been introduced on farms would tend to make one think that a more appropriate name for the machine would be "arm shredder" rather than its present name. For the past few years during the fall and winter seasons, it has not been an uncommon thing to hear almost weekly, within a radius of twenty or thirty miles, where some unfortunate man had lost all or part of an arm, if not his life, in the operation of this class of machinery. It appears that out of all machinery used on farms that the corn shredder, so far as making cripples is concerned, has made an astounding record. The machine has proved to be so dangerous to human life, even when conducted by first-class operators, that unless some improvement can be made on it it should be wiped out of existence. The other day a man made the assertion that in Lake county alone there are twenty-five people who were maimed for life during the past two years, caused by the use of the shredder.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following is a list of unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Barrington Oct. 13, 1899: George Wragg, Fred Matthews, Wm. Lawson, Miss Annie Hosmin and Al Jones.

H. K. BROCKWAY, P. M.

Rev. and Mrs. Blanchard Honored.

The home of H. K. Brockway on Lake street last Friday evening was the scene of a very pleasant gathering, the occasion being a public reception to Rev. and Mrs. W. L. Blanchard. The guests were received at the door by the host and hostess and afterward introduced in a very pleasing manner to Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard by Mrs. A. L. Robertson. Rev. Strickfaden, of the Salem church, extended a most cordial welcome to Rev. Blanchard in behalf of the churches of Barrington, invoking divine blessing on his work here. This was followed by a well worded, hearty welcome by Prof. F. E. Smith, delivered in his usual pleasing manner, in behalf of the public. The response that followed by Rev. Blanchard showed that he sincerely appreciated all that those worthy gentlemen had said.

The following excellent program was rendered:

Plano duet—Mesdames Luella Austin and A. L. Robertson.

Solo—Dr. C. H. Kendall.

Trio—Mesdames Flora Lines, Luella Austin and A. L. Robertson.

Violin solo—Sanford Bennett.

Piano solo—Prof. J. L. Sears.

The young ladies and gentlemen of the Baptist Sunday school served those present with refreshments.

M. C. McIntosh arrived in time to give a most appropriate toast—"Success."

We trust the words may prove true which he uttered and that success may crown the efforts of workers in God's vineyard.

Sott-Hawley Nuptials.

A beautiful home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hawley on Tuesday afternoon, October 11th, in the marriage of their daughter, Miss Edna, to Mr. Otto Sott, a young man known by all in this vicinity.

Mr. Sott is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sott of this place. He is a congenial young man, respected and loved by his friends and for several years has been in the employ of the Chicago & North-Western Railway company, where his work and ability has been thoroughly appreciated. Miss Hawley is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Hawley, loved and honored by all who have been fortunate enough to make her acquaintance.

The wedding was a beautiful event in every way. There were about twenty-five guests present, and the bride and groom were the recipients of many beautiful and useful presents. The wedding ceremony, which was the beautiful ring ceremony, took place at 2 o'clock and was performed by Rev. T. E. Ream, of the M. E. church. After the ceremony a bountiful wedding dinner was served.

At 5 o'clock the bride and groom took a Chicago train for a wedding tour through the West. They will be gone two or three weeks and on their return will reside in Chicago.

About California.

Within a short radius of the entrance to the Bay of San Francisco there are certain physical influences which produce extraordinary cloud formations. It is said that no such effects may be seen in any other part of the world. On both sides of the Golden Gate the coast range rises to an average height of perhaps a thousand feet, creating, with the bay entrance as a base, a great funnel, which confines a rushing current of clouds bearing air with perceptible dimensions. The cloud bank arises from the sea about ten miles from the entrance to the bay, and it is so dense as to hide from view vessels that enter it. Gathering strength and density, it sometimes follows the channel far in to the bay; but as it travels it is gradually dispatched by the sun, and takes the shape of a huge pyramid, with the point well defined, and a base extending miles out to sea. The bow of a steamer sailing through this bank of fog becomes invisible to the observer standing aft. To observe the startling beauty of these cloud formations one should ascend to some point above them. Mount Tamalpais, 2,700 feet in height, and commanding a view of both sea and land many miles in diameter, affords an ideal point. Far above the cloud banks the onward march from the sea can be eagerly watched. Driven by ocean winds, the fog encroaches upon the prospect until the whole landscape, embracing hundreds of square miles, is covered by a fleecy pall of white mist. This blanket is driven forward by the winds and looks like a great roll of carded cotton, unwinding as it moves. At daybreak and at sunrise, and in the moonlight, the views are indistinguishably magnificent. From Tamalpais one looks down over a raging sea of vapor into a lake of clouds. —Collier's Weekly.

Shredder Claims Another Victim.

Wm. H. Sandman, who resides on a farm near Honey Lake, had the misfortune to get his left hand caught in a corn shredder Wednesday afternoon and it was mangled in a horrible manner. Doctors C. H. Kendall and J. E. Best were summoned and it was found that all that could be done would be to amputate the member above the wrist, which they did at a late hour Wednesday evening. He was getting along as well as could be expected yesterday.

Mr. Sandman is the father of a large family but, fortunately, his financial condition is such that they need not suffer as a result of the accident.

In the circuit court at Waukegan, Wednesday, George Krueger, who was indicted on the charge of murdering his wife and her mother by the grand jury, pleaded "not guilty." The case was continued on account of the illness of his attorney, Mr. Whitney, who at this time is unable to appear in court.

It seems to be practically settled that the triumphal arch erected in honor of Admiral Dewey and his sailors at Madison square, New York, which was not only the chief decorative feature of the Dewey celebration in that city, but a work of art of surpassing merit, will be perpetuated in enduring marble, though probably not at the same place the temporary structure was erected. Wealthy and public spirited citizens of the metropolis have organized a movement to make the arch permanent, and there seems to be no doubt the necessary funds will be forthcoming. Thus will be preserved for future generations an object of great beauty and patriotic interest. It will typify American love of country and commemorate the achievements of the American navy, as well as the fame of the great admiral.

Hereafter when any one wants to definitely locate the warcloud in any quarter of the globe he should watch the direction in which the Missouri mule is headed. During the last month or more droves of these animals have been purchased by the representatives of the English government and shipped to Cape Town for military service in South Africa. As a war barometer and in a still greater degree as an active factor in actual hostilities the Missouri mule is all right.
