Another trial in town Tuesday attracted considerable attention. Fred Berlin went to H. Brunz' house in Highland Grove a few days ago and proceeded to smash furniture and tear things up in general. Brunz had him arrested and Justice Whipple fined Berlin $3 and costs and put him under $200 peace bonds.

H. A. Harnden has erected a very pretty monument in our cemetery this week for the late Wm. Wilson. He tells us he has just received a carload and that they are just as pretty, but vary in design to suit the different tastes. Mr. Carson of Arlington Heights was in Palatine this week to make arrangements for starting a furniture store and undertaking establishment. He is looking over the Knigge property, now occupied by Sher & Carmel and THE REVIEW office and should he decide to locate here will put up a brick building.

The case of the Village of Palatine vs. F. Hoffman, in which the latter was arrested for peddling coffee without a license did not come up before Magistrate Whipple Thursday. When the arrest was made Hoffman requested of Justice Bentler that the trial be set for Thursday, which was done. He came with his attorney Thursday and claimed that the case should have been set for trial within ten days after his arrest, asked the magistrate to let him go, which Magistrate Whipple did. When the prosecution arrived at the hour set for trial they found the case had been thrown out of court.

Cows for Sale.

New milch and springers always on hand. For sale by head or in car-load lots. Staples & Nichols, Palatine. tf.

Smartness Proved Expensive.

A Sioux City man gave a note recently without a revenue stamp on it. He said it was unnecessary, as he would pay it in a few days. When the note became due he refused to pay it and pleaded as a defense that there was no stamp on it. He won the case but now he is under arrest charged with violating the revenue laws, and the costs have already amounted to several times more than the note.

An Infamous Falsehood.

One of the most nefarious lies ever concocted and heaped upon law-abiding citizens of two villages that man could ever invent appeared in a few of the Chicago papers Tuesday morning. The article makes reference to two alleged horse thieves brought to Barrington from Irving Park in custody of Constable Spinner and his son, from where they were taken to Lake Zurich for a hearing before a justice of the peace. These papers made the statement that the prisoners narrowly escaped death by the rope at Barrington and again at Lake Zurich. At the former place, the papers claimed, 50 angry farmers awaited the arrival of the prisoners and threatened to "punish them after the fashion of days gone by." While at Lake Zurich about 200 people were gathered, well equipped with ropes, and there they even had a more narrow escape. The story, continuing, declared that Mr. Spinner and his son were only able to protect them from the infuriated crowds at both places at the points of revolvers.

At neither of the villages referred to were there any unusual gatherings upon the arrival of the accused horse thieves as depicted in the write-ups quoted above and no authority could be found at either place to prove the intention of those who happened to be present upon the arrival of the accused men as was made out in the ridiculous items given space in the city papers. Those who were present at the two different places avow that there was not the least difficulty had in the removal of the prisoners from Barrington to the justice court at Lake Zurich and at no time were the prisoners lives in jeopardy.

Cows Milked by Machinery.

Tests were conducted on the large dairy farms around Sycamore recently of milking cows by machinery, which was pronounced a success. The machine consists of an air pump worked by foot-power, two pieces of rubber hose, and eight suction bulbs, which surround the eight teats of the two cows to be milked. The eight bulbs greatly resemble telephone receivers. They are nearly hollow, but in one place a soft rubber band nearly closes the opening. When the teat is placed in the opening and the pump starts the suction causes the rubber lining to closely surround the parts, and the milk is carried to a pail four feet away. It requires but three minutes to milk two cows, or at the rate of forty cows an hour. Speed is not the only advantage, as there is little danger of the teats becoming sore, as the rubber surrounding them is soft as silk. Cleanliness is another great advantage. It is very superior to any milking machine ever before placed upon the market. The inventor, a man by the name of Nehring, is personally demonstrating its merits.

Bound Over to the Grand Jury.

Gustav Braden and Rudolph Mehrman are now behind the bars of the Lake county jail, charged with horse-stealing.

A team of horses, valued at $250, was taken from the barn of Mrs. Amelia Klipp of Gilmer and a buggy, worth $25, from Henry Meyer, a nearby neighbor, on Thursday of last week. The loss was promptly reported after the discovery, but it was not until Saturday that any trace of the stolen property was obtained. The property was found in the possession of Braden and Mehrman at Irving Park by Detectives Morley and Gleason. They were brought to Barrington the same day and taken to Lake Zurich, where they were granted a hearing before Justice Ficke. They were bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $1,200 each.

Wauconda Pioneer Dead.

Henry Courtney, one of Wauconda's oldest pioneers, having spent nearly 40 years of his life there, passed away at his home Tuesday. The funeral was held at the Catholic church Thursday, Rev. Father O'Neal officiating.

His remains were laid to rest in the Catholic cemetery. He was about 85 years old at the time of his death.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK

PAUNCEFOTE WEDDING.

Robert Bromley, the honorary attache of the British embassy, and Lillian, third daughter of Ambassador and Lady Pauncefote, whose wedding is announced for this winter, both belong to fine families of the English aristocracy. Mr. Bromley is the eldest son of Sir Henry Bromley of East Stokes, Notts, the fifth baronet of the name. When his father dies the future son-in-law of Lord Pauncefote will inherit the title and estate. He is now about 25, and is an unusually capable and promising young man. He has been in the diplomatic service since 1897, in which year he was graduated from Oxford. The family name of the Bromleys used to be plain Smith, but they were ennobled a century and a half ago. Miss Lillian, who some day will be Lady Bromley, is a tall, stunning girl of self-restrained and self-contained English type. She is British in other respects, too. Fond of all sorts of athletics, she is at home on horseback or wheel, with the reins in her hands, at golf, tennis and other outdoor sports. She paints good pictures, is an accomplished musician, and is skilled with the needle. The wedding will be solemnized in Washington.

NETHERSOLE'S WOMEN.

Although at first sight somewhat depressing, there is really no reason for apprehension of a decadence of public morals in Miss Olga Nethersole's explanation that she portrays women of the Sapho, Camille and Second Mrs. Tanqueray type because the people will not go to see her when she essays the role of "good" woman. Miss Nethersole, a talented and attractive actress, has accustomed her public to seeing her in parts to which it now insists that she limit her repertoire of dramatic presentations. It is not so much that people prefer the delineation of such characters as that they prefer to see them presented by Miss Nethersole, if presented at all. She has made the sinning and suffering woman her specialty.

THE RIVER'S NEEDS.

The resolutions passed by the Western Waterways association, in session this week at Memphis, cover a wide field of recommendation to congress. That part of the association's deliverance relative to the importance and duty of congress to take control of the Mississippi river and its tributaries and deepen them in a way to render navigation easy and practicable at all times is of special interest to the people of the Mississippi valley and to the citizens of St. Louis.

THE KHALIFA ON DECK.

With singular discourtesy the khalifa once more emerges from his cyclone cellar and announces that he will oppose the progress of Anglo-Saxon enlightenment in northern Africa as the perverse Kruger is braving it in the south end of the continent. The perversity of these barbarians is discouraging—especially at a time when the forces of civilization already have all the contracts on hand that can conveniently be attended to.

THE BEST USE FOR SURPLUS WEALTH.

Houston Post: If the idle and unemployed wealth of the country is really generous let its owners devote it to asylums for the poor, the hungry, the afflicted and unfortunate of the earth, instead of to the essentially coarse work of advertising itself in gifts of value to men who, if they are truly great, need and will accept no greater reward than the honest "well done, thou good and faithful servant" of an honest people.

A PERILOUS SHOWING.

Rumors of grave scandals cropping out in the British commissariat department in connection with the purchase of food supplies for the army in South Africa, and of a bitter controversy between the army and navy over alleged shortcomings in the transport service, indicate that Great Britain is in for an experience similar to that of this government in the course of the war with Spain.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The merchant or manufacturer who makes his bid for public patronage is the one who will have no regrets. Do your advertising with system and forethought. Set aside a certain amount and spend it in mediums of recognized standing; then go back to your business and push it from within. The results will be forthcoming and each day it will increase in steady ratio.

Indications are a strike will be ordered of all union coal miners employed by the Susquehanna Coal company at Nanticoke, Pa., and those working for the Missouri Pacific, Missouri, Kansas & Texas, the Cotton Belt and Iron Mountain railroads, in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and elsewhere in the southwest. The trouble is not over a wage scale, but grew out of an order making the miners "round up" their boxes with coal.

The strike, if ordered, will affect in Pennsylvania from 15,000 to 20,000 men. The southwestern strike would bring out about 15,000 men.

NEW OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN.

Meeting of Illinois Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. at the State Capital.

The grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows elected L. L. McKinly of Ottawa grand master. The state assembly of the Rebekah degree elected Mrs. Eva Withey of Springfield vice-president. There are now 878 lodges and 72,463 members, a gain of 1,658 members in the eighteen months preceding Oct. 1, 1899.

PLANS FOR NEXT CAMPAIGN.

Democrats Make Preparations for the Fight in 1900.

Democratic leaders and national committeemen are said to favor a campaign of education to show that present prosperity is a false condition brought about by trusts, which soon will reduce wages. Anti-trust issue is to be prominent with Chicago platform and an "anti-imperialism" plank.

THE WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

A BIRDS EYE VIEW OF THE THEATER OF THE LATEST OPERATIONS, SHOWING ESTCOURT, ON WHICH THE BOERS MADE AN UNSUCCESSFUL ASSAULT SATURDAY

He Feared to Presume.

The American tourist is so firmly convinced that he is being cheated on all hands during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence. "What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship. "Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk. "That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister; I'll give you five francs for it." "Zen it would be zat I give ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know ze young mademoiselle!"

On Tuesday, Jan. 23, a special vestibuled train of Pullman palace cars, compartment, drawing-room, library, observation and dining cars will start from Chicago, going to the City of Mexico and to other prominent cities of the republic and back to Chicago again, making the tour of all Mexico complete. The party will be strictly limited and absolutely first class. Tickets include all expenses everywhere. The tour is under the personal escort and direction of Mr. Reau Campbell, general manager of The American Tourist Association. Nicknamed of French Presidents.

The irreverent population of Paris, not content with starting revolutions at frequent intervals, has a habit of giving to each of the presidents of the republic a nickname, which usually applies to his most distinguishing characteristic. Thus Thiers was "The Short," MacMahon "The Brave," Grevy "The Grasping," Carnot "The Silent," Faure "The Handsome," while poor Loubet labors under the pet name of "The Illkempt."

THOUGHTS FOR THANKSGIVING

UNCLE EZRA'S THANKSGIVING.

Yes, Thanksgivin' Day is playin' out, er so it seems to me, Fer it don't make no comparison to what it use to be; Though the turkey and the mince pies is the same we've alwys known, An' I'm here, an' Sary Ellen, but we're eatin' 'em alone.

It's the buldin' of the railroads thet hes made it that-a-way— Thet hes tuck our children from us an' hes spilt our holiday— Holdin' out their wild shameeries about lan's that can't be beat (But whar cyclones digs the taters, an' whar chinch bugs mows the wheat).

Why, it use to be thet youngsters didn't seem to want to go From the homestead of the ol' folks any more'n a mile er so; They 'ud take things 'twas given 'm, an' they'd settle thar an' stay, An' they'd fill the homestid table when it come Thanksgivin' Day.

Law me! yes, them times is ended! Little Sary married fust, An' Jim Medders 'lowed he'd take her out to Idyho er bust.

BUT WE'RE EATING 'EM ALONE. An' he bustid, an' I've ben a-sendin' money ever sence, Though it's more fer little Sary thet I care than the expense.

An' then Chrissy went to Texas— Chrissy alwys was our pride, But he headed off some cattle, an' he hurt his spine an' died. An' now Sammy's in the city, an' that ain't so fur away, But he's writ us that a baby's brought 'em their Thanksgivin' Day!

HIS THANKSGIVING.

Tinkle-tinkle, tinkle-tinkle, tinkle-tinkle.

The leading man engaged in an attempt to remove a black spot from his dress cravat by means of an application of white grease paint, paused and listened.

"It's a mandolin," he said. "That's a new wrinkle. We've had all kinds of fends in this company since we started out, everything from elgarettes to bicycles. Who's the musician, I wonder? Oh, I say, Jenks! Jenks! Who's the band wagon?"

There was a step in the narrow passageway that led to the dressing rooms, and Jenks, the property man, appeared in the doorway. "Sh!" he said, "not so loud. The old man'll hear you."

The leading man started. "The old man, did you say—not Merriam?"

"Yes, Merriam," in a whisper.

The leading man sat on his trunk. "That beats me," he said. "The Ancient Mariner tinkling a mandolin. Now I'm prepared to see Father Time playing sentimental ditties on a jew's harp."

Jenks did not laugh, a fact which helped to sober the other man. "It's no surprise to me," said the property man, gravely. "I says to Mrs. Jenks jus' before I left the hotel, says I,

"Mrs. Jenks, you know what night this is?" "Thanksgiving," she says. "Why, right," says I, "and it'll be a hard night for Merriam."

"Poor old man," says Mrs. Jenks, a-wipin' of a tear. "Poor old man, I suppose he'll be playin' of his mandolin again." "That he will," says I.

"He hasn't missed it, 'as' near as I can judge, for thirty years. As sure as Thanksgiving night comes, just so sure he gets out that old mandolin of his and tinkles away. And it's always the same tune. God! But it does make my mind go back. I'll never forget the first time he played it. You see, me and Merriam have been together, off and on, so long that I know his story most as well as he does himself. Not that he ever talks about it. To-night, after the show, that instrument 'll go back to the bottom of his trunk, and it won't come out again till this time next year."

The leading man was all ears.

"Thirty years ago I was stage door-keeper at the old California theater. Now, the stage doorman ain't so unimportant as some folks think. There's mighty little goes on that he don't know something about. He gets the flowers first, and he usually sees the cards. He's a good friend to the actor when the actor's a friend to him, and he can do a favor now and then that's worth the while."

"Merriam was just beginning to climb up the ladder in those days. He had come into the stock three years before as utility, but he was a handsome chap, with brains and ambition to back his good looks, and it wasn't long before he got to playing leads. Say, when Merriam went on as Romeo at the matinees you couldn't see three rows in front of you for the bonnets. Mrs. Jenks used to live in a regular garden those days, for Merriam wouldn't have none of the flowers the silly girls used to send him. When I'd offer to bring them home to him he'd laugh, and tell me he reckoned my wife cared more for flowers than he did."

"But I often noticed that he came into the theater with a big bunch of violets or roses that he'd bought himself to give to the little woman who played opposite parts to him. I asked him once why he didn't give her the flowers the girls sent him, instead of spending money that way. I took a kind of fatherly interest in Merriam in those days. Lord bless you, to look at him now you'd think he was my grandfather. He looks that old."

"Well, I seen how things was going with him and Nellie Moore, and everybody else seen it, too. When she was on the stage he stood in the wings, and his eyes followed every move she made. I remember one of the women saying that it was worth while to have a man care for you like that, and certainly Nellie seemed to like it. She came to me one afternoon—that Thanksgiving I'm tellin' you about—and said that she was too tired to go home after the matinee. She asked me if I'd run across the way and order dinner for her. Then she whispered in my ear that she wanted it served for two, and asked if I couldn't fix a bunch light on the stage, so she and Merriam could have a cozy Thanksgiving dinner all alone."

"Of course I done it for her, and while they were eatin' I went over to my boardin' house. There was to be a change of bill that night, so I came back early to get my props in shape, as I had them to attend to as well as looking after the door. When I came back to the theater I heard Nellie Moore playin' a mandolin. She was always fond of music and carried the instrument around with her.

"Now you try," she said, and Merriam answered that he didn't know a note.

"I'll teach you," she said. "There's an air I want you to learn and remember."

"All right," said Merriam, and he took the mandolin from her. She showed him where to place his fingers and kept humming the tune until he could play it with only one or two breaks. Then she went to her dressing room to get ready, and Merriam sat there thrumming until the half hour was called.

"That night there was a good deal of hand-shaking, and the word went around that there was to be a weddin' at Christmas."

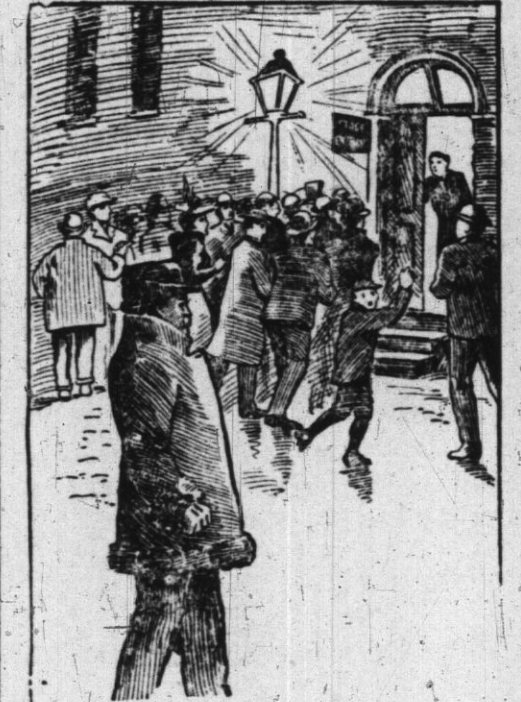

"The next night on my way to the theater I noticed a crowd around the stage door, and heard talk of a runaway. I hurried up, and as I did so Merriam came out, his face as white as a ghost's."

"For God's sake, get a doctor, Jenks!" he cried.

"I rushed to the nearest drug store, and, luckily, found one there. When we got back to the stage door Merriam was waiting, and, without a word, he led us to a sofa in the wings on which Nellie Moore was lying. The doctor bent down over her for a minute, shook his head and said he was too late."

"An understudy played Juliet that night, and Merriam as usual was the Romeo. The audience didn't know the real reason for the change, but in the tomb scene I don't see how they could help feeling it."

"Those of us who saw it from the wings will never forget it. The women were in hysterics and the stage hands and flymen were nearly as bad. I don't know how Merriam ever lived through it, but this I do know. He was a different man from that night. He seemed to lose all his ambition and he withered up so, that when I met him at a rehearsal two years later, I hardly knew him. He was bent much as you see him now, and was playing character old men. Every year he dropped down further, until they wouldn't trust him with anything better than bits and servants. Yes, sir, and that old man has played Romeo with the best of them."

The story was finished, but the mandolin still tinkled. The leading man's face was drawn, and Jenks sat thinking. Perhaps the former was thinking of his own high tide of prosperity, and of what the future had in store for him.

But sympathy and curiosity are closely allied, and soon the two men were tiptoeing through the passageway. They paused before the old actor's room. A ray of light filtered through a crack in the thin pine door. Merriam was dressed and made up for a comedy servant. His green livery coat hung on a peg on the wall, and the red wig with which he covered his own white hair lay on the dressing table before him. There, too, was a faded photograph of a pure-faced girl in the dress of Juliet. The actor was bent over his mandolin and the leading man now caught the tune for the first time, broken, but recognizable. "When other hearts and other lips Their tales of love shall tell, Then you'll remember, you'll remember—"

Twang! There was the sound of a broken string.

"First act! All up for the first act!" The callboy came tumbling down the passage and the listeners hurried up to the stage. A few minutes later the callboy came up, too, and he found the stage manager fuming.

"Where's Merriam?" he cried. "I can't hold the curtain all night for that doddering old fool. Hurry him up, will you?"

The boy disappeared, and reappeared almost instantly.

"Mr. Merriam's—" The tears choked his voice and he got no further. The stage manager made a rush for the stairs. Ten minutes later he came up dressed for the comedy servant, but the man whose name was down on the bills for the part lay in his dressing room clutching an old mandolin, with his eyes fixed on a faded photograph.

DEATH OF THE VICE-PRESIDENT

Succumbs to Long Illness—The Career of Garrett A. Hobart

Vice-President Hobart died at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday morning at his home in Paterson, N. J. The family and physician were at Mr. Hobart's bedside when he expired.

The vice-president had been failing since late Monday afternoon, although the reports given out at the house were that he was holding his own. At midnight he became unconscious, and at 7 o'clock he had an attack of angina pectoris, from which he never rallied. His death followed. Mrs. Hobart, Dr. Newton, Mrs. Newton, who is a cousin of Mrs. Hobart, and Miss Alice Waddell, the nurse, were at the patient's bedside constantly from the time he became unconscious. At 7:30 the vice-president's private secretary, Mr. Evans, called up the white house by telephone and notified President McKinley that Mr. Hobart was dying. At 9 o'clock Mr. Evans communicated again with the president, notifying him of the vice-president's death.

Garret Augustus Hobart was born June 3, 1844, at Long Branch, Monmouth county, N. J. His ancestors were English on his father's side and Dutch on his mother's. In 1863 he graduated from Rutgers college at the early age of 19 years. In the same year he began to teach school, but after a term of three months he gave it up and began the study of law under Socrates Tuttle, then the leading lawyer of Paterson, N. J., and was shortly here his ability as a campaigner soon became manifest. In 1884 he became a member of the national committee, and was elected vice-chairman in 1891.

During the campaign of 1896, when he was nominated for vice-president, Hobart's name was not much known outside of his own state. His field of operations was limited because of the fact that New Jersey usually went Democratic. This only prevented his election to the United States senate, for he was several times the choice of his party for that honor.

When the problem arose of selecting a running mate for McKinley, who would be thoroughly in accord with him on all questions, and who also was familiar with the machinery necessary for the operation of a great campaign, the choice naturally fell upon Hobart, and he was nominated almost without opposition. Since the election he has occupied his post of honor with dignity and credit.

After the cabinet meeting the president issued the following proclamation:

By the President of the United States —A Proclamation—To the People of the United States:

Garret Augustus Hobart, vice-president of the United States, died at his home in Paterson, N. J., at 8:30 o'clock this morning. In him the nation has lost one of its most illustrious citizens and one of its most faithful servants.

GARRET A. HOBART.

afterward admitted to the bar. In law he found his proper sphere, and his success was immediate and striking. The remarkable career of business and political success which followed showed a combination of natural ability, energy and popularity which has rarely been equaled.

July 21, 1869, Hobart married Jennie Tuttle, only daughter of his first patron and law partner. His home life always held a leading part in his affections, notwithstanding his many business and political cares, and was a model of conjugal felicity. His wife and two children, Fannie B. and Garret A., Jr., survive him.

In 1871 Hobart was elected a member of the city council of Paterson, his first public office. In November, 1872, he was elected Republican member of the state legislature by the largest majority that the district had ever given. The next year he was re-elected and chosen speaker of the house. In accordance with the traditions of the party in his state he refused to be a candidate for a third term, though strongly urged by his constituents.

Though raised a Democrat, Hobart always thoroughly indorsed the principles of the Republican party, and soon became a power in the politics of the state. In 1876 he was elected to the state senate by a plurality double that of Hayes for president, and in 1879 was re-elected. He became president of that body in 1881. The statutes of New Jersey will show Hobart's influence upon them, especially in matters of reform, in which he always took a leading part.

From 1880 to 1891 he was chairman of the state Republican committee, and

His participation in the business life and the lawmaking body of his native state was marked by unswerving fidelity and by a high order of talents and attainments; and his too brief career as vice-president of the United States and president of the senate exhibited the loftiest qualities of upright and sagacious statesmanship. In the world of affairs he had few equals among his contemporaries. His private character was gentle and noble. He will long be mourned by his friends as a man of singular purity and attractiveness, whose sweetness of disposition won all hearts, while his elevated purposes, his unbending integrity, and whole-hearted devotion to the public good deserved and acquired universal respect and esteem.

In sorrowing testimony of the loss which has fallen upon the country, I direct that on the day of the funeral, the executive officers of the United States shall be closed and all stations of the army and navy shall display the national flag at halfmast, and that the representatives of the United States in foreign countries shall pay appropriate tribute to the illustrious dead for a period of thirty days.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this 21st day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fourth.

WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

Should there be another European war railroads will play a most important part in it. Nearly all the railroads on the continent are built with a view to their utilization for the movement of troops and supplies in time of war as much as for commercial use in time of peace. The strategical use of railroads has been carried to the greatest perfection in Germany, where there are now 16 available routes to the Rhine against nine in 1870. The Rhine can be crossed by troops at 20 points, and the plans for the invasion of France are well laid. The German army, like the French, Austrian, Russian and Italian, has a corps of railway engineers, there being three regiments in the kaiser's army. These men are well trained and are supplied with material for laying railroads in an emergency. There are also "flying bridges," while the French army has special contrivances for the quick clearing of tunnels blown up by the enemy. The value of these contrivances will be appreciated by any one who has watched the campaign of the British against the Boers in South Africa, where the former have been greatly handicapped, particularly in transporting re-enforcements, by the destruction of railway tracks and bridges.

New Zealand, which has a limited territorial area, was a few years ago confronted with a land famine. This came about because the settlement of the country was allowed to proceed upon the same basis as the settlement of other countries has proceeded. Wealthy men bought up large tracts, and in a short time there was no land left for the settler, though great areas were still uninhabited.

To correct this evil the government is now buying in the great estates, subdividing them and leasing them to small holders. The leases are good as long as the landholder wants the land. The rents more than cover the interest on money borrowed by the government to make the purchases.

Such a system renders the future monopolization of lands by corporations and individuals impossible. New Zealand is making a number of experiments in political and economic fields which may prove of value to the rest of the world.

If the people of Nicaragua have any idea of breaking into the first page of American newspapers with their proposed revolution, they should postpone it until some other bellicose events, now on the tapis, notably those in South Africa and the Philippines, have been pulled off. Besides, there are other little affairs in South and Central America which are in the calendar ahead of Nicaragua's proposed revolution which we have not yet properly catalogued. We haven't been quite able to keep up with Venezuela's lightning change revolutions. Nicaragua should wait awhile before springing its revolution upon the public.

A New York commercial journal accounts for the low price of wheat by stating that there are no cars in which to ship it from the warehouses to the markets. This condition does not seem to have a very depressing effect upon the price of coal.

The man who predicted persistently and not wisely and was so reckless as to invest his money on his judgment, pertinently remarks the Washington Post, is doubtless inclined to the belief that we have too many elections.

The November treasury statement shows that the gold coin in the country and the gold bullion in the treasury amount to $1,014,468,049. Never before had the country so much as a billion in gold, and so long as we do not export the metal our mines are adding about $64,000,000 a year to the total, to say nothing of imports. The silver dollars in circulation amount to about $71,000,000 and the fractional silver to $76,000,000. The total paper money currency—greenbacks, treasury notes, silver certificates and national bank notes—is $1,042,855,078. Notwithstanding this, so great is the activity of business in the nation that there is a scarcity of actual money with which to settle merely the daily balances in trade.

"Wars and Rumors of War."

There is something of irony in the fact that so soon after the great international "love-feast" at The Hague, with its dissertations on universal peace, arbitration, disarmament and all that sort of thing, there should be "wars and rumors of war" in almost every quarter of the globe. Without being either a pessimist or an alarmist one cannot fail to see that existing political conditions and complications are none too full of hope and encouragement for the peace of the world.

There is war, real, fierce and strenuous, in South Africa, between the Britons and the Afrikanders, to which there may be added the "black peril"—the general uprising of the vast hordes of natives of the dark continent. Rumors are rife in every European capital of combinations for armed interference with Great Britain's programme.

Japan is excited over Russian aggression in Korea and China, and rumor has it that she is seeking European and American alliances to check it.

The United States has on its hands something of a war in the Philippines, and it is intimated that many of our warships will be stationed in Asiatic and south Pacific waters. Meanwhile our government is insisting on the "open door" in the orient, France is hurrying troops into that part of China which she controls, while Russia is equally active in preparations for the enforcement of what she regards as her rights in the Celestial empire.

Italy, in spite of her strained finances, has decided not to send her fleets to winter quarters this year, as she usually does.

Russia, Germany and Spain are reported to be in consultation with a view to the occupation of Ceuta, opposite Gibraltar, a thing that would mean war, instant and terrible, with Great Britain, whose formidable channel fleet, with the possible anticipation of such a move on the part of those powers, was lately dispatched to Gibraltar in strict war formation.

The indications at least are that the dawn of the twentieth century will not see the hoped for dawn of universal peace.

According to the report of one of our consuls in France, there exists in that country a postal savings system whereby the masses of the people are, young and old, encouraged in habits of thrift and providence. The French system is especially designed to inculcate ideas of money saving in the minds of young people and children, and it is a common thing in France for even young children to have bank accounts, and they will tell you, in a somewhat boastful way, how many francs or hundreds of francs they have in bank. In the common schools the children deposit with their teachers from 1 sou (1 cent) upward, and a representative of the savings bank comes around once a month to collect these little hoards. If a child deposits but 1 sou, he receives in return a very small livret, or bankbook. When his deposits reach the sum of 1 franc, his importance entitles him to a "grand livret." Many children, or parents for them, deposit in an endowment fund which is to provide them with a capital of 5,000 or 10,000 francs on reaching their majority. The amount owned by the savings banks in France in 1897 was $22,870,500, which was invested in government bonds, real estate and mortgages.

Deputy Hedin of the Swedish riksdag has lately published a book in which he urges that steps should be taken to guarantee the neutrality of Sweden, Norway and Denmark in the event of a European war. Mr. Hedin wishes the three northern nations to make a treaty by which they shall pledge themselves to give aid to no power at war nor hinder any in the prosecution of it. Such formal action would be merely carrying out the traditional policy of the Scandinavian countries. They have been neutral as far back as the seventeenth century and have also labored to prevent wars between other nations, as when they sought to avert the Crimean war. Neutrality can always be declared in time of war, but Mr. Hedin believes that it would be better to pledge it in advance and so avoid any suspicion that it might be compelled by the circumstances of the moment.

It is not difficult to see the ulterior motive of the Swedish statesman's proposition. Brave and valiant as they are, the three Scandinavian countries, even united, would not be an important factor in a European war. Their combined population does not exceed 9,000,000, and in the event of general hostilities they would be a tempting bait for the stronger and more aggressive powers.

HERE AND THERE.

The first wedding the Lake county court house ever had on Sunday occurred in the county clerk's office a week ago last Sunday. The interested parties were two young people from Chicago.

The directors of the Milburn Mutual Insurance Co. have levied on all members an assessment for 1899 of $2.90 on each $1,000 to pay losses amounting to $6,960.40 that occurred during the year.

O. C. Fittz has purchased the equity of the electric light plant at Dundee, paying $1,200 for same.

Ernest Miller, an employe of Richard Maling, Dundee, while working on a windmill, fell a distance of 18 feet to the ground. Although bruised, he was not seriously injured.

Nearly 55,000 enumerators, clerks and assistants will be required to take the next census.

Illinois roads that are "worked" in the fall always resent it deeply the following spring.

Uncle Sam naturally pays but little attention to the request that he take Panama under his wing. Uncle Sam is no goose.

About $100 was realized for the benefit of the Carpentersville strikers from the labor union dance in Elgin last week.

A brakeman on the Chicago & Milwaukee railroad had his hand badly crushed while coupling cars at Rondout Saturday.

Elgin will build a $30,000 iron bridge over Fox river.

At a meeting of the directors of the Chicago Milk Shippers union the price of milk was fixed at $1.15 per can for November and $1.10 for December.

It is said that Long Grove is to have a brass band.

The opening of the drainage canal, which has been in progress for several years, may take place between December 1 and 4.

Four young boys were arrested recently at Waukegan on a charge of disorderly conduct by a resident of that city, who said they attacked him in regulation dime-novel-desperado style. They held forth in a dug-out or hut.

August Reese is making considerable improvements on his residence in Dundee.

Steel rail workers in the South Chicago mills are to be given an advance in wages from 50 to 75 per cent.

A smash-up on the Wisconsin Central railroad at Rockefeller Friday of last week caused a loss to that company of two freight cars, a caboose and an engine. Through a misunderstanding, the freight train which had come to a halt at the depot and a freight train approaching from the rear, both thought they had been given the right-of-way. When the approaching train sailed around the curve, which is close to the depot, the engineer and fireman had barely time to jump for their lives. No one was injured.

Fred Lawson of Nunda was placed under $300 bonds by a magistrate of that place to appear before the grand jury at Woodstock to answer to the charge brought against him of stealing about forty chickens.

A residence in Janesville was blown up on Friday of last week by dynamite, wrecking the entire front of the building. It is thought that the house was blown up out of spite work.

An option recently taken on 2,000 acres of land north of Waukegan and bordering Lake Michigan for a distance of about a mile has been puzzling the inhabitants of that section of the county as to what purpose the land is intended. Rumors which have been afloat there for some time named several huge manufacturing concerns as being behind the deal, but there is no authentic information to be had as to what purpose the property is to be used. The options are for $5 an acre and extend to February 1.

James Monaghan is the possessor of two rare souvenirs, which he was showing to us Tuesday evening. They are two papers, the Waukegan Sun, dated July 29, and the August number of the Modern Woodmen which went down with the ill-fated Morgan City off the coast of Japan. A diver was dispatched to rescue the mail and it was according delivered and these two papers were still wet when handed to E. J. Monaghan, who is now at San Fernando with the 16th infantry. He dried them and, after reading entire contents, returned them to his father as a souvenir. Elmer states that he has been in a few skirmishes with the insurgents and is in the very best of health. We hope to have one of his letters to publish for the benefit of the public in the near future.

About Croup.

SOME READING THAT WILL PROVE INTERESTING TO YOUNG MOTHERS. HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THE DISEASE.
Croup is a terror to young mothers and to post them concerning the cause, first symptoms and treatment is the object of this item. The origin of croup is a common cold. Children who are subject to it take cold very easily and croup is almost sure to follow. The first symptom is hoarseness; this is soon followed by a peculiar rough cough, which is easily recognized and will never be forgotten by one who has heard it. The time to act is when the child first becomes hoarse. Give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy freely and all tendency to croup will soon disappear. Even after the croupy cough has developed it will prevent the attack. There is no danger in giving this remedy for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

No Time Like Now.

The new lines of railroad in process of construction by the Chicago & North-Western Railway company are at present affording opportunities to get in and grow up with a country that is sure to grow, that are not likely to occur again.

The new lines penetrate the richest region in Western Iowa and Minnesota, where there was ample room for a railroad. The towns along these new lines, located and managed by the railroad company, are today offering rare chances for investments or locations. The country is rich and the towns will surely thrive.

Prices of lots are still low. Investors and business men of all classes will find it to their advantage to investigate.

The choice timber land of Northern Wisconsin and Michigan are also well worth looking into.

Good Work Being Done.

Secretary Hill of the milk shipper's union recently addressed a meeting of dairymen at Nunda. Speaking of the losses saved to members of the association, he said: "The first year our union collected over $120,000 of old bills, last year about $82,000 and this year about the same." He urged the farmers to get into an organization of some kind, if not the union, and predicted that the contract price of milk for November and December would be $1.15. Dealers, he said, were offering $1.00 straight for six month's contract, and some were now paying $1.25 to $1.50 a can. There are now 5,000 shipping their milk to Chicago. The expenses of the union be placed at $3,200 to $3,600 a year.

Writes us, May 31, 1899: "I feel it my duty to write and let you know what your medicine, '5 Drops,' has done for me. I have had rheumatism about eighteen years, but was able to be up most of the time until a year ago last May, when I was taken down and not able to move about. About six weeks ago I saw your advertisement and wrote for a sample bottle. After taking a few doses it did me so much good that I ordered some more for myself and friends, and in every case it has done wonders and given perfect satisfaction."

"Dr. Woodliff, my family physician, who has had rheumatism for fifteen years, is taking the '5 Drops,' and says it is the most efficient rheumatic medicine he has ever used."

"5 Drops" is the most powerful specific known. Free from opiates and perfectly harmless. It is a perfect cure for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Catarrh, La Grippe, Neuralgic Headache, etc. If you or any of your friends are suffering, do not delay, but send for a bottle of "5 Drops." Large-sized bottles (300 doses), $1. For the next thirty days we will mail a 25-cent sample bottle for 10 cents. SWANSON RHEUMATIC CURE CO., 160 to 164 E. Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

Farely Official.

Sir Rowland Hill and Anthony Trollope used to quarrel fiercely when they both were connected with the postoffice. A discussion arose one day as to the meaning of "official" language and "private" language. "In official life," said Sir Rowland, glaring at Trollope, "I am accustomed to describe myself as your obedient servant, whereas in real-life you know very well that I am nothing of the sort."

For Every Household.

The sewing machine bargain advertised by the John M. Smyth Co. in another part of this paper should interest every housekeeper. The firm is thoroughly reliable, having been established in Chicago over 30 years and anyone dealing with them may be assured of square treatment. Get their mammoth catalogue of everything to eat, wear or use.

"The Great Ruby" still holds the stage at McVicker's theater, Chicago, although the last weeks of this big English melodrama are announced. The massive scenery, the splendid company, the wonderful costuming, the handsome furnishing and the interesting story told in the play have proven very attractive to the public and the standing room only sign has been in use nearly every night for six weeks.

I knew a very wise man that believed that, if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation.—Fletcher of Saltoun.

My Mother Had Consumption

"My mother was troubled with consumption for many years. At last she was given up to die. A neighbor told her not to give up but try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. She did so and was speedily cured, and is now in the enjoyment of good health."—D. P. Jolly, Feb. 2, 1899, Avoca, N. Y.

Cures Hard Coughs

No matter how hard your cough is or how long you have had it, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best thing you could possibly take. But it's too risky to wait until you have consumption, for sometimes it's impossible to cure this disease. If you are coughing today, don't wait until tomorrow, but get a bottle of Cherry Pectoral at once and be relieved. It strengthens weak lungs.

That Mysterious Major...

CHAPTER VI.

"It is very awkward, but then it is just exactly what one might have supposed would happen." Lady Howard spoke in a strangely perturbed tone. For the past few minutes she had been occupied in reading the London paper, but the remark, which was accompanied by a faint sigh, was evidently the outcome of a previous conversation. "If one has a particular antipathy for a certain individual, one may be quite sure that, as ill-luck will have it, one will be brought in contact with that very individual at every turn and corner; and it has just been so with Major Brown." During the past four or five days we must have had occasion to speak to him at least a dozen times. What with lending us his umbrella on the day we were caught in that thunder shower, helping in the search for Sambo when you lost him the other morning, and to crown all, rescuing you almost from under the hoofs of that tiresome horse upon the shore yesterday, we seem to have passed our time in saying nothing but "thank you," to him. Really everything has happened as awkwardly as it could. Of course accidents are constantly occurring; still I cannot imagine how you managed to get under the hoofs of that horse."

"Well, yes—it was troublesome of me. It would have been almost better if it had killed me outright," was Evelyn's answer from the deep embrasure of the window, where she was sitting before a small writing table busily scribbling off several notes. "But, anyhow, we were under an obligation to him for getting wet through on our account the other night, when in that pouring rain he found us a cab after the theater. After that, we were obliged to be polite to him."

"Yes—polite of course," agreed her ladyship, twisting her rings somewhat thoughtfully round and round upon her his position in society? Lady Howard spoke quite disdainfully. "He may be an officer, certainly—he has the appearance of a soldier—but it is far more likely, since nobody can discover what regiment he is in—and there is no such name in the retired Army list—that he is merely a major of volunteers in an obscure country town, following a vulgar but honest trade as soap boiler or sugar refiner."

"He may be, of course. Pigs, I believe, may fly," returned Evelyn, nibbling the end of her pen with a perfectly unconvinced expression. "But there is nothing suggestive of either soap or sugar about Major Brown."

"No—I do not say that there is; but I dislike making promiscuous acquaintances. Mr. Falkland was talking about him only this morning, and he seems thoroughly to understand my feelings upon the subject."

"Yet a month ago Mr. Falkland was quite as promiscuous an acquaintance himself. It was only by chance we got to know him; and in his case he had not even done anything for which we were under any obligation to him," was Evelyn's prompt reply.

"My dear child, what are you talking about?" Lady Howard's tones were slightly impatient. "Mr. Falkland's was quite a different case. We made his acquaintance by chance; but I should have been just as reluctant to have anything to say to him as I am about this other man if we had not discovered in him an old friend of both my husband and your father. At the same time I must say I never met anybody before in whom I could place such complete confidence. He is so different from the general run of young men, who can talk of nothing but their shooting, their horses, and their dogs."

"Oh, yes—he is very nice, of course; but"—Miss Luttrell paused for a moment—"he is not exactly a young man!"

fingers; "but you have to be more than ordinarily polite to a man who has saved your life."

"Yes—that is it," said Evelyn lugubriously.

"It is very annoying—the whole affair has been so unfortunate," proceeded Lady Howard with emphasis. "If it were absolutely necessary that you should be rescued by somebody, all well and good; but there is not another person in the hotel whom I would not have chosen to undertake the task in preference to that man."

Evelyn received the information in silence. Leaning her elbows on the edge of the table, she let her chin sink slowly into her two palms and gazed out reflectively through the open window.

"Still there is nothing really against him," she suggested at length, with slight though perceptible diffidence. "He—he is very nice to talk to. The only objection is that nobody knows who he is, and that his name is 'Brown'—plain common 'Brown'—without even an 'e' to add a little elegance to it. And of course one generally considers that an officer is at least a gentleman."

"An officer? Nonsense, child! Because he calls himself 'Major Brown,' do you suppose that is any criterion of

"Possibly not." The touch of impatience in her ladyship's tones was superseded by one of distinct annoyance. "Neither," she added, "is this mysterious individual with whom you have struck up such a warm friendship. I should imagine there are only a very few years difference in their ages."

"Now, Aunt Lydia, do not talk nonsense! Major Brown may be as old as Methuselah for all I care! And, as for saying that I have struck up a friendship with him—well, that is really mean of you!" Evelyn pushed back her chair, advanced to the middle of the room, and with her hands clasped behind her, gazed serenely at her aunt. "You surely know that you did more towards making that acquaintance in the ten minutes when you talked to him last evening and overweighed him with thanks for rescuing me than I could have done in a whole year! Why, if I had not known to the contrary, I should have thought he was the one person in the hotel for whom you had the greatest respect!"

"Yet, what else could I do, when, but for his timely aid, you might at this very moment be lying lamed for life or even dead?" returned Lady Howard, with a little shudder. "Oh, no! You did quite right, of course!" said Evelyn thoughtfully.

Perhaps nobody realized more fully than herself how much she had to be thankful for. "But do not say it is my fault if he—well, if for the future he does not merely take off his hat and pass on with a distant bow when he chances to meet you!"—laughing lightly.

No; the distant bow was quite a thing of the past, their acquaintance was on a totally different footing now—a state of affairs to which Major Brown himself was thoroughly alive when, half an hour later, he chanced to meet Miss Luttrell in the garden. He welcomed her warmly, persisted in showing her some new plans for a projected golf course, and was still walking by her side when a turn in the path brought them face to face with Gilbert Falkland.

"So there you are, Miss Eve!" he began by way of greeting, utterly ignoring her companion. "I was just wondering where the bird had flown." The words were spoken lightly, in the same familiar half-patronizing strain which Mr. Falkland usually adopted towards the daughter of his old friend. "Five minutes ago, when I was passing along the verandah I noticed that the window of your sitting room was wide open, that the apartment itself was empty, and that a check book was lying on the table."

"A check book?" Evelyn nodded. "Ah, I dare say it was mine."

"So I suspected," observed Falkland calmly. "Are you aware, though, that it is a most dangerous practice leaving your check book about like that?"

"Dangerous!" Evelyn laughed. "Well, yes; I suppose that it would be considered dangerous by some people who go on the principle of locking up everything, from the wine cellar itself down to such trifles as penny stamps and halfpenny post cards."

"Yet check books, I should imagine, scarcely come under that category," remarked Falkland with quiet sarcasm. "But perhaps you have forgotten our conversation of a week ago?" he supplemented, with a significant glance from Evelyn to Major Brown, who was standing silently passing his stick along the edge of the gravel path, an edified listener to the discussion.

At his words the hot color rose quickly to Evelyn's cheeks, mounting to her forehead and spreading over throat and ears. Like lightning her thoughts had gone back to that morning when her first encounter with Major Brown had taken place; and, as she realized to what Mr. Falkland was alluding, a feeling of the utmost annoyance took possession of her.

But worst of all was the knowledge that Major Brown had raised his head and was wonderingly surveying the crimson hue of her cheeks, and probably even divining the cause of her confusion. This last thought was too much for her. Without another word, and giving Gilbert Falkland only one flash of her angry eyes, she suddenly turned away and walked off indignantly towards the house.

"The wretch!" she murmured a moment later, as she stepped through the open window of Lady Howard's sitting room and threw herself into a low chair.

One contemptuous glance she gave at her check book as it lay open on the table by her side, and then, as though annoyed by the very sight of it, she took it up, and, thrusting it into her writing case, locked the key angrily upon it.

CHAPTER VII.

It was two days later—a soaking wet afternoon. Ever since early morning the rain had been descending in a steady persistent downpour, beating upon the scorched grass, dashing to pieces the rows of stately calceolarias and geraniums, and converting every path and flight of steps into as many miniature streams and turbulent cascades of seething waters.

Major Brown, driven almost to despair by the depressing prospects of the day, wandered aimlessly from billiard room to smoking room, from smoking room to library, and at last sat down before one of the writing tables and hastily dashed off one or two unimportant letters. His correspondence completed, he directed and sealed the envelopes, and was leisurely affixing the stamps, when his attention became suddenly arrested by something on the sheet of blotting paper before him.

What was it? With the exception of a number of indescribable hieroglyphics and the impression of a line of more boldly written characters, which had evidently been hastily blotted, the surface of the pink sheet was perfectly blank. Putting up his eye glass, he scanned them for at least a couple of minutes in absolute silence, and then, giving a cautious glance round the room, as though a sudden thought had struck him, he advanced, blotting book in hand, towards a fantastically framed mirror which stood above the marble mantel. This further scrutiny was, to all appearance, even more successful, for, as Major Brown held up the strangely interesting sheet close to the glass, a smile of satisfaction immediately lit up his face.

Chicago.—A. Swanberg, janitor of a three-story flat at 1297 Wabansia avenue, shot and killed one burglar and wounded another. He was awakened by a noise on the back porch. Seizing his shotgun, he waited developments. In a few minutes the window of his apartment was raised. A head appeared, Swanberg fired and the burglar fell forward into the room, the top of his head having been blown off by the charge of shot. The burglar's companion took to his heels, with Swanberg in pursuit. As the burglar was gaining, Swanberg fired, and, he says, wounded the man in the leg before he disappeared in an alley. Swanberg has been arrested. The dead man, who has not yet been identified, was about 30 years old and roughly dressed.

Bigamy Case's Sequel.
Harrisburg.—William M. Bison and Sophrona Dunbar, who were married in this city last April, secured another license and were remarried here by Justice of the Peace G. L. Jenkins. Last May, a month after they were married the first time, Edward L. Dunbar came from Dekoven, Ky., and swore out a warrant against the woman for bigamy, claiming to be husband No. 1. She gave bail for her appearance, and in the meantime returned to Kentucky and secured a divorce in the Union county court. The bride and groom are now at home with friends at New Burnside, Ill.

The deal was put through by W. B. McKinley of Champaign, who was in Decatur in September to purchase the street railway company for the same syndicate which now owns the gas and electric plant.

Attempts to Lynch Horse Thieves.
Waukegan.—Gustav Daden and Rudolph Mehrmann, horse thieves, were lodged in jail here. They stole a team from Henry Mayer of Gilmer, and were captured with it at Irving Park Saturday. They were taken to the scene of the crime and twice narrowly escaped being lynched by farmers, who have gotten very tired of horse thieves. At Barrington and again at Lake Zurich excited crowds sought to take them from the custody of Constable Spinner, but were driven off.

The way in which the Remington Typewriter is breaking down the moss-covered barriers of diplomatic precedent is shown in the following extract from the New Castle (England) Daily Journal of September 21:
"Lord Salisbury has given instructions that all Her Majesty's Embassies shall be supplied with Remington Typewriters. All dispatches and all communications are now written with the Remington at the Foreign Office."

Who are injured by the use of coffee. Recently there has been placed in all the grocery stores a new preparation called GRAIN-O, made of pure grains, that takes the place of coffee. The most delicate stomach receives it without distress, and but few can tell it from coffee. It does not cost over one-fourth as much. Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cents and 25 cents per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

Restored to health, after submitting my case in vain to several physicians, I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of Zaegel's Genuine Swedish Essence of Life, hoping thereby to induce others to try it with equally good results.

During my sickness I could neither eat, drink nor sleep, and in a short time lost no less than 25 pounds. Everything was done for me, but all in vain; I was growing weaker from day to day. I was growing weaker from day to day. I was growing weaker from day to day.

[LETTER TO MRS. PINKHAM NO. 64,492]
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I think it is my duty to write to you expressing my sincere gratitude for the wonderful relief I have experienced by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried different doctors, also different kinds of medicine. I would feel better at times, then would be as bad as ever.
"For eight years I was a great sufferer. I had falling of the womb and was in such misery at my monthly periods I could not work but a little before I would have to lie down. Your medicine has made a new woman of me. I can now work all day and not get tired. I thank you for what you have done for me. I shall always praise your medicine to all suffering women."
—MRS. E. E. KUHN, GERMANO, OHIO.

"I have taken eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used two packages of your Sanative Wash, also some of the Liver Pills, and I can say that your remedies will do all that you claim for them. Before taking your remedies I was very bad with womb trouble, was nervous, had no ambition, could not sleep, and my food seemed to do me no good. Now I am well, and your medicine has cured me. I will gladly recommend your medicine to every one wherever I go."

A new frame building 22x32 feet and 10 feet high has been erected by the village on its property in the rear of the city hall building. It will be used by the fire department for the storage of the hook and ladder truck, hose cart, etc. The small building that was used heretofore was found inadequate, it being necessary to store a large portion of the company's outfit elsewhere. The latter building has been moved to the rear of the new one and will hereafter be used as a tramp house.

The dancing school just opened at Barrington affords an extremely rare chance for not only Barrington people but to those who live in the surrounding country to learn the terpsichorean art correctly. Prof. H. P. Tilden of Elgin, one of the foremost instructors in this part of the state, has been engaged to teach the class. Although the school was formally opened last evening, yet the committee who has charge of the organization of the school has decided that the membership book be continued open for a short time for the benefit of those who have not already joined. The school will be conducted very much after the style of the one organized here a few years ago, the entire expense of conducting the school being borne by the members of the club, a decided departure from the usual methods adopted by most dancing schools.

A New Electric Road.

An electric railway is being talked of between Waukegan and Fox Lake, connecting with as many lakes between the two points as possible without going too much out of a direct line. Supervisor R. D. Wynn of Waukegan appears to be the chief promoter of the idea. He has interested railroad men and capitalists to such an extent that they have been at Waukegan and gone over the proposed route. Mr. Wynn is credited with saying that they will purchase much of the right-of-way and after the direct road to Fox Lake is in operation a feeder will be run to take in Milburn, Antioch and eventually Lake Geneva, and possibly one in the southern direction.

An effort will be made to have the line completed two miles out from Waukegan at least by next spring, the extension of which will be made as rapidly as the right-of-way can be secured. It is thought that the road will be in operation to Fox Lake within a year.

Football Game for Thanksgiving.

The Barrington football eleven has made arrangements to play the Norwood Park Tigers at a game of football at Heise's park, Barrington, on Thanksgiving Day, November 30. The game will be called promptly at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and promises to be an exciting contest. It is said that the "Tigers" are coming here for practice, as they have another game scheduled with a strong eleven in another town. The feeling of the home team is that they will be able to give them all the practice they may need and teach them a few points about the game as well. They have been diligently practicing for the past several weeks and are considered to be now in fine trim.

A small admission of 15 cents will be charged adults and 10 cents for children. Turn out and "whoop it up" for the boys.

Dockery-Meyer Nuptials.

The marriage of Miss Minnie Meyer to Jefferson Dockery took place at the home of the latter's brother, Jno. Dockery, at Mattison, Ill., Monday. The worthy couple will return some time next week to receive the congratulations of their many friends and to make Barrington their home.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Meyer, who live a short distance east of this village. She is a quiet, unassuming young lady and will grace a home in a most befitting manner. The groom is a young gentleman of sterling character and upright. He is in the employ of the E. J. & E. railroad at this place.

The many friends of both unite in extending best wishes for a life of happiness.

Filled in a Deep Gulch.

On the Deadwood, S. D., branch of the Burlington railroad is a gulch 700 feet wide, known as Sheep's Canyon. This was crossed, until recently, by a wooden bridge 126 feet high, which took over 240,000 feet of lumber in the building. Recently this trestle was filled in, and the great undertaking attracted the attention of railroad men all over the country. It took 20 weeks to accomplish the task. It was necessary to haul 2,880,000 cubic feet of earth one and one-half miles up a two per cent. grade and then unload off the high bridge. This required 1,489 trains of fifteen cars each, 22,000 carloads in all. It was a stupendous undertaking, but now the bridge can't burn and it does not cost a lot of money every year for repairs and watchers.

Blacksmiths Organize.

Even the blacksmiths have commenced to organize a trust. Blacksmiths of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin met recently at Linton, Wis., and formed an association called the Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin Blacksmith's Union. They agreed upon uniform prices and a raise of five cents a shoe for horseshoeing was made.
