fields in West Virginia destroyed hundreds of lives and millions of dollars of property Sunday. The wall of water swept through a narrow mountain valley already flooded by thirtythree hours of continuous, heavy rains. Two ridges of the Allegheny Mountains hemmed it in and helped it to gather force. It swept a dozen busy towns. It destroyed many miles of railroad tracks and telegraph lines. The cataclysm guished men in England. Received by crushed and drowned the inhabitants by hundreds as they struggled to escape up the mountain sides. The loss of life is estimated at 400. The loss to railroad and mining property is at least $2,000,000 and the loss to other property probably as much more. These figures are, however, merely approximations, for communication with many of the villages is yet impossible.

In some places the valley is not over a quarter of a mile wide, the hills rising precipitously from the banks of the stream, along which ran the track of the Norfolk and Western railroad. Over the high valley when the atmosphere was heated to a high degree the winds brought clouds saturated with moisture. The fall of rain that resulted was tremendous. The swollen mountain streams all poured their water into the Elkhorn and the narrow valley was filled by it.

Cassini Will Straighten Out Tariff Controversy.

HE IS A SHREWD DIPLOMAT.

Exposes a Trumped-Up Claim of Great Britain-Ridicules the Suggestion That There Is Any Tariff Coalition Against the United States.

Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador, left Washington Monday, and sailed for Europe Tuesday. He carried with him Secretary Hay's explanation of this government's position regarding the tariff question which is at issue between the United States and Russia. Count Cassini has shown himself not only a shrewd diplomat since he went to Washington, four years ago, but he has been able to convince the State Department of the real friendship of the Czar for this government. He exposed the trumped-up claim that Great Britain alone prevented a European coalition against the United States at the beginning of the war with Spain by showing that Russia had never given any encouragement to this proposed coalition but had from the beginning informed the other powers that Russia remained the friend of this government. The Russian ambassador has at all times endeavored to cement the ties of friendship between the two governments, and, understanding the true sentiments of the President toward Russia, it is believed he will be able to so present this traiff question as to convince his government that Secretary Gage's mistakes do not represent any animosity toward Russia, and will in time be corrected when the courts can pass upon them. Count Cassini ridicules the suggestion of a coalition in Europe for the purpose of waging a tariff war against the United States, and says emphatically that Russia is simply looking after her own individual interests. Mr. Vanderlip, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury seems to have discovered evidence of such a tariff coalition, because Austria has sought such a coalition, but the efforts of Austria have been known here for some time, and it has also been known that Austria had failed to secure any encouragement from the throwing about 7,000 men and boys out other powers. There is no fear of a tariff war with Europe, but the State At the Glenwood mine the water has Department is trying to keep faith Treasury Department.

The Tennessee supreme court at Memphis affirmed the sentence of death in the case of John Shaw, colored charged with assault on a schoolgirl, and he will die on the gallows Tuesday, Aug. 6. The crime for which Shaw will be hanged was one of the most repulsive in the history of that section and after his capture he had several narrow escapes from lynching. On account of public indignation his trial was secret and the prisoner was taken to Jackson for safety.

Hoshi Toru, former Japanese ambassador to the United States, member of the ministry of Marquis Ito, and president of the lower house of parliament, was assassinated at Tokio, Japan. The assassin declared that he struck the blow in the interests of the company. RIGHT USE OF TALENT. It is not always the woman who has the most amount of brains who is the most successful. Oftentimes it is the woman who makes the right use of the ordinary amount of knowledge she has who eclipses her more brilliant sisters, who have not learned the seccret of application. The reason why so many women of undoubted talent fail to secure success is because their efforts either lack the right sort of amoftion or they are not properly applied. We see people every day who are successful, and yet their characters do not denote them to possess unusual intelligence or talent, says a writer in the Weekly Bouquet. The secret of their success is they know how to apply themselves well and they make the best of their ordinary gifts. The woman who possesses agreeableness, tact and a large amount of common sense is an indispensable personage. Although she cannot sing divinely or write a book, she can charm people with her simple merits well applied.

Ranavalona succeeded to the throne in 1883 and was deposed in 1897, when Madagascar became a French colony. She was born in 1861, and is the third queen of her name. She is a religious, pureminded woman, and until her dominions were taken away from her she had never been out of the island. Her husband was the prime minister, a crafty and eloquent man, twice the age of the queen, but he was never able absolutely to control her will. The queen is slight and graceful, rather pretty, but somewhat delicate. She is fairly well cultured in French and English literature, and is highly regarded by those whom she has met in the French capital.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm - A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock

The Modern Dairyman.

In an address given before the State Dairymen's Association at New Haven, Governor Hoard dealt with the modern aspects of dairying as compared with those which had governed the industry in bygone days. In the course of his remarks, he said:

The last third of a century marks an ooch in the progress of the dairy industry to a certain extent in all parts of the world. There is something peculiar about this industry in its effect on the men who follow it intelligently. They stand foremost in the ranks of agriculture in the point of intellectual quest. Dairying calls for the best judgment and work in the tillage of the soil and the growing of grass and grain. It calls for special knowledge in the care and harvesting of those crops, in order that they may impart their highest food value.

It calls for a special study in the dinciples and art of animal feeding, so that the cow may be given a ration atted to the functional work she has hand and our highest profit. It calls for a special judgment in the matter constructing barns, stables. silos, yards, and drinking places, for we are dealing with a high order of animal life. Herein is valuable also a knowledge of farm sanitation-what its principles, limitations, and results are. We are responsible for the crowding together of large numbers of cows, and we must hold ourselves responsible to them, and the public whose food they yield, for as perfect and healthful a mode of life as it is possible for us to provide for them. It calls for a knowledge of the laws of reproduction, whereby we may make use of the forces of nature to the manifest increase of dairy power in our cattle. We have no right to sit still or act indifferently on this question. The cows of a state are what its dairy farmers have made. No other branch of agriculture is as socialistic as dairying, for it is organized very greatly all over the land into cheese factories and creameries. Here, again, is a special endowment of sound sense required. The moment such organization takes place, the farmer finds himself no longer a producer, but a manufacturer. He must learn how to co-operate with his fellow farmers, according to the laws of business. He of one of the finest foods on earth, which, like Caesar's wife, "must be shove suspicion."

Live Stock Diseases in England. A report from Professor McFadyean

presented to the council of the Royal Agricultural Society at their last meeting stated that during the sixteen weeks of this year for which the official returns have been issued, 221 outbreaks of anthrax, with 327 animals attacked, have been notified. For the corresponding period of last year the figures were 179 and 283 respectively. During the same period - there have been 377 outbreaks of glanders, with 644 animals attacked, as against 337 outbreaks and 609 animals attacked during the first sixteen weeks of last year. Since the last meeting of the council three fresh centers of foot and mouth disease have been detected. The first of these was reported from Suffolk on April 7, and the other two from Essex on April 8 and 12 respectively. The total number of outbreaks for the present year is 12, with 665 animals attacked. During the first sixteen weeks of the year there have been 935 outbreaks of swine fever, as against 563 for the corresponding period of last arcely disclose the full extent to which the disease has recently increased. The outbreaks for the last four weeks number 406, as against 163 for the corresponding four weeks rabies was reported during the week ending April 20. It occurred in Carmarthenshire, and, in addition to the diseased animal, two dogs have been destroyed as having been exposed to infection. During the month of April, 39 morbid specimens were forwarded to the research laboratory at the Royal Veterinary College for examination. These included cases of anthrax, blackquarter, tuberculosis, actinomycosis. glanders, tumors, parasitic gastritis, etc. During the same period an outbreak of contagious abortion among mares and losses among ewes and lambs from worm parasites, have been locally investigated.—Farm and Home.

Poultry Briefs. The proper feeding of birds has much to do with their health. The ration of the fowls should always be a balanced one. Fowls fed an unbalanced ration continually are certain to become weak. If it is unbalanced on the side of too much carbo-hydrates they become soft and lazy and the bones lack strength, as well as do the muscles. If the food is overbalanced on the side of too much nitrogenous matter, various troubles follow, and in such a condition the birds are said to fall easy victims to rheumatism, which in turn is made possible by too great a supply of acid formed from the nitrogenous food products. It pays a man to study the ration question if he wishes to avoid many troubles with experienced poultryman can look back and see how freely and recklessly he sacrificed the lives of his birds in the early years of his experience. The novice has a blissful confidence that his chicks will all come to maturity. A correspondent of the Farmers' Review tells of one such experience, as follows: "I had about $200 chicks hatch. They appeared certain to all grow up into fine hens and cockerels. I fed them anything that came along. let them run with the hens and gave them barrels for shelter at night. After a little some of them began to lisappear, and I set a watch to discover the agency. The culprit was not long in being found out, and proved to be a neighbor's cat, which was very expert in entangling the chicks in the tall grass and overpowering them. So we shut the chicks up in tight coops night and day. One night there came a terrific thunder shower, the rain falling so rapidly that the water soon stood several inches deep on places that we hardly before knew were at all convex. In the morning there were a number of dead chicks. After that the chicks began to stand around and peep. We wondered why they did not care for food. They began to wilt and die, and in ten days numerous chicks had ceased to be counted among the living. The dead were numbered by the score. We did not at that time find out the cause: but we now know it to have been lice. When the remainder of the chicks were half grown some big rats in the shed found out that chicken meat was good to eat and kept making raids on the new food supply till they themselves were annihilated by traps and poison. In time the 200 chicks dwindled to about forty, a loss of 80 per cent. We have learned to do far better than that now; and the losses are usually not over 20 per cent. What I have said proves to me that ignorance is the most expensive thing on the farm."

The annual death rate among fowls is altogether too large, and this is esfirst year. We have observed that a very large proportion of the losses are preventable losses—losses due to lack of care and proper feed. Every lottery.

Chick with Pip. Herewith we illustrate a chicken with the gapes—popularly called the "pip." Many a farmer sees his chicks acting as indicated in the illustration and imagines that the food is not right. The food is changed, but the trouble is not obviated. The difficulty is the presence of the gape worm, a little red worm with a V-shaped terminus. This V is formed by the juncture of the male and female worms. We give this much for identification purposes. The worms inhabit the trachea. Sometimes they can be removed by a feather and some claim to remove them with drops of turpentine. Others have failed in all the things they have tried. Without doubt prevention is the factor that should receive the most attention. When the chicks show the members are so far appointed: R. C. ymptoms indicated, have all the young | Givins, Wardel Guthrie, E. K. Perkins, chicks put at once on board floors where they cannot get at the dirt. The angle worm and dirt in which the angle worm is found are the sources of contagion. After the chicks are mature they are not injured by the gapes, apparently the linings to their tracheas are too firm to permit of the worms attaching themselves.

Preservatives Not Needed. At the Vermont State Dairy convention held recently Maj. Henry E. Alvord, chief of the Dairy division of the department of agriculture, stated that the experiment of shipping butter to foreign markets had begot the confidence of foreign merchants, by showing them that Americans could furnish an excellent quality of butter and place it on their markets in as good condition as other countries. Partly as the result of the department's work, there was more demand for American butter and cheese abroad than our merchants could supply. He did not believe in the use of preservatives in butter. Great Britain was the best market to cultivate, and no preservative was and Denmark boasted that they could send butter there without preservatives. Even butter color was not needed for the best butter market in all England-Manchester. In order to compete successfully with Sweden. Denmark and Canada, what was needed on dairy exports was the official stamp of approval by this government, guaranteeing the purity. If butter is of excellent quality, it would sell abroad in any kind of package, but tastes and preferences should be studied. The English market holds to the old hundred-weight of 112 lb., and wants packages of 112 lb., 56 lb. and 28 lb. If a man had good clean, pure milk, he would not recommend pasteurization. It was a premium on slovenly dairying. and cooked milk was not as digestible

The annual gross receipts from the sale of milk average sixty-five hundred dollars. During a prolonged fast the loss of weight is unusually rapid at first and decreases as the time goes on. Death ensues when a certain percentage of the loss has been reached, and this percentage varies according to the original weight. Fat animals may lose half their weight, thinner ones perhaps twofifths. A man or woman of rather spare build weighing 143 pounds might, therefore, lose about 55 pounds before succumbing. Children die after a fast of from three to five days, during which they have lost a quarter of their weight. Healthy adults, however, have fasted 50 days when water has been taken. A German physician reports the case of a woman aged 47 years who fasted for 43 days, taking water freely. She lost 44 pounds out of 143 pounds and died from exhaus-

An Idea of Mars.

"As for me," said M. Flammarion, speaking of the inhabitants of Mars in The National Magazine, "I rather envy them-a land where it is always beautiful, where there are neither tempests nor cyclones, where the years are twice as long as ours, where the kilogram is of 376 grams and where, therefore, men and women who here weigh 70 kilos there weigh only 26, and where, in a word, everything is lighter, more delicate and more refined."

> "First of all, I want to speak from TO THE the standpoint of prompt payment. If my success in business depended upon each tenant paying his rent exactly when it was due, I would try to fill all my houses with Scotchmen. Never have I lost a penny on a Scot, and seldom have I had to wait.

"I am not making the rash assertion that it is impossible for a Scotchman Prompt Service, Prices Reasonable to be dishonest while everybody else is trying his best to cheat me out of my very eyeteeth. The point I wish to make is that personally I have never suffered loss at the hands of a Scot. But they give trouble in other ways. They are fearfully quarrelsome and raise so many rows with the other tenants through the dumb waiter shaft that it keeps the janitor busy straightening out domestic snarls. In all my buildings . where. Scotchmen reside I select a janftor with a view to his even disposition and diplomatic gifts. It doesn't matter so much about his ability for scrubbing and keeping the furnace going. Utilitarian accomplishments are a secondary consideration so long as he is endowed with the blessed qualities of a peacemaker.

"Taken all in all, the most peaceable people I get in my houses hail from Sweden. You never hear a peep out of a Swede, He doesn't bother his neighbors and he doesn't bother me unless the provocation is extreme. As a rule, he is good pay too. The only fault I have to find with him is his fondness for moving. A lease is a dead letter in his eye, and he has no more compunction about moving without a day's notice than he has about going to bed when he is sleepy."

The woman in the blue hat asked what were the chief characteristics of Americans as tenants.

"Their supreme selfishness," said the agent. "They have not a spark of consideration for a landlord. They want the earth. They never get through asking for improvements. They are not content to get the walls tinted and the woodwork painted and the plumbing fixed once or twice a year, They want new decorations every month, and all the trimmings must be first class too. American tenants pay big prices for their flats, but there isn't really so much profit in catering to them as to other nationalities, for the simple reason that I have to pay out nearly all my income in trying to keep up the building in the style they demand. On the other hand, the people who ask for the least are the Italians and the French. They take most any old thing I feel like giving them, the French meekly providing their own decorations and the Italians going without.

"I like German tenants pretty well, too, but they are terribly hard on flats. I never could understand how they manage to infact so much damage on walls and floors. Judging by the looks of an apartment just vacated by a large German Tamily, one would think that their star piece of furniture was a battering ram, "The czar's former subjects also have an abnormally developed bump of destructiveness, although they run to glass instead of plastering. ECONOMY Is in itself a great revenue.

But economy does not necessarily mean to look for the cheapest article on the market. Cheap materials are dear even as a gift. Pure white lead and oil paints has more substitutes and imitations than other material. The chief adulteration of white lead is Barytes, a ground cystalline, without opacity or body, and to buy this stuff is like throwing money away, because if it is desired to use a good paint afterwards, there will be no foundation to which it can adhere. Heath & Milligan's paints have been the standard for 47 years and are guaranteed to be the best; that's the reason we handle that brand.

The end of all this was that close upon Christmas-time, somewhere about the middle of December, while all their minds were fully occupied with Lady Eagleton's sayings and doings, Lord Lyndon proposed for Miss Trevanion, and was rejected. This blow might perhaps have effectually daunted another man; but Lyndon, still following up his trusty instincts, determined to hide his time and never surrender hope until a more favored suitor took his place.

Mildred, having lively recollections of the treatment she had received on a similar occasion, thought well to keep her own counsel in this matter; and so it was agreed upon between them to hold the entire circumstance a secret from the rest of the family-to insure which, things of course went on in the usual way, he calling every othor day and she accepting his atten- and mother? tions-which were never of the obtrusive description—in the same manner as formerly. So well did they sustain their several parts that even Lady Harriet's keen old eyes failed to detect that anything was amiss.

Sir George's affairs at this time were going from bad to worse. He had been hard at work for the past two months trying to find the ways and means to ward off the inevitable day of reckoning, and had suggested plans and pursued theories, all of which his man of business had frowned at and poohpoohed as utterly impracticable. Nothing but the possession of a large sum of money—and that to be written in ave figures-stood between him and could?" complete ruin; and how to secure the money was the difficulty—a difficulty beyond all surmounting unless somebody could be found who for pure friendship's sake would lend it for an indefinite period, trusting to time and chance for repayment. At length, rousing herself with an effort, she went up to Leydon and placed her hand on his. Her heart was beating wildly, her face was ash-

Do you remember a question you asked me about two weeks ago?" she said. "Do you still care to remember it? Because, if so, I have a different answer to make you now."

"Two weeks ago I asked you to marry me." he replied, in a forced, unnatural manner.

"And then I said 'No," she murmured faintly; "now-now-I would say 'Yes.'" She covered her face with her hands; a thick, dry, tearless sob escaped her.

"But I have not asked you to say it," observed his lordship, coldly, still keeping down with firm hand the rising hope that was consuming him. "What, Mildred, do you imagine that, because I have been able to help you in this little matter, I have a claim on you? You are doing both yourself and me a great injustice."

"You are too good for me," said Mias Trevanion: "and yet I know you love me. If you still care to marry me, I will gladly be your wife."

"Mildred, Mildred, what are you saying?" he cried, all the icy brave reserve breaking down in an instant. "Think what your thoughtless words must mean to me-life, hope, happiness greater than I have ever dared to dream of-and beware lest I take advantage of them. If you are saying all this—as I feel you are—from a mistaken sense of gratitude or pity. I implore you to desist and leave me as I was before."

"Listen to me," entreated Mildred, determined honestly to advocate her own doom, and holding out to him her hands, which he gently took and held. "If I tell you that I do not love you with that passionate love with which some women love the men they marry, but that I respect you above all living men, will it content youwill you take me as I am?"

"If I were quite sure you would be happy," he began, reluctantly.

"I am quite sure I should be happy," she interposed, and burst into bitter tears as she spoke.

After a little she recovered herself. "I feel nervous," she declared, try ing bravely to appear her usual self. and smiling a wan, faint smile, though heavy drops were on her lashes; "you should have come to my rescue—it is injured: Mrs. Jefferson Carse, Beaver, not every day the proposal is made by

"My darling," he said, tenderly caressing the small hands, of which he had again possessed himself, "I hope I think-you will never regret it. Mildred, if I were quite certain that this was for your good, and that you would never wish unsaid the words you have uttered, I believe I might feel satisfied."

"Be satisfied, then," she returned, but there was a terrible, dull aching pain at her heart, as she gave the expected assurance.

When he was gone she went upstairs igain to the room where she had left her father and mother, and found them still there-Sir George standing at the window gazing out upon the snow-covered ground, Lady Caroline before the fire, as though in the act of warming herself. The traces of tears were still upon her mother's cheeks, and even as Mildred gazed a

BODY FOUND PARTLY BURNED.

Louis Busse and His Hired Man in the Tolls as Principal and Accomplice in a Blood-Curdling Murder-The Woman

Louis Busse, one of the wealthiest farmers near Greene. Iowa, is held in the county jail at Allison to answer the charge of killing his wife, who was found dead and partially cremated at her home near Greene last Tuesday. His hired man, Henry Snider, has been arrested as an accomplice. Snider alleges that Busse deliberately knocked his wife in the head, crushing her skull, cut her throat with a pocketknife and then covered the body with a feather bed and pillows, soaked the whole mass with kerosene and set fire to it. Having done this, Busse went out into the field and began helping Snider dig post holes. The fire was discovered by Frank Busse, a brother of the alleged murderer, living half a mile from the scene. He hurried to the house and was able to extinguish the fire, which had been smothered by the feathers.

A coroner's jury had rendered a verdict indicating that the woman had committed suicide by cutting her throat, and the body was buried, but owing to mutterings and threats in the neighborhood the remains were exhumed today and the discoveries made showing the nature of her death. Busse is 47 years of age and his wife was 27. They were married about six months ago, shortly after she had secured $2,800 from a man named Bell on a charge of seduction. Her 18-monthsold baby was left to perish in the house with her, but was rescued unharmed. The motive for the crime is alleged to be troubles over money matters, the husband being unable to control his wife's money.

REV. JOSEPH COOK DEAD.

Champion of Religion Against Science

Su cum's to Bright's Disease. Rev. Joseph Cook, the famous lecturer, reformer and champion of religion, as against science, died Tuesday at his home in Ticonderoga, N. Y., where he had been ill for several years. He was afflicted with a complication of Bright's disease and a nervous disorder which threatened his life some years ago and caused his retirement from active work. Mr. Cook was, in the minds of many, one of the strongest men ever produced by this country. He was one of the Christian leaders of the last century. and in that field he occupied a unique position. He was distinctly and alone the defender of the Christian religion against those who tried to destroy it. in the name of science. Mr. Cook was one of the most remarkable of American orators. - As late as 1892 Prof. A. P. Peabody said of him: "He is a phenomenon to be accounted for. No other American orator has done what he has done or anything like it, and prior to the experiment no voice would have been bold enough to. predict his success." Mr. Cook was born at Ticonderoga Jan. 26, 1838. His father's farm was located on the western shore of Lake George, and upon it in after years the son built himself the summer home where he spent the last of his years. He had no special advantages in the way of education, but, like many men who accomplish great things in the realm of the intellectual, he was self-taught.

The Republican convention of Ohio at Columbus Tuesday nominated the following ticket: Governor, George K. Nash; lieutenant-governor, Carl L. Nippert; state treasurer, Isaac B. Cameron; attorney-general, John M. Sheets; judge supreme court, L. E. Emerson; board public works, W. G. Johnson. The platform adopted says in part: "The principle of protection has achieved its most signal triumph in the results of the Dingley tariff law. It has given us marked prosperity at home and a rapidly growing export trade, which are the envy of the world. The Republican tariff policy has made the farmer and laborer more prosperous than ever, and no legislation should be permitted which will imperil the interests of either." On trusts and other issues it says: "We recognize the right of both labor and capital to combine when such combinations are wisely administered for the general good, but combinations which create monopolies to control prices or limit production, are an evil which must be met by effective legislation, vigorously enforced. The only legislation national or in Ohio on this subject has been enacted by the Republican party, and that party can be safe-

RICHEST NATION ON EARTH.

New Commonwealth in the Antipodes Can Boast the Distinction.

It will surprise many to learn that the new commonwealth of Australia is per capita, the richest nation on the face of the globe, except the republic of Switzerland. But per capita, wealth is not real wealth. Last year the total value of the products of the colonies forming the Australian commonwealth amounted to fully $550,000,000, of which their pastoral industries represented $150,000,000, their agricultural $140,000,000, their mineral products fully $100,000,000 and their manufacturing and other industries the remaining $160,000,000. The wool alone from the 120,000,000 sheep raised in 1900 was worth $100,000,000. The mineral resources of Australia cannot even be guessed at. In the last forty-eight years the country has produced gold to the value of $1,800,000,000; in the last twenty silver to the value of $150 .-000,000. Diamonds are found in one district, rubies in another. There is at least one emerald mine in New South Wales, and opals equal to any in the world are found in Queensland, while the pearl fisheries of the northwestern coast produce a considerable portion of the most valuable pearls of com-

Mr. McKay had been suffering for years with Diabetes and Rheumatism, which recently threatened to end his days. His limbs were so filled with pain that he could not sleep. He was very bad.

Just then, someone suggested a new remedy-Dodds Kidney Pills-which has been much advertised recently, as a cure for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism and Kidney

After Mr. McKay had used a few doses he commenced to improve. His pain all left him, and he is almost as well as ever. He says Dodd's Kidney Pills are worth much more than they cost. They are certainly getting a great reputation in Missouri, and many very startling cures are being reported.

The Best of It

A Juvenile Sketch Independence Day

The Crosspatch Man was sick again, and this time it must be pretty bad, for all the morning Meredith had been watching the servants spread straw before the house and muffle the big, shiny doorbell.

"Poor man!" mamma said, pitingly. "He is sick so often!"

"But he's a Crosspatch Man!" mut-tered Meredith stiffly. Then he repented and looked as shamefaced as a very little boy with a very round, dimpled face could look. "I'm so sorry he's ve-ry sick," he said slowly. "I s'pose it hurts even Crosspatch Men."

Mamma did not notice. She was having her little noon "gossip" with papa, and they were still talking about their invalid neighbor.

"It ish't quite so bad as it seems, you knew," papa was saying. "He always has the straw laid down and things muffled when he has one of his worse nervous attacks. It doesn't mean all that it does in most cases. He is terribly afflicted by noise at almost any time.'

"Noise! I should think so!" That was from Meredith, who pricked up his ears at the word. Didn't he know how the Crosspatch Man felt 'bout a noise? Didn't he belong to the Rudd Street Second? Wasn't he captain? And oh, my, the times he'd seen the Crosspatch Man a-seowling and a-fuming when they marched past his

"But Fourth of July will be a terrible day to him-poor man!" went on mamma's gentle voice. That made Meredith start a little. He had been thinking about Fourth o' July, too. (Did he think of much of anything else nowadays?) He had been going over in his mind all the glorious program of the day. For the Rudd Street Second was going to celebrate in a worthy manner. They were going to even outdo themselves this year-and hadn't they had the proud honor of being the noisest street in the city for two Fourth o' Julys a-running? Let 'em just wait till they heard this Fourth o' July!

It was three days off. That would give the Crosspatch Man time to have the straw taken up and the bell unmuffled, for his worst "times" never lasted more than two or three days.

"Then he'll have to cotton up his ears," mused Meredith, philosophically, watching the big foreign servant that wore a turban go back and forth past the Crosspatch Man's window. The house Meredith lived in and the Crosspatch Man's house were quite close together, so it was easy to watch

Unfortunately for an invalid with

the terrible affliction cailed "nervese" Rudd Street was a regular nest of boys. They were boys everywhere on it. You ran against boys when you went east, and boys ran against you when you went west. Boys sprang up in the most unexpected places. The houses seemed to be running over with boys. And really, there was at least one boy-and on an average two or three-in every house on Meredith's ide, except in the Crosspatch Man's house. Oh. dear me, no, there weren't any boys there! On the other side of the street you had to skip the "middlest" house and Miss Quilhot and Miss Eromathea'soh, yes, and the minister's house, of which Miss Quilhot and Miss Eromathea were old maids, and the minister -oh, no, he wasn't an old maid, but you couldn't expect him to have boys in the house, for how could he ever write his sermons?

So it was, as I said, an unfortunate street to hav: "nerves" on. And the Crosspatch Man had so many!

The three days between soon went away, and it was the night—the very night-before it! There were only a few hours more, for, of course, you didnt' have to wait till the sun rose on Fourth of July.

Meredith had drilled the Rudd Street Second for the last time and dispersed his men. He was on his way home to supper. Going by the

HE MADE A LITTLE SPEECH.

Crosspatch Man's house, he heard voices distinctly issuing from an open window. He couldn't help hearing, it was so quiet in the street. Perhaps it was the "lull before the storm."

"The sahib cannot bear it," a gentle soothing voice was saying, but Meredith recognized the indignation mixed with the pity in it. "The sahib will be again sick."

Then came Meredith's astonishment, for the Crosspatch Man's voice was answering, and it was quite calm and gentle; and it said:

"Of course I shall be sick again, Hari! I've made all my plans to perish. But what can you expect? The little chaps must have their Fourth o' July. I was a little chap myself-once. Shut the window, Hari, There's a suspicion of a draught."

Meredith stood still in sheer amazement, and watched the turban-man close the window. He was a little chap himself once, the Crosspatch Man was! And how kind his voice had sounded, too. It made him sorry for the crasspatch Man-sorrier than he had ever been before.

"He's a-dreadin' it like sixty. He's 'spectin' to perish," Meredith said aloud. "It's goin' to make him sick, of course—that's what he said to the turban-man. An' he was a little chap once, an' his voice was kind an' tired

Then Meredith went home and perched himself up on the banister post in the hall, to think. That was where he always thought things-big things, you know. This was, oh my, such a big thing!

"I'm cap'n,' mused Meredith, knitting his little fair brows. "I can say, 'Go, an' thou ghost," like the man in the Bible; but they'll be dreadful dis'pointed, the Rudd Street Seconds will be. Still-well, he sick an' he had a kind spot in his voice, an' he used to be a little chap too, so of course he used to bang things an' make noises. I don't think he sounded much like a Crosspatch Man."

In a little while, after a little more tough thinking, Meredith slipped down and out of the door, up the street. He got together the Rudd Street Seconds and made a little speech, as a captain may, to his men.

The next day the city and all America celebrated Fourth o' July, and Rudd Street was famous again, but this time for being the very quietest street in all the city! There were just as many boys in it, too, as ever.

The Crosspatch Man's white, nervous face smoothed and calmed as the day wore on, and at last it actually smiled in a gentle way, as if he was thinking about something pleasant.

And the captain of the Rudd Street Seconds and his brave men, drilling and popping and banging in a distant street, were happy, too.-Annie Hamilton Donnell.

"NIAGARA TO THE SEA." To the uninitiated this may seem rather vague, but should anyone be desirous of knowing something of the beauties of the most wonderful scenic trip on the continent, if they will write to the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company of Montreal, that company will be most pleased to forward them illustrated booklet and folders descriptive of the trip, which embraces a sail on their steamers through Lake Ontario thence to the St. Lawrence river through the picturesque scenery of the 1,000 Islands (America's Venice), the exciting descent of the marvelous rapids to Montreal, where connection is made with the Richelieu Company's palatial steamers for a trip to quaint old Quebec. After a night's sail and on the approach to Quebec in the morning, a magnificent panorama may be seen by the tourist from the decks of the steamers. The rugged and steep cliffs, made famous by General Wolfe's historic climb during the struggle between France and Britain for the possession of the key to Canada first comes into view, and at the very pin-nacle of these cliffs the antique, but majestic forts crown the heights, then as the steamer approaches the landing, many quaint and curious buildings fairly reveling in historic association are to be seen.

On landing at Quebec transfer is immediately made for trip down the lower St. Lawrence to Murray Bay and Tadousac, at which point two magnificent hotels have been erected for the convenience and comfort of the American tourists, these hotels are owned and operated by the Richelieu and Ontario Navigation Company and are luxurious in all their appointments and are very popular with tourists from all parts of United States and Canada. The steamer then proceeds up the famous Saguenay river, whose magnificent capes amongst which are "Trinity" and "Eternity" together with falls, mountains, etc., and peculiar atmosphere (which is a combination of mountain and sea air) for the restoration of health has no equal, make this one of the most delightful trips within the reach of the tourist on this con-

WOMEN AND DREAMS.

Superstition That Is Rife Even

It doesn't seem possible that in this enlightened age superstition could be rife among the educated, but there are nevertheless a number of young women who converse fluently, if not eloquently, in three languages, and who read Spencer and Browning and Emerson, but who place a dreambook with their Bible on the table beside the bed and consult it in the morning the first of woman su Trage to know that it is

> There's one young woman known to the writer who never dreams of a young child without shivering and shaking for days after in fear of some dreadful thing happening to her. She has not consulted a dreambook on the subject, and so she doesn't know how infants and bad luck became connected in her mind, but nevertheless, after she has had a visit of this sort while sleeping, she says prayers of unusual length and then makes up her mind to be patient under afflictions sore.

She is an intelligent woman, mind you, but she doesn't attempt to explain the terror that besets her at this particular dream. She doesn't call herself

The Celestial Kingdom is not alone in being wiser today than one year ago. China were universally set down as out as a nation. A few months' contact with the Chinese in their own environment reversed the verdict, and western nations have since been seeking honorable excuse to draw out and leave China to its fate. Says the Chi-

There is not a single power which is not heartfault finders were howling for last the hope of being able to secure some political, commercial or territorial advantage there, and all have been disappointed. Each is now anxious to get out of China in some fashion which will "save face" and give no special advantage to any of its neighbors. Russia, which wished to leave immediately after the capture of Peking and the rescue of the legations, is now more anxious than ever that the others should go, as she will continue to hold her place in Manchuria and will thus be every day more and more preponderant in north China. Being in no hurry for what she desires, her whole anxiety is that nothing shall be done to change the status of China until she shall be in a position to change it to suit herself.

Russia knows the Chinese as no other great power can know them in a century of study, and, moreover, her geographical position is one to make China a future as well as a present problem in her diplomacy. The transformation of China must be far too slow for any but Asiatic masters or leaders to put up with. Although Asiatic civilization cannot be taken as a model for western people, there is no cause for worry in its stubborn persistence and desire to be let alone.

"China is pretty sure," The Journal concludes, "that Europe has been taught a lesson as well as herself, and that once safely at home again her armies will not repeat the recent adventure on slight provocation. She will never affront all the world at the same time again, and, like Turkey, she can rely for protection against any one of them on the mutual jealousies of all of them."

The robbery of the First National bank of Mineral Point, Wis., by expert burglars, who got away with $30,-000, suggests the necessity of a system of police which would more effectively cover the smaller cities and villages. During the last six years more than 200 banks in small towns and villages have been visited by burglars, who have carried off with them fully $500,-000 in cash. This industry has been quite profitable. As a rule, it has not been dangerous for those engaged in it. Few of these bank robbers have been caught. Generally they have been beyoud the reach of pursuit before the bewildered townspeople had a clear idea of what had happened. The larger cities are now fairly well policed, but in the smaller communities and rural districts the protection is wholly inadequate. The result is that certain classes of offenders make their homes in the cities and go out from time to time to make profitable raids in unprotected rural regions. The city police seldom interfere with them so long as they commit no depredations near home, and as a rule they make crime pay. The wealth of the small towns and rural sections, particularly in the middle west, has grown faster than the facilities for its protection, and the adoption of some better and more general police system than now exists would seem to be apparent.
