The Assassination of De Piehve,
Those who live in a democracy believe jint assassination is never justliable. Nor is it. But the downtrodden millions of itlessia know not what de mocracy meens. Living under a goverument of force, they, know of no appeal but that to force. Constantity beholding the minions of the care deporting, torturing, imprisoning and assassinating human beings for poliftical reasons, what wender that occasionally some member of the oppressed classes resorts to similar means?

De Piehve, or, as the name is often written, Von Piehve, was the minister of interior, and as such was moug despotte, bloodthirsty and cruel. Of Polish blood himself, no one had ever oppressed the Poles as did he. He is said to have regarded the common peopie as for the most part desperate criminals who had to be dealt with as, such. He was the head of the infamous Russian police and siy system.
Most of his energy was directed tomy ard formulating and enforcing reapressive measures against the Poles, the Jews, the students and every other portion of the population that showed the least restiveness under the des-Bioberia & Co Draugetsis.

Material Progress.

Statistics usually make dry reading, but satistics of American progress are about as July as any literature that can be written—at least for an American. A pretty reliable criterion of material progress is the trade movements between this and foreign and tions from year to year.

The exports of the United States for the flessel year ending June 20 last were valued at $1.495,000,000. That make the properties of the seal year in exports of the decline the last flessel year in exports of wheat and corn which was not made good by the increase in the items of cotton and nanufactures were larger than in any preceding year. This is a partial setoff for the decline in domestic consumption.

Imports were $500,000,000. Deln. $300,000,000 less than last year, but as much in excess of 100 as 10 make 1000. The properties of the properties of the decline in domestic consumption.

A Berlin dentist who is also a scientist of other lines has discovered that prehistoric man had decayed molars and attempted to ping the same, or, in other words, that he knew some form is of dentistry. This would make the science of dentistry one of the oldest and most honorable known to man.

It would be interesting to see one of those dentist of the hrone age, before the discovery of nerve killers and annesthetics, gouging out the sore tooth of some husky cave dweller and pounding home a fulling with a huge stone hammer. Such a calling would not only be difficult, but harardous.

From prehistoric man to modern Morocco is a far cry—at least in point of time. So far as the stage of civiliation is concerned there may not be so much difference; plao in the matter of filling molars it would seem that the process is almost as difficult and dangerous in the "afternoon land" as it was among the folk who wore skins.

To bear out the truth of this statement may be cived the prospecture of the substance of the prospectual to the prospectual of the prospectual
