What Mopey is Doing.

There are even in these days a good many families in the United States who find it possible to do a certain smount-of moderately high thinking and still cultivate some of the graces of He. They may be obliged to live simply, says Serbhers, and yet may not need to use up all their vitality in manual labor. True, they must walk when others ride, they must take thought to their apparel, that it be presentable at small cost, and when they entertain their friends they must do it simply. But they have time to read books and they have money to educate their children. Oftener than not they are persons whose family raditions incline them to fastidiousness in social matters. They and their fortekeary have been accustomed not only to well-bred, but interesting people and have kept in touch with what was going on in the world; in short, they have a taste for the best society. Twenty-five years ago the two was not certain of their fellow citizens to what has been characterized as "the habit of getting rich" has changed all that it is not only that the accumulation of colossal fortunes restricts the financial chances of the moderately ambitions majority, but it deprives them for some innocent and legitimate comferis and pleasures to which they have made of the moderately ambitions majority, but it deprives the filting with the standard of luxary is raised in proportion. This, to be sure, is an old cry, but to the impecunious majority it does not cease to be a live issue.

one cannot find fault with the be a live issue.

Yet one cannot find fault with the people who have made money for wanting to spend It; one cannot be surprised if their ideas are crude and if they fail to appreciate a refined simplicity. Most of us spend all the money we ben afford and we should not thank anyone who should presume to dictate to us as to what we ought to buy with it. The very rich do not in the least intend to make life hard for the rest of the world. In fact, from their kind-hearted desire to give pleasure we get some singularly had results, such as, for instance, the poor girl with rich tastes, who, although ahe need not always who, although also man whe goes to the dogs in his effort to keep up the pace with his rich mates.

Calling attention to the fidelity of the telegraph operators in San Francisco, where they kept their heads and stuck to their keys till driven out by the fiames, the New York Sun has this to say: "Fix the eyes of the community on a man in official piace and he will secorn his own safety. Give the obscure man something to do that calls for greater activity than usual and he will seldom fall to come up to what is expected of him. Exceptionally daring deeds done by our firemen and policemen are often the result of the spirit of t

Armies and navies are expensive; we need farmers more than we need soldiers; we need merchant ships more than we need heticehips. The civil war demonstrated that it does not take long to make a first-class fighting man of the American citizen and there are 10,000,000 such ready to fight in a quarrel with a stranger. The only power that is at all likely to give us serious trouble is Japan, and she will not undertake it until she shall think, herself strong enough to order all the other white folks out of her neighborhood. That will be generations hence and need give us no concern. Our business is to make money, not to engage in war. We have an finmense territory right here in the republic that is yet virgin and the demand is for laborers, not soldiers.

maker to stick to his last. It means that a man alvary succeeds best at the business he knows. To the farmer it means, stick to your plow; to the blacksmith, stick to your forse; the painter sticked to your organize failures.

It is amusing, however, to remark how every one of us secretly thinks he could do some other follow's work better than the other fellow's work better than the other fellow's work better than the other fellow's minest. The painter imagines he can make paint better than the paint manufacture; the fainter better, or at least charge than the painter, and so on. A farm hand in one of Octave Thanet's stories tells the Walking Delegate of the Painters Union, "Anybody can slather paint;" and the old line painter tells the paint saleman, "None of your ready made mixtures for me; I reckon I ought to know how to mix paint." The "fame han" for me; I reckon I ought to know how to mix paint." The "fame han" for me; I reckon I ought to know how to mix paint." The "fame han of course, but it is an expensive amusement. If it strikes him as pleasant to grow strawberries at fifty cents apicce, or to produce eggs that cost him five dollars a dozen, it is a form of amusement, to be sure, if he can afford it but it's not farming. If the farmer likes to also around with a paint brayeness of having the painter and the painter for the job ractical painter do the job stand for paint that comes of in half the time it should, they have a perfect right to indulge his harmless vanity about his skill in paint saking. But in none of these cases does the shownker stick to his last.
