Plowing is an art. Who but the educated type of the farmer would look at it in such a light, but such it is, and to turn a good, even furrow requires years of practice. In some farming communities the skill of the man behind the plow is tested by competitive contests. In some counties in Illinois there, are regular organized associations that hold plowing matches every season, and wherever such associations exist it is a noticeable fact that there is a better grade of plowing done.
