Japan's Knowledge of the World.

The fact is, we suspect, that the Japanese understand the rest of the world better than the world understands them, for the reason that since the "opening," of that country it has been a very sectors part of Japanese public and private business to study the rest of the world and to Jearn, as much as possible about it. Japanese students have been numerous to almost every civilized land, accust he almost every civilized land, accust Japanese students have been numerous in almost every civilized land, acquiring not only the general arts and sciences but also and particularly the especial knowledge which was to be gained of the individual countries thus visited. This knowledge, says the New York Tribune, has in turn been Jmparted to and has been eagerly sought by the entire Japanese people. While the world at large has intersted tiself in Japan largely because of its picturesque charm, the Japanese have interested themselves in all the world in the most practical, sys-tematic and businessitic way. While we have looked at jinrikishas and cherry blossoms they have studied constitutions and industries.

Net Toe Good for the General.

It is related of Gen. Sterling Price that he once stopped at an humble cabin in Missourr and asked for supper. The good wife of the house was thrown into a Butter of excitement over entertaining her distinguished guest, and profuse with apologies for the not very tempting mean, consisting of eora dodgers, bottled collards, and wheat coffee aweetened with sorghum. The hungry officer atc hearting the over-sweet coffee, passed his cup, saying:

"Not quite so much molasses, please."

"The idee!" gasped the loyal hostess. "Catch me skimpin' your sweetenin!"—as she tilted the molasses jug upward while anber ropes of "sweetenin" of "sweetening to "sweetening" of "sweetening" o

Two Things of Which Lincoln Was Ashamed

his social ambitions. Lipscoin wrote the Shields refused to do. He challenged Lincoln to fight him. Lincoln had been strongly opposed to dueling, but under the circumstances he felt compelled to accept the challenge. As weapons he named cavalry brondswords of the largreat size. A point in Missouri opposite the town of Aiton was designated as

The two prospective combatants and their friends exceedingly met there, brown some mutual friends in the property of the property of the property of the with bonor and without extual fighting. It appears that the friends of Shleids boasted mightly of his fighting provess and his ferocity. Lincoln said to William H. Herndon, his law partner, afterward: "I did not intend to hurr fishields unless I did so in self derense. If it had been necessary I could have spill that from the crown of his state to the end of his base Lincoln arm as compared to that of Shleids, who exa built otherwise, this does not seem to have been a vain boast. This "dust" kept popping up for many years afterward. In 1865 Lincoln said to Herndon. "If all the good things I have ever done are remembered as leng and well as my scrape with Rhields it is plain I shall not soon beforgation."

Mr. Herndon speaks of Shleids with coinderable disparagement. Neverthe-

THE COMBATANTS MIT, PROADSWORDS AND the third time he was sent to the United States senate, being appointed to serve out the unexpired term of Senator Lewis V. Bogy, who died early in 1570. Shields sait in the senate two mouths through that appointment. Then he went to Ottumwa, Ia., where he died less than three mouths after leaving the senate.

During the civil war-the challenger of Lincoln also proved his military spirit. He went to Washington in 1605 and wis appoint. Sheelds had the discussion of defeating Stonewall Jackson at Winelester, Va., though he had received a wound in one leg the day-before. Some months later Jackson defeating Stonewall Jackson at Winelester, Va., though he had received a wound in one leg the day-before. Some months later Jackson defeated Shields at Port Republic.

Though, according to Mr. Herndon, the man whom Lincoln might; have split open from top to bottom was "in-ordinately vain," his record as a United States sendor from three states and as a leader of armies in two wars, with several honorable wounds, would seem to vindicate him and cause posterity to reloice that Mr. Lincoln did not get a chance at him with that cavalry troad-aword on the 22d of September, 1842.

when Lincoln Was Siern.

Charles Wiegand was major of a German regiment from New York and, being of an enterprising turn of mind, secured a personal interview with President Lincoln and importuned him for authority to raise a brigade of German troops. He was extremely optimistic and conceived the affair to be then already accomplished, but, after waiting awhile for the desired presidential spontaneity, he pressed the matter and was discomfitted by being turned down in this removaless model by cential spontaneity, be pressed the matter and was discomfied by being turned down in this remorseless mode by John Bay, assistant secretary to President Lincoin, is authority for the statement that Mr. Lincoin "ate his meals mechanically," never seeming to take much interest in eating. That the great president was not brought up as an epicure is indicated by an account of a visit to the home of Thomas Lincoin, his father, by an old lady of Indians. This woman said that when she, with other visitors, was scated in the Lincoin cable a plate was passed around containing raw potatoes, nearly pecked. Not having been supposed. Not having been supposed to esting this kind of "critic," she watted for the others to give her a cyn. They proceeded to ret mouthfuls.

Paint and Ocean Travel.

The worst feature of Ocean Travel.

Paint and Ocean Travel.

"The worst feature of ocean travel is never mentioned in steamship company prospectuses or in books of travel," said a returning tourist. "It is not reasickness, for only a few are taken that way in the new ocean greyhounds, that neither rock nor pitch. It is not the narrow quarters or the inferior cooking or the tipping habyt. It is paint. There is always wet paint on an ocean steamer, and there is never a sign on it to waru passengers. The modern sallor is a painter, constantly wielding the brush, always painting sowe part of the ship or other, says the Philadelphia Record. There is hardly a passenger on the ocean that does not land from a voyage with some article of apparel damaged by paint. Old-Time Congressional Pay.
We smile to-day at the thought of $1,500 for the services of such men as Clay and Calboum. Although it was an early day in our history the government's work was very important, and public servants of a high grade were necessary to public welfare. And yet, says the Washington Star, they were obliged, against their own ideas of fit compensation, to accept at dollars a day—the pay of a fairly competent clerk. Public servants of the present time, as a rule, do their work well and among them are some of the tent clerk. Public servants of the present time, as a rule, do their work well and among them are some of the foremost men of the period. When all thangs are considered, $5,000 a year is small pay for their services, and they should have the courage to take the sense of the country on the subject.

It is an old principle of law that owners of property upon a running stream have common rights to the use of its waters. How those rights shall be enjoyed is a matter for mutual agreement or for settlement in the courts. The states of Colorado and Kansas are engaged in litigation in the supreme court over the use of water of the Arkansas river in Colorado for irrigation to the alleged injury of the lands along the river in Kansas. The case was argued last moonth. The decision will be of great interest to citizens of other states which use water from rivers that do not have their mouth and source withthe state limits...

Many eminent architects have long expressed grave fears as to the safety of St. Paul's cathedral in London, and it is estimated that an expenditure of between £49,000 and £59,000 will be necessary to safeguard the building. The southwest tower is more than a foot out of the perpendicular, and there are numerous ominous cracks in the structure, due to subsidences.

The lid is on so tight in Boston that music in the restaurants on Sunday is forbidden. Some of the blue laws are humane, after all.

"We grow old when we stop playing." says a western editor. Probably his wife has been trying to induce him to give up poker.

Mrs. Laugtry has a new name. But Lillian Russell need not lose any sleep on that account. A new hus band did not go with it.

Gen. Bell reports that nearly all the Cubass have planty of work Prob-ably that is the reason they are dis-satisfied.

The fate of passengers nowadays seems to rest with the man behind the block signal.
