Death's Warning To Soldiers.

PRESENTIMENTS of death, hi PRINENTIALENTS of death, have made a familiar topic of discussion among soldlers for conductes. Some persons affect not to believe in them, but we have high authority for the theory that at times the somber shadow of impending dissolution projects itself before the event across the consciousness of the person chiefly concerned.

Understand the minute of the minute forewarmed has gone into the fight as bravely as ever and has done his full duty until the fatal bullet came. Men who have gone unscathed through scores of engagements have felt the modden premoultion on the eve of a battle and made ready for death, never deabling that the day was to be their last on earth. Comrades to whom these premoultions are acknowledged sometimes try to convince the man so warded that he is mistaken, but in their hearts they believe that the warning means death in battle for the soldier
