and even if this tes could be made commercially possible, it is doubtful if it would ever become popular. The American tes trade could advantageously take a suggestion from the brick tea of the far east. In our country, the tea dust, some of which is good quality, is not properly utilized. In Europe it is a regular article of trade, and it is advertised and sold as tea dust. In American it is sold to thousands or cheap restaurants, who make from it the mixture of taile acid, sugar and boiled milk which they sell as "ies." If, as in the orient, this dust was compressed into bricks, good tea could be made from it.
