The Herrings' Heads.

Miracles are not only of religion.
Perhaps readers may have forgotten the strangs edventure of the great Johann Selastian Bach. The story was told by Bach himself and is therefore, we may be assured, substantiality true. Bach was a very young man at the time. His chief object then was to hear a great organist of Hamburg named Relnken. He was very poor, and on one of these journeys, returnling home, he found himself destitute and yet far from Luneburg. So he sait down on a bench outside an inn and tried to dine on the smell of the cooklug. Suddenly a window was thrown open above and a couple jot herrings' heads fell at his feet. He picked them up and discovered in each a piece of money! He could not find out who his benefactor had been. Bibbp emsel.

What Barbare Must Knew.

The barder spoke indignantly.

"A doctor, a lawyer or a divine," he said, "learn file business in three or four years, and afterward he is wonderfully looked up to. It takes us barbers many, many more years to learn our basiness, but who is there that looks up to us? On the contrary, we are rather looked down on.

"Yet think of all a good barber must know today.

"It was not only above and cut hair and firm bearned beautifully. He must understand facial massage, ninging, hairdressing, undulating, dyelon, wignaking and writchmaking, and he must also be able to compound pleasant washes and shaning obtions, massage creams, skin foods, eradicators and regenerators and deplitatories—If you know what they are—toskes, olis. brittanties and shaving revenss.
