"Brannish" Best Wolfhound in Eastern Kennel Show

"Brannish," pride of the Thomas M. Howell kennel, west of Barrington, defeated three champion wolfhounds to win the American best class and the open class and was declared the best Irish wolfhound in the Westminster Kennel show at Madison Square Garden last week.

Wauconda

Word was received here Tuesday of the death of Mrs. Clara Cook, for many years a Wauconda resident. She was struck by an automobile in Chicago as she was crossing the street. She was taken to a hospital, but lived only a short time. She was the widow of Rue Cook, and three daughters survive her, E. J. Cook, Wilbur Cook and Mrs. Elmer Gray, all of Wauconda.

to forget that I had lost you—had to wonder how... "How you could not see me?" "Not even that till afterwards... "Only how I could make things up to you... "What did they do to you?" asked Mary, brokenly.

her face, he realized that his own was shaking too... "Mary," he said brokenly, "I work. If you really don't want me to... "The Bible slipped from her lap, unnoticed, and Cousin Jane sat for a long time with happy tears rolling down her cheeks... "I was very late that evening, when Jane Manning, remembering that she had not 'set back her chair' against a possible storm—though there was not a cloud in the sky—went out on her piazza... "It was long, long time before he lifted it again... "Good night, sweetheart," she heard him say at last, and then saw him turn and come down the walk, his young face lighted with a radiance that did not seem to come wholly from the moon.

her blessed, her husband and, and be praised her, give her the fruit of her hands and let her own work praise her in the ages... "I suppose that woman in the Bible may have had her faults," she said aloud at last, "same as Mary has. I shouldn't be a mite surprised if she had a tongue and a temper and a backbone and didn't forgive and forget very easy, though Solomon doesn't mention it. Seems to me there's some likeness between the two... "Great glory!" ejaculated Cousin Jane aloud, and without conscious profanity... "Paul heard her, stopped for a minute and then walked rapidly toward her... "Is that you, Cousin Jane," he called, "rising up the piazza? Here, let me help you!" When complete order was restored, he blocked her entrance into the house for a minute, standing with his back against the door... "Mary is going to marry me," he said, his voice ringing like a bell, bluish, "right off. We're going away for a few weeks—till I get stronger, and she gets rested—some quiet place by the sea, and then we're coming back here to Lady Blanche farm—coming home together. Oh, look, how happy I am!"

"I don't know I blame you," said Cousin Jane. His mother's house was dark, and Paul did not feel sorry. In the morning, of course, she must be told, and Mary's father—but it wasn't right—however, when he noticed a faint light shining from the upper windows of Carrie Blanche, he went close to the little building and called— "Blanche! May I come up?" "Yes—Yes, been hoping you would." She was sitting in a low rocker, nursing her baby. He crossed the room softly, and sat down on a foot-stool beside her. "Mary's going to marry you," she whispered. "How did you know?" "How could I help knowing, looking up you? I've seen that look in a man's face before." "Oh, you poor little thing!" "Hush! Don't speak that way! I don't feel like that about it! And I'm so thankful—so happy—that I've seen it in yours, too." They sat for a long time together, after the sleeping baby had been laid back in his cradle. And meanwhile the woman who had never had a lover went slowly up to her room, and sitting down in the old chair, took up the Bible that lay near it, to read in it, as always, before she went to bed. It fell open at the last chapter of Proverbs: "Who can find a virtuous woman?—Who can find a virtuous woman?" read Cousin Jane, "for her price is far above rubies. She will take down the trembling hands with which she had suddenly cov-
