NOT REALLY A SALES TAX

We were asked recently why we have made an about face within the list six months on our advocacy of a state sales tax as means of raising revenue for support of government. We were eminded that we had pleaded, editorially, for a sales tax to replace personal property taxes and lower real estate taxes estate taxes.

We did express our viewpoint that a sales tax can b ment. We were symmeded that we man pieaceae, entiorinary for a sales tax for replace personal property taxes and lower real estate taxes.

We did expense our viewpoint that a sales tax can be the fairest and misst equitable of all taxes and that it should be adopted for its purpose of relieving owners and renters of tax burdeness' property. We still adhere to that viewpoint.

We have objected to the Illipois 2 per cent loccupational tax now in effect; and insist that it is just as inequitable if not more so this; real estate taxes. It is popularly called a sales tax and it, it technically known as an occupational tax.

The tax is flaced upon the retail trade of Illinois and in that sense it, if an occupational tax. To be a fair occupational tax.

The tax is faced upon the retail trade of Illinois and in that sense it, if an occupational tax, and the sense it, if an occupational tax is a property of the sense it, if an occupational tax is a faced upon all occupations. The sense it, if an occupational tax is a faced upon all occupations, and the sense it, if an occupational tax, if the sense it, if an occupational tax is a faced upon all occupations. Wholesalers', binaulacturers, farmers, lawyers, doctors and many other groups escape the direct burden of the state occupational tax. Even some retailers, those who sell only services and my langible personal property, escape the tax. The burden of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the respect only responsibility falls heavily upon the respect only responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of the sellor of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of the sellor of direct responsibility falls heavily upon the sellor of th

The quality and character of communities vary with the type of citizenry who make them up. Some towns are without much sephlance of ordinary decency, the buildings and homes without much sephlance of ordinary decency, the buildings and homes without them for the most part being shoddy and run-down, while the men and women who are seen sitting or walking about, (mostly just sitting), are about as agile and speedy in their thermbulations as a glacier moving over a mountain area, amountain area amountain area are minny such towns in the world—nearly all of them with rapidt, decreasing populations.
