Cheap Jewelry of Today

Rivals Gems of the Past

Many years ago there was a craftsman who made ornaments for lovely ladies. Slim wrists of Oriental dancers sparkled with his handwork, royal heads were hung with the creations of his dreams of beauty. But of all the jewels with which he worked the one he loved the most was the opal.

One day he found an opal of great size and price. It was as large as his closed hand, lustrous as the star above the crescent moon, and luminous with elusive fires. He would make of this opal, he thought, the most perfect jewel he had ever made, so that seekers of beauty would see it and wonder.

With reverence he worked, as he carved his dreams into the shifting colors, until he had fashioned a bracelet fit to adorn the loveliest lady of all time. That was so many years ago that most of the legends have been forgotten, and the craftsman's jewels are sealed in undisturbed tombs.

Agree later there was a lady in a floating, rainbow gown, each of her slender wrists was encircled by three translucent bracelets of opal—recent colors. She brought them somewhere for a small price, but their beauty was that of the opal, for craftsmen often have the same dreams.

Deep Sea Life Science
Bottoms of the deepest parts of the ocean are pretty much dead worlds, according to a Danish zoologist. He says that the only forms of life to be found in the deepest abysses are bacteria and small plants. The plants mainly because of the pressure, darkness and zero temperature to be found there. Fish and other deep-sea dwellers only result in retarding growth and the building up of the body, he said. Fabled monsters at great depths have never been found—Pathfinder Magazine.

The Fall of Tyre, most important of maritime cities in the heyday of its fame, added immensely to the reputation of Alexander the Great. But it decreed him the use of the reputation itself by which he might have been able to pursue his victories along the Mediterranean coast to Carthage, daughter city of Tyre, and to Spain, Gaul and Britain, conquered by Julius Caesar some two centuries later.

Loss of Sense of Thirst
The most physical disorder that afflicts mankind, it is believed, is the loss of the sense of thirst. Medical history records only three or four such cases.

"Just a Few Pennies for Protection"

That's the way I would look at the cost of my telephone if I did not benefit from its use in other ways. In my livestock, barn, machinery and home I have an investment. Surely this investment is worth the protection a telephone gives, when it costs only a few pennies a day. Day or night, I can call the fire department, the police or my neighbors if I need them. Some day one call may be worth more than I've paid for my telephone for many years."
