VOLUME 48, NUMBER 47
Additional Cost Due to Sales Tax Should Be Shown
Chamber of Commerce Gets Ruling From Department of Finance
The occupational sales tax should be shown on bills as an "additional cost of sales tax" but not under a heading of sales tax, according to a ruling of the state department of finance as interpreted by the retail division of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce. An open letter from the retail division follows:
"Efforts of the mercantile division of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce to continue the state department of finance of the merits of adding the sales tax as an additional expense have been successful. In light of the ruling as given below and on the basis of the information we have furnished to you to pay as to the necessity of keeping the tax out in the open for various reasons may be met on your part by the mercantile division—adding the tax as a separate item—and as an additional cost of doing business. Let's head every effort to make this mutual action as a separate item—and as an additional cost of doing business.
The ruling from department of finance has been given as follows:
A retailer may advertise in his catalogue that his based prices are subject to a 2 per cent increase on account of the increased cost of doing business under the retailer's occupational tax act and make it this time by way of a separate item.
The retail merchants thus have the option of showing an increase in their selling price to the increased cost of doing business under the act—and of showing it as a separate item. However retailers must not hold out to their customers that they the retailers are agents for the state or that this is a tax on the customer. It must not be added simply as a tax but should be designated as an additional cost of doing business.
The ruling of the state department of finance is as follows:
The procedure has been authorized and it is to the interest of your customers and yourself to do so.
The state department is to be congratulated on this much needed ruling. Merchants will maximally appreciate it. Add the tax as an additional expense and keep it out in the open."
