Westbrook Pegler

joins staff of THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

WESTBROOK PEGLER, one of America's outstanding newspaper commentators, introduced his new daily column in The Chicago Daily News this week.

His newspaper articles have won a place with readers that is unique. They have served school teachers as models of English. They have brought tribute from college presidents, students, publishers, humorists and statesmen. From pugilism to politics his treatment has coursed from mellow humor, both rich and kindly, to bitter satire.

The prize ring, the racetrack and the baseball diamond are his realms of sport, but he has not neglected other subjects. He writes upon anything that interests him—with the entire world to choose from. He has won and been given unlimited freedom of topic and you will find his column always new, always alive, individual and distinctive. It is strictly Pegler . . . and a treat indeed.
