Chicago Nimrods Fine Marksmen, But Shy on Law

For drug store cowboys who had not been out of sight of the tall skyscrapers far enough to learn that the hills and vales of the Barrington countryside, Dr. Charles H. Eye and H. J. Schmelzel of Chicago are marksmen. They proved this Tuesday when they made a tour of the Barrington district. Constable Leo Riley watched their car speed through Cuba and was suspicious. He followed them but would not have caught them had they not stopped to shoot a chicken at Riley's farm. That proved their intention; they lost time and the chicken. He was not satisfied, and walked back up the road. There he found a willow, one of his own prize flock, shot through the neck. Returning to the car he made another search; the back of the seat appeared to be untidy, he pulled it down and out rolled a rock pheasant and two bronze turkeys, all neatly plucked through the car. Later in the day Eye and Schmelzel got it in much the same way.

Good books open new worlds to children in which they may live happily, returning to their actual surroundings. They need this food for the mind as much as they need food for the body. Books not only give knowledge but teach children how to live. Children's Book Week was originated in 1919 by the American Booksellers' Association, the American Library Association, the Boy Scouts of America, and associated publishers; and has become in some five years, a national annual campaign which thousands of communities use to stimulate interest in boys' and girls' books.
