Tonight is the 1st anniversary of the Irving Park concert band. The occasion will be appropriately celebrated by an informal reception tendered to the band at the residence of Mr. J. E. Newton.

Since its inception the band has developed wonderful progress. Out of crude material and with endless difficulties to contend with the band has been advanced step by step through the untiring efforts of its leader. Mr. Newton, until it occupies a prominent position in the ranks of young bands.

The band is distinctively an Irving Park organization and the good will of its citizens has been well demonstrated at the wo band concerts. The enthusiasm displayed on these occasions was very flattering to the members of the band. The reception tonight will be exclusively for members of the band and their ladies. The evening will be devoted to installation of the newly elected officers, speeches from retiring and new offiers, toasts and various rare musical treats, the nature of which is denly on Saturday last and at the present not definitely known at this early stage. An extended notice of the reception will be the doctors care.

given next. Preparations are being made for a third band concert to be held in a few months. The descriptions, although meagre and indefinite justify the assertion that it will be the first of its kind ever held in Irving church, Sunday evening, Sept. 6, at 7 Park and which no one should fail to at- o'clock. tend- The day and date will be announced

It is the earnest wish of this paper that the year about to be entered upon may be as prosperous and successful to the band as the preceding one.

BOTH COATS ARE GENUINE.

The Two Holy Garments Belong to Different Periods of Christ's Life.

London, Sept. 1 -A short truce has been patched up between the advocates of the holy coat of Treves and those who uphold the holy coat of Argenteuil in France. BARRINGTON REVIEW, EXPERIMENTS IN WARFARE. AN EMPRESS GOES CRAZY Interesting Tests That Have Been > Made on the Mersey. LONDON, Sept. 1. -Some interexperiments have been made in the estuary of the Mersey to test the efficacy of submarine mines as defenses of the approaches to the port of Liverpool. For some days the Mersey Volunteer Division R. E., Major Montgomery commanding, devoted themselves to laying down "mines" in different spots, and the major, with a large party of of-ficers and others interested, proceeded out in the war office steamer Lady Heathfield to see how these mines could be electrically exploded and note the effects. One mine (an iron box containing 100 pounds of gun cotton) had been laid at a depth of 15 feet of water off rocks known as the "Red Noses," and was electrically connected with Perch Rock battery, as well as with a buoy 200 yards out in the stream. The steamer struck against this buoy, an electric bell immediately rang in the battery, and the mine was fired. This seemed to be practically instantaneous, and the result was that a rudely constructed raft placed over the mine was hurled up in fragments to a great height, with vast volume of water. It was easy to see what would have been the fate of a ship placed in the position of the raft, especially if the iron box had contained a full charge of 500 pounds of gun cotton. Lesser mines were laid with relatively equal effects. A hundred mines are laid in the Mersey as port defens s.

TTALIAN BANDITS AT BAY. Fight Between Officers and a Band of Scascella.

LONDON, Aug. 31. - Letters from Italy give the det ils of the recent capture of the leader and most of the members of a band of murderers, similar in organization and villainy to the notorious Mafia Vita. This band had its headquarters at Bari and the most thrilling stories are told of its audacious robberies and murders, Lieut. Landolfi, who was sent out by the government with a force of carbineers to capture the miscreants, finally located them in a certain house which was quietly surrounded during the night. When Landolfi knocked at the door with summons for surrender the leader, of the band, a notorious malefactor named Scascella, dashed out into the darkness, firing as he went, and mortally wounding two of the carbineers. Landolfi bravely pursued the fugitive and seized him just at the brink of a pit nearly twenty feet deep. A desperate struggle ensued there between the two men, which ended in both falling into the pit. Neither received any serious injury, however, and Landolfi succeeded at last in overpowering Scascella and holding him until his carbineers came to the rescue and made Scascella a prisoner. Twelve of his band who had been in the house with him were also captured.

RUSSIAN RYE RIOTS

Treops Called Out to Quell the

Disorder. St. Petersburg, Aug. 29 .- Further particulars of the attempts of the peasants to prevent the export of rye by force show that the affair was more serious than was at first believed. Reports from Shavli state that four days ago some poor Jewish workmen observed some wagons containing rye which was being taken to the railway station for export to Libau. They protested and soon the wagons were surrounded by an excited crowd, who rushed to the railway station to prevent the rye being loaded on the trucks. The excited peasants flung themselves on the rails before the trucks. On the following day fresh disorders arose on a report that a large quantity of rye was expected at the railway station of Kruschani. The guard was called but failed to restore the arrival of troops. Similar scenes occurred at other places.

SEIZED THE CONQUEROR.

Frederick Vanderbilt Refuses to Pay the Duties on His Yacht.

New York, Aug. 29. - Frederick Vanderbilt's steam yacht Conqueror has been seized by custom-house inspectors. The seizure is the outcome of Mr. Vanderbilt's dispute with the custom house authorises. A few weeks ago the customs authorities decided that, as the vacht was of English build, Mr. Vanderbilt would have to pay light and tonnage charges of $750 at every American port the yacht touched, no matter how often she sailed back and forth. Mr. Vanderbilt paid under protest and appealed to the Treasury department for relief. Solicitor Hepburn decided that if Mr. Vanderbilt would not pay the light and tonnage charges the Conquerer would be classed as imported manufactured iron, on which the duty is 45 per cent. The duty to be paid on the Conquerer under this pay this high figure.

BISMARCK STILL ON DECK.

The Doughty Ex-Chancellor Continues Worry His Enemies.

BERLIN, Sept. 1. - In spite of the efforts of the government to relegate Prince Bi-marck to obscurity he still remains one of the most conspicuous figures. This is shown every time he moves abroad from his estates. During his stay at Kissingen he was the mark of continued honors. Deputations from all parts of Germany were happy, to have the opportunity of waiting upon him and expressing their gratitude for his services to the fatherland. This excited the susceptibilities of the government, whose petty measures of annoyance, it is believed, shortened his sojourn. Not long before his departure the band of the 11th regiment one evening gave the ex-Chancellor a serenade.

After it was over the members of the band were invited to the hotel and liberally served with refreshments, after the manner of the host. The supplies of wine, beer and brandy were unlimited, and on leaving the hotel the bandsmen began to show the effects of their too hospitable treatment. They became disorderly and assaulted several citizens on their way home. Col Arueth, commanding the regiment, having been informed of the circumstance, recalled the band to Regensburg, his headquarters, and delined to allow them to complete the course of concerts which they had been giving in Kissingen; moreover, several of the musicians were arrested and punished for their excesses.

The Bavarian minister of war had the bad taste to write requesting Prince Bismarck to refrain from enter taining drunken serenadors in future. News of this affair was suppressed for a time by the local police, who warned the papers against publishing anything about it. The d tails have just come out and reflect shame on all concerned except the Prince.

When Prince Bismarck left Kissingen his cure by the waters had not been completed and his health causes misgivings. His son Herbert yesterday telegraphed Dr. Schweninger to physician in whom the Prince puts the most trust—some say the only physician in whom he puts any trust.

There is no doubt that he was murdered Sunday night in the barn on William Darrow's premises. Darrow is very reticent and refuses to say anything about the case. It is thought that John Tipps, Darrow's father-in-law, has guilty knowledge. The feeling against Darrow and Tipps is bitter and the crowd could not be controlled should Larson's body he found. There is now strong possibili'y that a large crowd will go to Hampton and demand that Darrow be ruling amounts to nearly $35,000. It turned over to them. New York, Sept. 1. - Constantine Ashargan, once a millionaire, now a $10week clerk, called upon Interpreter Arberly, ex-consul to Jerusalem, at the barge office to-day.

Constrintine inherited $1,000,000 upon the death of his father, a wealthy manufacturer of Athens, whose only son he was, and he proceeded at once to take all the enjoyment he could out of it. He built a large amphitheater in a suburb of Athens, and, besides introducing all the sensual revelries of Eastern continental cities, he tried to revive the games known to his ancestors. His money went in streams and one morning, after a week's debauch, he came to his senses a penniless bankrupt.

Shortly afterward his mother died and left him another $1,000,000. It took him seven years to squander the first: it took him eight years to squander the second. He purchased a costly steam yacht, furnished it generously, employed a retinue of servants and proceeded to constantinople. He fought a duel with a young Russian nobleman and then, tiring of Constantinople, went to Rome. His money finally ran out and he came to this country, landed at San Francisco, and beat his way to New York, where, after roughing it for awhile, he secu ed a position as a

He was instantly killed. The bluff in uestion is of solid lime stone, called by the Cherokees "Clanawa." eagle's nest, and a famous landmark. Near the cliff there is a small cave which has been for years a favorite resort of the venturesome boys of that section of the city, especially as access to it was somewhat dangerous. Yesterday afternoon young Lazard was going to the cavern when he lost his footing and fell at least 100 feet into the river.

Texas' Harsh Creditors Law.

GALVESTON, Texas, Sept. 1. - The homestead law of Texas sometimes acts harshly for creditors. A letter from Austin says that a cattleman failed a short time ago and the creditors took possession of the property subject to attachment. The man's family live in a house for which they have been offered $50,000. The price asked is $75,000. This is made possible by the peculiar homestead exemption law of Texas. The homestead cannot be taken for debt. And the homestead is defined to be a piece of ground costing not more than $5,000 and whatever improvements there may be thereon. In this case the residence is the finest in the city where it is located. It is one of the finest in Texas. It cost more than $50,000, but it is entirely out of reach of the creditors of the estate. It is therefore easy for a man in Texas to tie up a fortune in his homestead.

BALMACEDA IN HIDING.

THE CHILEAN TYRANT HAS TO FLEE FOR HIS LIFE.

His Government Overthrown and the Insurgents in Pull Control -- News from Valparaiso.

VALPARAISO, Sept. 1. - The capital has fallen. Santiago was yesteruay surrendered to the insurgents and today the leader of the Congressional party took formal possession. Balmaceda has been forced to flee for his life. Patrick Egan, the American minister, is still here, but it is thought one of the first acts of the new government will be to demand his recall. His sympathies were with Balmaceda, and the revolutionists claim that he has grossly misrepresented them to the United States government.

The capital city was in the hands of bloodthirsty mob last night and while it was unable to satisfy its murderous instincts it did destroy a vast amount of property.

As soon as the news reached Santiago of the overwhelming defeat of the government troops on the heights of Placilla and the fall of Valparaiso, and the people knew that Balmaceda's power was gone, and they had nothing to fear from his wrath, their enmity to his government broke forth. The cry was raised that the president should be killed and a mob started for his house. It grew in numbers and fury as it went through the streets, and by the time it reached the executive mansion was ripe for any bloody deed. Short shrift would fury of the mob was balked. Then the mob's desire for revenge found vent in the application of the to ch. Soon Balmaceda's house was a mass of flames. Before it had been destroyed the mob marched off to the house of Senor Goday, the ex-minister of the interior and an ardent Balmacedist, and set on fire his house. Rear Admiral Brown has 100 men from the American men-of-war stationed at the consulate to protect subjects of the United States residing here from injury or loss of property. The battle of Placil a was fought on Friday. Numerous congratulatory dispatches from many places have been received by the Congressional envoys during the day.

The Chilean minister declined to receive any one last night. It is reported that he received word to-day that Balmaceda was still in possession of Santiago and had not fled.

The only news received here by the envoys of the Congressional party, besides the dispatch from Iquique saying the junta was on its way to Santiago, was a message from Lima stating that Santiago is in the hands of the congressional party and that they have established a temporary authority looking to the safety of persons and property and that Balmaceda's whereabouts is unknown. The Present Prosperity Might Be Spoiled by the Speculators The United States Is Otherwise Like the Egypt of Old.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 30, 1891.-The cabled reports of meagre harvests in Europe, and the memory of the vast crops of ripening grain which Dr. Talmage saw during his recent tour in the West, have combined to turn his thoughts back to that patriarchal time when all the world sent to Egypt to buy corn and to suggest a gospel lesson. His text is Genesis 43:3, "Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you." This summer, having crossed eighteen of the United States, North, South, East and West, I have to report the mightiest harvests that this country, or any other country, ever reaped. If the grain gamblers do not somehow wreck these harvests; we are about to enter upon the grandest scene of prosperity that America has ever witnessed. But while this is so in our own country, on the other side of the Atlantic there are nations threatened with famine, and the most dismal cry that is ever heard will I fear be uttered-the cry for bread. I pray God that the contrast between our prosperity and their want may not be I hated, out of kindness to another, as sharp as in the lands referred to by my text. There was nothing to eat. Plenty of corn in Egypt, but ghastly famine in Canaan. The cattle moning in the stall. Men, women having my elbow-tone broken though and children awfully white with hunger. Not the failing of one crop for one summer, but the failing of all the crops for seven years. A nation dying for lack of that which is so common on your table, and so little appreciated; the product of harvest field, and grist-mill, and oven: the price of sweat, and anxiety, and struggle, -bread! Jacob the father, has the last report from the flour-bin, and he finds that everything is out; and he says to his sons: "Boys, hook up the wagons and start for Egypt, and get us something to eat." The fact was, there was a great corn crib in Egypt. The people of Egypt have been largely taxed in all ages, at the present time paying between seventy and eighty per cent of their products to the government. No wonder in that time they had a large corn-crib, and it was full. To that crib they came from the regions around about-those who were famished-some paying for corn in money, when the money was exausted, paying for the corn in sheep and cattle and horses and camels: and when they were exausted, then selling their own bodies and their families into slavery. The morning for starting out on the crusade has arrived. Ja ob gets his family up very early. But before the elder sons start they say something that makes him tremble with emotion from head to foot, and burst into tears. large place. An angel once measured and dancers; Carr and Tourgee, musionce before been in Egygt to get corn. and they had been treated somewhat hundred miles long and fifteen hunroughly, the lord of the corn-crib sup- dred broad, and fiften hundred high; plying them with corn, but saying at and it is full. Food for all nations, the close of the interview: "Now, you need not come back nere for any more corn unless you bring something better than money—even your younger brother Benjamin." Ah! Benjamin—a name suggestive of all tenderness. The mother had died at the birth of that son-a spirit coming and another spirit going-and the very thought of parting with Benjamin must have been a heartbreak. The keeper of this corn crib, nevertheless, says to these older sons: There is no need of your coming here any more for corn unless you bring Benjamin, your father sdarling." Now Jacob and his family very much needed bread; but what a struggle it would be to give up this son. The Orientals are very demonstrative in their grief, and I hear the outwailing of the father as these older sons keep resterating in his ears the announcement of the Egyptian lord. "Ye shall not see my fare unless your brother be with you." Why did you tell them you had a brother?" said the old man. complaining and chiding them. "Why, father," they said, "he asked us all about our family, and we had no idea he would make any such demand upon us as he has made. "No use of asking me," said the father, "I can not, I will not, give up Benjamin. The fact was that the old man had lost children: and when there has been bereavement in a household, and a child taken, it makes the other children in the household more precious. So the day for departure was adjourned, and adjourned, and adjourned. Still the horrors of the famine increased, and louder moaned the cattle, and wider open cracked the earth, and pallid became the cheeks, word has more quavers in it when pronounced by the aged than by the Well, the bread party-the bread embassy-drives up in front of the corn-crib of Egypt. These corn-cribs are filled with wheat, and barley, and corn in the husk, for those who have traveled in Canaan and Egypt know that there is corn there corresponding with our Indian maize. Huzza! the journey is ended. The lord of the corn crib, who is a so the Prime Minister, comes down to these arrived travelers, and says: "Dine with me to day. How is your father? Is this Benjamin, the younger brother whose presence I demanded?" The travelers are introduced into the palace. They are worn and bedusted of the way; and servants come in with a basin of water in one hand and a towel in the other, and kneel down before these newly-arrived travelers, washing off the dust of the way. The butchers, and poulterers, and caterers of the Prime Minister prepare the repast. The guests are seated in small groups, two or three at a table, the food on a trav; all the luxuries from imperial gardens, and orchards, and aquariums, and aviaries are brought there, and are filling chalice and platter. Now is the time for this Prime Minister, if he

Be quick and send word back with the swiftest camel to Canaan to old Jacob, that "Benjamin is well; all is well; he is faring sumptuously; the Egyptian lord did not mean murder and death; but he meant deliverence and life when he announced to us on that day: 'Ye shall not see my face unless your brother be with you.'

Well, my friends, this world is famine-struck of sin. It does not yield a measure of success here that tit single crop of solid satisfaction. It is achieved on its initial production at dying. It is hunger-bitten. The fact the Madison Square Theater, New that it does not, cannot, feed a man's York City, where it created a positive heart was well illustrated in the life of the English comedian. All the world honored him-did everything for him that the world could do. He was applauded in England and applauded the high pressure life of modern so-

And yet, although many people supposed him entirely happy, and that this world was completely satiating his soul, he sits down and writes: "I never in my life put on a new hat, ican. that it did not rain and ruin it. I cause it was raining and thought all who had the choice would keep in-doors, that the sun did not burst forth in its strength and bring out with it all the butterflies of fashion whom I knew and who knew me. No Reunion in Theirs.

A movement was started in Chicago some time ago by some overzealous enthusiasts looking to what was called a union of the blue and gra; "during the world's fair. Most of the leading Grand Army men in the city who have been spoken to on the subject say that none of the posts in the city or any of the posts in the department will indorse or have anything to do with such a movement. It is safe to say that no such reunion will be held with the consent or approval of the Grand Army in Illinois.

There was a well defined letter won his back, and this by the current superstition being a rortent of war the believers in signs and omens will have a double basis for prophecies of ill, for coincident with the arrival of the locust came a dispatch saying that the army worm an unfailing forerunner of bloodshed among nations, had bobbed up in Germany.

MANY interesting relics from San Domingo where Columbus landed, have been received by the Washington office of the foreign affairs department of the Exposition. The most valuable of these relics and the most interesting, perhaps, is the first church-bell that ever rang out in the New World. It was presented to the colonists of the first settlement by Queen Isabella in appreciation of the fact that the first settlement bore her name. There is also an exact reproduction of the cross which Columbus raised immediately upon landing. The material of the their same exactly as that which Columbus nailed up, having been taken from the wood of a building erected in 1509. There is also in the collection fac-similes of the doors which close the cells in which the bones of Columbus cepose. The carving on these doors is exquisite and they themselves are beautiful as a whole. There is also an anchor, supposed to have been lost by Columbus when the ship went to pieces at San Domingo on a subsequent voy-

History of the Discovery.

In 1883, while hunting for health in the mountain regions of South America, Lieur. Moxie found the people using what they called Food Plant as we do greens. Surprised at its effect on his own nervous system, he shipped a bale to Dr. Thompson, asking him to determine its character. We rever Dr. Thompson used it the patient said: "It gives me a colid, durable stredgth, and a very large appetite." It cared anything caused by nervous exhaustion; it restored nervous people who were tired out mentally or physically, stopped the appetite for intoxicants, cured insanity, blindness from overtaxing the sight, paralysis, headache, loss of manhood from excesses, made people able to stand twice their amount of work, mentally or physically, with less fatigue. It cared softening of the brain and recovered helpless limbs. It was found to be neither medicine nor stimulant, but a nerve food, and harmless as milk. Women say: "My nervousness and exhaustion went like magic." For sale every here. Zleo syrupfor soda fountains.

"She calls herself a witch." swered Keyork with considerable scorn. 'I do not know what she is, nor what to call her-a sensitive, an hysterical subject, a medium, a witch -a fool, if you like, or a charlatan, if you prefer the term. Beautiful she is, at least, whatever else she may not

"Yes, she is beautiful." "So you have seen her, have you?" The little man again looked sharply up at his tall companion. "You have had a consultation. "Does she give consultations? Is she a professional seer?" The Wanderer asked the question in a tone of surprise. Do you mean that she maintains an establishment upon such a scale out of the proceeds of fortunetelling?"

"I do not mean anything of the sort. Fortune telling is excellent! Very good!" Keyork's bright eyes you doing here-I mean in this church?" He put the question suddenly.

"Pursuing-an idea, if you please to call it so."

.. Not knowing what you mean, I must please to call your meaning by your own name for it. It is your nature to be enigmatic. Shall we go out? If I stay here much longer I shall be petrified instead of embalmed. I shall turn into dirty old red marble, like Tziho's effigy there, an awful warning to fortune philosophers, and an examwho worship here."

They walked toward the door, and the contrast between the appearance of the two brought the ghost of a smile to the thin lips of the pale sacristan, who was occupied in renewing the tapers upon one of the side altars.

"So you were pursuing an idea," said the little man as they emerged into the narrow street. "Now, ideas may be divided variously into classes. as for instance, ideas which are good, bad or indifferent. If you have an idea upon any subject I will utterly annihilate it to my own most profound satisfaction: if you have none concerning any special point, I will force you to accept mine, as mine, or to die the intellectual death. That is the general theory of the idea.'

"And what does it prove?" inquired the Wanderer.

"If you knew anything, answered Keyork, with twinkling eyes, "you would know that a theory is not a demonstration but an explanation. But, by the hypothesis, since you are not I, you can know nothing certainly. Now, my theory explains many things. and among others the adamantine, imperishable, impenetrable nature of the substance vanity, upon which the showman, nature, projects in fast fading colors the unsubstantial images of men. Why do you drag me through this dismal passage?"

"I passed through it this morning and missed my way.'

"In pursuit of the idea, of course. That was to be expected. Prague is constructed on the same principle as the human brain, full of winding ways, dark lanes and gloomy arches, all of which may lead somewhere, or

"The self which you propose to preserve from corruption, since you think so poorly of the lodger and the lodging. I wonder that you should be anxious to prolong the sufferings of the one and his lease of the other."

"It is all I have," answered Keyork Arabian. "Did you think of that?" "That circumstance may serve as an excuse, but it does not constitute a

"Not a reason? Is the most abject poverty a reason for throwing away the daily crust? Myself is all I have. Shall I let it perish when an effort may preserve it from destruction?"

. So soon as you speak of enjoyment, argument ceases," answered the Wanderer.

"You are wrong, as usual," returned the other. A "It is the other way, Enjoyment is the universal solvent of all arguments. Enjoyment! Enjoyment is the protest of reality against the tyranny of fiction.'

"Have wisdom and study led you no farther than that conclusion?"

Keyork's eyes brightened suddenly and a peal of laughter, deep and rich, broke from his sturdy breast and rolled long echoes through the dismal lane. But his ivory features were not discomposed, though his white beard trembled and waved softly like a snowy veil blown about by the wind.

·If wisdom can teach how to prolong the lease, what study can be compared with that of which the results may beautify the dwelling? What more can any man' do for himself than to make himself happy? The very question is absurd. Is it for designs to place her powers at my disthe sake of improving the physical condition or of promoting the moral ease of mankind at large that you are dragging me through the slums and byways and alleys of the gloomiest city on this side of eternal perdition? The Wanderer stared coldly at his companion.

"The vulgarity of the designation is indeed only equaled by that of your taste in selecting it," he said slowly. Then he turned away, intending to leave Keyork standing where he was.

But the little man had already repented of his speech. He ran quickly to his friend's side and laid one hand upon his arm. The Wanderer paused and again looked down.

"Is it of any use to be offended with my speech? Am I an acquaintance of yesterday? Do you imagine that it could ever be my intention to annoy flashed with amusement. What are you?" The questions were asked rapidly, in tones of genuine anxiety.

"Indeed, I hardly know how I could suppose that. You have always been friendly-but I confess-your names for things are not-always-'

The Wanderer did not complete the sentence, but looked gravely at Keyork, as though wishing to convey very clearly again what he had before expressed in words.

"Come, forgive my lack of skill. and do not let us quarrel. Perhaps I can help you. You may know Prague | tion. well, but I know it better. Will you ple for the edification of the faithful allow me to say that I know also whom it is you are seeking here?"

"Philosophy? I am a mysosophist! All wisdom is vanity, and I hate it! Autology is my study, autosophy my ambition, autonomy my pride, I am I, one, indivisible, central! Oh I! Hail and live forever!"

Again the little man's rich bass voice rang out in mellow laughter. "You are happy, Keyork," he said.

'You must be, since you can laugh at yourself so honestly.'

"At myself? Vain man! I am laughing at you, and at every one else, at everything except myself." "Can you tell me nothing more of well to accept it in the first instance. "I had supposed, from what you said of her that she made a profession of clairvoyance, or hypnotism, ormes-merism-whatever may be the right term now-a-days.' "It matters very little." answered Keyork, gravely. "I used to wonder at Adam's ingenuity in naming all living things, but I think he would have made but a poor figure in a tour-

The Wanderer preferred the little man's silence to his wild talk, but he was determined, if possible, to extract some further information concerning Unorna, and before many seconds had elapsed he interrupted Keyork's meditations with a question.

"You tell me to see for myself," he said. "I would like to know what I am to expect. Will you not enlighten

"What?" asked the other, vaguely, as though roused from sleep. "If I go to Unorna and ask a consultation of her, as though she were a common somnambulist, and if she posal, what sort of assistance would I most probably get?"

"Of two things, one will happen." he answered. "Either she will herself fall into the abnormal state, and will answer correctly any questions wish to see."

"After all, I do not see why it should not be so," said the Wanderer, thoughtfully. "At all events, whatever she can do is evidently done by hypnotism, and such extraordinary experiments have succeeded of late-

"I did not say that there was nothing but hypnotism in her process." "Wnat then? Magic?" The Wanderer's lip curled scornfully. "I do not know," replied the little man, speaking slowly. "Whatever her secret may be, she keeps it, even when speaking in sleep."

"I will go," answered the Wanderer, after a moment's hesitation.

"Very good," said Keyork Arabian. 'If you want to find me again, come to my lodging. Do you know the house of the Black Mother of God?"

"Yes-there is a legend about a Spanish picture of our Lady once preserved there ___."

Exactly, it takes its name from that black picture. It is on the corner of the Fruit market, over against the window at which the Princess Windischgratz was shot. I live in the upper story. Good-by." "Good-by."

CHAPTER IV.

"Is it he?" she asked aloud in a voice ringing with the joy and the fear of a passion that has waited long and is at last approaching the fulfillment of satisfac-

"Is it he? Is it he? Is it he?" she repeated again and again."

She did not see the dark red squares of marble, alternating with the white and the gray, but as she looked a face and a form rose before her, in the contemplation of which all her senses and faculties concentrated themselves.

"Are you indeed he?" she asked, speaking softly and doubtfully, and yet unconsciously projecting her strong will upon the vision, as though to force it to give the answer for which she longed.

And the answer came, imposed by the effort of her imagination upon the "Then, if you will accept a humble thing imagined. The face suddenly became luminous as with a radiance within itself, the shadows of grief melted away, and in their place trembled the rising light of a dawning love. The lips moved and a voice spoke.

> "I am he, I am that love for whom you have waited, you are that dear one whom I have sought throughout the world. The hour of our joy has struck, the new life begins to-day, and there shall be no end.'

> Unorna's arms went out to grasp the shadow, and she drew it to her in her fancy and kissed its radiant face. "Na veky vekuy! To ages of ages!" she cried.

Then she covered her eyes as though to impress the sight they had seen upon the mind within, and, groping blindly for her chair, sank back into her seat.

"Ah, but I will!" she exclaimed.

'And what I will-shall be." As though she were satisfied with the promise thus made to herself, she smiled, her eyelids drooped, the tension of her frame was relaxed and she sank again into the indolent attitude in which the Wanderer had found her. A moment later the distant door turned softly on its hinges and a light foot-fall broke the stillness. There was no need for Unorna to speak in in order that the sound of her voice might guide the newcomer to her retreat. The footsteps approached swiftly and surely. A young man of singular beauty came out of the green shadows and stood beside the chair in the open spa ce.

Unorna betrayed no surprise as she looked up into her visitor's face. She knew it well. In form and "And yet I was introduced to her feature the youth represented the noblest type of the Jewish race.

Unorna looked down upon his bent head. As though collecting her thoughts she closed her eyes, as she tried to draw back her hand; then as he held it still, she leaned back and spoke to him.

The People Beginning to See Inte the Bodge-L. D. Morse of Bates Advertising Agency Talks to New York Press Reporter.

The New York papers have opened fire on the substitute frauds rec ntly referred to in these columns. From the Press of a recent date we clip the An agritation in which the public is of patent medicines and other proprietary articles. This agitation is

There are many standard articlessoaps, emulsions, pills, sarssaparillas oils, extracts, syrups, etc.—which have attained to a large sale and widespread reputation by their real merits and the liberal advertising of their proprietors. This reputation would seem to be the legitimate property of the owner of justifies the reputation, no man has a vented the Columbus team from right in honesty to undermine or divert the rewards of such character from its proper goals.

Yet, it is alleged, such undermining such dishonesty, is practiced every day, to the injury of established business and to the detriment and damage of the public. For instance, a man calls at a drug store and asks for some stated preparation that he had heard highly recommended or that has been used before in his family. Af all events he wishes that particular medicine, and anyone would suppose he had a right to have his desir gratified.

Oftentimes, however, he will be told 'I am all out of that now, but here is something of my own make that is just as good, even better, and is much cheaper;" and too often the customer relying upon the statement of the think all this fair business methods on the part of the druggist, but when you consider that nine times out of ten he has right in his store the standard article originally asked for, that he has perhaps for years been selling it and on which a fair profit is provided by the men whose business he thus seeks in his small way to destroy, and that in many cases the substitute given is absolutely ineffectual as compared with the other, the magnitude of the offense against the manufacturer who trusts him the public whom he and supposed to serve is seen once. It is perfectly right for druggists and chemists to concoet their own preparations and in formed Lutheran church of Lincoln, is undeniably wrong for any one cess by stealing the reputation that it thousands of money to build up, and next season. even worse for them to place in peril the health and life of their patrons. When the customer enters the store the force that guides him is the reputation Manager French. of that particular standard article, and if the druggist has it he should sell it The movement to stop this species of deception, not to say swindling, is therefore of great importance not only to the men who are primarily affected, but to every individual in the community, and it is likely that the movement will take definite and effective shape

This question was very ably discussed yes: erday afternoon in the presence of ager of J. H. Bates' Newspaper Ad ergiven thought to the various phases of the question because of the work that Bates' Advertising agency had done in now insidiously attacked. Mr. Morse referred to the able manner in which the matter had been taken up and ardson in his address delivered in St.

Paul before the Editorial association! "Mr. Richardson put it just right." said Mr. Morse, and after some complimentary comment; on the Editorial ass ciation Mr. Morse went on: "l'eople have no idea how extensively this fraudulent dealing is practiced. And there is more than an offense to the moral sense of the community in this swindling system; there is actual physica danger. Think a moment of the evolution of a patent or proprietary medicine from the time that its formula is discovered by the chemist in his laboratory until it has won recognition from the world as a trustworthy remedy, with a place in the homes of the land and in the confidence of the people. The making of such medicines is an exact science. They have been tested, and tested over and over again by the experts of the world, and they Money might boost a preparation into prominence before the people for a have won on its merits. Had it not been able to effect what was promised for it the first time it would not be bought a second time. With this pal pable truth before you, do you not link there is a danger to the having o munity in such thrust remedies aside for them substituted concoctions in the pharmacist's art? Customers should demand the article they have every reason to believe is the best, and they should insist upon getting it. It is time this contemptible business was stopped, and it can be if the press of the country will ventilate and expose it, and if the public will refuse to patronize druggists who try to paim off the substitute nostrums. The only ng to se. I these substitutes is because they can be made cheaper than the standard articles and sold with more profit. This is the very reason the public would want the standard, and does not want the other. I'm willing the druggists and all other men should make as much as they can, but let them make it honestly without injur-Weston ing their neighbors, or befooling o

Thanks first to the skill of the optician, and secondly to the modern photographic art, any one may be instructed and entertained by the modern lanternist, who will produce storm or sunshine, winter or summer, or the soft effects of moonlight at will upon the screen by the skillful manipulation of the optical lantern with a wonderful effect, but there are many effects which seem to be difficult of execution by means of the optical lantern. The saying is, "See Naples and then die;" but what is seeing Naples without seeing Vesuvius in European travelers have the good fortune to witness this phenomenon, and until now, so far as as we are aware, no one has been able to faithfully represent this awe-inspiring spectacle.

Mr. H. C. Ogden, of Middletown, N. Y., has come to the aid of the lanternist and the non-traveler, by producing firmly fixed on the iron. To save a yery simple apparatus by means of vivid and realistic manner.

In a glass tank attached to the lantern are inserted two curved drop tubes, with their extremities placed side by side, and on the rear of the tank is painted a picture of the volprofile by black varnish applied to the glass. The tips of the drop tubes coincide with the crater of the volcano, there are transparent streaks representing lava. To the side of one of the

Hardening Steel Plates,

Several of the most prominent manudefinitely whether, after all, oil hardening and annealing, or some such the cold, and their elongation was process, is really necessary for steel plates, the result of the trials thus far cent. made showing that, in respect to compound armor, the necessity is obvious. A 9-inch plate of steel was for this purpose manufactured and cut into two plates, each four feet square, one piece being left untreated and the other oilhardened and annealed. These were fired at by a six-inch gun with Firth steel projectiles weighing 100 pounds, the striking energy of the blow upon the untreated plate being 2,389 foot tons and the energy of the blow upon that which had been treated was 2,378 foot-tons. In the latter case the projectile made an indentation of ten and one-half inches, so that light was just visible through the center of the bulge at the back of the plate; the projectile rebounded. breaking into three pieces, and the plate, though cracked through, was whole, nor was any mater al plintered cut either at the back or front. In the case of the non-treated plate, the shot passed through, and the splintering of the steel around the hole in front of the plate spread over a space of fifteen inches across. The splintering around the hole at the back of the plate covered a space of thirty-three inches across, and the plate went into six

An Ingenious Lock.

French ingenuity has contrived a remedy for the inefficiency of ordinary combination locks for houses and apartments, these contrivances being usually of so little avail against professionals who, wasting no time in efforts ion 68 feet square and 90 feet to raise the tumblers and move the high, surmounted by a dome. bolt, simply insert the end of a short balcony, 60 feet wide and 25 feet high to the new device for meeting this difficulty a combination is resorted to lock in such a manner that locking the door sets a shore in place which will resist an enormous strain, but on the return of the proprietor the un-locking of the door in the usual way shifts the upper end of the shore from the door to the frame, where it presents no obstacle to the opening of the door. The mechanism of the lock itself need not be Not every one can go to Europe, but of the lock would move both the bolt and the shore, for if there are tumblers enough to prevent picking with a bit of wire, and if the jimmy is insufficient for the purpose, the point of security is attained.

New Process for Soap.

An improved kind of soap for metal work has lately been described, of some special advantages, it is said, as compared with those usually employed in this line—that is, mixtures of vaseline, oleic acid, and fat, combined with a small quantity of rouge-and which, when freshly prepared, leaves nothing to be desired, excepting, unfortunately that such compositions soon turn rancid and become unfit for use. The new article now brought forward is stated from this objection, and is made from cocoanut butter in the following manner: 2.5 kilos, of the butter are melted in an iron vessel, together with a little water; to this mixture being added, with constant stirring, 180 grms. of chalk, 87.5 grms. of alum and the same of cream of tartar and of white lead respectively. The mixt re prepared in this manner is then poured into molds and allowed to solidity. This scap is make into a paste with water and rubbed over the metal to be cleaned, and finally removed by a dry rag or chamois leather.

For Silvering Iron.

In silvering iron a recent process introduced in Austrian workshops consists in plunging the iron article into hot dilute hydrochloric acid, whence it is removed to a solution of mercury niactive eruption? Cork for Wine Bottles.

Manufacturers of corks are directing their attention to the production, if penetrable, when used for wine bottles, to the various types of worms whi h infest the latter. This is true in especial of one description or genus, the grubs of which feed on the fungold growth that forms on wine vats and mouldy corks, the insect boring and forming galleries in the cork nearest to the glass, and through the holes thus formed the air gains access to the wine, spoiling it. Various methods have been resorted to to overcome the difficulty, one of these being to soak the corks in hot water and then in brandy, dry them, and when they are put into the bottles coat the tops with a layer of paraffine wax previous to sealing them with ordinary wax, such coating being intended to prevent any entrance into the cork itself of grubs or insects.

Testing Steel Guns.

A short time ago the French government caused to be instituted a series of tests of gun steel at a low temperature, that is from 75 to 100 below zero Fahr., part of the bars being hardened and part unhardened, and the breaking load was increased by the cooling-3 per cent in the instance of the unhardened bars, and 6 per cent in the hardened ones. It seems that in a shock such as a gun would be subjected to the unhardened bars-cooled broke on an average with 5.9 blows against 14.6 blows under ordinary conditions. With the hardened bars the difference was less. 11.57 blows being required for the cold bars, against 14.4 at the normal temperature. The varifacturers of iron in Sheffield, England, ous bars employed in these tests, both have been endeavoring to ascertain hardened and unhardened, had their elastic limit raised eleven per cent by diminished twelve to fourteen per

The pictures of Washington in his old age seem to caricature the lower part of his face. Even that magnificent portrait of Stuart's, which hangs in the East Room of the White House, pictures the mouth and hin as if, when the great General sat for esh supply of that comfort which is conraband to habits of cleanliness and good taste. The truth about this expression in these likenesses of Washington is, that at a late period in life he was obliged to use false teeth, and in those carly days the science of dentistry was vet in its inci-piency and the dentist who accommodated Washington, did as best he could. The conformation of a once noble face. If, as the saying goes that "the face is the mirror of the soul." why not, kind reader, if you are obliged to wear artificial teeth, do you not request that the preservation of the soul." result was a complete mal-adaption of the your natural features be retained? When you call at Dr. Cigrand's Dental Office, at corner North and Milwaukee avenues, for artificial teeth, please bring with you a photograph of yourself showing how you appeared before you lost the pearls of your mouth. The doctor makes a specialty of difficult operations, and we kindly ask our readers to give him a call and hear his reasonable terms for first-class dental work

Gustav Lesky, a German laborer residing at Ogden and Campbell avenues was fatally injured last Tuesday evening by a grip car on Milwaukee avenue. He had been to a picnic at Kuhn's Park and was standing upon the foot-board of the crowded car, holding on with one hand, while with the other he twirled his light cane. It slipped from his hand and Lessy immediately jumped off to pick it up. Just as ne stooped a grip car coming in the opposite direction struck him, knocking him down and dragging him under. The front wheels passed over his body before the car could be stopped. When he was drawn out from under the car it was found that his back had been broken and he had probably received fatal injuries. He was removed to the County Hospital. This accident in to the County Hospital. This accident, in addition to the already large number which have recently occurred, should call the attention of the public to the benefits of elevated roads.

HART. -- MOCK.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Mrs. Bickerdike, 201 Hoffman avenue, on Wednesday last, between Mr. Clifford Hart and Miss Fannie E. Mock,

Mrs. Bickercike's neice. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles John Millar, Rector St. Mark's, Maplewood.

The bride, who looked remarkably pretty, was attended by her b.idesmaid, Miss Annie Mason, while the stalwart bridegroom was attended by Mr. Harold Hart, s best man.

We noticed many costly presents amongst others. A very handsome side-board and mirror, the gift of Mr. Hart; two magnificent Hilton rugs, the gift of Mr. Wm. Miss Emilie Emilsen gave a coffee to a few lady friends Wednesday afternoon, August 26. Among those present were Misses Minnie Larson, Marie Vognild, Lil-quantity of extra fine table linea, the gift of Miss Annie Mason and Mr. H. Hart. After the marriage ceremony was over the guests sat down to supper that had been provided by Mrs. Bickerdike, and at which the young bride and bridegroom most happily presided.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Mock, Master C. Mock. Mrs. Bickerdike, Miss A. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Houlsby, Miss E. Houlsby, Master Houlsby, Mrs. F. M. Houghton,

We greatly regret having to lose the ser vices of Mr. Geo. Roberts, who has been organist and choir master of St. Mark's for the past six years. During the time that Mr. Roberts has identified himself with St. Mark's he has raised the cholr from a fee effort to its present condition and we venture to say that few churches give better condition of the musical poreion of the Episcopal service than that given by St. Mark's. train at Halsted street viaduct, and missing his footing fell under the cars and was cut in two. His remains were taken to Klaners morgue.

Though we grieve to lose him, yet we cannot but feel that he is right in accepting a call to a church which can better afford to renumerate his services.

> Mrs. R. A. McAucken of Waterloo, Wis. and Mrs. Macauley and children of Grand Rapids, Mich. are visiting Mr. and Mrs: F. Mismer.

Wednesday evening, during the progress of the prayer meeting at the Northwest Methodist church, Homer street, a burglar entered the church and passed into the lecture room, where he remained until the church was closed. He then began pillaging and after putting the fine church clock and other articles into a large bag concluded to take a nap which entered into the early morning. He was discovered by the young son of the pastor the following morning and made his escape before help could be secured. Must of his plunder was left behind.
