They Are Now an Assured Fact—The Village Board Gets Down to Business.

On Wednesday evening The Village Board met in regular session.

The roll call by Clerk Powers showed all the members present with the exception of Trustee Willmarth.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, the following bills were read and allowed:

L. F. Schroeder, $1.91.
F. Wiseman, $1.12.
H. Pingle, $10.50.
J. Sizer, $5.10.
H. A. Sandman, 80 cents.
John Collen, $6.
Steve Palmer, $18.50.
L. Collen, $12.30.
Jay Palmer, $20.
Charles Wolf, $11.70.
John Jahnke, $6.75.
E. Rieke, $11.70.
E. Naeh, $8.40.
Charles Horn, $11.70.
Plagge & Co., $468.15.

The motion to allow these bills was made by Robertson, seconded by Peters. Carried.

Moved by Hatje, seconded by Collen, that Mrs. Crabtree be allowed the benefits which she was allowed in opening Station street. The amount is $350. Carried.

Wm. Spriggs has been paid $550, and the balance remaining, $500, he wasn't in a hurry to collect. He did not even care whether The Board gave him a note or not. The Trustees, not to be outdone in generosity, justly put it on record, and Collen moved and Hatje seconded that Wm. Spriggs be allowed 6 per cent interest on the amount from the time the Board commenced work on the street until they pay the sum. Carried.

President Boehmer then called attention to the sidewalks. All the trustees were ready for the question. Each trustee expressed himself as being willing to compel every property owner, who is served with a notice to repair his walks and fails to do so, to comply with the notice by ordering the street commissioner to tear up the walk and building one for him or her and charge the cost to the property. The matter was turned over to the village attorney to take action. It is probable that the first one to make the acquaintance of the Majesty of the Law will be some property owner who is well able to fight. The village has the legal right to demand good walks and is determined to convince every property owner of this fact.

Another matter that received attention was the uncleanness of our streets. THE REVIEW has on several occasions called attention to the fact that some citizens make the public streets the dumping place for ashes, slops, etc. There is an ordinance on the matter and the village marshal was instructed to inspect the streets, and arrest every offender and take them before Police Magistrate Castle.

Village Attorney Redmond was given full power to conduct the case of Mrs. Flora Meyer vs. The Village of Barrington; and it was suggested to him that if he wanted assistance to retain another attorney. He was told to retain whoever he may chose. The case will probably not come up for trial until some time in December.

The saloon license of Fred Jahnholz was transferred over to Charles Grom. The license bears the signature of the same bondsmen that were on Mr. Jahnholz's license.

The saloon license was discussed, and it is probable that before the next six months have expired there will have been passed an ordinance requiring the entire amount of the yearly license, $500, to be paid down in a lump.

The street commissioner was instructed to grade Chestnut street from Ela to Williams streets.

WHAT THEY SAW.

Sights and Scenes from the Bridal Trip of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Robertson.

Perhaps as an introduction to our sketch, it would be of interest to the reader to know that the first place of note that we will mention is Lake Chautauqua. We left Chicago on the Erie Railroad, passed through Indiana, Ohio, Western Pennsylvania, and Southwestern New York. About sunrise we came to the beautiful little lake, whose name we, as a Circle, bear. It is irregular in form, winding in and out like a river. At this time of the year it is particularly striking on account of the colors displayed in the foliage. Bluffs on every side rise from the lake and appear like huge terraces carpeted with many colored flowers. Buffalo, the great flour city, was the first place that brought us in a measure near our own fair Garden City. We only stopped there about two hours. At Niagara Falls we were given an extremely warm reception. About forty cab men rushed upon us, wanting to take us anywhere, everywhere, at very cheap rates etc., but we finally escaped from them and went to the ticket office, where we received the needed information. We took a carriage and spent about four hours in viewing the principal points of interest at the Falls. We first drove over to Goat and Luna Islands, from where we could look across to Prospect Park, toward Suspension Bridge and see the American Falls. The Cave of the Winds is also on this island. From here we went over to the Three Sister Island lying in a chain and connected by rustic bridges. From the third island we get a good view of the rapids above the Falls. The Niagara River is 22 miles long from Lake Erie to the Falls.

From here we went to the Great Whirlpool Rapids, where the waters seethe and foam like some angry monster. The disturbance of the waters here is supposed to be caused by an under current. The small steamers that are run near the Falls are called "Maids of the Mist." At one time an officer was after one of these boats to levy on it, but the captain would not surrender it. He put on full steam, and with the utmost care, but with extremely severe usage, succeeded in running the whirlpool rapids and came out all right six miles below at Lewiston.

We next visited the whirlpool rapids, had our pictures taken, with the rapids and Suspension Bridge for a back-ground. Here it is where Captain Webb, who tried to swim the rapids, lost his life. He was seen to enter the water, but before going far was lifted on the crest of a wave and the huge monster buried him from mortal sight forever. The banks of the river here are 200 feet high, perpendicular, and of solid rock. The river is constantly cutting its way deeper and deeper. Along the lower banks of the river, under the overhanging moss-covered cliffs, is the Gorge Railway. There are two carriage road suspension bridges besides the railroad bridge. Every time a carriage crosses a toll of 20 cents is charged.

We crossed to the Canadian side, up through Victoria Park, where a fine view of the Horse-shoe Falls is obtained. The falls are 169 feet high here, and the volume of water pouring over them is from 18 to 20 feet deep, which gives the water a decided green tint. It appears like an immense veil of water dashing over the ledges below. The mist and foam rising upon the water make a beautiful picture for the eye. Near this place is an immense rock, called from the old song "Rock of Ages." We then put on some rubber suits and went down about 200 feet in an elevator, walked through a tunnel in the solid rock about 200 feet long, and went under the falls, where we could look up and see the water pouring over the rocks in great sheets above us. The water power is utilized for various uses, i. e. waterworks for the city, the electric light plant, mills and manufactories. One of the nuisances in visiting Niagara Falls or any other place of interest, is that it is necessary to tip every person with whom you have any dealing, in order to receive civil attention. Near Niagara Falls are the famous battle fields of Lundy's Lane and Queenstown Heights, that will bring to our minds the war of 1812. Nothing remains to day to tell the tale but an old, old cemetery, where many of the brave men lie buried.

From Niagara Falls we went over the New York Central Railroad to Syracuse, the great salt city on Lake Onondaga. About the first thing that attracts the attention of the traveler on entering the city are the rows of numerous little sheds, used for preparing and purifying the salt for use.

"You will not die, I bore it, and still live; and it is so much harder for me, because I have to bear it all alone. You have your religion to help you, Margie. Surely that will bear you up! I have heard all you pious people prate enough of its service in time of trouble to remember that consolation."

"Don't, Alexandrine. It is sinful to scorn God's holy religion. Yes, you are right; it will help me. God himself will help me, if I ask him. He knows how much I stand in need of it."

"I am glad you are so likely to be supported," returned the girl, half earnestly, half-contemptuously. "Are you satisfied in regard to Mr. Archer Trevlyn?"

"I will not credit it!" cried Margie, passionately. "He did not do that deed! He could not! So good, and noble, and pitiful of all suffering humanity! And beside, what motive could he have?"

"The motive was all-powerful. Has not Mr. Trevlyn, by his own confession, loved you from his youth up?"

"Yes."

"And Paul Linmere was about to become your husband. Could there be a more potent reason for Archer Trevlyn to desire Mr. Linmere's death? He was an obstacle which could be removed in no other way than by death, because you had promised your father to marry him, and you could not falsify your word. All men are weak and liable to sin; is Trevlyn any exception? Margie, I have told you frankly what I know. You can credit it or not. I leave it with you; decide it as you think best. It is eight o'clock. I will go now, for it is time for your lover to come for you."

"O, I cannot meet him—not to-night! I must have time to think—time to collect my thoughts! My head whirls so, and everything is so dark! Stay, Alexandrine, and excuse me to him. Say I have a headache—anything to quiet him. I cannot see him now! I should go mad! Let me have a night to think of it!"

Alexandrine put her hand on the soft hair of the bowed head.

"My poor Margie! It is hard for you. Hark! there is the bell. He has come. Will you not go down?"

"No, no, no! Do what you judge best, and leave me to myself and my God."

Alexandrine went out, and Margie, locking the door after her, flung herself down on the carpet and buried her face in the pillows of the sofa.

Miss Lee swept down the staircase, her dark, bright face resplendent, her bearing haughty as that of an empress. Arch was in the parlor. He looked up eagerly as the door opened, but his countenance fell when he saw that it was only Miss Lee. She greeted him cordially.

"Good evening, Mr. Trevlyn. I am deputized to receive you, and my good intentions must be accepted in place of more fervent demonstrations."

"I am happy to see you, Miss Lee. Where is Margie?"

"She is in her room, somewhat indisposed. She begged me to ask you to excuse her, as she is unable to come down, and of course cannot have the pleasure of going with you to the opera."

"Sick? Margie sick!" he exclaimed, anxiously. "What can be the matter? She was well enough three hours ago."

"O, do not be uneasy. It is nothing serious. A headache, I think. She will be well after a night's rest. Cannot I prevail on you to sit down?"

"I think not, to-night, thank you. I will call to-morrow. Give Margie my best love, and tell her how sorry I am that she is ill."

Alexandrine promised, and Mr. Trevlyn bowed himself out. She put her hand to her forehead, which seemed almost bursting with the strange weight there.

"Guilty or not guilty," she muttered, "what does it matter to me? I love him, and that is enough!"

CHAPTER XV.

HE long night passed away, as all nights, however long and dark they may be, will pass away.

Margie had not slept. She had paced her chamber until long after midnight, utterly disregarding Alexandrine, who had knocked repeatedly at her door, and at last, overcome by weariness, she had sunk down in a chair by the open window, and sat there, gazing blankly out into the night, with its purple heavens, and its glory of sparkling stars.

Nothing could have tempted Margie to have credited such a story of her lover, had it not been for the overwhelming evidence of her own senses. Ever since the night of Paul Linmere's assassination, she had at times been tortured with agonizing doubts. From the first she had been morally sure whose lips had touched her hand that night in the graveyard; she knew that no other presence than that of Archer Trevlyn had the power to influence her as she had been influenced. She knew that he had been there, though she had not seen him; and for what purpose had he been there? It was a question she had asked herself a thousand times!

There could be no doubt any longer. She was forced to that conclusion at last; her heart sinking like lead in her bosom as she came to acknowledge it. In a moment of terrible temptation, Arch Trevlyn had stained his hand with blood! And for her sake!

There was a violent warfare in her heart. Her love for Archer Trevlyn had not sprung up in a day; its growth had been slow, and it had taken deep root. Oh, how hard it was to give up the blissful dream! She thought of his early life—how it had been full of temptation—how his noble nature had been warped and perverted by the evil influences that had surrounded him, and for a while the temptation was strong upon her soul to forgive him everything—to ignore all the past, and take him into her life as though the fearful story she had just listened to had been untold. Marry a murderer!

"Oh, God!" she cried in horror, as the whole extent of the truth burst upon her: "Oh, my God, pity and aid me!"

She sank down on her knees, and though her lips uttered no sound, her heart prayed as only hearts can pray when wrung with mortal suffering. Archer Trevlyn must be given up; from that there could be no appeal. Henceforth he must be to her as though he had never been. She must put him entirely out of her life—out of her thoughts—out of her sleeping and waking dreams.

But she could give him no explanation of her change of mind. She had passed her word—nay, she had sworn never to reveal aught that Miss Lee had told her, and a promise was binding. But he would not need any explanation. His own guilty conscience would tell him why he was renounced.

She took off the rose-colored dress in which she had arrayed herself to meet him, and folded it away in a drawer of her wardrobe, together with every other adornment that she had worn that night. They would always be her painful reminders of that terrible season of anguish and despair. When all were in, she shut them away from her sight, turned the key upon them, and flung it far out of the window.

Then she opened her writing desk, and took out all the little notes he had written to her, read them all over, and holding them one by one to the blaze of the lamp, watched them with a sort of stony calmness until they shriveled and fell in ashes, black as her hopes, to the floor. Then his gifts, a few simple things. Those she did not look at; she put them hastily in a box, sealed them up, and wrote his address on the cover.

The last task was the hardest. She must write him a note, telling him that all was over between them. The gray light of a clouded morning found her making the effort. But for a long time her pen refused to move; her hand seemed powerless. She felt weak and helpless as a very infant. But it was done at last, and she read it over, wondering that she was alive to read it:

"Mr. Archer Trevlyn, Sir: Yesterday afternoon, when I last saw you, I did not think that before twenty-four hours had elapsed I should be under the necessity of inditing to you this letter. Henceforth, you and I must be as strangers. Not all the wealth and influence of the universe could tempt me to become your wife, now that my eyes are opened. I renounce you utterly and entirely, and no word or argument of yours can change me. Therefore, do not attempt to see me, for with my own consent I will never look upon your face again. I deem no explanation necessary; your own conscience will tell you why I have been forced to make this decision. I return to you with this note everything that can serve to remind me of you, and ask you to do me the favor to burn all that you may have in your possession which once was mine. Farewell, now and forever. "MARGARET HARRISON."

There remained still something more to be done. Margie knew that Archer Trevlyn would seek her out, and demand an explanation from her own lips, and this must never be. She could not see him now; she was not certain that she could ever see him again. She dared not risk the influence his personal presence might have upon her. She must leave New York. But where should she go? She had scarcely asked the question before thought answered her.

Far away in the northern part of New Hampshire, resided old Nellie Day, the woman who had nursed her, and whom she had not seen for twelve years. Nellie was a very quiet, discreet person, and had been very warmly attached to the Harrison family. She had married late in life a worthy farmer, and giving up her situation in New York, had gone with him to the little out-of-the-way village of Lightfield. Margie had kept up a sort of desultory correspondence with her, and in every letter that the old lady wrote she had urged Margie to visit her in her country home. It had never been convenient to do so, but now this place was suggested to her at once, and to Lightfield she decided to go.

She consulted her watch. It was 5 o'clock; the train for the north, the first express, left at half past six. There would be time. She would leave all her business affairs in the hands of Mr. Farley, her legal adviser and general manager; and as to the house, the maiden aunt who resided with her could keep up the establishment until her return, if she ever did return.

She packed a few of her plainest dresses and some other indispensables, in a trunk, arrayed herself in a dark traveling suit, and rang for Florine. The girl looked at her in silent amazement. Margie steadied her voice, and spoke carelessly enough.

"Florine, I have been obliged to leave home very suddenly. My preparations are all complete. I thought I would not wake you as I had so little to do. Tell Peter to have the carriage at the door at six precisely, and bring up Leo's breakfast, and a cup of hot coffee for me."

At six o'clock—having written a note to Mr. Farley, and one to her aunt, giving no explanations, but merely saying she had been called away—she put on her bonnet, entered the carriage and was driven to the depot. And before nine-tenths of New York had thought of leaving their beds, she was being whirled rapidly northward, her only companion Leo, who, watchful and alert, lay curled up on the seat beside her.

CHAPTER XVI.

ARCHER TREVLYN had not slept that night. Some sense of impending evil, some demon of uneasiness oppressed him strangely. He tossed about until daybreak, then he rose, dressed himself, and went out.

Everything was still on the streets except the clatter of the milk carts, and the early drays and huckster wagons. The air was damp and dense, and struck a deadly chill to the very marrow of this unseasonable wanderer. He walked a few squares, and then returned to his hotel, more oppressed than when he went out.

Did ever time move so slowly before? Would the morning never pass? He wrote some urgent letters, read the damp morning paper, without the slightest notion of contents, and went down to his breakfast, to come away again leaving it untasted. Eight o'clock. The earliest possible hour at which it would be proper to call on Miss Harrison was eleven. Three mortal hours first! How could he ever endure it? She might be very ill. She might even be dying! Archer, with the foolish inconsistency of love, magnified every evil until he was nearly beside himself with dread, lest she might be worse than Miss Lee had represented.

Nine o'clock struck; he was walking the floor in a state of nervous excitement which would have forced him ere long to have broken all rules of etiquette and taken his way to Harrison House, had not fate saved him the necessity.

A waiter entered, and brought in a letter and a package. He snatched them both, and saw they were directed in Margie's handwriting. For a moment his heart stood still with a deadly fear. Great drops of perspiration covered his forehead, and he dropped letter and package to the floor. Why was she writing to him when she must expect to see him in a few hours? And that package! What did it contain?

He picked it up, and tore off the wrappings. The betrothal ring rolled out and fell with a hollow sound on the floor. The ring he had put upon her finger—the ring he had seen her kiss more than once! He looked over the contents of the box hurriedly; every little thing he had ever given her was there, even to a bunch of faded violets!

But the letter? He had almost forgotten it, in pondering over the dread significance of the return of his presents. He took it up and broke the seal with slow deliberation. It would not tell him any news, but it might contain an explanation. His face grew pale as ashes as he read, and he put his hand to his heart, as though he had received a blow there. Twice he read it through, and at the last reading he seemed to realize its dread portent.

Gladness Comes

With a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills, which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed. There is comfort in the knowledge, that so many forms of sickness are not due to any actual disease, but simply to a constipated condition of the system, which the pleasant family laxative, Syrup of Figs, promptly removes. That is why it is the only remedy with millions of families, and is everywhere esteemed so highly by all who value good health. Its beneficial effects are due to the fact, that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. It is therefore all important, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note when you purchase, that you have the genuine article, which is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only and sold by all reputable druggists.

If in the enjoyment of good health, and the system is regular, laxatives or other remedies are then not needed. If afflicted with any actual disease, one may be commended to the most skillful physicians, but if in need of a laxative, one should have the best, and with the well-informed everywhere, Syrup of Figs stands highest and is most largely used and gives most general satisfaction.

NEWS OF ILLINOIS.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

W. W. Green and Miss Jennie Tribly were married last week at Wing.

Ferdinand V. Elisman, aged 41, and Mrs. John H. Park, aged 42, died at Decatur Monday.

David De Coursey, Sr., died last week at his home in Reynolds. He was an old settler of Lee county.

Fred Evans and Miss Catharine Harwood, prominent young people of Bloomington, were married last week.

The death of John Elliott, aged 79 years, a pioneer of Clinton county, occurred Thursday. He was the oldest justice of the peace in this part of the state.

Grand Master Morrissey, of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has returned to Peoria after visiting Indianapolis, where he attended a meeting of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor, and points in Wisconsin and Chicago.

Louis J. Hanchett and Chauncey Foster, the youths who threw eggs at the carriage containing Mr. and Mrs. Bryan at Chicago, were expelled from the Metropolitan business college. Principal Powers notified the other students that the names of the young men had been stricken from the roll of the college.

All the schools of Elgin were closed last Thursday by order of the board of health on account of the prevalence of diphtheria. The malady broke out about two weeks ago and has spread with such rapidity that it was deemed advisable to close the schools. All efforts have been made to check its spread, but so far they have proved futile. At the present time there are over thirty cases in the city and several deaths have occurred.

The following managers were elected for the ensuing year at the meeting of the Home Missionary societies of the M. E. church of the United States: Mrs. W. Ampt, Mrs. J. B. Jones, Mrs. G. H. Thompson, Mrs. M. H. Hoodwin, Mrs. J. W. Goslin, Mrs. J. L. Whetstone, Mrs. James Dale, Mrs. Dr. Carr and Mrs. O. C. Curtis, all of Cincinnati; Mrs. Anna Kent, of East Orange, N. J.; Mrs. W. L. Boswell, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. E. C. Albright, of Bucyrus, Ohio.

Complaints are made that liquor is being sold openly in the Hyde Park prohibitory districts, but Chief Badoch has informed Thomas A. Hall of the Hyde Park Protective Association that he will make no further attempt to enforce the prohibitory law until instructions are received from the corporation counsel. The chief admits that the complaint is just, but shields himself by declaring that when arrests are made the police cannot get a conviction. "Time after time," said he, "we have procured evidence in these cases, and we have been thrown out of court and abused for it."

Civil Service Commissioner Harlow, who had been in Chicago for a week, left for St. Louis Thursday. As a result of his visit the local civil service boards will be consolidated. The Chicago office will put into practice a scheme of promotion and percentages outlined by the commissioner. "We want the very best service possible under civil service rules," said Mr. Harlow, before his departure. "Our system must be elastic and able to secure the greatest efficiency in promotions. Instead of giving a clerk credit for punctuality, attention, and industry, things that are required of all men, and which all can give, we place them at zero, and debit the man who fails to render such service."

Judge Freeman scored Alexander Schroeder of 76 Keenon street and sent him to jail for five months for contempt of court. Schroeder also may be indicted for alleged solicitation of a bribe. "You are unfit to serve in this or any other court," said Judge Freeman. "Your conduct today has been of a most reprehensible character." Schroeder had nothing to say in reply. The case on trial was the condemnation suit of the Chicago, Hamilton & Western railroad company against Leopold Meyer. Meyer owns a tract of land at Crawford avenue and 55th street, through which the railroad company wishes to pass. A jury was secured to assess Meyer's damages yesterday morning. When court was about to assemble in the afternoon Alexander Schroeder, one of the jurors in the case, is said to have approached James F. Meagher, counsel for the railroad company, and remarked familiarly as he seized the lapel of his coat, "Here's a Bryan button. You must wear it." Schroeder had no button. Instead, it is said, he forced a card into the attorney's hand and then turned and went to his seat in the jury box. The card read: "Mr. Meagher: Call at my house, 76 Keenon street, this evening. I want to know if we cannot fix the value of that land."

Mrs. Charlotte A. Garton of 4836 Wallace street, Chicago, drank carbolic acid Sunday night, from the effects of which she died Tuesday night. Her husband, Harry Garton, was a machinist, but had been of late unable to secure employment. About a year ago one of their children died, and, it is said, she attempted to commit suicide at that time. Since then she had made many threats to take her life. Four weeks ago their second child died, and since then she has been almost inconsolable.

George Jacob Schweinfurth with his bride, formerly Mrs. Tuttle, her two children and two other couples from "Heaven," who were married at the same time as the so-called "Messiah" at Minneapolis, returned to Rockford the other morning, after an absence of nearly five months. The chariot, from the Weldon farm, was at the station to meet the party, and Schweinfurth smiled as he referred to his wife. Asked as to whether he intended to remove from his location south of Rockford he simply replied that "time alone would tell." Both Schweinfurth and his wife carried guitars, giving an additional motley touch to the appearance of the party.

The Chicago sub-treasury officials do not anticipate a repetition of the San Francisco run for gold. The gold of the Chicago sub-treasury is better protected than that of the others. Only coin certificates can draw it out. The law paying out gold on legal tenders was passed before the establishment of the Chicago office. About $1,000,000 has been withdrawn during the last three months. "We pay out about $15,000 a day on coin certificates," said Cashier Pratt to a reporter. "There has been a quiet demand for gold for the last three months, but all in a small way. The demand is made entirely by individuals."

Daniel Cameron, an engineer for the Lipton packing company, Chicago, was struck on the head with a coupling pin the other morning as he stood in the doorway of the engine room leading into the packing house at Forty-fifth street and Packers avenue. It was thrown by a man who ran down Packers avenue and disappeared among a string of cars. Cameron was standing in the doorway when four men passed by. They made some remark to Cameron, who replied. What was said is not known, but as the remark was passed one of the men was seen to lean forward and strike Cameron on the head and then run. Several men ran to the assistance of the engineer and carried him into the engine house, after which a doctor was sent for and he was then removed to the county hospital. At the hospital it was said that Cameron's skull was fractured, but that his injuries would not result fatally.

Following upon the meeting of the Grand commandary, Knights Templar of Illinois, the Illinois Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, met for its yearly session at the Masonic Temple, Chicago. About 500 were in attendance, many of whom had been in the city to attend the meeting of the Grand Commandary. After the work necessary for the following year had been finished the election of the officers for next year was held. Dr. F. C. Winslow of Jacksonville had been mentioned as the probable successor of Mr. Moulton as grand high priest, and he was almost unanimously elected. The other officers selected for next year are: Deputy grand commander, E. S. Stoker, Evanston; grand king, William Grimes, Pittsfield; grand scribe, Nathaniel Bowditch, Aurora; grand treasurer, Wiley M. Egan, Chicago; grand secretary, G. W. Barnard, Chicago; grand captain of the host, George W. Warville, Chicago; grand principal squire, Charles Patton, Mount Vernon.

The Annette Jans estate matter is once more being agitated throughout the country. Peoria has several people who claim to have a claim to a portion of that immense property, one of them being W. A. Berry, of the Toledo, Peoria & Western. But the movement now has started at the Pacific coast, with Gen. W. H. Hart, of San Francisco. The general has recently been in New York, and he bases his ideas that there is something to be gained on account of some old court records he has succeeded in digging out. As a first step he proposes a reorganization of the heirs in a compact body. When this reorganization act is complete the body is to petition the court to levy a 1 per cent assessment upon the property to settle up the indebtedness and other expenses which have accumulated during the years of contest. As soon as the debt is cleared Gen. Hart says the heirs will step into their property. In addition to the Trinity church property in New York, there is said to be $30,000,000 of Annette Jans' money in Holland banks.

Surprised His Physician.

From the Courier-Journal, Louisville, Ky.

"Yes, my name is A. J. Nicholson, and my address is the Bull Block, Louisville, Ky., and I am the man you have heard of as so persistently and so enthusiastically proclaiming the merits of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

"Up to the first of last March I can truthfully say that for twenty years I had suffered all the agonies of an inferno, and death would have at times been a welcome visitor. I had muscular rheumatism in its most vicious form, supplemented by what the doctors called tuberculosis of the bones. I was almost constantly under the treatment of a physician and spent a considerable portion of my time in the hospital. In 1893 I spent three months in that institution where I underwent severe surgical operations for relief. Almost all the money I could raise from whatever source went for medicines in one way or another. I would try any and every remedy that was suggested, but I finally concluded that the doctors were right in saying there was no cure for such a case as mine. My right leg became rigid and stiff, the joints refusing to perform their functions in any degree. At length the pains attacked my left leg also, and it was fast becoming as bad as the other. I also suffered in the shoulders and arms, though not so badly as in the lower limbs."

"About the first of March last, I read an article on Pink Pills, and while very dubious as to the result, I concluded to give them a trial. I used one box without deriving any benefits as I could see, and was about to abandon them when, at the urgent solicitation of my wife, I concluded to try one more box anyhow. Before the second box was used up, I thought I could experience some slight improvement in my condition. Like a drowning man I speedily grasped at that one straw of hope. I ordered other boxes and continued the systematic use of the pills as directed, my improvement, from the beginning of the third box, being most marked and rapid. The rigidity and stiffness soon began to disappear from my leg, the excruciating pains became gradually less, my drooping spirits revived under the exhilarating prospect of getting well, and before a great while I was able to go to work. I have not yet discontinued the pills. I have just ordered the sixth box, which I think will be the last. I feel that I owe my life to this extraordinary preparation, for I don't see how I could have lived under the almost incessant torture I was enduring. It is not strange, under the circumstances, that I should lose no opportunity to tell my friends about this remedy and to urge upon all afflicted as I was, to give it a trial."

(Signed) "A. J. NICHOLSON." Subscribed and sworn to before me this 28th of May, 1896.

J. PETTUS, Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are sold in boxes (never in loose form, by the dozen or hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

HESITATE NO LONGER.

Modesty in women is natural. It is one of women's chief charms.

No one cares for one who really lacks this essential to womanliness.

Women have suffered fearfully because of over-sensitiveness in this direction. They couldn't say to the physician what they ought to say to someone. Mrs. Pinkham has received the confidence of thousands. Women open their hearts to her. She understands their suffering, and has the power to relieve and cure. In nearly all cases the source of women's suffering is in the womb. In many cases the male physician does not understand the case and treats the patient for consumption—indigestion—anything but the right thing. It is under such circumstances that thousands of women have turned to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., and opened their heart and lives—woman to woman—and received her help.

You ask how she can tell if the doctor cannot? Because no man living ever treated so many cases and possesses such vast experience.

Displacement, inflammation, torpid action, stagnation, sends to all parts of the body the pains that crush you. Lydia E. Pinkham's "Vegetable Compound" is the sure cure for this trouble. For twenty years it has done its grand work and cured thousands.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured. by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

Holland's Little Queen.

At the close of her sixteenth year, he says, Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is a robust, broad-chested girl, of medium stature, symmetrical figure and fair complexion, with the ruddy hue of perfect health glowing in her smooth, plump cheeks. The "dear little lady," as she is affectionately described by her subjects of the middle and lower classes, is passionately fond of horses and dogs; an excellent whip, she drives a pony four-in-hand with unerring judgment and in capital style. Moreover, she is an expert and fearless horsewoman, riding with a light hand, and what is called an "English seat."

Rev. P. J. Berg, pastor of the Swedish M. E. Church, Des Moines, Iowa, on March 4th, 1896, writes: "Last year I was troubled with a bad cough for about five months. I got medicine from my family physician and I tried other remedies without relief. When I first saw Dr. Kay's Lung Balm advertised I thought I would try it and I am glad I did. I bought a box and took a tablet now and then without any regularity, and after a few days to my great surprise the cough was gone. Ten days ago I had sore throat. I was out of the tablets and could not get them in Des Moines, and I sent to the Western Office of Dr. B. J. Kay Medical Co., Omaha, Neb., for six boxes, and as soon as I took it a few times that soreness and hoarseness all passed away in one night. I believe it is also good for sore throat." Dr. Kay's Lung Balm does not cause sickness at the stomach like many remedies, and is more effective than any other we know of. Sold by druggists at 25 cts. or sent by mail.

Barrington Review.
ESTABLISHED IN 1885.
Published Every Saturday at BARRINGTON, ILLINOIS
—BY—
M. T. LAMEY, Editor and Pub.

SATURDAY, NOV. 7, 1896.

ANOTHER good thing accomplished by the Village Board at Wednesday's meeting were the instructions given Marshal Sandman to arrest any one who throws ashes, slops, etc., in the public streets. It is a move that will cause our citizens to look up to the members of the Board with respect.

THE season of snow and slush having arrived it is well to remind our readers that it is the duty of every patriotic citizen to see that their sidewalks are kept clean from snow and ice. They did very well last winter, and they certainly ought to improve with time.

OUR Village Board did the proper thing when they decided at their meeting Wednesday evening to act on the suggestions in last week's issue of THE REVIEW and enforce the sidewalk ordinance. Any property owner who is notified to repair his sidewalk and fails to comply within the specified time will have the pleasure (?) of seeing the repairing done by the village and the cost therefor will be assessed against the property. This is business. Every loyal citizen of the village will back up the Board in this move.

THE election has come and gone. A majority of the voters of this glorious country of ours have decided for an honest dollar and sound government, and this decision will be backed up most heartily by both victors and vanquished. The past campaign was one of the most exciting in the history of our country, and considerable personal feeling was aroused. Now that the result is known let the Republicans extend the hand of friendship and good will to his neighbor of opposite political faith and say "Let bygones be bygones." Remember that if we all had the same political opinions we would soon be deprived of the pleasure of living in the grandest and most liberal country on the face of the globe. Let every true American citizen put his shoulder to the wheel of prosperity and sing "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

It is natural that along with new devices for killing men on the battlefield a thousand at a time there should come inventions for disposing of them after they are dead. Of this kind is the traveling crematory, which has been proposed first in Germany and then elsewhere. The design is to construct a furnace on wheels with the conveniences for reducing dead bodies to ashes quickly. A sufficient number of such crematories is to be attached to every army. As regularly as the hospital corps the crematory corps will march with the soldiers in time of war and probably be stationed with them in time of peace. The sanitary and other advantages of such an arrangement are apparent. Secretary Lamont is investigating the practicability of the crematory attachment for the United States army. It is to be hoped that many a year will elapse before the United States is involved in another war. At least it is to be hoped one will not come till we pay the debt incurred by the last one. But in case one should occur, the crematory will be convenient.

Between rinderpest and the Matabele rebellion the South African British province named for Cecil Rhodes is having a bad time. It is a country of deep, soft soil, and only oxen have been available heretofore to transport freight to Bulawayo and other points. But nine-tenths of the cattle in Rhodesia are dead. Horses and mules die of horse disease, and transportation is paralyzed. Nobody is discouraged, however. Nobody is giving up. The building of the railroad from the Cape of Good Hope to Bulawayo is hurried forward with all speed, and another railway is under construction from Beira to Fort Salisbury in Mashonaland. Railroads do not have rinderpest, and the cattle plague will be the means of securing transportation in Rhodesia sooner than it would have otherwise been obtained. The people of the colony declare their goldfields are as rich as those of Johannesburg.

President McKinley and His Opportunities.
Few men who have been elevated to the presidency have enjoyed greater opportunities or undertaken heavier responsibilities than will confront William McKinley on his induction into office next March. The public has just passed through a period of storm and stress which must be considered one of the most critical in the nation's history. At no previous time has an economic question of such vital importance been decided in the heat and partisan vehemence of an American popular election. The result Tuesday was decisive and must be taken to mean that a large majority of the voters of this country have decided that the free silver coinage experiment would be unsafe under existing conditions.
It is the avowed purpose of many free silver leaders to keep to the silver agitation, however, and it is now a question of moment whether four years hence the same issue will be brought up again and the country be made to suffer a second time from uncertainty and lack of confidence beginning as early as two years hence and continuing until 1900. The question whether or not there is to be another era of distressing agitation rests largely with the new president-elect. Here is his opportunity; here is his responsibility. Mr. McKinley's reputation as a leader in public affairs rested until recently almost entirely upon his advocacy of a tariff policy which has identified him in the minds of many Americans with the protection and support of powerful manufacturing and trade combinations as against the man who labors. The number of persons who still believe that the famous McKinley bill was the protector of trusts and combinations without compensatory advantages to labor is still very large. What is of greater moment at the present juncture is that this view of Mr. McKinley's theories may put upon him in the minds of the people the taint of bias for trusts, emphasized by the idea that both as an advocate of protective tariffs and as an opponent of free silver Mr. McKinley happens to stand on the side of some of the heavy business interests of the country—a fact which for some persons implies—very unjustly, perhaps—a lack of consideration for labor.
What will Mr. McKinley do toward making the nation so prosperous that an era of agitation in 1900 similar to that of this year can be avoided? He will have congress at his back, and republicans in congress are notable for sticking together and pushing things. If the president-elect refuses to undertake sweeping or radical changes in the tariff policy—for he was not elected on the tariff issue; if he resolutely cuts away all ties that may seem to connect him with oppressive combinations of capital; above all, if he works for an economic policy which will restore confidence and prosperity, there need be no recurrence of disturbing agitations in 1898 or in 1900. Recent history has shown how quickly the people may change their minds when under unfavorable conditions they hope to better themselves. If Mr. McKinley will avail himself of this remarkable opportunity he must demonstrate his friendliness to all sections and all classes. He must take pains that his cabinet is drawn from among men wholly free from affiliation with interests which may seem to conflict with labor. His attorney-general, in particular, should be a man of the highest purpose and of utmost impartiality. By means of such a policy there is scarcely a limit to the credit and popularity which may be won by the next administration. The public will wait in the hope and trust that the president-elect will see his extraordinary opportunity and make it available in destroying all sectionalism, all bitter agitations and all influences tending to incite the public to repeated demands for dangerously radical changes in the national policy.
It was a sight worth traveling miles to see that football contest between Yale and the team of Indian students from the school at Carlisle, Pa. The Indian boys played royally. It is little satisfaction to honest white people to consider, however, that they were cheated out of victory by the unjust ruling of the umpire. Only for this ruling, said by experts to be plainly wrong, the red boys would have succeeded in tying the game even with the Yale football players, the strongest white team in the Union.

The Electoral Vote.
The great change that has been wrought in the original scheme of choosing an American president is clearly set forth in volume 2 of George Ticknor Jurtis' "Constitutional History of the United States," published since his death.
Mr. Curtis shows how it was not meant at all by the founders of our government that the people themselves should vote for president. The founders of this government did not believe the people had sense enough to choose a president. The fathers thought the people were ignorant and would be at the mercy of any fascinating demagogue that could win their admiration. So it was provided, with much ceremonious machinery, that the people might choose electors, and the electors should choose the president. It was the intention to leave the electors perfectly free as individuals, each to vote for whom he chose. If he did not admire the man the people wanted him to vote for, then he had a perfect right to vote for some other man. To this day the elector has that right, though he would be a bold man indeed who would dare to exercise it. It would be the end of him politically.
The change came about through the hard and fast organization of the political party. On this point Mr. Curtis says:
A practice which has grown up within the past 60 years has entirely frustrated the original design of the electoral system of choosing the president. This has been the consequence of the activity, the powerful organization and discipline of the political parties, whose nominating conventions have imposed on the electoral college an obligation that has come to have the force of law without its sanctions or safeguards. All the political parties that have existed in this country for more than half a century are alike responsible for this departure from the constitution, for they have all used the same methods.
England has made billions of dollars out of India. The reason the British government took possession of that country was on account of the money to be made there. It was the source of much of the vast amount of capital which makes England and London the commercial center of the world. Let British capitalists not forget this now when the Hindoos are dying of starvation because of the failure of the wheat crop. Let Mr. Gladstone and his friends who are burning with indignation for the wrongs of the Armenians put their hands in their pockets and save the lives of Britain's own subjects in India. There is plenty of wheat in the world, particularly in America, to feed England's millions of hungry Hindoos.
If it became the common thing to place broad, flat steel tracks or strips along the streets where heavy hauling is done, and then likewise to put upon the horses' feet the new rubber shoes which some genius has invented, we should be able to have perfect pavements and almost noiseless streets.
Steel and iron have superseded wood in many building operations. They are now superseding stone and plaster. It is not uncommon to finish the rooms of new buildings with sheet metal ceilings. These can be decorated in any manner and are free from the drawbacks attaching to plaster ceilings.

"Jud" is a good shot with the rifle, and when he goes after game he generally gets it.
 Saturday evening a number of tricks were played in our village and for the most part were confined to something harmless, such as moving wagons and barrels, etc., although there was one unthoughtful crowd who did not stop with this, but went as far as to tear down the flag which was suspended on a wire between Golding Bros. and Price Bro.'s stores, with the white strip attached displaying McKinley and Hobart and Tanner's names. The next morning part of the flag was lying on the ground and part was still hanging on the wire, where it still remains. Boys, we enjoy fun as well as you, but we do not enjoy it when it must be had by the destruction of property, especially the "Stars and Stripes."
 The excitement raged high in our village Tuesday evening, everybody waiting to hear the election returns as they came over the 'phone. First came the report of Cuba, then Barrington, and then reports began to come from a greater distance, but not reliable. Distant reports came until 10 o'clock, when we began to hear from the eastern states. Maine and New York reports were first received, and then other eastern states, which all gave a majority for McKinley, and now all were waiting to hear from Chicago and Illinois. The reports came in rather slow, and a good report was not received until a late hour, when McKinley and Tanner were found to have won their office by a big majority. Reports were also received from the western states, but

OTTO WAELTI JEWELER
 WAUCONDA, ILLINOIS.
 All work guaranteed for one year, and executed as cheap as can be done by any first-class jeweler anywhere. A trial order solicited. Orders for Watches, Clocks and Jewelry promptly attended to, at the lowest prices.

There Are Many Things
 That should be painted this fall. There are houses, barns, vehicles, farm implements, furniture, and a lot of things about the house that didn't have paint applied last spring that needed it very badly. We have special paints prepared for each of the above named classes of work. They are paints that are ready for use and always give the best of satisfaction wherever used.

To Take in Consideration
 The low prices at which we are selling strictly pure white lead and linseed oil, it looks reasonable that the present low prices cannot prevail but for a short time. Grains of all kinds have already taken a large advance in price, which fact alone certainly means an advance in the price of linseed oil.
 First-class weather and low prices of materials are two big points to be considered, and which you will admit are more favorable for painting now than may be expected next spring.

Cold Weather is Coming!
 The present spell of chilling weather points out the fact of the fast approaching winter. It also points out to you in a rather chilling manner the broken window glass, if there is any in your residence.
 Our stock of window glass is large and we can furnish you anything you might wish in this line.

Drain Tile
 We also carry a large stock of the celebrated Gilberts' tile. They have been used in this community to such a large extent and have given such good satisfaction that they need no introduction. If you want tile, just let us know. We want to give you our figures.

TO BESIEGE HAVANA.

REBELS THREATEN THE CAPITAL OF CUBA.

Important Developments in the Struggle
May Be Looked for in a Short Time
—Consul-General Lee's Visit to the United States.

According to statements of leading Cuban insurgents the frequency of engagements recently fought in the province of Havana are evidence of the truth of the report that Antonio Maceo and Maximo Gomez are directing the forces under their command upon the city of Havana itself, with the intention of laying siege to it. They still continue to insist that Maceo passed the military line after having bombarded Artimesa as a feint, and that important events are likely to happen shortly. As a matter of fact, the Spanish commanders admit that they are not aware of the whereabouts of Maceo.

Another feature of the situation which is causing the insurgents considerable satisfaction is the visit of the United States consul general, Fitzhugh Lee, to the United States. They insist, in spite of all official denials, that the relations between the government at Washington and the Cuban authorities are of a decidedly strained nature, and they further claim that the interviews which are expected to take place shortly between Consul General Fitzhugh Lee, President Cleveland and Secretary Olney will lead to important new departures in policy upon the part of the United States government. The more hot-headed of the insurgents maintain that the intervention of the United States in Cuba is certain before long.

Little accurate news can be cabled from here unless by using a secret code which baffles the Spanish officials, or by transmitting the messages by way of Key West.

Bridget Burke, whose husband was killed by the collapse of the Ireland building in New York, has secured a verdict of $10,000 against the owner.

GREAT WASHINGTON MONUMENT—NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION IN FAIRMOUNT PARK.

Philadelphia's monument to George Washington in Fairmount park will be one of the most beautiful public works in America. It is now rapidly nearing completion under the direction of Allen B. Rorke, the noted contractor and builder, who has erected many of the finest buildings in the city of the quakers. The monument will be nearly fifty feet high. The equestrian group itself is twenty feet high. The ground plan is ninety-one feet three inches by seventy-seven feet nine inches, and the pedestal is seventeen by thirty feet. The entire cost of the work will be about $250,000. The bronze figure of Washington and his war horse rise from an oblong platform six feet six inches high, built of Swedish red granite. The platform is reached by four sides by thirteen steps, which are symbolic of the original thirteen states. The general is represented in the colonial uniform of the American army. A large military cloak is thrown around his commanding figure. In his left hand he holds the reins of his horse. One of the animal's fore feet is raised. The only fault to be found with the sculptor's work is the disproportion in the figure of the horse. At the four corners of the platform are fountains served by allegorical figures of American Indians representing the four rivers—Delaware, Hudson, Potomac, and Mississippi. On each side these fountains are guarded by typical American animals, eight in all. On the front of the pedestal is an allegorical group representing America seated and holding in one hand a cornucopia, and in the other a trident. She is in the act of receiving from her victorious sons the trophies of conquest. Below this group is an eagle supporting the arms of America. The group on the back of the pedestal represents America rousing her sons to a sense of their slavery. On the sides of the pedestal are two bas-reliefs, one representing the march of the American army and the other a western bound emigrant train. On one side the pedestal bears the inscription "Sic Semper Tyrannis" and "Per Aspera ad Astra," and on the other, "Westward the Star of Empire Takes Its Way." Surrounding the upper portion of the pedestal is the inscription, "Erected by the State Society of the Cincinnati of Pennsylvania."

Latest Reports from Tuesday's Election — Many Surprises in the Voting Strength.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY,
President Elect.

GARRETT A. HOBART,
Vice-President Elect.

Later indications received as this side of the paper goes to press show that the republican landslide was not as pronounced as at first reported. It is believed that the states of Kentucky and North and South Dakota have gone for Bryan. At any rate the farming districts in those states are sending in big Bryan majorities which, when tabulated, may overcome the big McKinley majorities.

Illinois in Congress.

While the returns from the congressional districts in Illinois outside of Cook county are not all complete, the results thus far received are sufficient to indicate that the republicans have elected seventeen of the twenty-two representatives in congress from Illinois. The defections seem to have occurred in districts in the southern part of the state, where the populist vote is strong, and where fusion with the democrats was effected. The seven representatives from Cook county are all republicans. In the fifteenth district the chances are that Marsh, the republican candidate, has defeated Bill Neece, although the vote is close. Rinaker was defeated by Hinrichsen in the sixteenth district. James A. Connolly, the republican nominee in the seventeenth district, which includes Springfield and Sangamon county, is elected by a comfortable majority, defeating Ben F. Caldwell, the fusion candidate. The republicans appear to have been defeated in the eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth and twenty-first districts, although the final count of the vote may change this result in one of the districts.

The result in the districts which went against the republicans was not very much of a surprise, because it has been known that the combination of swell the figure. The republicans have elected the entire delegation of ten congressmen by the largest pluralities ever given in the state, some of them going as high as 12,000. The lowest congressional plurality is that of Theobald Otjen, in the fourth district, who wins by 4,338.

The democrats carried only three counties in the state, Ozaukee, Lincoln and Calumet, and those by very small majorities. The republicans get about 85 of the 100 assemblymen, and elect all the sixteen state senators who were elected this year. Of the holdover senators four are democratic, leaving a republican majority in the senate of twenty-nine.

Michigan's Big Vote.

The complete returns from the interior of Michigan continue to make the republican victory in Michigan more pronounced. With practically official returns from sixty-seven of the eighty-four counties in the state, and the remaining seventeen carefully estimated, the McKinley electors appear to have carried the state by 52,060, while Pingree, for governor, has run away ahead of his ticket, and has in the neighborhood of 65,939 plurality. The Palmer vote was very insignificant, and probably does not number more than 10,000 in the entire state. A feature of the returns is the immense gains which the republicans made in the copper and iron mining regions in the upper peninsula. In that section there is scarcely a county that did not fall to more than double the republican plurality which it cast for Harrison four years ago. Bryan made a few gains in the farming counties in the southern section of the state, but these were more than offset by the heavy gains which the McKinley ticket made in the cities.

The next congressional delegation from the state will consist of ten republicans and two silver democrats, against a solid republican delegation in the present house. The silver men were successful in the third district by about 400 plurality, and in the eighth by about 1,200. In the latter district the defeated republican was W. S. Linton, who attracted attention in the last and present houses as an A. P. A. leader.

The next state legislature will be heavily republican, though it chooses no United States senator. The republicans will have 27 out of the 32 members of the senate, and a majority of about 85 in the lower house.

The Big Cities.

New York city, which has not been carried by the republicans in a presidential election since the war, gives McKinley 16,500. Louisville, the metropolis of Kentucky, comes up with 12,000. Indianapolis, which was carried for Cleveland by 1,000 in 1892, now gives McKinley 12,000. Lincoln, Neb., Mr. Bryan's home, is 2,000 for McKinley. The democratic cities of Rochester and Albany, N. Y., are now republican. Detroit (Wayne county) is reported at 18,000. St. Louis and Kansas City have given heavy republican majorities.

The Palmer and Buckner ticket is everywhere returned at small figures, indicating that four-fifths of the gold democratic vote has been given to McKinley.

McKinley's plurality of the popular vote appears to be over 1,000,000. The greatest popular plurality ever given a presidential candidate in the past was 763,000 for General Grant in 1872.

Minnesota a Surprise.

Minnesota, the last of the western and northwestern states upon which the Democrats based hopes, fell into line with Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois and returned a plurality for McKinley. The Scandinavian element of the population was practically unanimous against silver, and defeated the Bryan state ticket as well as the populist electors. The congressional delegation will probably stand five republicans and two populists. Towne, the free silver republican who bolted the St. Louis convention with Teller, is beaten. McKinley's plurality in the state is 35,000. Turning to the other states which were not admitted to be doubtful, the results are even more surprising and decisive.

Kentucky, the home of the gold democratic candidate for vice-president, General Buckner, returned a plurality of 10,000 to 15,000 for the McKinley electors. This is an increase of 3,000 to 8,000 over Governor Bradley's vote in 1895. The congressional delegation will stand seven republicans, three democrats and one anti-silver democrat—the latter being W. C. P. Breckinridge of the Ashland district.

The Fifty-Fifth Congress.

According to the returns received the republicans will control both branches of the next congress. Their majority in the senate will be small, while in olina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

Senators' Financial Views.

The political complexion of the senate must not be accepted, however, as indicating how the members of that body are divided on the money question. Five democratic senators are for gold, but the following republican senators—eight in number—are supporters of free silver at 16 to 1; Wolcott of Colorado, Shoup of Idaho, Mantle and Carter of Montana, Pettigrew of South Dakota, Cannon of Utah and Clark and Warren of Wyoming. Counting the democrats with the gold republicans and the free silver republicans with the free silver democrats, the senate will stand forty-four for gold against forty-six for free silver. But it is thought probable that three senators—namely, Murphy of New York, Mills of Texas and Mitchell of Wisconsin—may decline to vote with the majority of their party on the money question. Previous to the adoption of the Chicago platform they were opposed to free silver at 16 to 1, but as they supported that platform the candidates nominated at the Coliseum convention, they must be classed, for the present, at least, with the free silverites.

At Bryan's Home.

Lincoln, Neb., Special: Mr. Bryan received the election returns at his home over a special wire. He remained during the evening in his private room in the second story of his home, leaving the first floor to the newspaper correspondents. He told them if he had any communications to make to them he would notify them. He spent the afternoon sleeping and was very little disturbed by callers.

As late as 1:30 Mr. Bryan had received but few telegrams indicative of the voting throughout the country. There were wires from Chicago that voting in that city began early and giving some reports from Ohio and other central states. He was informed that in his opponent's states his followers among the farmers had formed in companies and were marching to the polling places. Mr. Bryan spent the day after arriving home in opening packages containing presents from admiring friends. Apparently he was the least concerned of anybody over the results of the election. He joked with the correspondents, and when asked if he fully realized the importance of the campaign said that he hardly thought present delegation stands nineteen republicans and two democrats. It will require an official count to determine who is elected in the twelfth, or capital city district, which comprises the counties of Franklin and Fairfield. Lentz (Dem.) claimed his election by 110, but late figures give Watson a plurality of 47. Fraud is charged by the republicans, as democratic figures show that Fairfield county has given a democratic plurality 700 greater than any given before in fifteen years. Errors have already been discovered, and there is little doubt that the election will be contested by the candidate showing lowest on the face of the returns.

Wisconsin's Heavy Majority.

It is safe to say that the republican plurality in Wisconsin will be an even 100,000. Complete returns from fifty-eight out of seventy counties in the state show the plurality to be 95,935, and later returns will undoubtedly break in the solid south.

Even the solid south has been invaded, and it is solid no longer. Kentucky has been carried for McKinley by the aid of the gold money democrats, who voted almost solidly for the republican national ticket. The chairman of the Bryan committee in Kentucky has not given up the state, but the dispatches support the republican claim that McKinley's majority in the Blue Grass state will be about 10,000. Nor is there any doubt about West Virginia. The McKinley majority in that state is from 13,000 to 15,000. Maryland gives 30,000 majority for McKinley, and that the state of Gorman has joined the republicans is conceded by the Bryan supporters. At one time North Carolina and Tennessee were claimed by the republicans, but later the house it will not be less than seventy-five. The senate, probably, will be divided politically as follows: Republicans, 47; democrats, 38; anti-silver democrats, 5. In the house there will be 220 republicans, 129 democrats and 8 populists.

Legislatures were chosen in a number of states which will elect United States senators for the term beginning March 4, 1897. The terms of thirty senators will expire with the dissolution of the present congress and there is one vacancy in Delaware which it is expected, however, will be filled before the new congress convenes. The states represented by the outgoing senators are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Car-

so. Mrs. Bryan was also not at all nervous, and said she had tried to prepare herself for anything. At 1:45 Mr. Bryan retired to his room, and in a few moments was asleep.

After 8 o'clock the wire connecting him with Chairman Jones was silent, and this was taken as a bad omen, though Mr. Bryan did not say so. He declined to express himself on the outlook further than to say that returns were not yet sufficient to warrant an estimate on the outcome.

Alcoholic Stimulants in India.

The authorities at one time were so convinced that Europeans could not live in India without alcoholic stimulants that they actually prohibited the formation of temperance societies among the soldiers. The theory is now altogether changed, and the English soldiers in India include no fewer than 20,000 total abstainers.

Two light-fingered men struck our town Tuesday and proceeded to fleece our merchants right and left. They did not fare very well though, the most of our business men being onto the "ropes." Their plan was to buy some trivial article and throw down a $5 bill. As the clerk takes the money one of them remembers having some change and the bill is handed back to them. The change turns out to be short and they again throw down the bill, but instead of it being the $5 bill it is a $1 bill. The merchant, unless he is very careful, never suspects that a change has been made and hands them out change for the $5 bill. The scoundrels are making a tour of the country towns.

JOHN C. PLAGGE, BARRINGTON, ILL.

You may talk of spring chicken and quail upon toast
And of everything else an epicure can boast,
But when you are hungry, there's nothing can take
The place of a juicy and savory steak.

Such can be purchased of.....

GEO. M. WAGNER,

OYSTERS and VEGETABLES in Season.
