CARPETS.

We have given especial attention to selecting the prettiest assortment of carpets to be found, and we have been especially fortunate in buying them at the right prices. The figure that we bought them at allows us to sell them to our patrons at prices that are astonishingly low, and still we make a margin. We believe in quick returns. We would rather make a small profit and turn the goods into money than to hold them for some length of time. You can't find better values in carpets anywhere than right here at our store, nor a larger assortment to select from.

WALL PAPER.

At no time has there been so much competition among our merchants in wall paper, than this season. Every merchant has tried his utmost to buy the prettiest patterns and buy them at the lowest prices. We have been so fortunate as to run on to the biggest snap of a bargain in wall paper that we have ever had the privilege to take advantage of, and we grasped the opportunity. Our stock is complete, and it consists of some of the prettiest patterns that have ever been exhibited at Barrington. The prices are as low as the lowest figures of our competitors.

SPECIAL OFFER: We have on hand a few "odds and ends" in wall paper—very pretty patterns—that we will dispose of regardless of cost. We have also some short lengths in the carpet department—suitable for small rooms—which we will give you a bargain in. Call early, as this stock of "odds and ends" is limited.

REPORT OF DAILY CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

Committee Appointed by the Senate to Investigate Into the Causes of the Recent Floods—Plan to Take the Tariff Question Out of Politics.

The senate Monday agreed to the resolution directing the commerce committee to inquire into the causes of the recent Mississippi floods and to report next December.

Senator Hale opposed the Morgan Cuban resolution, and closed by saying that 600 men had gone to aid Cuba.

Senator Turpie made a vigorous speech in favor of the resolution. "It is the age of revolutions," he said, "and I hope it may last long enough to drive the last remnant of monarchy from the American continent."

To Settle Tariff Question.

Congressman Fowler of New Jersey introduced in the house Monday a bill to establish a tariff commission to "investigate federal taxation, recommend changes therein and adjust any inequalities in existing laws." SCHOOL-TEACHERS IN COUNCIL.

The Great Educational Gathering to Be Held in Milwaukee in July.

It is the expectation of those who have charge of the preparations for the convention of the National Educational Association, which will be held at Milwaukee next July, that the gathering will be the largest meeting of teachers ever assembled on this continent. The session will begin July 6 and close July 9. Eleven thousand people attended the meeting of the association which was held at Denver two years ago, and last year, at Buffalo, the attendance was upward of 9,000. Milwaukee, being more convenient to the teachers of the great states of Illinois and Iowa, will get a vastly larger attendance from those states than Buffalo secured. In fact, all the western and southern states are expected to send more delegates than they sent to Buffalo. Some of the most gifted writers and speakers in the United States will contribute to the discussions, and there is a possibility that President McKinley will lend his presence to the occasion.

The railroads have agreed to make a half-fare excursion rate for the round trip to all who purchase tickets with the associate membership coupon attached. This costs only $2.50, and admits the holder to all meetings of the association. A great many people who are not teachers may be expected to take advantage of the opportunity which this rate will afford for securing a cheap summer excursion.

There is no pleasanter summer outing country in the world than in the state of Wisconsin. Milwaukee alone presents a long list of summer attractions to strangers, commencing with her invigorating, delightful climate, and ending with her parks, her first-class amusement enterprises, and her

HORROR OF THE SEA.

SIXTEEN PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH.

Passengers and Sailors of the Steamship Leona Die in the Steerage—Cargo of Cotton Bursts Out Into Flames—All Escape Is Cut Off.

The Mallory line steamer Leona, which left her pier on Saturday, bound for Galveston, took fire at sea, put back and arrived at New York Sunday night with sixteen corpses on board.

The dead were thirteen steerage passengers and three members of the crew, who succumbed to a terrible fire which occurred off the Delaware capes at an early hour Sunday morning.

The horror of the story can hardly be told. Those who are dead were penned up below decks, and although frantic efforts were made by the officers of the vessel to save them, the fire had gained such terrible headway before the danger was discovered that all escape was cut off.

The steamer carried in her cargo many bales of cotton. It is not certain how the fire originated, but when it was discovered it burst forth with such fury that it was impossible to reach the steerage. Even then the steerage passengers apparently were unmindful of the danger, else the smoke and flames would not have reached them.

The saloon passengers were all saved.

The house passed Mahoney's senate bill concerning aliens, the object of which is to remedy evils caused by the passage of the alien act of 1875.

Representative McLaughlin offered a resolution relating to the coal-miners of Illinois which was adopted. The resolution is as follows: "Whereas, A large reduction per ton is being offered, at some points amounting to 12½ cents; and, whereas, An immense strike is almost sure to follow this proposed reduction; therefore, be it resolved, That his excellency, the governor, is hereby requested to send out the state board of arbitration to investigate the cause of the present trouble, to the end that a just and speedy and amicable adjustment may be made between coal operators and coal miners all over the state; and, whereas, It is alleged that discrimination in coal freight is being made by the railroads to the detriment of many of our coal fields; therefore, be it resolved, That the railroad and warehouse commission of this state is hereby required to examine carefully into this matter, and, if found necessary, have it properly adjusted." The following bills were passed in the senate: Fitzpatrick's, creating the office of fire-escape commissioners at a salary of $2,000 per annum, and an assistant at a salary of $1,000, to be paid out of the fees received for the inspection of fire escapes. Netterstrom's, increasing the number of Lincoln park commissioners from five to seven members. Anthony's, vesting in the widow the absolute title to the homestead when the same is worth less than $1,000. Selby's, requiring trust companies in cities outside of Chicago to deposit $50,000 with the auditor of public accounts. Chapman's, making appropriations for the improvement of the grounds and erection of new buildings on the state fair grounds. Stubblefield's, appropriating $28,000 for the Illinois State Normal University, and also his bill making appropriations for the Soldiers' Orphans' home at Normal. Campbell's, providing that professional public accountants shall first receive a certificate for qualification from the University of Illinois.

May 6.

In the house the enacting clause was stricken from Mr. Farrell's bill taxing domestic insurance companies 2½ per cent and foreign companies 10 per cent on their gross earnings. It was held that it would virtually bar foreign companies from the state. Mr. Fuller's bill to prohibit the coloring yellow of any substitute for butter was made a special order for next Wednesday, as was the uniform textbook bill. So was the Humphrey bills. In the senate Mr. Case introduced a bill authorizing the West Park commissioners to issue bonds to the amount of $300,000 to reimburse the park treasury for the money lost through the failure of the Dreyer bank. The following bills were passed: Mr. Chapman's, for the licensing of horsehoers. Mr. Munroe's, to permit bank directors to collect money loaned in excess of 10 per cent of their capital stock. Mr. Warder's, extending the minimum term of public schools from five to six months. Mr. Fitzpatrick's, providing for the incorporation of pawners' societies and limiting the rate of compensation to be paid for advances, storage and insurance on pawns and pledges.

May, 7.

Governor Tanner sent to the senate the following appointments: William C. Eggert of Chicago to succeed himself as commissioner of the West Chicago parks. Trustees of the Illinois State Historical Library—Hiram W. Beckwith of Danville to succeed Lambert Tree, resigned; Edmund J. James of Chicago to succeed Robert A. Gray, resigned; George N. Black of Springfield to succeed William H. Snyder, resigned. Public guardian for La Salle County—Harry G. Cook of Ottawa. T. O. Johnson of Oregon to succeed Thomas R. Ridgeway as trustee of the Southern Illinois normal school.

Senator Fort's bill fixing the salary of the managers of the Pontiac reformatory at $1,200 per annum and providing that the managers may transfer incorrigible children to the penitentiary was passed. The bill providing for the establishment of day schools for the deaf was amended so as to provide that classes shall be established when the board of directors see fit, and that pupils may be sent to school in adjoining counties. It then advanced to third reading and was made a special order for next Tuesday. In the house the appropriations committee made an adverse report on the bill appropriating $13,000 to H. W. Rokker & Co., for state printing. A motion to nonconcur was lost. Among the bills advanced to third reading was Mr. Merriam's fixing penalties for the loaning of public funds or the investment thereof by the custodians of such fund.

State Items.

The Democratic judicial convention for this, the new eighth, district ended at Mount Sterling last week in the nomination of John C. Broady of Adams county, Harry Higbee of Pike and Thomas N. Mehan of Mason. There were no gold Democrats present.

The Republican delegation from the fifty judicial districts met at Pana last week to nominate three judges for that circuit, but upon learning of the decision of the supreme court regarding the validity of the new judicial appointmentment act adjourned without action.

Judge J. G. Thompson, who is serving his second term as county judge of Vermillion county, received a telegram from Washington last week announcing that it was extremely probable he would be appointed an assistant to the attorney general of the United States.

Charles Trowbridge of Kewanee, the oldest Mason in Illinois and probably the oldest in the United States, is dead. He was born in Connecticut February 14, 1825, and was an active worker with the craft as deputy grand lecturer in the early days of Masonry in Illinois.

R. W. Hudson of Iowa told the Chicago police last week that he had been relieved of $800 by a confidence game. Hudson says he was standing near one of the entrances to the Union stock yards Tuesday when a stranger approached him, and, after starting a conversation, declared he was a banker from the central part of Iowa. Hudson had heard of the banker, and the stranger talked in such a straightforward way that he soon consummated a loan of $800 with Hudson. He has not been seen since.

OUR SPRINGFIELD LETTER.

Senator Monroe's bill to amend the parole law, which has created considerable discussion here, seems not to have had much notice from the press of the state for some reason. It is worthy of more attention. There is a wide difference of opinion in regard to the advisability of the present law. The police authorities of the state have objected strenuously to it, while the prison officials insist that it is working good, and will not consent to its abandonment until they have time to show that it is advantageous. It is one of the numerous improvements which prison reformers have advocated, and while this does not prove anything, it does argue that it should have a fair trial, and live or die on its merits. I am more familiar with its scope and workings at the reformatory than at the penitentiary. There a parole depends first on the uniform good behavior of the inmate; second, on getting an offer from some responsible person of work and oversight, and thirdly, on the judgment of the board of managers as to whether it shall be granted. The first is easily determined by the daily reports. The second is where trouble commences. It is so easy for the person who wants to get an inmate paroled to secure certificates from the public officials, clerks of court and even from the judges to the good character and standing of the sponsor that the officers of the reformatory find themselves imposed upon, and learn afterward that the person asking to stand as sponsor for the care and supervision of the prisoner during his parole is not a proper person for such duty. The five persons who made themselves such a terror under the "long and short" reign of holding-up in Chicago were all paroled prisoners and their care and moral welfare had been vouched for by persons who were certified to by Chicago officials. These cases have called out a deal of adverse criticism, but it is well to bear in mind that it is only the cases of those who go wrong that ever get into the papers. Secrecy in regard to paroling is practiced and many young men are now engaged in honestly earning their living all over the state who are not known as paroled prisoners, so that we never hear any praise of the system, but only adverse criticism when the lad goes to the bad.

Ex-Senator Palmer is now 80 years old. In his walk, his talk and his force as a speaker he shows little the decrepitude of age. He carries a cane, but apparently only from habit, and is daily at his law office in this city attending to his practice, which did not slip out of his hands while in the senate. I think he realized the reasonable probability that he would go out of office with the close of his term. He has never in his life been re-elected to an office. Indeed, in speaking of himself recently in the senate, he said: "I come into fashion about once in ten years, but do not seem to remain in fashion long." He was elected governor in 1868. He did not want to be governor, but did want to be senator. He declined the nomination which Col. Ingersoll sought at the Peoria convention, but it was thrust on him and he accepted it. The salary of the office was at that time $1,500 per annum. The constitution of 1870 increased it to $6,000. He then wanted a renomination, but the Republicans would not give it to him for several reasons. First, the bitter opposition which he had made to the course Gen. Sheridan had taken in the army at the time of the Chicago fire, and second that they had made up their minds to put Oglesby forward and make him United States senator. Palmer was not "in fashion" that year. He left the party at the exact time that he discovered that he was not to be the party's candidate for governor and senator, but it is perhaps unfair to say that discovery was the cause of it. He was always and at all times Democratic in his views on state's rights and tariff. During the war and just before it, as well as during a few years after it, the tariff was not an issue between the parties. As soon as it became an issue, Palmer was certain to be on the Democratic side of it. He was a consistent anti-slavery man and as such became among the earliest anti-Nebraska Democrats and through the pledge he and his comrades made to Lincoln was a Lincoln Republican as long as he lived. He never, however, agreed with Mr. Lincoln on the tariff. In his remarks on that subject, and in his speeches, he says: "You can't tax yourself rich," showing that he either cannot or will not give the weight to the doctrine of protection which all Republicans do.

Of late years he has not been given much to going into different parts of the state except on his campaigning tours, but he went last summer to Galesburg on the occasion of the celebration of the Lincoln-Douglas debate there. He does not think Mr. Depew was just in his remarks in regard to Senator Douglas, and wanted at the time, if it had been a proper place, to make a retort. He says that his intercourse with Douglas, after the election of Lincoln, as well as his former acquaintance with him, both when he was in close political affinity as well as when they were bitterly opposed, renders a fair estimate of his character not only possible but certain, and that estimate is that Douglas was a patriot without any sham or ifs and ands. He was at heart a Union man of such strong sentiment that no condition of things could have made him anything else. He certainly had better opportunities to form an estimate of his character than Mr. Depew had. He had been a partisan, and afterward a most pronounced political opponent. Later he was thrown into close connection with him, and it is fair to believe that Palmer's estimate of the great senator is a correct one.

The house bill (Mr. Cochran's) to amend the Chicago civil service law so as to give preference to veteran soldiers in right of appointment was passed. This law was one of the two civil service acts passed last legislature, the other being for the county service. For some reason no move has been made to amend the county service law. The veterans had a big time trying to get recognized as eligibles for office under that law. By the rules adopted by the commissioners they were cut off entirely. The rules provided that no one over 45 years of age should be examined for appointment. This caused a big row, and Billy Mason was retained by the old soldiers to commence a suit against the board. They concluded to change the rules. This is the bill as passed: "Section 1. Be it enacted by the people of the state of Illinois, represented in the general assembly, That an act entitled 'An act to regulate the civil service in cities,' be amended by the addition of a section to be known as section 10½, which section shall read as follows: 'Section 10½. Persons who were engaged in the military or naval service of the United States during the years 1861, 1862, 1863, 1864 and 1865, and who were honorably discharged therefrom, shall be preferred for appointments to civil offices, provided they are found to possess the business capacity necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of such office, and it shall be the duty of the examiner or commissioner certifying the list of eligibles who have taken the examinations provided for in this act, to place the name or names of such persons at the head of the list of eligibles certified for appointment.'

Littler's coal miners', or operators bill, was defeated, as it was two years ago. You cannot get out of the minds of some legislators the idea that the anti-trust legislation of the past few years is the essence of reform. These various laws punish and forbid all combinations formed in the interest of keeping up prices. The argument which the senator uses in favor of this bill is something like this: By the restraining authority of these laws coal operators cannot combine to keep up the prices of coal to a fair living rate. With the fall of prices, down go the wages of miners. We are continually crying out that we want to legislate to protect labor. This bill will permit those engaged in such occupation as pay for labor a larger proportion than for all other expenses, to agree among themselves upon a schedule of rates that will keep the price of labor up to a fair standard. This is more important than formulating harmless laws against trusts. Mr. Dunlap opposed it. Mr. Crawford spoke for the bill. He said he had a record on this matter. He was the only state senator who voted against the anti-trust legislation of eight years ago, and he stood by that vote. Mr. Dunlap asked him to name, if he could, a single occupation of which a majority of its expenses did not go to labor. He promptly replied: "The office of state senator."

The governor has finally come to the scratch and appointed the good Var Cleave superintendent of insurance. It is understood that Van was very desirous to return to private life and attend wholly to his own private affairs, but the demand coming up from every nook and corner, every county and township, hamlet, hill and dale, for official recognition of his great worth, could not be resisted. The people have an idea that the chief duty of the superintendent of insurance is to insure the state against loss by flood and frost, by cyclone and lightning, by storm, bad luck, dishonest treasurers and wrecked banks, and they want a man in there right off in whom they have confidence. The losses we have suffered within the last few months by the elements and the politicians, the Andrews, the Dreyers, the Spaldings, et al., is something enormous, and we want a man of parts, an officer of unimpeachable worth, and proof against city comptroller.

CAUGHT AN EAVESDROPPER.

Gen. Gordon as a Boy Was Up to Many Kinds of Mischief.

From the Weekly Telegraph: When General Gordon was a lad at school he was as mischievous as most boys; indeed, more so. The following story is told of him by Dr. Bixby, who was at one time at school with him. When the boys had done anything wrong they were shut in a large, barely furnished room, and set to write lines from a Latin author. One of the most frequent visitors to this room was the late general, and he used frequently to be annoyed by the boys, who were free coming to the door and jeering at him through the keyhole, telling him what a fine afternoon it was, and inviting him to come out and "lick" them. Though he could not oblige them in the former, he resolved to do his best for them in the latter particular. He borrowed a large garden syringe from the gardener, and, taking it with him the next time he

BINDING OF GRAIN.

When binding was done by hand the left hand cut harvester was a necessity. With the left hand machine the heads of the grain are at the left hand of the man doing the binding, so in taking out the bundle with the band around it, whether the man turned to the front table or to the back table he kept his position toward the bundle itself—that is, with the heads towards his left hand; hence, in making the tuck he shoved the ends under the band toward the heads. Grain is handled by the shocker by grasping into the heads, as shown in the illustration, and the tuck should therefore be toward the heads, so that it will not pull out.

The applications of roller bearings to grain cutting machinery was made by J. G. Perry in 1869, and his patent, No. 86,584, for an improved reaper, showed and described various ways of using roller and ball bearings in harvesters. Unquestionably the most practical and satisfactory applications of roller bearings to binders and mowers has been made by the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company. The Particular form used by them was patented in 1882 and is now to be found in all McCormick machines. The especially valuable feature of the McCormick roller bearing is seen in the form—or cage as it is called—which holds the rollers from running together, and if for any cause the cage is taken from the shaft the rollers will not fall out and get lost. In order to avoid the McCormick patent the other harvesting machine company who claims to be the originator of roller bearings in harvesters has cut out the metal in the ring at the ends of the rollers. If the cage is taken out the rollers slip out and become filled with grit, or worse, get lost. The methods of the McCormick Company result in an annual saving of many thousands of dollars to the farming public. New devices are not embodied in their machines until long and oft-repeated trials have shown them to be practical. It has been the same with roller bearings as with everything else—McCormick experimenting is done at McCormick expense.

The Venezuelan Arbitration.

Both houses of the Venezuelan congress, by a unanimous vote, have ratified the treaty with Great Britain, negotiated through the good offices of the United States, which provides for an arbitration tribunal to settle the disputed boundary between Venezuela and British Guiana. As the arbitrators on behalf of the two governments have already been designated, the way seems to be open to a speedy adjustment of this long-vexed question.

Now Is the Time to Get a Home.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway has just published a newspaper calling the North-Western Home-Seeker, giving facts about the great State of South Dakota and the advantages it possesses for the pursuits of agriculture, dairying and cattle raising. Lands can be had at present upon most favorable terms, and there is every indication of large immigration into the state this season. Correspondence is solicited from intending settlers, and a copy of the paper will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

A Costly Water Supply.

There is a man in England whose water supply costs him $250 a day. He is a millionaire who lives near a village. Not liking the local water, he had a special conduit built for himself at a cost of $400,000, though he resides there only three months a year.

FUN AS A MEDICINE.

Light Hearted Mockery Often Better Than Severe Reproof.

One of the proverbs in the book of Proverbs says that "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine," and it might safely be said that it very often does a great deal more. We appear to be coming back to the same opinion by way of reaction from the grave and sententious moralities of our great-grandmothers. A very clever little book of rhymes and pictures professes to be "The Bad Child's Book of Beasts," and comes nearer to Lear's wonderful nonsense pictures and verses than anything we have seen since, though it is not quite so gleefully extravagant and the humor is of a rather different kind.

But the idea of the book is evidently that a "so called" bad child needs nothing but a little fur to make him "unnaturally good"—which means, we take it, that the bad child and the good child are deviations from the happy mean to much the same extent, and that the bad child needs laughing into the happy mean as much as the good child needs laughing out of that severe and priggish moderation which used to be held up to the earlier generations of this century as a model for their initiation in such books as "Sandford and Merton."

When the writer of the book of Proverbs or the writer of the special problem which he placed in his selection spoke of a merry heart doing good like a medicine, he probably thought of the emancipation which such a heart gains from the misery of being self occupied—the power it gains of looking out on the world with a lightness of spirit all its own. And that is, indeed, the sense in which fun may be said to be the best of all medicines. To learn to laugh at the foibles of others is harmless and even useful enough if you do not laugh at them ill naturedly, but to learn to laugh at your own is a close approximation to wisdom, if you laugh at them with true insight into the ridiculous side of those foibles. Of course fun is no medicine for the graver sins and moral distortions of human life, for these are not subjects for laughter, but rather for tears. But there are many imperfections for which light hearted mockery is a far more effectual medicine than any kind of moral scorn or reproof.

You cannot learn how foolish it is to play with edged tools half as well from being worried to think it wrong as you can from being shown that it is in the lightest degree ridiculous.

And you cannot learn that it is absurd and pedantic to believe in your own wisdom in any way half so effective as you can from catching yourself out as it were in that affectation of superior discretion which only gives you the air of blinking and solemn emptiness that the owl embodies in the rolling of his darkness loving eyes. Books of nonsense are the best cures in the world for that laughter of fools which is like the crackling of thorns under a pot and for that childish assumption of virtue and sagacity which so completely fails in concealing the vanity from which it proceeds. To endow the heart with a good reserve of innocent fun is one of the surest of preservatives against real evil.

The child, or indeed the man, who can laugh heartily and without bitterness—bitter laughter is not the laughter of the heart—is very soon aware of the approach of any condition of mind which involves feelings inconsistent with that hearty laughter and is put on his guard by the sense of self reproach with which those lighter moods affect him and make him feel that he has no right to them. That, we suspect, is the deeper sense in which "a merry heart doeth good like a medicine." But, besides this, good fun certainly purges the spirit of all those foibles which are very often the cloaks of insincerity. The child who imagines himself spirited because he delights in provoking the creatures beneath him and in playing practical jokes on the companions around him is better cured of his delusion by being shown how silly he looks to those who see through him than by any other method.

And the child who is full of the self importance of knowing rather more and learning rather more rapidly than his schoolfellows is far more easily laughed out of his conceit than he could ever be argued out of it. Good fun is a remedy for foibles and at least a danger signal against deeper evil. The child or man who feels that good fun has a reproach and a sting for him is well aware that he has wandered from the straight way.—London Spectator.

A Philanthropic Institution.

Some kind friend has sent us by post a circular. It advertises the merits and advantages of the admirable Institut du Midi of Toulouse, France, and Lisbon. Its head is, according to the circular, "Mr. the Dr. J. Freres" of Rue St. Antoine, du T. 15, Toulouse, France.

The object of the institute is educational. Its officers undertake to distribute among schools and colleges of the civilized world articles for their museums, scientific, historical, anatomical and otherwise. Mr. the Dr. J. Freres will distribute the articles to such schools as apply to him and furnish guarantee of good faith.

The estimable director is anxious that persons who have curios should donate them to his Institut du Midi. Thus will be established a system of exchange among colleges and schools of the world, each getting what it wants. Those willing to aid in this enterprise may become members of the institute by communicating with Dr. Freres. There is a badge of membership, which is described.

The circular is printed in three languages, English, Spanish and French. We reproduce word for word part of the English translation setting forth this admirable enterprise. The reader will see from it that the English schoolmaster is abroad, very far abroad:

The aim of the Institute has a character absolutely philanthropic and humanitarian, because it gives great advantages to the Public Schools to contribute or augment Schooling Museums by Scientific objects but they have not enough. Alas! more often in spite of their devotedness to Chief to the University.

Its purpose is to give class-books to boys in need of them as many parents are too poor to provide the necessary books, and by this mean assist the teachers in their noble task unhappily to often very difficult.

We are further told that the said institute "has formed a fruitful work" in calling attention of naturalists, "humanists," geographers and others to the enterprise. All who are interested, all who have any museum articles to donate or who wish to receive such, and, in fact, everybody else, may become members of the organization, since "the Institute is composed of all adherents to present statute without distinction of sex."

The members are divided into protectors, benefactors and just plain, common members. If you join, then—

It will be delivered at every protector, benefactor or member a diplom consecrating the memory of his good actions.

Everybody cannot be a protector, however:

The title of protector will be only given to eminent personages who by their adhesion will bring a moral adhesion to the work.

Whether you are protector, benefactor or member, you will be entitled to wear "at the feast assembly of literary, artistic and scientific societies as a recognizing mark" the badge of the Institut du Midi. And here is the inimitable description in English of the badge:

The insignia of the Institute is represented by a cross, St. Lewis form, at four gold branches red enameled around, in the center is the Toulouse county blazon in gold over enameled bottom.

Two palm-branches assemble the four gold branches which by their higher extremity are attached to the traditional crown, supporting the clapping which has an equally divided violet and garnet ribbon.

The institute will not furnish the badge, however. Mr. the Dr. J. Freres knows how people are after the almighty dollar, and he will have no commercial dealings with any one. He would fix his exalted attention solely on the "philanthropic" aspect of the enterprise. In more of this delightful clipped English he informs us that—

In order to avoid all speculative thoughts the Institute does not furnish the insignia, every member must if he desires ask directly of the maker.

The reader will understand, therefore, that if he connects himself with the Institut du Midi no "speculative thoughts" must enter into his calculations.

The starting of the Japanese trouble in Honolulu was that the Japanese consul was ordered by President Dole to send back home a large number of Japanese immigrants to Hawaii. The consul obeyed under protest and immediately sent word to his home government of the affair. Then Japan ordered two of her warships to Honolulu.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism. From the Fairhaven (N. Y.) Register.

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states for twenty-five years his wife had been a sufferer from rheumatism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her as much good. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by A. L. Waller, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

What The Best Paint Must Be.

MORE THAN A $100,000,000 SPENT YEARLY.

More than $100,000,000 are expended yearly in the United States for painting. This enormous expenditure is for the two-fold purpose of protecting and beautifying property. It is consequently of interest to know what good paint must be and especially what kind of paint best fills the requirements.

WEAR AND TEAR ON PAINT.

Have you ever thought of the wear and tear on exterior paint? There is no greater solvent than rain water, which is the constantly present enemy of paint, either in storms or in the air's moisture. Rain, hail, sand and dust keep up a practically continuous friction on outside painted surfaces. Soot, sulphurous smoke, natural gas, carbon dioxide (a product of decaying vegetable matter) and the oxidizing influence of air and water, produce a constant chemical action, whose deleterious influence is aided by alternating sun-light and shadow and heat and cold. Always and for ever must be added the expansion and contraction of the surface on which the paint is applied. There is scarcely a minute in the day when this surface is not swelling or shrinking.

REQUIREMENTS OF GOOD PAINT.

To best overcome these foes, paint must be just elastic enough. If a paint is too elastic it will become "tacky" and all the soot, sand, dust and flying particles which touch it will adhere. This destroys its beautifying effect. The best paint must dry hard enough to present a smooth, washable surface. If it is too hard the heat and cold expand and contract it enough to make it crack. This allows moisture to get under and loosen it from the surface on which it is spread, causing the paint to peel.

There is no single pigment known which, used alone with oil, will answer all the requirements and not undergo a chemical change.

Carbonate of lead and linseed oil are absolutely essential in a good paint. No one knows better than the painter, however, that with no other pigment in the paint, a large portion of the oil will soak into the surface, the white lead will "chalk" and there is actually no real paint left after moderate exposure.

Based on a proper mixture of carbonate of lead and linseed oil, there must be a combination of pigments which will form a perfect alloy or the paint will not give satisfactory results. It is exactly this perfect binding together of its ingredients which is claimed for HEATH & MILLIGAN BEST PREPARED PAINT. It is the standard mixed paint of America. It embodies all the knowledge money can buy in the scientific composition of paint. It is always the same because it is mixed and ground by the best experts and machinery known to the paint trade. It is made in all the colors and tints demanded by years of constantly growing sales.

QUALITY FIRST CONSIDERATION.

Quality has been the first consideration in the manufacture of Heath & Milligan Best Prepared Paint; the main and ever absorbing aim being to produce the finest goods possible. The success achieved in this direction can be most correctly judged by the opinions of practical painters and dealers. You will find a host of such opinions in a pamphlet which we will gladly send you.

BEWARE OF POOR PAINTS.

Owing to the fact that hundreds and thousands of combinations can be used in the manufacture of paint, the consumer is necessarily ignorant of its quality until it has been tested on his building.

If a poor paint is used it must all be scraped and sandpapered off at large expense, before even Heath & Milligan Best Prepared paint will adhere as it should.

WHY TRY EXPERIMENTS?

Is it not preferable to put yourself in the hands of a firm which has spent 47 years in studying the effect of all kinds and combinations of pigments known to the paint trade; a firm which uses more strictly pure white lead and linseed oil than any other in existence; a firm which stands at the head in the paint trade and which honestly declares no better paint is made, no matter what the price, than its Best Prepared paint?

Heath & Milligan have been in business nearly half a century and they willingly stake their reputation as the leading paint firm of America on the statement that they cannot make better paint than their Best Prepared.

It Pays to Raise Percheron Horses

It does not pay to raise cheap horses when horses are cheap. It does pay to raise horses that command a good price in the market. Percheron horses have always and are still commanding good prices, hence Percheron horses are the ones to raise for profit.

Already the demand for good working horses is on the increase and the supply is limited, with certain prospects that prices will advance rapidly in the next few years. Over 40,000 horses were shipped abroad during the years 1895 and 1896, with prospects for an increasing demand this year.

It is with confidence that I offer to the farmers of the surrounding district the services of my highly bred Percheron stallion

"BERESFORD," 17307.

This horse is 5 years old and is one of the finest specimens of his race in this country. His sire, Reaper 8076 (10437) was one of the highest bred Percherons ever brought across the water, as was his grand sire, Confident, 3647 (397), winner of the first prize and gold medal as a 3-year-old at the New Orleans Exposition, his owner at that time refusing $5,000 for him. Beresford 17307 is recorded with pedigree in the Percheron stud-book of America: "Dapple grey; weight, 1900 lbs; height, 16 3/4 hands."

A horse like BERESFORD cannot be stood at a "scrub" price, but owing to the hard times I have put the service fee for this horse down to the very nominal figure of $10.00 to insure colts. BERESFORD will stand in my barn at Palatine every week-day during the season of 1897. If you are interested we would be pleased to send you a descriptive circular.

THE MISADVENTURES OF JOHN NICHOLSON

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"I do not think," said Mr. Nicholson at last, "that I am an ungenerous father. I have never grudged you money within reason, for any avowable purpose; you had just to come to me and speak. And now I find that you have forgotten all decency and all natural feeling, and actually pawned—pawed—your mother's watch. You must have had some temptation; I will do you the justice to suppose it was a strong one. What did you do with this money?"

"I would rather not tell you, sir," said John. "It will only make you angry."

"I will not be fenced with," cried his father. "There must be an end of disingenuous answers. What did you want with this money?"

"To lend it to Houston, sir," says John.

"I thought I had forbidden you to speak to that young man?" asked the father.

"Yes, sir," said John; "but I only met him."

"Where?" came the deadly question. And "In a billiard room" was the damning answer.

Thus had John's single departure from the truth brought instant punishment. For no other purpose but to see Alan would he have entered a billiard room; but he had desired to palliate the fact of his disobedience, and now it appeared that he frequented these disreputable haunts upon his own account.

Once more Mr. Nicholson digested the vile tidings in silence; and when John stole a glance at his father's countenance he was abashed to see the marks of suffering.

"Well," said the old gentleman at last, "I can not pretend to be simply bowed down. I rose this morning what the world calls a happy man—happy, at least, in a son of whom I thought I could be reasonably proud."

But it was beyond human nature to endure this longer; and John interrupted him almost with a scream. "Oh, wheest!" he cried, "that's not all, that's not the worst of it—it's nothing! How could I tell you were proud of me? Oh! I wish, I wish that I had known; but you always said I was such a disgrace! And the dreadful thing is this: We were all taken up last night, and we have to pay Colette's fine among the six, or we'll be had up for evidence—shebeening it is. They made me swear to tell you; but for my part," he cried, bursting into tears, "I just wish that I was dead!" And he fell on his knees before a chair and hid his face.

Whether his father spoke, and whether he remained long in the room or at once departed, are points lost to history. A horrid turmoil of mind and body; bursting sobs; broken, vanishing thoughts, now of indignation, now of remorse; broken elementary whiffs of consciousness, of the smell of the horsehair on the chair bottom, of the jangling of church bells that now began to make day horrible throughout the confines of the city, of the hard floor that bruised his knees, of the taste of tears that found their way into his mouth; for a period of time, the duration of which I can not guess, while I refuse to dwell longer on its agony, these were the whole of God's world for John Nicholson.

When at last, as by the touching of a spring, he returned again to clearness of consciousness and even a measure of composure, the bells had just done ringing, and the Sabbath silence was still marred by the patter of belated feet. By the clock above the fire, as well as by these more speaking signs the service had not long begun; and the unhappy sinner, if his father had really gone to church, might count on near two hours of only comparative unhappiness. With his father the superlative degree returned infallibly. He knew it by every shrinking fiber in his body, he knew it by the sudden dizzy whirling of his brain, at the mere thought of that calamity. An hour and a half, perhaps an hour and three-quarters, if the doctor was long-winded, and then would begin that active agony from which, even in the dull ache of the present, he shrunk as from the bite of fire. He saw, in a vision, the family pew, the somnolent cushions, the Bibles, the psalm books, Maria with her smelling salts, his father sitting spectacled and critical; and at once he was struck with indignation, not unjustly. It was inhuman to go off to church, and leave a sinner in suspense, unpunished, unforgiven. And at the very touch of criticism the paternal sanctity was lessened; yet the paternal terror only grew; and the two strands of feeling pushed him in the same direction.

And suddenly there came upon him a mad fear lest his father should have locked him in. The notion had no ground in sense; it was probably no more than a reminiscence of similar calamities in childhood, for his father's room had always been the chamber of inquisition and the scene of punishment; but it stuck so rigorously in his mind that he must instantly approach the door and prove its untruth. As he went, he struck upon a drawer left open in the business table. It was the money-drawer, a measure of his father's disarray: the money-drawer—perhaps a pointing providence! Who is to decide, when even divines differ between a providence and a temptation? or who, sitting calmly under his own vine, is to pass a judgment on the doings of a poor, hunted dog, slavishly afraid, slavishly rebellious, like John Nicholson on that particular Sunday? His hand was in the drawer, almost before his mind had conceived the hope; and rising to his new situation, he wrote, sitting in his father's chair and using his father's blotting-pad, his pitiful apology and farewell:

"My Dear Father:—I have taken the money, but I will pay it back as soon as I am able. You will never hear of me again. I did not mean any harm by anything, so I hope you will try and forgive me. I wish you would say good-bye to Alexander and Maria, but not if you don't want to. I could not wait to see you, really. Please try to forgive me. Your affectionate son, John Nicholson."

The coins abstracted and the missive written, he could not be gone too soon from the scene of these transgressions; and remembering how his father had once returned from church, on some slight illness, in the middle of the second psalm, he durst not even make a packet of a change of clothes. Attired as he was, he slipped from the paternal doors, and found himself in the cool spring air, the thin spring sunshine, and the great Sabbath quiet of the city, which was now only pointed by the cawing of the rooks. There was not a soul in Randolph Crescent, nor a soul in Queensferry street; in this outdoor privacy and the sense of escape, John took heart again; and with a pathetic sense of leave-taking he even ventured up the lane and stood awhile, a strange peril at the gates of a quaint paradise, by the west end of St. George's Church. They were singing within; and by a strange chance, the tune was "St. George's Edinburgh," which bears the name, and was first sung in the choir of that church. "Who is this King of Glory?" went the voices from within; and, to John, this was like the end of all Christian observances, for he was now to be a wild man like Ishmael, and his life was to be cast in homeless places and with godless people.

It was thus, with no rising sense of the adventurous, but in mere desolation and despair, that he turned his back on his native city, and set out on foot for California, with a more immediate eye to Glasgow.

CHAPTER IV.

It is no part of mine to narrate the adventures of John Nicholson, which were many, but simply his more momentous misadventures, which were more than he desired, and, by human standards, more than he deserved; how he reached California; how he was robbed, and robbed, and beaten, and starved; how he was at last taken up by charitable folk, restored to some degree of self-complacency, and installed as a clerk in a bank in San Francisco, it would take too long to tell; nor in these episodes were there any marks of the peculiar Nicholsonian destiny, for they were just such matters as befall some thousands of other young adventurers in the same days and places. But once posted in the bank, he fell for a time into a high degree of good fortune, which, as it was only a longer way about to fresh disaster, it behooves me to explain.

It was his luck to meet a young man in what is technically called a "dive," and thanks to his monthly wages, to extricate this new acquaintance from a position of present disgrace and possible danger in the future. This young man was the nephew of one of the Nob Hill magnates, who run the San Francisco stock exchange, much as more humble adventurers, in the corner of some public park at home, may be seen to perform the simple artifice of pea and thimble for their own profit, that is to say, and the discouragement of public gambling. It was thus in his power—and, as he was of grateful temper, it was among the things that he desired—to put John in the way of growing rich; and thus, without thought or industry, or so much as even understanding the game at which he played, but by simply buying and selling what he was told to buy and sell, that plaything of fortune was presently at the head of between eleven and twelve thousand pounds, or, as he reckoned it, of upward of sixty thousand dollars.

How he had come to deserve this wealth, any more than how he had formerly earned disgrace at home, was a problem beyond the reach of his philosophy. It was true that he had been industrious at the bank, but no more so than the cashier, who had seven small children and was visibly sinking in decline. Nor was the step which had determined his advance—a visit to a dive with a month's wages in his pocket—an act of such transcendent virtue, or even wisdom, as to seem to merit the favor of the gods. From some sense of this, and of the dizzy see-saw—heaven-high, hell-deep—on which men sit clutching; or perhaps fearing that the sources of his fortune might be insidiously traced to some root in the field of petty cash; he stuck to his work, said not a word of his new circumstances, and kept his account with a bank in a different quarter of the town. The concealment, innocent as it seems, was the first step in the second tragedy of John's existence.

Meanwhile, he had never written home. Whether from diffidence or shame, or a touch of anger, or mere procrastination, or because (as we have seen) he had no skill in literary arts, or because (as I am sometimes tempted to suppose) there is a law in human nature that prevents young men—not otherwise beasts—from the performance of this simple act of piety—months and years had gone by, and John had never written. The habit of not writing, indeed, was already fixed before he had begun to come into his fortune; and it was only the difficulty of breaking this long silence that withheld him from an instant restitution of the money he had stolen, or (as he preferred to call it) borrowed. In vain he sat before paper, attending on inspiration; that heavenly nymph, beyond suggesting the words "my dear father," remained obstinately silent; and presently John would crumple up the sheet and decide, as soon as he had "a good chance," to carry the money home in person. And this delay, which is indefensible, was his second step into the snares of fortune.

Ten years had passed, and John was drawing near to thirty. He had kept the promise of his boyhood, and was now of a lusty frame, verging toward corpulence; good features, good eyes, a genial manner, a ready laugh, a long pair of sandy whiskers, a dash of an American accent, a close familiarity with the great American joke, and a certain likeness to a R-y-l P-r-s-a-g-e, who shall remain nameless for me, make up the man's externals as he could be viewed in society. Inwardly, in spite of his gross body and highly masculine whiskers, he was more like a maiden lady than a man of twenty-nine.

It chanced one day, as he was strolling down Market street on the eve of his fortnight's holiday, that his eye was caught by certain railway bills, and in very idleness of mind he calculated that he might be home for Christmas if he started on the morrow. The fancy thrilled him with desire, and in one moment he decided he would go.

There was much to be done; his portmanteau to be packed, a credit to be got from the bank, where he was a wealthy customer, and certain offices to be transacted for that other bank in which he was an humble clerk; and it chanced, in conformity with human nature, that out of all this business it was the last that came to be neglected. Night found him, not only equipped with money of his own, but once more (as on that former occasion) saddled with a considerable sum of other people's.

Now it chanced there lived in the same boarding-house a fellow-clerk of his, an honest fellow, with what is called a weakness for drink—though it might, in this case, have been called a strength, for the victim had been drunk for weeks together without the briefest intermission. To this unfortunate John intrusted a letter with an inclosure of bonds, addressed to the bank manager. Even as he did so he thought he perceived a certain haziness of eye and speech in his trustee; but he was too hopeful to be stayed, silenced the voice of warning in his bosom, and with one and the same gesture committed the money to the clerk, and himself into the hands of destiny.

I dwell, even at the risk of tedium, on John's minutest errors, his case being so perplexing to the moralist; but we have done with them now, the roll is closed, the reader has the worst of our poor hero, and I leave him to judge for himself whether he or John has been the less deserving. Henceforth we have to follow the spectacle of a man who was a mere whip-top for calamity; on whose unmerited misadventures not even the humorist can look without pity, and not even the philosopher without alarm.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

Edward Watson of Minooka, Grundy county, was found hanging to a tree in the woods.

Mrs. Mary E. Lease of Kansas is to lecture in Peoria some time during the month of July. She will deliver her lecture on "The Voice of Labor," and also on "Christ and Caesar." The details of her visit are left with a committee of Peorians who are interested.

A switch engine on the Wabash railroad at Thirty-first street, Chicago, struck John Heiman, 72 years old, as he was gathering coal on the tracks. The old man was hurled some distance, and was dead when picked up by the train hands. The police removed the body to 171 Twenty-fifth street, where Heiman lived with his family.

Adjutant General Reece appointed Lieutenant Marvin H. Lyon, Company F, Sixth infantry, and Lieutenant R. H. Savage, and Lieutenant J. H. Porter, both of the Second battalion naval militia, as a board of survey to locate the responsibility for four Colt revolvers which were stolen from the armory of the naval militia at Moline. The state is responsible to the government for the arms. The board will meet at Moline and proceed to investigate.

The Republican judicial convention for the new second circuit of Illinois met in Mount Carmel last week. Every county was represented but one. The convention was organized with E. Callahan of Robinson as chairman and W. M. Goudy of Fairfield and E. Keen of Mount Carmel as secretaries. There was no contest for the nominations. Judge T. M. Eckley of McLeansboro, Carl Roedel of Shawneetown and Geo. B. Leonard of Mount Vernon being nominated by acclamation. Gold Democrats are acting with Republicans and Silver Republicans with Democrats.

A burglary was committed at Bartonville about 2 o'clock on Sunday morning. Sam Brewer, who operates the Slagle livery barn in the lower end of the city, resides in Bartonville, and about the time mentioned thieves entered his house, made their way to his bed room, stole $2.60 from his pantaloons, which were hanging on the bed, and then proceeded to his hired man's room. There they obtained 50 cents, and then departed. They secured the entrance into the house by turning the key in the back door with a pair of nippers. The latter were inserted and the key caught and the door unlocked.

The United States Fire and Police telegraph company of Boston has passed into the control of western capitalists. The names of C. Norman Fay and B. E. Sunny, president of the General Electric company, have been prominently mentioned in connection with the transfer, and other prominent business men of Chicago will be interested in the reorganized company. The factory, which has been located in Boston, will be moved west, probably to Chicago, and negotiations are pending with one of the largest electrical manufacturing companies in the city for the production of the company's goods.

Thirty-six insane men and women were transferred last week from the Dunning asylum to Kankakee. They left Dunning early in the morning and arrived in Chicago at 6 o'clock over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, in charge of two men attendants. At the Canal street station they were loaded into buses and transferred to the Illinois Central station. The diversion seemed to delight the patients. They spent the time at the railroad stations in tracing all kinds of figures on the mosaic floors and in figuring out wonderful sights in skylights. The attendants had little trouble in keeping them together. Their strange garb attracted considerable attention at the stations.

The Illinois State Library association held their spring meeting in Peoria in the new library building on Thursday of last week. The program embraced a wide range of practical subjects pertaining to different phases of the work of the public library. Among the participants were the following: Mrs. Zella Dixon, librarian, Chicago University, Chicago; Mrs. Josephine H. Resor, librarian, Parlin library, Canton; Mr. Percy F. Bicknell, librarian, University of Illinois, Champaign; Miss Eva L. Moore, librarian, Withers library, Bloomington; Professor Louis H. Galbreath, State Normal University, Normal; Mr. J. S. Curry, director, public library, Evans-ton; Mrs. Clara P. Bourland, president, Woman's Club, Peoria; instructors from the Department of Library Economy, Armour Institute Technology, Chicago; Rev. Would Result in Increased Prices for the Farmer.

The present bill before the legislature at Springfield, which allows proprietors of grain elevators of Class A to trade in grain, seems to be a very just one. For years the large elevator companies of Chicago have handled grain. Lately the commission men on the Chicago Board of Trade have taken legal steps to stop them and have fought them in every possible way in order to drive them out of the business, so as to compel all country grain shippers when shipping to Chicago to pay a commission to these commission firms. It certainly is to the interest of the farming community and the country grain dealers to have the large Chicago elevator companies bid on grain—it simply adds that much competition, and where the Chicago commission is saved it adds that much to the price of grain which is paid the farmer; and in these hard times and low prices of grain every fraction which can be added to the price paid the farmer is a great gain for the agricultural district, as it brings just so much more money into the community.

The warehouse law now provides very stringent laws regarding the operation of these elevators, to prevent fraud or discrimination, and this bill adds an additional safeguard by establishing a supervisor who shall be placed in such of the elevators by the Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners of Illinois and under such rules as they shall see fit to make.

The bill is one which the state at large should favor.

DRUNK FOR TWENTY YEARS.
A correspondent writes: "I was drunk on and off for over twenty years, drunk when I had money, sober when I had none. Many dear friends I lost, and numbers gave me good advice to no purpose; but, thank God, an angel hand came at last in the form of my poor wife, who administered your marvelous remedy, 'Anti-Jag,' to me without my knowledge or consent. I am now saved and completely transformed from a worthless fellow to a sober and respected citizen."

If "Anti-Jag" cannot be had at your druggist, it will be mailed in plain wrapper with full directions how to give secretly, on receipt of One Dollar, by the Renova Chemical Co., 66 Broadway, New York, or they will gladly mail full particulars free to you.

There is at Redear, a small village in England, a wonderful cork model of Lincoln Cathedral. The model contains about one million old corks. The Ideal Line.
The members of the Baptist Young People's Union who contemplate attending a national meeting of that body in July, should bear in mind that there is no better equipped line from the East, North or Northwest, than the popular Big Four Route, via Cincinnati or Louisville. At Cincinnati, direct connection is made in the same depot with the Queen & Crescent Route, the Short Line to Chattanooga, via the famous High Bridge. At Louisville, with the Southern Railway and the Louisville & Nashville, via Mammoth Cave and Nashville, allowing stop-over at both these points.

Texas Fever.
Elaborate experiments on Texas fever have been conducted at Columbia during the past year by the Missouri authorities, co-operating with the Texas Experiment Station. Bulletin No. 37 by Dr. J. W. Connaway, just issued, reports the results of these tests. It was clearly demonstrated that the Texas tick is the natural means of communicating the disease from one animal to another. Ticks hatched in the laboratory when put on Missouri Shorthorn cows in lots free from any possible infection, produced fatal cases of Texas fever in every instance within from thirteen to eighteen days after the young ticks were placed on the animal. The Texas Station dipped a car load of Texan cattle, all of which were covered with the Texas fever tick, and shipped the dipped cattle to the Missouri Experiment Station. These cattle were dipped in a West Virginia mineral oil at a cost of less than 5 cents per head. The Missouri Station confined these dipped Texan cattle in a small lot with a number of shorthorn cows from the 13th of August until the 1st of November, and made careful daily observations and temperature records, with the result that no Texas fever was communicated. If subsequent experiments confirm these results, the dipping process will be entirely practicable and feasible, and can be easily and cheaply done on a commercial scale, and would enable the farmers of the Mississippi valley to purchase and bring to their farms with perfect safety at any season of the year cheap range cattle to eat their surplus corn and grass. An attempt was made to inoculate cattle so that they would be proof against this disease, with very promising results. These results are also in a measure confirmed by experiments that Dr. Connaway has just concluded in Mississippi, on a car load of dairy cattle shipped there from Kansas. Twelve of these cattle had died of Texas fever before the animals were injected; none died afterwards. The method is neither expensive nor difficult, and if it proves to be successful as it now promises, the entire Texas fever district, comprising a dozen states will be opened as a market for the thoroughbred stock of the north and west, inasmuch as these animals may then be shipped to these states with entire safety from loss. Extensive studies and observations on the habits and movements of the tick were made which led to a number of important practical conclusions in regard to the best methods of disinfecting pastures, etc. This bulletin profusely illustrated, is for free distribution among the farmers and stockmen of Missouri and of the southwest, and may be had on application to the director of the Missouri Experiment Station, Columbia, Mo.

Beeves for Export.
Secretary Wilson has issued an order that from and after March 15, 1897, all beef offered for transportation to European ports, whether fresh, salted, canned, corned or packed, being the meat of cattle killed after the passing of the act under which this order is made, shall be accompanied by a certificate issued by an inspector of this department, showing that the cattle from which it was produced were free from disease and the meat sound and wholesome. In order that it may be determined whether all beef exported to European ports has been so inspected and found to be wholesome, it is further ordered that the meat of all other species of animals exported to such ports, which for any reason does not bear the inspection stamp of this department, be packed in barrels, cases, or other packages which are legibly marked in such manner as to clearly indicate the species of animal from which the meat was produced. Meat which is not so marked and which is not accompanied by a certificate of inspection, will be classed as uninspected beef and will not be allowed exportation to European ports.

PICKED UP ON BROADWAY.

A True Incident.—A woman was picked up in the street in an unconscious condition and hurried to the nearest hospital. On examination her body was found to be covered with sores caused by the hypodermic injection of morphine.

This mere wreck of a woman had once held an honorable and lucrative position in a large publishing house in New York. Her health began to fail. Instead of taking rest and medical treatment, she resorted to the stimulus of morphine.

The hospital physicians discovered that her primary trouble was an affection of the womb, which could readily have been cured in the first stages.

If, when she had felt those severe pains in the back, the terrible headaches, the constant sense of fullness, soreness and pain in the pelvic region, she had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, it would have dissolved and passed off that polypus in the womb, and to-day she would have been a well woman sitting in her office.

Why will women let themselves go in this way? It seems passing strange that a woman like this one, so highly educated, and so well placed, should have depended on morphine, instead of seeking a radical cure.

There is no excuse for any woman who suffers—she need not go without help. Mrs. Pinkham stands ready to help any woman; her address is Lynn, Mass. Write to her; it will cost you nothing. In the meantime get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the nearest drug store. The following letter from one of your sisters will encourage you:

Mrs. BERTHA LEHRMAN, No. 1 Erie St., 27th Ward, Pittsburg, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I can hardly find words with which to thank you for what you have done for me. I suffered nearly seven years with backache and headache, leucorrhoea, and the worst forms of womb troubles.

"Doctors failed to do me any good. I have taken four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one box of Liver Pills, and used one package of Sanative Wash, and now can say I am well and have been steadily gaining flesh; am stouter and heartier now than I have been for years. I am recommending your Vegetable Compound to my friends. Again I thank you for the good health I am enjoying."

WEIGHTY WORDS FOR Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

"I lost my wife and two children from the effects of hereditary scrofula. My third child was dangerously affected with scrofula. He was unable to walk, his left foot being covered with running sores. How Mr. Trullinger Cured Dyspepsia.

FARRAGUT, Iowa, April 8, 1897.

Gentlemen—Twenty years ago I had some trouble with my stomach. As I grew older the trouble became worse, and for the last few years I have not been able to work the greater part of the time. I have taken treatment from several doctors, some of specialists, but without benefit. Last winter the pain in my stomach became so intense that I had to resort to opiates for relief. For six weeks I was not able to leave my bed. My stomach would not retain food, it being so weak. Morphine and laudanum were the only medicines that gave me any relief, and that only a little while at a time. My brother, seeing your advertisement in an Omaha paper, ordered a package of Dr. Kay's Renovator, which I began taking. After the first dose I quit taking morphine, and I have not had any pain in my stomach since. My appetite is good and I eat anything, and now feel like a new man. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Kay's Renovator to all who are suffering with stomach trouble. Gratefully yours, H. B. TRULLINGER.

Notice has been served on road commissioners of the town of Ela by the stage driver, Ned Duers, calling on them to keep the roads in a passable condition. The roads of Ela have been kept in such a wretched condition that the stage was unable to get to Barrington in time for the mail trains, and after an investigation by the postoffice officials at Washington the mail carrier was instructed to serve notice on the road commissioners of Ela to put the public roads in good repair, and if they fail to comply the government expects to take steps to compel them to do so. It is a disgrace for such an enlightened community as Ela to be shown up in such an unfavorable light. Such impassable roads retard the growth and prosperity of any community. Keep your highways in good condition and you benefit your entire community.

Addie, the 5-year-old daughter of Mrs. Henry Kampert, met with a severe accident Saturday evening. While Emil Naehner was hauling dirt he stopped for a few moments, and when he started up his team he did not notice the little girl holding on to one of the rear wheels. Before he could stop the team the wheel had pulled her clear over and passed over her body. Medical aid was immediately summoned and at first it was thought that one of the ribs had been broken, but a later examination made by Dr. Richardson developed that although the little girl had suffered severe internal injuries no bones were broken. Dr. Richardson reported yesterday that there were strong indications that she will recover, although still in a critical condition.
