Cuba Will Gravel the Roads.

The commissioners of highways of the town of Cuba met at Langenheim yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock for the purpose of receiving bids for graveling roads as advertised. Contracts were let as follows:

John Brommelkamp and Ernest Rieke, commencing at Harry Kampert's gate on the Honey Lake road to Hollister's corners, and from thence west 80 rods, $528.40.

E. F. Wiseman, commencing at the slaughter house on the Lake Zurich road, and from thence north 60 rods, $45.

E. F. Wiseman, commencing at the foot of F. A. Cady's hill, from thence east 50 rods, $21.

John Brommelkamp, commencing at Fred Kampert's west line, thence west 120 rods, $118.80.

Ernest Rieke, commencing at the creek bridge near Frick's factory, and from thence north 50 rods, $34.50.

Edward Riley, commencing at Kelsey's corners, and from thence east 40 rods, $35.40.

Edward Riley, commencing at Kelsey's house, and from thence north 120 rods, $90.

Edward Riley, commencing at the north line of the town of Cuba, and from thence south 40 rods, $52.80.

The total cost of this improvement amounts to $1,040.25, of this amount $205.40 is paid for the gravel, while the teamsters receive $834.85 for putting it on the road. This move on the part of the commissioners will be highly appreciated by the residents of the town. It will only take a few years to have every road in the town gravelled if the work is kept up each year.

Obituary.

George Baecher died June 22d, 1897, of consumption, at his home in Fremont township after a long illness, aged 64 years and six months.

George Baecher was born at Horlachen-by-Stambach, in Bavaria, Germany, December 22, 1832. He came to America with his parents in 1852 settling in Illinois. He was married July 9th, 1861, to Barbara Batch, making their first home at Long Grove, Ill., where they lived until 6 years ago, when they moved to the town of Fremont.

Besides a wife, Mr. Baecher leaves six children, (two having died, one in infancy, the other at 12 years of age): John, Nicholas, George, Catherine, Annie and Mrs. John Bauer. He also leaves one brother, Nicholas, sr., and four sisters—Mrs. Casper Schmidt of Elgin; Mrs. John Hunziker, Minneapolis; Mrs. Margaret Hans, Long Grove and Mrs. Gottlieb Heimerdinger of Barrington.

Rev. C. A. Stark of Long Grove conducted the funeral services Tuesday. The remains were laid to rest in the Long Grove cemetery.

Schultz - Sears Nuptials.

John I. Sears and Miss Clara M. Schultz were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Schultz, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. W. H. Smith of Genoa, Ill. Aside from the immediate family only a few intimate friends of the contracting parties witnessed the ceremony. The house decorations were simple yet dainty. After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room where an excellent luncheon was served. The table was decorated with various lines of carnations.

The happy couple left on the 5:12 train for Chicago, followed by the best wishes of a host of loving friends. They will visit Niagara Falls, the beautiful Hudson, and return by way of the South. After a six weeks' trip they will take up their residence in Barrington, the home of the groom.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Schultz of this place, and a young lady of exceptional qualities. She is a graduate of the Palatine High School of the class of '89, and also a graduate of the Cook County Normal school. For the past four years she has held the position of teacher in the Norwood Park (Chicago) public school, and the fact of her continued service speaks highly of her efficiency. During the time she has been teaching she has kept up her reputation as a social leader and has been active in church work, being assistant superintendent of the Methodist church and an active worker in the Epworth League.

The groom is claimed as a part resident of Palatine, as his duties as a teacher of music has kept him among our people a large share of his time for the past ten or twelve years. As a musician he is well known both in Chicago and this vicinity. He graduated from the Chicago Conservatory of Music and last year from a New York conservatory. He has composed several pieces for the piano which have been highly spoken of by the best of composers. He is a young man of high character and genteel manners, who is respected by all.

If wishes will bring happiness the happy couple will be blessed in abundance. Those present from abroad were: Miss Hattie Tower, Miss Nida Fehlman and Miss Gertrude Stewart of Chicago.—Palatine Review.

Church Notes.

Last Sunday morning at the M. E. church, four children were baptized by Rev. T. E. Ream, and Rev. Thorne of Highland Park.

The Unions defeated the Libertyvilles Sunday by a score of 7 to 5, making it their fourth straight victory.

The funeral of George Baker, sr., occurred last Tuesday. The remains were taken to Long Grove for burial.

Among the Barrington callers on Wednesday were Messrs. L. Clifford, G. Walz, W. Hill, Ed. Dorr, Wm. Buesching and A. B. Mitchell.

Mrs. H. Schaefer has been re-engaged to cater to the golfers. Her services are greatly appreciated by them. In a recent issue of the Wauconda Leader there was an account of some one else having charge, which was all a mistake, it seems.

Of Interest to Wheelmen.

Why don't the bicycle riders of Barrington organize a local club? Their are a great many advantages to be gained by being a member of such a club, both socially and for the advancement of good roads. They could accomplish a great deal for their own pleasure around home by having the entire streets in town cleared of the broken glass and scraps of old tin and iron, which are so disagreeable to the bicycle rider. Everyone interested in good roads should push this along.

DAILY WORK OF CONGRESS.

Tariff Legislation Occupies the Senate.

FINANCE COMMITTEE UPHELD.

Amendments Offered by Democrats Rejected—Good Progress Being Made on the Bill—Wool Schedule Provokes a Stubborn Contest.

Thursday, June 24.

A stubborn contest over the duties on manufactured woolen goods occupied the attention of the senate. Many amendments were proposed to reduce the rates, but these were rejected by decisive majorities. Less than five pages were disposed of during the day, carrying the senate through paragraph 370, the first of the paragraphs relating to carpets.

Friday, June 25.

The senate completed the wool schedule, the silk schedule and the tobacco schedule of the tariff bill, and with this accomplished the tariff leaders had the satisfaction of knowing that all the schedules of the bill and the free list had been gone over once. There now remains only to go through the bill a second time, passing on the items passed over. The tobacco schedule went through with little friction after the committee had advanced the duty slightly on wrapper and leaf tobacco.

Saturday, June 26.

Saturday, June 26.—An abrupt and startling halt in the tariff debate occurred in the senate when, in the midst of a passionate speech, Senator Pettigrew (silver Rep.) of South Dakota was stricken with paralysis of the vocal cords, which brought his vehement speech to a close with a sentence half uttered. Senator Pettigrew was removed to his home. He rallied rapidly, recovered his voice and was pronounced in no danger.

Monday, June 28.

The senators talked about trusts. The announcement was made that an anti-trust amendment would be reported to the senate. During the debate Mr. Hoar said that while the question of trusts could be dealt with to some extent by striking at their imports as in the law of 1894, yet he felt that the most serious phases of the evil must be dealt with by the states.

SEVEN LIVES LOST.

Fatal Wreck on the Wabash Railroad Near Missouri City, Mo.

Seven lives were lost by Saturday night's wreck on the Wabash road near Missouri City, Mo. A correct list of the dead is as follows: W. S. Mills, postal clerk, St. Louis; O. M. Smith, postal clerk, St. Louis; Gustave A. Smith, postal clerk, St. Louis; Charles Winter, postal clerk, St. Louis; F. W. Brink, postal clerk, St. Louis; Edward Grindrob, baggage-master, St. Louis; Charles Greasley, brakeman, St. Louis.

In ordinary weather the creek at which the accident occurred is almost dry. The storm of Saturday night, which was almost a cloudburst, had swollen the little stream to a torrent. The flood carried away a wagon bridge a short distance above the Wabash trestle. The wreck of this bridge was hurled down upon the railroad trestle and carried away a row of wooden supports in the center. The locomotive struck the trestle and passed over, but the tender went through with the wreck. The baggage car and the mail car, which followed, pitched into the stream end first. The smoker, next behind, followed. The chair car next, also plunged in upon the mass of wreckage. The front end of the sleeper, next in the rear, jammed into the protruding end of the chair car, and was thus prevented from following the others into the chasm.

Lives and Property Lost.

The town of Kolomea, in Galicia, has been flooded by the rising of the river Pruth. The bridge between Kolomea and Turka has been swept away. The collapse took place while a train was crossing. Five railway carriages fell in a great heap together, and there is no definite report as to the number of passengers killed.

Col. Tom Ochiltree Ill.

Col. Tom Ochiltree, of Texas, has been dangerously ill at Chamberlin's Hotel in this city for three months. A recent examination disclosed the fact that he was affected with organic disease, and several operations have been performed. It is thought he will recover.

New German Foreign Minister.

It is semi-officially announced that owing to the death of Baron Marbach von Biebertstein, the German emperor has temporarily intrusted the portfolio of minister of foreign affairs to Herr von Bulow.

MEMORIAL MONUMENT FOR MRS. STOWE.

As the result of untiring efforts on the part of the Harriet Beecher Stowe Memorial Monument company a bronze statue to the memory of the great authoress will be erected soon in Hartford, Conn. It was not generally known that a monument was contemplated until the publication of a letter in a February number of the Courant from her son, the Rev. Charles E. Howe, protesting against the erection of a monument by the public. Mr. Howe urged that a scholarship in one of the colleges for colored people throughout the South would be a monument far more in keeping with his mother's character, and that her children would suitably mark the grave at Andover. In reply to this letter the committee maintained ed that Mrs. Stowe had outlived private citizenship and the public claimed its right to pay homage as it chose. Although the bill authorizing the appropriation of $25,000 has not yet been passed the amount is being rapidly collected by subscription. Sculptor Clark W. Noble has finished the plaster model and says the statue will be completed within a few months. It will be of heroic size. The base and pedestal will be of granite. Upon the stone is to rest the bronze figure of Mrs. Stowe seated in a Greek chair, and clad in graceful flowing robes. At the right the suppliant figure of Uncle Tom stretches forth to her his brawny arms, from which hang broken shackles. At the left of the base is a laurel wreath.

Leaves Two Millions to Charity.

The will of the late John B. Curtis of Deering, Me., has been presented for probate. The estate is conservatively estimated at $2,000,000, and with the exception of small bequests, will ultimately all go to charity. Much of the property is in the west. Mr. Curtis was born in Bradford. That town is generously remembered with a bequest of $20,000 for a free public library.

New England Will Be There.

Secretary Dowling of the National League of Republican clubs reports excellent progress in securing speakers and assurances of large delegations to the July convention. The New England states particularly promise to be well represented.

Refuse to Secede.

The National Boot and Shoe Workers' union decided not to withdraw from affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and join the Socialist Trade and Labor Alliance.

Will Not Use Machines.

The Kansas state printer-elect has announced that the use of typesetting machines will be abolished in the state printing office with the beginning of his administration on Thursday next.

Maheer and Sharkey Matched.

Peter Maheer, the heavy-weight champion pugilist of Ireland, and Tom Sharkey, the "sailor lad" of San Francisco, are matched to fight to a finish.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

THE importance of making better cheese is becoming more and more evident every year, as it is now apparent that we must practically consume full 90 per cent of the cheese made, says John Gould in Practical Farmer. New facts are being brought out, among which is the action of ferments upon the curing and quality of the cheese. At the cheese makers' convention, in Wisconsin, Prof. Russell had something to say in opposition to the French views upon bacterial action. He prefaced his remarks by saying that usually the trouble lay in the carelessness of the patrons in caring for the milk, a carelessness which in some cases became criminal. Yet the makers could not all lay blame on the patrons, they should be posted, so as to instruct these in the care of the milk, and give a good example by neatness in the factory. He believed the whey-vat was responsible for more trouble than anything else, and condemned the dirty ones in strong terms. Bacteria were the best allies which the maker had, and it was only the obnoxious ones which should be fought. He showed a chart which illustrated the number of bacteria in cheese when five days old as being about four to five millions in grain, increasing rapidly in the next eight days to eighty or ninety millions, and then increasing in the next twenty-three days to eighteen millions, and then gradually diminishing until 197 days old, when only a few hundred thousand are left. Another chart showed where milk had four million lactic-acid-producing bacteria, 700,000 digesting or peptonizing bacteria, and about 350,000 which produce gas. Also how a 13-days-old cheese had 67,500,000 lactic-acid bacteria, while the gas-producing ones remained as original and the digesting ones were reduced. When the cheese was twenty-four days old the lactic-acid bacteria were 60,270,000, while the gas and digesting were reduced. When the cheese was thirty-six days old the lactic-acid bacteria were reduced to 16,900,000, and the gas and digesting ones were still more reduced. At fifty-two days the lactic-acid bacteria were only 11,473,000, and the others nearly disappeared, and at seventy-four days only 6,682,000 lactic-acid bacteria remained. Hence the lactic-acid bacteria is the true ally of the maker.

Standard Varieties of Chickens. The fullness and oblong shape is typical of the Brahma and is characteristic of prolific birds. The curves of neck and back are facsimile in shape of the outlines of an egg. In plumage the male is pure white, excepting hackle, tail, and flights, which are black, and white striped with black. Any other color but white and black is against the standard-bred bird. The hackle is white with a black stripe extending down the center of each feather and tapering to a point near the extremity (see fig. 10). The tail feathers are black, and sickles are glossy greenish black. The shanks are well feathered, with the feathering extending down the middle toe; the toe feathering may be white or white sprinkled with black, pure white preferred. A small pea comb, broad crown, projects over the eyes; bright-red face, wattles and earlobes are essential to a good head. The shanks and toes are bright yellow. The Brahma female is much like the male in head qualities, having broad comb, projecting well over the eyes, and small pea comb. The head of female should be masculine in appearance, indicating great control and will power. The head is white; hackle, white striped with black, as in male; cape, white and black, but is completely covered by hackle when the bird stands erect; tail, black, excepting the two highest main tail feathers, which may be edged with white; tail coverts, one or more rows, distinctly covering a part of both sides of the main tail, two being preferable, are black edged with white. The Light Brahma is a valuable bird for the farm. They have always been made to pay for their keep and have seldom been set aside by any who have bred them. They are the largest of domestic poultry and do as well in confinement in small runs as on free range. As layers they will average from twelve to thirteen dozen of eggs a year, and lay exceptionally well in winter. Their eggs are large, about 7 to a pound, of a rich brown color and excellent flavor. For table purposes they are good; they do not mature as early as do the varieties of the American class, yet they are hardy, and can be raised with as much ease as any of the earlier-maturing varieties. As sitters and mothers they are fair.

The Dark Brahma is not so popular as the Light—the difficulty being in PAIR OF WHITE WYANDOTTES. breeding them true to feather. Their delicately marked plumage is extremely pretty when bred to standard requirements, but if not so bred it becomes most disagreeable and unsatisfactory to the breeder. The head and neck of a Dark Brahma male are similar to those of the Light, the head being white and the hackle rather more striped. The back is nearly white, a little black appearing here and there. The black should predominate between the shoulders, but is nearly hidden by the hackle flowing over it. The saddle feathers are, like the hackle, silvery white, striped with black, which should be distinct. As the feathers approach the tail the stripes become broader till they merge into the tail coverts, which are rich, glossy green black, with a margin or lacing of white. The tail is pure black, with green gloss. The wing coverts are black, forming a distinct black bar across the middle of the wings, while the ends of the secondaries have a large black spot on the end, making the top edges of the wing appear almost black. The remainder of the secondaries are white on the lower half and black on the upper. The flights are all black, except a narrow fringe of white on the lower edge. The breast is black; the thighs and fluff either black, or black very slightly mottled with white.

The Foreign Horse Market.

Mr. Alexander Galbraith of Wisconsin, who is giving large attention to the foreign shipment of horses, in a contribution to an agricultural paper gives it as his opinion that the foreign market will take from five to six million dollars worth of horses in the year to come. He states that it is gradually enlarging, until now not only the United Kingdom, but France, Germany and Belgium are buyers of any of our horses that are good enough to buy. The great trouble with us is that there are few that are good enough. If the horses that we have today were such as Europe wants, there would not be enough shipping available to carry across the Atlantic the numbers that would be eagerly bought. This point should not be lost sight of by those of little faith in the future of the horse department of the farm. It is now three or four years since we began to urge farmers to breed horses for 1900. We were told then that we were mistaken, that the horse business was done for, that we were entering upon the horseless age, etc. We do think that the breeding of horses that the world does not want is as unprofitable business as any in which the farmer can engage, but that the breeding of either draft horses, heavy or light coaches, roadsters and saddle horses will be in the years to come as profitable a business as can be conducted on the farm. In another year farmers will see the utter folly of allowing the good, or moderately good, draft colts to go at public sales at from $10 to $12 for yearlings and at from $15 to $20 for coming two-year-olds. The home demand will have absorbed the supply of these youngsters as fast as they come to market, and there will be a foreign demand for the best, limited only by the supply.

JAPAN WANTS THE ISLAND.

Asiatic Nation Casts Covetous Eyes on Hawaii.

THE RESULTS MAY BE SERIOUS.

Subjects of the Mikado Would Be Barred from Citizenship in the United States in the Event of Annexation—Strong Protest Is Made.

Hawaiians in Washington insist that the reason for the protest of Japan against Hawaii's annexation to the United States is that Japan really desires to acquire the islands herself.

At present there are 25,000 Japanese in the islands, with large property rights, and under the present conditions they are entitled to become citizens of Hawaii. In case of annexation these Japanese could not become citizens of the United States. They would lose the right to become citizens and to vote, and the large interests owned by Japanese citizens in the islands would be greatly jeopardized.

SWEDISH BAPTISTS.

Annual Convention in Session at Rockford, Ill.

Thursday was Sunday school day at the state convention of the Swedish Baptists. E. Nordlander, the state Sunday school missionary, gave a lengthy report, which showed the work of the last year to have been most satisfactory. The ministerial union of the association elected Rev. J. A. Carlson, Austin, president.

At Friday's sessions of the state Swedish Baptist convention much time was given over to the reports of committees. Officers were elected by the Sunday school union of the association. John Magnusson, Englewood, was chosen president.

The closing sessions of the state conference of the Swedish Baptists were held Sunday. The selection of the place of meeting next year was left to the executive board.

Eighth Annual Convention of the Church at St. Paul.

The United Lutheran synod adopted a motion Thursday that all patent medicine advertisements be taken out of the church paper, the Lutheraner.

Nine preachers having transgressed the constitution of the church article 4, section 1, and also spurned the resolution of 1895 with reference to the ordination of theological candidates, were practically excommunicated from the church.

Indians are ghost dancing in the Camas prairie near Hailey, Idaho. The settlers are greatly alarmed over their action, and have appealed to have them removed.

Riot at Key West, Fla.

Key West, Fla., was on the verge of a race war Friday night. Several hundred negroes were quartered at Jackson park ready to take part in any outbreak which might come about. One white man was killed and several others wounded. The negroes gathered to protect Sylvester Johnson, a negro, who attacked four white women, and, it is charged, assaulted one.

Calhoun May Be Comptroller

President McKinley has offered the office of comptroller of the treasury to W. J. Calhoun of Danville, the special commissioner who recently returned from Cuba. Mr. Calhoun has not yet decided whether he will accept, and will not give the president an answer until he has consulted the members of his family.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings—Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

Acting Governor Northcott has ordered the issue of a writ of election in McHenry county August 3, to select a county judge to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles H. Donnelly.

The members of the state board of pardons assembled last week and expected to organize. It was given out that Richard Lemon of Clinton would be elected president and Judge R. N. McAuley of Olney secretary, but after a conference it was determined to defer organization until the law creating the board goes into effect.

For sweet charity's sake Elgin went nearly daft last Tuesday. That is to say, the Elgin City Railway company, in order to assist the Elgin Women's club to pay off a debt of $1,000 on the Sherman hospital, which ten years ago it founded, turned over its cars to the women for the day, allowing them 60 per cent of the receipts, and the whole population, to assist a good work, spent the day in trolley car riding.

The graduating class of the Noponset high school had a picnic at Kewanee Lake, and on the way home in the evening the driver, L. O. Gardner, asked one of the girls to sit with him. She declined and Gardner threw the lines over the doubletrees and lashed the horses into a run. As the vehicle rounded a turn it upset and the occupants were all thrown out. Every one of the ten girls were injured, four seriously crippled.

August Brechner, a coal miner who for years has been a resident of Peru, was, with his 8-year-old son, drowned in the Illinois river at Peru Tuesday evening. They were in a skiff, loaded so heavily with wood that the stern swamped. Both were thrown into the river and were drowned within fifty feet of shore. The father's body was recovered, but the son's body has not yet been found. The drowned man leaves a widow and family.

The state board of agriculture has given the work of drawing plans and superintending the construction of about $50,000 worth of buildings on the state fair grounds this year to Reeves & Baillie of Peoria. There is to be a poultry house costing nearly $20,000, a stock pavilion 300 feet in diameter, and other contractors have been invited to compete in the bidding for the constructive work, and all bids are required to be in by June 30.

Joliet.—Despite the fact that numerous rumors prevail that the Joliet plant of the Illinois Steel company is to be withdrawn from that company and conducted under a separate management, with O. W. Potter at the head, the local officials of the works positively deny all knowledge of any such move. None of them, from Superintendent Catlin down, it is asserted, know anything about the change. Notwithstanding these denials, there is a belief in Joliet that a change of some kind or another affecting the local plant is in progress. Another significant rumor is that the blast furnaces have been sold to a man named Charles Wheeler.

Many Peoria representatives at the various educational institutions are upholding the credit of their city in excellent shape. Dexter White, son of the late Prof. White, who was the founder of the old Peoria normal, has just returned from Europe, and next year will occupy the chair of applied chemistry at Ann Arbor university. He is a graduate of that institution of learning, and at one time did some work at Champaign as a teacher. He is a Peoria High school graduate. Miss Jennie White, his sister, is to graduate this week at Ann Arbor, with honors. Miss Clara Barelay completes her first year at Ann Arbor this week. She has been made a member of one of the principal committees, something almost unheard of for an "infant" as the freshmen are called.—Peoria Journal.

Joliet.—There are no new developments in the stone quarry strike, but if Sheriff Francis stands by his declaration, made the other afternoon, something of an unusual nature will happen. The sheriff declares he will put a stop to the assembling of strikers in and about the quarries where men are willing to work. He will proceed against the strikers by virtue of the authority vested in him. The strikers paraded through the quarry section yesterday morning. Nearly all the quarries were idle. At the Pioneer twenty-five or thirty men were working. Realizing there might be trouble, the sheriff was telephoned to, and he, with several deputies, got to the quarry before the strikers did. After some parley and an unsuccessful attempt to prevail upon the men to come out, the strikers moved to Rogan's quarry. Here they found a few men at work, but the sheriff's posse got there in time to prevent trouble.

Trade With Canada.

From the Dominion standpoint Mr. John W. Russell contributes to The North American Review his idea of the trade situation as between Canada and the United States.

Mr. Russell's view is not a hopeful one. Six times has Canada endeavored to negotiate with the United States a mutually advantageous commercial treaty. Each time she has failed. The United States apparently will not grant a reciprocity agreement unless Canada discriminates against Great Britain itself in favor of the American republic. That, Mr. Russell declares, Canadian loyalty and patriotism would never consent to do. In the new Canadian schedule of import duties recently gone into effect there is no adverse discrimination against the United States, whatever interested editors may say, neither is there any retaliatory feature in anticipation of the Dingley tariff. American corn is even placed upon the free list altogether.

The United States might well afford, therefore, to come to terms with Canada, in Mr. Russell's judgment, but he finds there is at Washington absolute indifference in regard to the matter. If the United States would not insist in any treaty that might be made on having greater advantages than any other nation, even Great Britain, then Russell thinks terms might be made that would be mutually beneficial. The Dominion produces better wheat and barley—Mr. Russell might also have added better cheese—than the states, while the states produce better and more abundant corn crops. Canadians along some parts of the border would find it cheaper, under a trade treaty, to get coal from the states than from Nova Scotia. New England, on the other hand, could get it more cheaply from Nova Scotia than from Pennsylvania.

Still, in the present state of indifference in the United States, and especially under our new protective tariff law when it shall come into operation, Mr. Russell sees no immediate prospect of such mutually advantageous interchange of commodities. Neither, for that matter, does anybody else.

There is a politico-historic question of the present day which threatens to go into history along with the unsolved mystery of the man in the iron mask. It is the question as to what made the Jameson raid in England and so suddenly and inconclusively. It is well established that Dr. Jameson made a shameful and utterly unjustifiable raid with a company of hostile Englishmen into the heart of the friendly Boer country. A court of investigation into his conduct sat duly. It developed that certain speculators were going to make great money out of African shares in a manner in some way connected with this raid. There were certain telegrams sent from Africa to London that would show much light on the matter. Copies of the telegrams were in existence. Here the investigation came dead against a stone wall and stopped. Gossip said the telegrams would show the Prince of Wales to be among the speculators. The telegrams were not produced.

There are girls in Arizona. We know it by reading what two of them did near Tombstone. They were riding their bicycles when they saw a man in front of them scattering something along the road. They came up and found it was broken glass. The fellow was a tramp, and he thought to pay off his spite at the human race by puncturing people's bicycle tires. The girls saw him hide in the bushes after sprinkling the broken glass freely. They went into the bushes after him and laid hold of him. "Come out here and pick up this glass!" they ordered him. He tried to get away, but the girls got hold of a couple of sticks and held him and belabored him till he was forced to obey them and pick up the fragments of glass. Those are girls who would not make their masculine friends shove their wheels up hill.

In the midst of one of the most magnificent of the ancient Hellenic battles the twin deities, Castor and Pollux, descended from heaven and were seen fighting on the side of the Greeks. In 1897 Castor and Pollux must have become so disgusted with the modern mongrels who call themselves Greeks as to flap their wings and soar across the line, conveying victory to the Turks.

NEW YORK'S POOR ROADS.

Important Reasons For Highway Improvement Throughout the State.

That New York is behind the times in the matter of good roads is recognized by all who have given the subject any thought. The New York Tribune, which has long been a warm advocate of highway improvement, offers suggestions which are worthy of the highest consideration. It says:

First class roads, if not built by the state, can be afforded only in regions inhabited by persons of more wealth than the average farmer. Near the large cities are great areas tenanted by those who have business in the city, but prefer to live in the country. Here the property values are much higher than in regions exclusively devoted to farming interests, and the taxes being proportionately higher, it is possible to spend more money on the roads.

Under our present law the people of the state work out their road taxes without intelligent supervision, and often not only is the labor wasted, but the roads are spoiled. The faults of the roads which could be remedied without extra expense in labor are mainly these:

First.—The roads are too narrow and too high in the center. On account of the narrowness the wheels all run in the same track, and the extreme curvature of the roadbed compels the wheels to run on the edge instead of the surface of the tires, the combination of the two faults causing the formation of deep ruts.

Second.—Loose stones are allowed to remain in the roads, and the work is not directed toward keeping the roads smooth.

The legislation hitherto proposed has only aimed at a few state roads. This is insufficient. Trained supervision is needed over all roads.

The important reasons for road improvement throughout the state are three—first, the desirability of reducing the cost of hauling; second, the importance of making most of the roads fit for pleasure driving, thereby attracting to the rural districts in summer thousands of people who create a local market for various farm products; third, the economic principle of preventing the great waste of labor which is now fruitlessly expended in making bad roads.

PRESERVE THE ROADS.

Making the Horses Travel in the Wheel Tracks Is a Good Plan.

E. D. Rightmire of Burlington county, N. J., says: "Farmers in this county will travel miles out of their way to get on a stone road and save time and expense by so doing. Therefore, as to the intrinsic value of stone roads, they themselves are their own vindicator. I do not think it necessary to stone all roads in the county, but the most prominent ones should be as seen as the appropriation could be made without incumbering the county with bonds.

"When a stone road is completed, the general impression is that it will last forever without any attention, which is a serious mistake. They need as much attention as a good gravel road—i. e., in the extreme heat of summer the most essential thing to be done is to water with watering carts and follow by rolling. With wide tires and wide whiffletrees on heavy wagons used it would not be required to roll often, as the wheels with wide tires would act as a roller instead of rutting, as do the narrow ones. The greatest wear upon stone roads is caused, first, by the calks on the shoes of the horses; second, by the wheels of the heavy wagons. But by wide tires there would be comparatively little wear by the wagon. Thus most of it is caused by the horses, which can be overcome to a very great extent by the horse traveling in the wheel track."

VALUE OF GOOD ROADS.

Their Importance Is Not Yet Understood by the People.

Each succeeding year records a growth in the sentiment for good roads. A few years ago it was a subject that aroused little interest except among a few enthusiasts. Gradually there has crept into the minds of the people a feeling that our highways are not all that could be desired. The St. Paul Globe, referring to this, says:

Even yet nobody estimates truly the importance and value to the people of systematic general road improvement. The cheapening of production and the saving to the producer by a system of improved highways would be greater than all the reductions in railroad rates that have been made or can be made if they were carried down to the actual cost of operation.

The amelioration of social differences in the country, the abolition of that isolation which is the great drawback to rural life and the actual addition to the cash value of farm properties are benefits positively incalculable. So that, from the practical point of view, there is no subject relating to the development of the country and the prosperity and happiness of its people that can take precedence of the construction of good roads.

The men who would rather pay $100 a year for shoeing horses and repairing wagons than $10 a year for a good road tax are still in the majority in many regions.—Philadelphia Ledger.

John Cruver arrived at our village Monday and will spend a few weeks in our berg.

Mrs. Amos of Chicago spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. B. K. Duers.

Miss Ida Ladd who has been spending a few days in the city returned home Friday.

Miss Ruth Neville returned home Thursday after spending a few weeks at Grays Lake.

Miss Nettie Murray who has been attending school is home to spend her summer vacation.

Mr. Wolfenberger of Valparaiso, Ind., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Green.

Mrs. John Sinnott who has been spending a few days in the city returned home Friday.

Dr. Muffat of Chicago is back to our village to breathe the country air again for a few weeks.

Mrs. Ambras Hill and children of Chicago are spending a few days with relatives in our village.

Quite a number from here attended the ball game at Lake Zurich Sunday. They report a good game.

F. Horton of Elgin is spending a few days with friends and relatives in this place and vicinity.

Miss Jennie Sinnott, who has been spending the past few months in the city, returned home Monday.

Mrs. Wm. Clough and daughter, Bessie, went to Evanston Saturday to spend a few days with friends.

Willis Powers of Barrington is visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Powers, at present writing.

E. L. Harrison and J. F. Grovenor attended the Commencement exercises at Barrington last Thursday evening.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. V. D. Kimball Wednesday morning, a little girl. Vernie is now the happy man of our village.

Mr. Chas. McDonald who has been spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. F. Hammond returned to his home at Clyde, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Mr. and Mrs. Whitcomb of Chicago came out from the city Saturday and will spend a few weeks with Miss Mary Glynn.

The teamsters have been kept quite busy for the past two weeks hauling gravel for the village. The back street running from the Oakland hotel to Miss Glynn's residence has been graded up and covered with a heavy coat of gravel and when it gets packed down it will make a fine boulevard.

The City Fathers say "No more scorching on the streets." The cyclists must be a little more careful how they ride down the main streets hereafter.

E. A. Golding has sold his steamboat, the Lilah May, to some Chicago parties, who are stopping down on the river. The sailboat will take its place on the lake this summer.

The army worm has made its appearance quite extensively in Lake County, particularly in the vicinity of Volo, where it is claimed that the sloughs on a few farms there are being devastated by the pest.

The proposed base ball game, Wauconda vs Ivanhoe, Wednesday, was a failure, as the Ivanhoe team failed to appear. Our boys were determined to play ball nevertheless, so they "chose-up" and played a seven-inning game. The result of the score was 11 to 12 in favor of Wauconda.

Monday was the scene of a trial in our village of two parties who, Saturday evening, were looking for horse blankets and whips. They found a blanket and whip in John Maether's buggy, just what they were looking for, but John happened to see the performance and Monday Marshal Reilly brought them to town for trial. They paid a little $4 and costs apiece after returning the stolen property, and were then released. We hope this will teach them a lesson for their future welfare.

Where will you celebrate, at McHenry, the 3d, Lake Zurich, the 4th, or at the M. W. A. picnic, Slusser's Grove, on the banks of Grays Lake, July 5th? If you don't celebrate too hard the first two days perhaps you can take in all three places, but if you want to see a good ball game go to Lake Zurich or Grays Lake, and see what the Lake County Unions can do. They meet the Everetts at Grays Lake the 5th, and we expect it will be the best game of the season. If you want to see a good game don't miss this one.

The legislature has passed a law in regard to thistles, briars, burdock and other noxious weeds that generally line the roadways every summer, go to seed in the fall and sprout out in manifold quantities again in the spring. Beginning next July, from the first day until August 20th, every farmer is required to remove weeds along the highways contiguous to his property. For this work he is allowed $1.25 per day, and the amount will be credited upon his road tax. If the work is not done by August 20th, the supervisor is empowered to get the work done and have the same charged to the property owners.

For Bicycle Riders.

The mere fact that a dozen or 20 wheelmen are off together for a day's run does not give them the right to take possession of any country hotel they may stop at for dinner, nor does it give them the right to take possession of the road along which they are riding, nor the right to become noisy and troublesome to the people whom they may meet either on the road or where they stop. There have been so many instances of late in the vicinity of large cities where a dozen young men, individually well bred and gentlemanly, have made themselves so disagreeable that hotels and stopping places have been obliged to make certain rules, such as preventing the wheelmen from coming into the dining room in bicycle costume or from sitting in the public rooms, except perhaps the cafe, for the proprietors have found that the moment the members of a party dress in civilian costume they again realize their responsibility as individuals to the community, and that while they remain in their bicycle costume they seem to think they have no responsibility whatsoever.

This sort of behavior does more harm to the general bicycling fraternity than can be well estimated. A few men going to a place and making themselves obnoxious to all there will spoil that particular house for bicyclists for many a day to come. The others are treated like intruders. Each one is shunned by people for fear he is another of the first gang. Regulations such as the above are posted up in plain view, making him, so to speak, a restricted person, and in general many quiet people who are fond of bicycling trips have their pleasure marred simply from this lack of responsibility on the part of a few who have preceded them.—Harper's Round Table.

Harmony Will Do the Work.

Under the stimulus of their new state law the towns in Connecticut last year expended $1,827,976 on roads, and while there is no such incentive in this state a work greater, in proportion to the wealth and population, can be easily accomplished if all the interests concerned work together harmoniously.—New York Post.

THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNER.

BY FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.
O say, can you see, by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming—
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, through the clouds of the fight,
O'er the ramparts we watched were so gallantly streaming!
And the rocket's red glare, the bombs bursting in air,
Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there;
O say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave?

On that shore dimly seen through the mists of the deep,
Where the foe's haughty host in dread silence reposes,
What is that which the breeze, o'er the towering steep,
As it fitfully blows, now conceals, now discloses?
Now it catches the gleam of the morning's first beam,
In full glory reflected now shines on the stream;
'Tis the star-spangled banner; O long may it wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave;
And the star-spangled banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

O! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand
Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n rescued land
Praise the power that hath made and preserved us a nation.
Then conquer we must, when our cause it is just,
And this be our motto—"In God is our trust!"
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Our Country's Flag.

The Hon. Joel R. Poinsett, a native of South Carolina, and one of her most gifted sons, during the latter part of the administration of John Quincy Adams, it will be remembered, represented the United States at the capital of Mexico, which was then much distracted by internal dissensions. While Mr. Poinsett resided there, the city was captured by one of the contending factions, and he and his family incurred no small degree of personal danger, from the violence of the soldiers, by whom they were suspected of affording concealment to certain obnoxious individuals. In the height of the nullification controversy after his return, in an address delivered to the people of Charleston, the following eloquent passage occurs:

"Wherever I have been, I have been proud of being a citizen of this great republic, and, in the remotest corners of the earth, have walked erect and secure under that banner which our opponents would tear down and trample under foot. I was in Mexico when that city was taken by assault. The house of the American ambassador was then, as it ought to be, the refuge of the distressed and persecuted; it was pointed out to the infuriated soldiery as a place filled with their enemies. They rushed to the attack. My only defence was the flag of my country, and it was flung out at the instant that hundreds of muskets were leveled at us. Mr. Mason and myself placed ourselves beneath its waving folds. We did not blench, for we felt strong in the protecting arm of this mighty republic. We told them that the flag that waved over us was the banner of that nation to whose example they owed their liberty, and to whose protection they were indebted for their safety. The scene changed as by enchantment, and the same men who were on the point of attacking my house and menacing the inhabitants, cheered the flag of this country, and placed sentinels to protect it from outrage. Fellow-citizens, in such a moment as that, would it have been any protection to me and mine to have proclaimed myself a Carolinian? Should I have been here to tell you this tale, if I had hung out the Palmetto and the single star? Be assured that to be respected abroad, we must maintain our place in the union!"

NEW ENGLAND FOURTH OF JULY.

EVER memorable and glorious Fourth! The sun went down last night beyond the hills, like an Olympian chariot, with unfurled streamers, flinging up golden clouds behind its wheels. Along the west floated the hazy drapery of retiring day, and the horizon glowed with the prophetic glory of the coming morn. Nature braced her sides for ten thousand successive concussions of gunpowder, and the atmosphere cleared itself in ominous preparation for considerable smoke. Yesterday, "Birnam Wood came to Dunsinane," or to town, and began to stand up prim, before boots and beer shops. Pine, cedar, spruce, all look spruce, and straight, and natural, as though trying to make people believe they sprung up and grew there in a single night, like the gourd of Jonah. If another Macbeth may take no alarm, Delavan and his army may, in prospect of bacchanalian commemorations.

At nine o'clock last night were heard the first preludes of the great day, in the sound of fire crackers, squibs and flying serpents—not unlike the flying serpents sent to punish the ancient people, but without a brazen serpent to cure the bitten. All the poles bear flags, instead of whose stripes and stars inflame, in many a youthful bosom, that sort of patriotism which finds escapement in torpedoes and fiery-winged reptiles.

The booming cannon at midnight ushers in the eventful anniversary, and now,

"No sleep till morn," or thereafter! You begin to dream of the olden time that "tried souls," when men started from their couches at the roar of a foreign lion; and there!—crack!—near your window goes off a gun, or something worse. You console yourself, however, with the thought this may be the first and the last salutation so near at hand; and with this reflection you are falling into a delicious lapse, when, there!—another is heard, nearer still. And such another! You listen, and wonder whether the instrument burst or not, almost hoping it did, in order to terminate this serenade of thunder. Well, you about conclude an actual explosion took place, and you begin to fear the juvenile Jupiter has been kicked over and wounded in the cause of his country. In your sympathy for the fallen patriot, you listen anew, and are tempted to turn out to his relief, when—by the shadow of Pluto and all his subterranean armory!—right under your window, bellows such another gunpowder fulmination as you never expect to hear again. No matter, however, for the occasion gives moment to the most trifling circumstances, and you feel reconciled with thoughts on the blessedness of liberty. Yet, with a remnant of desperation, you wish all the sulphur and saltpetre of the under kingdom thrust into some piece of artillery, like that which Milton ascribes to the inventive genius of Satan, and touched off at once and forever.

But the sun is up, and the "rock-ribbed hills" tremble at dawn with the boom of a hundred cannonading echoes. From yonder tall staff streams the banner high and gay in the morning light and breeze—a ribbon sail strung out from the fleecy cloud on which the angel of freedom rides in the heavens over the nations of earth. Angel of Columbia, weep not! for though millions beneath thee groan, yet a little while longer, and the shout that rings from Maine to Oregon shall be the shout of a race redeemed from the last bond. Now mellowly mingles the sound of martial music with the morning air. Gay troops march, with gay plumes and glistening arms, along the thoroughfare, as proud of themselves as the boys are who march by their side, in anarchial file, keeping time with fife and drum. Room, room, now, for the land-sons of Neptune, with coats of many hues and Joseph shirts, dragging their tridents behind, trimmed and trusty for the raging conflagration. And then comes Flora, with her fairy band, decked in green and blossom array, moving onward in gentle and smiling procession, like a flowery island floating down the meadow-stream, to the music of nymphs and the rippling of Eden waters. The bells ring in joyous peal, and each stroke of the metal thrills the tramping multitude with a shock of indefinable enthusiasm. Great thoughts of the glory and greatness of the country swell in many a bosom, wholly unused to any extraordinary emotions. With what profound awe and admiration does that youth stand yonder in the street, now wildly gazing, with eyes and mouth wide open, first at the crowd, and then at the banners strung from chimney to chimney, and steeple to steeple! The town folks take him to be an unripe vegetable, just because he wears what he pleases—boots for service, more than for squeaking—coat, bob-skirted and gray, rather than rudely flaunting, and a bell-crowned hat capricious enough to hold all the gingerbread he can afford to purchase. Well, if he has no right to look as he pleases, nor to thrust his hands deep into his pockets, in support of the independent indifference of his position, and on such a day, of what avail are all the boasted privileges of the country?

It is now towards burning noon. All the shops and factories have turned out their flaunting troops of fashion and beauty. Long processions, streaming with perspiration and begrimed with clouds of the mother element, are completing their everlasting circuits through the populous streets. Squads of juvenile followers have fallen off, and musical instruments begin to sound as though their owners, instead of desiring to give out much more liquid martial melody, were in need of some sort of liquid themselves. The van members of the procession, having ended their journey, stand quite at ease, converting their hats into fans; and, considering the circumstances, look with very cool complacency upon the unfortunate ones who are left to bring up the rear. Soda fountains and small beer establishments are now in the height of operation. Phiz!—crack!—popple!—popple! and expelled stopples go whizzing and booming from the foaming muzzles of angry bottles, now glad to break loose and take revenge for past confinement. A thousand throats are gurgling the delicious liquids, and twice that number of lips are smack.

NOW WILDLY GAZING.

ing, expressive of grateful satisfaction, much to the aggravation of innumerable youngsters who stand looking on, mournful from the want of a few coppers, to enjoy similar indulgences.

Beneath beeking pavilions, in crowded halls, or happily in the green grove, at last gather the eager host. Fans flit like swarms of cooling phantoms before glowing faces, and the orator of the day opens with the ominous "Fellowcitizens!" For an hour he sinks and soars, generalizes from Rome to Plymouth, and becomes lost in the immensity of themes. But now the grand festival is at hand. Toasts, music, cheers—and, then, there is no calculating how easily the responsibilities of the country weigh upon the minds of the well-feasted multitude.

The day declines and the sun hovers in the west like a Roman candle, flinging its hazy light over the hills. Or, there it glares, with a great red eye, towards the east, as though winking in defiance of the monarchical powers beyond the Atlantic. The streets begin to echo the tread of flagging feet. Day pales into twilight, and, as the western star comes out, a rocket ascends to greet it, and mock its distance. As darkness creeps over the landscape, lawns and parks darken with human throngs; while windows, balconies and housetops tremble under the weight of pyrotechnical gazers. Shout after shout rises through the smoky air like the murmurings of the sea, as the heavens glow with eccentric fires, in mimicry of the fireworks of the firmament. But the hour has gone by, and in the gloom of night the weary wanderers lie to their homes. Silence and darkness draw their curtains over a sleeping nation, while dreams of the departed day still linger around. Morning will soon come again, and call forth the toiling millions to the heat and burden of a weary day. But sleep now in peace, ye suffering sons and daughters of Mammondom! and dream ye of a liberty not your own, though a name dear, and adored by hearts of Columbian soil! Sad and solemn the scene of enchanted multitudes, yet ever glorious with prophecy is the jubilee of an American Fourth.

How He Won Her.

Consuela—"Papa tells me that you are not a saint by any means, Howard." Howard—"What has he been saying about me now?" "Oh, lots of things." "Isn't a man known by the company he keeps?" "I suppose so." "Well, then, if the company he keeps is all this world to him, and again the very best and most charming, isn't it proof that he is good?" "I should think so." "Well, then, don't I keep your company?" "Yes." Consuela's face brightened, she blushed, smiled and said: "Howard, dear, forgive me. Papa has been deceived. I won't believe anything against you." And she threw herself into his arms.—New York Tribune.

THE MISADVENTURES OF JOHN NICHOLSON

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

CHAPTER XII.

IN spite of the horrors of the day and the tea-drinking of the night, John slept the sleep of infancy. He was awakened by the maid, as it might have been ten years ago, tapping at the door. The winter sunrise was painting the east; and as the window was to the back of the house, it shone into the room with many strange colors of refracted light. Without, the houses were all cleanly roofed with snow; the garden walls were coped with it a foot in height; the greens lay glittering. Yet strange as snow had grown to John during his years upon the Bay of San Francisco, it was what he saw within that most affected him. For it was to his own room that Alexander had been promoted; there was the old paper with the device of flowers, in which a cunning fancy might yet detect the face of Skinny Jim, of the Academy, John's former dominion; there was the old chest of drawers; there were the chairs—one, two, three—three as before. Only the carpet was new, and the litter of Alexander's clothes and books and drawing materials, and a pencil-drawing on the wall, which (in John's eyes) appeared a marvel of proficiency.

He was thus lying and looking, and dreaming, hanging as it were, between two epochs of his life, when Alexander came to the door, and made his presence known in a loud whisper. John let him in, and jumped back into the warm bed.

"Well, John," said Alexander, "the cablegram is sent in your name, and twenty words of answer paid. I have been to the cab office and paid your cab, even saw the old gentleman himself, and properly apologized. He was mighty placable, and indicated his belief you had been drinking. Then I knocked up old Macewen out of bed, and explained affairs to him as he sat and shivered in a dressing-gown. And before that I had been to the High Street, where they have heard nothing of your dead body, so that I incline to the idea that you dreamed it."

"Catch me!" said John.

"Well, the police never do know anything," assented Alexander; "and at any rate, they have dispatched a man to inquire and to recover your trousers and your money, so that really your bill is now fairly clean; and I see but one lion in your path—the governor."

"I'll be turned out again, you'll see," said John, dismally.

"I don't imagine so," returned the other; "not if you do what Flora and I have arranged; and your business now is to dress, and lose no time about it. Is your watch right? Well, you have a quarter of an hour. By five minutes before the half hour you must be at table, in your old seat, under Uncle Duthie's picture. Flora will be there to keep you countenance; and we shall see what we shall see."

"Wouldn't it be wiser for me to stay in bed?" said John.

"If you mean to manage your own concerns, you can do precisely what you like," replied Alexander; but if you are not in your place five minutes before the half hour I wash my hands of you, for one."

And thereupon he departed. He had spoken warmly, but the truth is, his heart was somewhat troubled. And as he hung over the balusters, watching for his father to appear, he had hard ado to keep himself braced for the encounter that must follow.

"If he takes it well, I shall be lucky," he reflected. "If he takes it ill, why it'll be a herring across John's tracks, and perhaps all for the best. He's a confounded muf, this brother of mine, but he seems a decent soul."

At that stage a door opened below with a certain emphasis, and Mr. Nicholson was seen solemnly to descend the stairs and pass into his own apartment. Alexander followed, quaking inwardly, but with a steady face. He knocked, was bidden to enter, and found his father standing in front of the forced drawer, to which he pointed as he spoke.

"This is a most extraordinary thing," said he; "I have been robbed!"

"I was afraid you would notice it," observed his son; "it made such a beastly hash of the table."

"You were afraid I would notice it?" repeated Mr. Nicholson. "And pray, what may that mean?"

"That I was a thief, sir," returned Alexander. "I took all the money in case the servants should get hold of it; and here is the change, and a note of my expenditures. You were gone to bed, you see, and I did not feel at liberty to knock you up; but I think when you've heard the circumstances, you will do me justice. The fact is, I have reason to believe there has been some dreadful error about my brother John; the sooner it can be cleared up the better for all parties; it was a piece of business, sir—and so I took it, and decided, on my own responsibility, to send a telegram to San Francisco. Thanks to my quickness we may hear tonight. There appears to be no doubt, sir, that John has been abominably used."

"When did this take place?" asked the father.

"Last night, sir, after you were asleep," was the reply.

"It's most extraordinary," said Mr. Nicholson. "Do you mean to say that you have been out all night?"

"All night, as you say, sir. I have been to the telegraph and the police office, and Mr. Macewen's. Oh, I had my hands full," said Alexander.

"Very irregular," said the father. "You think of no one but yourself."

"I do not see that I have much to gain in bringing back my elder brother," returned Alexander, shrewdly.

The answer pleased the old man; he smiled. "Well, well, I will go into this after breakfast," said he.

"I'm sorry about the table," said the son.

"The table is a small matter; I think nothing of that," said the father.

"It's another example," continued the son, "of the awkwardness of a man having no money of his own. If I had a proper allowance, like other fellows of my age, this would have been quite unnecessary."

"A proper allowance!" repeated his father, in tones of blighting sarcasm, for the expression was not new to him. "I have never grudgingly you money for any proper purpose."

"No doubt, no doubt," said Alexander, "but then you see you aren't always on the spot to have the thing explained to you. Last night, for instance—"

"You could have wakened me last night," interrupted his father.

"Was it not some similar affair that first got John into a mess?" asked the son, skillfully evading the point.

But the father was not less adroit. "And pray, sir, how did you come and go out of the house?" he asked.

"I forgot to lock the door, it seems," replied Alexander.

"I have had cause to complain of that too often," said Mr. Nicholson. "But still I do not understand. Did you keep the servants up?"

"I propose to go into all that at length after breakfast," returned Alexander. "There is the half hour going; we must not keep Miss Mackenzie waiting."

And greatly daring, he opened the door.

Even Alexander, who it must have been perceived, was on terms of comparative freedom with his parent; even Alexander had never before dared to cut short an interview in this high-handed fashion. But the truth is the very mass of his son's delinquencies daunted the old gentleman. He was like the man with the cart of apples—this was beyond him! That Alexander should have spoiled his table, taken his money, stayed out all night, and then coolly acknowledged all, was something undreamed of in the Nicholsonian philosophy, and transcended comment. The return of the change, which the old gentleman still carried in his hand, had been a feature of imposing impudence; it had dealt him a staggering blow. Then there was the reference to John's original flight—a subject which he always kept resolutely curtailed in his own mind; for he was a man who loved to have made no mistakes, and when he feared he might have made one kept the papers sealed. In view of all these surprises and reminders, and of his son's composed and masterful demeanor, there began to creep on Mr. Nicholson a sickly misgiving. He seemed beyond his depth; if he did or said anything, he might come to regret it. The young man, besides, as he had pointed out himself, was playing a generous part. And if wrong had been done—and done to one who was, after, and in spite of all, a Nicholson—it should certainly be righted.

All things considered, monstrous as it was to be cut short in his inquiries, the old gentleman submitted, pocketed the change, and followed his son into the dining-room. During these few steps he once more mentally revolted, and once more, and this time finally, laid down his arms; a still, small voice in his bosom having informed him authentically of a piece of news; that he was afraid of Alexander. The strange thing was that he was pleased to be afraid of him. He was proud of his son; he might be proud of him; the boy had character and grit, and knew what he was doing.

These were his reflections as he turned the corner of the dining-room door. Miss Mackenzie was in the place of honor, conjuring with a tea-pot and a cozy; and, behold! there was another person present, a large, portly, whiskered man of a very comfortable and respectable air, who now rose from his seat and came forward, holding out his hand.

"Good morning, father," said he.

Of the contention of feeling that ran high in Mr. Nicholson's starched bosom, no outward sign was visible; nor did he delay long to make a choice of conduct. Yet in that interval he had reviewed a great field of possibilities, both past and future; whether it was possible he had not been perfectly wise in his treatment of John; whether it was possible that John was innocent; whether, if he turned John out a second time, as his outraged authority suggested, it was possible to avoid a scandal; and whether, if he went to that extremity, it was possible that Alexander might rebel.

"Hum!" said Mr. Nicholson, and put his hand, limp and dead, into John's.

And then, in an embarrassed silence, all took their places; and even the paper—from which it was the old gentleman's habit to suck mortification daily, as he marked the decline of our institutions—even the paper lay furled by his side.

But presently Flora came to the rescue. She slid into the silence with a technicality, asking if John still took his old inordinate amount of sugar. Thence it was but a step to the burning question of the day; and in tones a little shaken, she commented on the interval since she had last made tea for the prodigal, and congratulated him on his return. And then addressing Mr. Nicholson, she congratulated him also in a manner that defied his ill-humor; and from that launched into the tale of John's misadventures, not without some suitable suppressions.

Gradually Alexander joined; between them, whether he would or not, they forced a word or two from John; and these fell tremulously, and spoke so eloquently of a mind oppressed with dread, that Mr. Nicholson relented. At length even he contributed a question; and before the meal was at an end all four were talking even freely.

Prayers followed, with the servants gazing at this newcomer whom no one had admitted; and after prayers there came that moment on the clock which was the signal for Mr. Nicholson's departure.

"John," said he, "of course you will stay here. Be very careful not to excite Maria, if Miss Mackenzie thinks it desirable that you should see her. Alexander, I wish to speak with you alone." And then, when they were both in the back room: "You need not come to the office today," said he; "you can stay and amuse your brother, and I think it would be respectful to call on Uncle Greig. And by the bye" (this spoken with a certain dare we say—bashfulness), "I agree to concede the principle of an allowance; and I will consult with Doctor Durie, who is quite a man of the world and has sons of his own, as to the amount. And, my fine fellow, you may consider yourself in luck!" he added, smiling.

"Thank you," said Alexander.

Before noon a detective had restored to John his money, and brought news, sad enough in truth, but perhaps the least sad possible. Alan had been found in his own house in Regent's Terrace, under care of the terrified butler. He was quite mad, and instead of going to prison had gone to Morningside Asylum. The murdered man, it appeared, was an evicted tenant who had for nearly a year pursued his late landlord with threats and insults; and beyond this, the cause and details of the tragedy were lost.

When Mr. Nicholson returned from dinner they were able to put a dispatch into his hands: "John V. Nicholson, Randolph Crescent, Edinburgh.—Kirkman has disappeared; police looking for him. All understood. Keep mind quite easy.—Austin." Having had this explained to him, the old gentleman took down the cellar key and departed for two bottles of the 1820 port. Uncle Greig dined there that day, and cousin Robina, and, by an odd chance, Mr. Macewen; and the presence of these strangers relieved what might have been otherwise a somewhat strained relation. Ere they departed, the family was welded once more into a fair semblance of unity.

In the end of April John led Flora—to the altar, if altar that may be called which was indeed the drawing-room mantel-piece in Mr. Nicholson's house, with the Reverend Dr. Durie posted on the hearth-rug in the guise of Hymen's priest.

The last I saw of them, on a recent visit to the north, was at a dinner-party in the house of my old friend Gellatly Macbride; and after we had, in classic phrase, "rejoined the ladies," I had an opportunity to overhear Flora conversing with another married woman on the much canvassed matter of a husband's tobacco. "Oh, yes!" said she; "I only allow Mr. Nicholson four cigars a day. Three he smokes at fixed times—after a meal, you know, my dear; and the fourth he can take when he likes with any friend."

"Bravo!" thought I to myself; "this is the wife for my friend John!"

THE END.

Motherhood.

A mother who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution.

The child fairly drinks in health from its mother's robust constitution before birth, and from a healthy mother's milk after.

Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?

Do you know the meaning of what is popularly called those "longings," or cravings, which beset so many women during pregnancy?

There is something lacking in the mother's blood. Nature cries out and will be satisfied at all hazards.

One woman wants sour things, another wants sweets, another wants salt things, and so on.

The real need all the time is to enrich the blood so as to supply nourishment for another life, and to build up the entire generative system, so that the birth may be possible and successful.

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for twenty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be fewer disappointments at birth, and they would not experience those annoying "longings."

In the following letter to Mrs. Pinkham, Mrs. Whitney demonstrates the power of the Compound in such cases. She says:

"From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three, I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon relieved. After I was married, the doctor said I would never be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and a half. The next time I commenced at once and continued to take your Compound through the period of pregnancy, and I said then, if I went my full time and the baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as one could wish."

"I am so thankful that I used your medicine, for it gave me the robust health to transmit to my child. I cannot express my gratitude to you; I never expected such a blessing. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—Mrs. L. Z. WHITNEY, 8 George St., E. Somerville, Mass.

The game of ball at Lake Zurich between the Lake County Unions and Libertyvilles resulted in the defeat of the latter by a score of 7 to 5. The Libertyvilles played a good game, but owing to some misunderstanding with the umpire, lost their heads, likewise the game. The Unions were in a prime condition, and play an A1 game of ball.

A 4th of July picnic and celebration will be given by Salem Sunday-school at Comstock's Grove, Monday, July 5th. Music will be furnished by the Barrington Military Band, and a choice quartette will enliven the occasion with some fine selections. Short addresses will be delivered during the day by eminent speakers. Go and enjoy yourselves.

As the 4th of July comes on Sunday it is proposed to give a series of lectures on Christian Citizenship. Mr. Maynard L. Daggy of Greencastle, Ind., has been secured to give these lectures in the afternoon and evening. Mr. Daggy will speak in the Salem church in the morning. At 3 p. m. will occur the lecture in the Baptist church and at 7:30 p. m. at the Salem church. All are cordially invited to attend, as it is to be a union service of all the churches.

The Chautauqua Circle closed for the year last Monday night. The meeting was held on Creet's lawn. It was necessary to elect a new president and much anxiety was felt by the members. Each past president has been a power in the community, but the prestige so gained, will not be diminished under the leadership of Mr. Smith. While the members of the society congratulate themselves over the selection of Mr. Smith for president, they do not forget their gratitude to their retiring leader, Rev. T. E. Ream, who has been more than faithful. Some lessons not gained from books have been learned under his gentle administration. Miss Belle Domire was elected vice president and Miss Alvina Myers, secretary. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream and cake, were served.
