Village Board Proceedings.

The village board met in regular session at the village hall Monday evening. All members were present. After the reading of the minutes of the last regular and special meetings and their approval the following bills were allowed and ordered paid:

A. S. Henderson, night watch.....	$45 00
H. A. Sandiman, marshal.....	35 00
A. J. Redmond, surveying and photos.....	43 00
H. D. A. Grebe, stove repairs.....	40
Leroy Powers, oil and midse.....	19 18
L. F. Schroeder, nails.....	78
Fred Wolf, street labor.....	5 85
J. Palmer.....	18 00
D. Minnecker.....	1 50
F. Wiseman, gravel.....	96
Charles Wolf, street labor.....	4 50
Charles Horn.....	3 75
Plazge & Co, lumber and tile.....	38 07
James Sizer, street labor.....	5 25
John Hatje.....	1 80
Total.....	$218 04

Trustee Willmarth moved that a safe be purchased of A. J. Redmond at a cost not exceeding $75, provided it was not too large to get into the village hall through the door. Motion carried.

The village attorney was instructed to notify the C. & N.-W. railway company to file the ditch and culvert near the turn table.

The village marshal was instructed to enforce the ordinances in regard to fast driving on the streets and the riding of bicycles without lamps. Bicyclists take warning.

That much troublesome question—the grade question—came up again. Trustee Willmarth moved that necessary changes be made in the grade of streets. The ayes and nays were called for. Those voting in the affirmative were: Hatje, Willmarth, Collen and Peters. Those voting no were Robertson and Grunau.

The electric light franchise came up for final passage but on motion of Trustee Willmarth was laid over until the next meeting.

The poor condition of the sidewalks of the village was discussed and as a result numerous notices were ordered served on different parties either to rebuild or repair their walks. It is hoped that the village will carry out this good work and insist on its being done at once. The village authorities could set a good example by repairing some of their cross walks which are in bad shape.

There being no further business the board adjourned.

The New School Laws.

S. M. Inglis, state superintendent of public instruction, is sending out circulars to the county superintendents of the state containing the enactments relating to schools which were passed at the recent session of the legislature.

One of the most important, is the compulsory attendance act. The provision of this act, which is of importance, just at this time is that which requires that "The board of education in cities, towns, villages, and school districts, and the board of directors in school districts, shall appoint, at the time of appointment or election of teachers, each year, one or more truancy officers," etc. The compensation of the officers shall be fixed by the boards appointing them.

Another act worthy of notice is that requiring the study of scientific temperance instruction. All pupils below the second year of the high schools and above the third year of school work must be provided with suitable text-books for the study of the effect of alcoholic drinks, and other narcotics on the human system, and the school authorities are liable to fine and punishment for neglect or failure to have the law enforced.—Waukegan Gazette.

W. J. Manning living four miles northeast of Aurora, has a flowing well on his farm that is developing a lake of no mean proportions. There is a basin shaped depression on the farm 160 acres in extent, which is usually too wet to permit of cultivation. Thinking to drain the tract the owner employed well diggers to sink a shaft in the center of the depression, hoping to strike a streak of gravel which would carry off the surplus moisture. Instead of that the well men struck a vein of flowing water that not only rises to the surface but spouts out with considerable force and is fast transforming the swampy land into a beautiful lake. Mr. Manning's intention is to stock the lake with fish, transform his farm into a summer resort and take summer boarders.—Elgin Courier.

A Fraud of a Game.

What was intended for a game of base ball was forced on our people Saturday afternoon at Barrington base ball park, between the Wauconda Independents and the Unions of this place. It was a kick, kick, kick, kick from start to finish. When the umpires were not kicking, the captains were; when the captains were not kicking, the pitchers were; and when the pitchers were not kicking, everybody in general were raising the yell, "play ball, play ball." The game opened with the Waucondas at the bat, Henry Drewes pitching for the Unions, and the visiting team done nothing but pound him entirely out of the box. He pitched until the fifth inning. Peters was then substituted for Drewes in the fifth. Peters was taken out of the box and Drewes pitched the sixth, when the visiting team performed the remarkable feat of crowding twelve runs in one inning. Drewes was again compelled to make room for Peters, who pitched the remainder of the game and did excellent work but it was too late to win the game. Mosser played a very poor second, Peters played a worse short stop, while Hutchinson done good work on the third. Mors was Al in the left field. He never let a fly go by him. The Waucondas came here to win, and they did. The score was 16 to 14 in nine innings.

Under the new ordinance recently passed by the city of Chicago, cyclists are required to pay a dollar license and every rider must have a tag showing that he has been to head quarters and settled. This hits outsiders as well as residents, and the cyclist who rides in the city for an hour or so is just as liable as the one who lives there.

Minor Happenings of the Past Week.

EVENTS OF LAST SEVEN DAYS.

Political, Religious, Social and Criminal Doings of the Whole World Carefully Condensed for Our Readers—The Accidental Record.

Louisville, Ky.—William Sadler and William Parks, Garrard county farmers, were struck by lightning and instantly killed. They lived several miles apart, but were killed about the same time.

Peru, Ind.—W. J. Fisher, freight conductor on the Wabash, residing in this city, has been notified that he and his father, Robert B. Fisher, are heirs to a fortune of $400,000, left by relatives in Cheltenham, England. His father is there.

Havana.—Captain General Weyler has signed an order expelling from Cuba Eduardo Garcia and George Eugene Bryson, correspondents of New York newspapers. Garcia was arrested on May 12 last. Bryson has not been arrested.

Lander, Wyo.—Ben Hanson, who last fall killed Tom Bird, a Thermopolis merchant, cut his way out of jail and escaped.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—The Randall Cycle Company has gone into the hands of Trustee E. C. Miller to protect creditors to the amount of $12,000. The principal creditors are manufacturers in different parts of the country. The assets are slightly less than the liabilities.

Paris.—Francois Coppee is recovering but so very slowly that his friends are not yet relieved of all anxiety on his account. He has had to take to his bed again, but no doubt is entertained of his complete recovery.

Joliet, Ill.—Reports from the penitentiary hospital are that Joseph Dunlop, the Chicago Dispatch editor, is in a decidedly precarious condition. His last stroke of paralysis has left him enfeebled mentally and bodily.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The city council unanimously passed an ordinance requiring local gas companies to furnish gas at 75 cents per 1,000 feet. The present price is $1.25, and the ordinance will be resisted in the courts.

Charleston, Ill.—Mrs. William Hunt, living near Hindsboro, died from the effects of a stray bullet from a target rifle. She was standing on her porch ironing. She leaves eleven children, the youngest a babe.

Kankakee, Ill.—The payment of a thirty-year-old school bond amounting, with ten years' interest, to $3,400, was submitted to a vote of the people and defeated, 4 to 1. The bond had been mislaid and forgotten by its former owner, James McGrew.

Lansane, Switzerland.—An extensive robbery of art works and other articles of great value has taken place at the Vaud Cantonal museum.

Tacoma, Wash.—Capitalists have organized an expedition to explore the rich gold and copper field known to exist along Copper river in western Alaska, 800 miles northwest of Sitka.

Louisville, Ky.—Hardin Johnson, his wife and daughter and Dan Hazelwood, all colored, were seriously poisoned by laudanum placed in their food. The crime is charged upon a neighbor.

Rawlins, Wyo.—The Landers out-bound coach was robbed by two masked men fifty miles north of Rawlins. They took the entire mail from the sacks and rode north.

Lander, Wyo.—Ben Hanson, who last fall killed Thomas Bird, cut his way out of jail and escaped.

LaPorte, Ind.—The body of an unknown man was found washed upon the beach west of New Buffalo.

Washington.—The President has appointed Charles W. Kendrick of Louisiana consul at Ciudad Juarez, Mexico.

SEVERE STORM IN IOWA.

Lightning Does Much Damage at Webster City.

TWO DEATHS ARE REPORTED.

Children Take Refuge in a Cellar and Are Killed—Storm General Throughout the State, but No Further Casualties Have Occurred.

Lightning struck in twenty places inside the city limits Monday morning during a severe storm. Two children of John Luppis, south of town, were instantly killed. The mother and an elder sister had taken them to the cellar, when the house was struck. The children were huddled together in the rear, while the others were at the cellar window watching the storm. A stroke of lightning shattered the spire of the Baptist Church, another damaged the elevator owned by the Webster City Elevator Company, another set fire to a barn owned by R. C. Butler, killing his horse. A heavy wind accompanied the storm, unroofing a number of buildings. The storm was general throughout the state, but no serious damage is reported except at Webster City.

Disastrous Floods in Bohemia.

Great damage has been done by floods in Bohemia. At Trautenau thirty houses have been destroyed and twenty-five persons drowned. At the village of Freiheit a house was washed away bodily, and its seventeen occupants were drowned. Almost the whole town of Reichenberg is submerged, and there, too, many have been drowned.

Demand a Tariff War.

The German press fiercely demands a tariff war, and agitates for reprisals against the United States. Veiled and open suggestions are made for a European trade league against America, with threats of serious consequences should Great Britain refuse to join such a league.

Commercial Treaties to End.

The commercial treaties between Great Britain and the German Zollverein and Belgium, which have been in force since May 30, 1865, were denounced Friday by Great Britain and ceased to be operative a year hence.

WRECKERS KILL TWO.

Engineer and Fireman Lose Their Lives at Thornton, Ind.

The Big Four night express, east-bound, was wrecked at Thornton, Ind., at 2:15 o'clock Friday morning. Two men are dead, another is dying, and still another probably is injured fatally. The dead are: Seth Winslow, engineer, of Greensburg, Ind.; Jesse Quickmore, fireman, Indianapolis.

The injured—Charles Gavinger, Cleveland, Ohio; head cut and injured internally; can not live. Harry Pribe, Cleveland, Ohio; head cut, back injured and arms and legs badly scalded; may recover.

The accident was without doubt the work of train wreckers. A coupling-pin was found wedged between the rail of the main track and the point of the split-switch at the spot where the engine left the track.

Fire Loss at Evansville, Ind.

Fire broke out in the junk shop of Philip Brotman at Evansville, Ind., Monday morning, causing $5,000 damage. Other losses bring the total damage up to $15,000. The insurance amounted to about $12,000. The fire is supposed to have been started by children playing with matches in the junk shop.

Italians Are Uneasy

The constant increase of French naval expenditure is followed by the Italian government with the greatest possible interest. It is regarded as imperatively necessary to strengthen the Italian navy, and arrangements are being made for launching three armored cruisers this month.

Police Order the People Back.

The mounted police of the Northwest territory are meeting all people bound for the Yukon country at the British line beyond White and Juneau passes and compelling those who have not a year's supply of provisions to return to the coast.

Cause of Wreck Unknown.

The corner's investigation held over the bodies of Engineer Winslow and Fireman Crickmore, who were killed in the wreck at Thornton, Ind., Friday morning, failed to throw any light on the mystery of how the coupling pin got into the switch.

Nelson Dingley, Sr., Ill.

The condition of Nelson Dingley, father of Congressman Dingley, is precarious. He is failing, and there is thought to be no chance for recovery.

A MICHIGAN MAN'S GOOD LUCK.

Frank Phiscator, the Michigan man who returned to San Francisco with his pockets full of gold and millions staked out for the future, is just the sort of a boy that likes the life of the mountain and the wilderness. His father died twenty-five years ago, and his mother passed away ten years ago. Frank "lit out" for the boundless west when he was 10 years old. He longed for room to move about, and Michigan was overpopulated. He drifted to Yellowstone Park. He took to horseback riding naturally, and was soon engaged carrying the mail over a sixty-mile route. He liked the work and enjoyed himself as he put away his salary. This sort of life gave him muscles as hard as rock and as strong as steel. He won health and fortune out of his work. About eighteen months ago he returned to his home in Michigan and amazed his town folks with his western ways and his display of wealth. It was said that he had then about $3,000. Phiscator was a thorough western man and was not impressed with the angular propriety of the people of civilized communities. He had a way of calling dignified gentlemen of wealth and position by their first names, and when he was shown that this "du du" style was not appreciated as it is out in the mountains and on the coast he was disgusted. He left the east to go back to the mountains and prairies. He bade good-by to everybody; and said as he was going that he would never come back. About this time Phiscator heard about the mines in Alaska and he struck out for the Yukon. There he met with F. W. Cobb, a Harvard man who had been knocking about the west for two years, and he went to Alaska for gold. Cobb and Phiscator became partners. The Michigan man worked up the Klondyke, while Cobb followed Bonanza Creek until he struck the field to which he later gave the name of Eldorado. He turned back, found his partner, and the two staked out claims that are now said to be worth millions. Phiscator is 35. He is now in Frisco.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Stick to the Farm.

A FRIEND of ours owned a good farm a few years ago, about two miles from a thriving city, writes T. B. Terry, in Practical Farmer. He and his sons lived on it and had a fine home and were prospering slowly. But they got it in their heads that they could live easier and do better by moving to town and going into some business. And they went, renting the farm. They borrowed money on it, and put that with what they had and started a grocery store. He is a man of more than average ability. They all worked early and late for success. Last year, however, was too much for them. They had to trust out too much, and the laboring people had so little money, and there was so much competition among the dealers to get that, that the weakest had to go down. The sheriff has sold the farm, and everything else is gone. They have nothing. As they are particular friends of ours, we feel doubly sorry for them. Now, my good friends, don't you often think that farming is a poor business, and wish you were out of it and at something else? And don't you know that the usual result would be about as described above? You cannot sell your farm and put your money into any business today that is honorable and legitimate and safe that will pay you as well. Let us look this matter squarely in the face, and take courage and go ahead and make the best of our business. There is no chance to do any better, as a rule, nor as well, all things considered, with the capital invested. I was talking the other day with a shrewd old gentleman, who has considerable property. He remarked: "I keep enough money in farm land to support myself and family well if everything else went to the dogs. I risk the rest in business." There is nothing safer than good farm land. We have got enough, too, to support us well, no matter what comes. People must eat, and farmers can always live, on the average. A family out of debt, owning a good farm, reasonably improved, are well fixed in this world's goods.

When to Water Plants.

Should plants be watered during sunshine? Why not, if they need it? The watering of the plant should be governed by its condition and surroundings. The whole thing, in a nutshell, is, water a plant when it does require it, says a writer in American Gardening. From my own experience I have never had any bad results from watering flowers during sunshine, any more than in dull weather. During sunshine and bright weather the evaporation from most plants is more excessive than in dull weather; consequently plants call for more nourishment in the form of water, and if the plants are growing fast, and the pots are full of roots, I often find it necessary to water them three or four times a day. Air, sun and light are important factors in building up the plant, and one is not much use without the other. Water containing soluble matter is absorbed by the roots and travels through the plant as crude sap, passing upwards to the leaves; there it forms a combination with carbonic acid gas, derived from the air, then by the action of sun and light is refined and digested. As the sun plays such an important part in the disintegration (as it were) of the food of the plant, I cannot see how it would have any injurious effect to water plants during sunshine; but would look at it as a thing essential if the plants needed it. I always aim to have watering done early in the morning or about three or four o'clock in the afternoon, for the simple reason that it facilitates the work, as well as economizes the water; but as I said before, I would not scruple to water a batch of plants during sunshine if they needed it, and would consider I was helping nature by doing so.

Currants and Gooseberries.

Take cuttings of currants in September after the new wood has ripened, as may be seen by having turned brown, says Vick's Magazine. Make them about six inches in length, from the new wood, removing the leaves. Plant them so that only one bud is left above the surface and they will take root in the fall and be ready to make growth promptly in the spring. Some leaves or litter should be laid around them when cold weather comes on, to prevent them from heaving when the frost comes out of the ground. Cuttings of the gooseberry are more difficult to root, but treated in the same way a portion of those made from our American varieties will root. But the better way to raise gooseberries is by layering. This can be done as early as the latter part of July. Draw the soil up about a bush and lay the branches partly down upon it and heap fine soil up over them, spitting it down well with the back of the spade to make it lie close to the wood. The leaves should be removed from the portions of the stems which are covered. Leave the plants earthed up in this way all winter and in spring level off the soil and cut away the rooted branches and plant them out to make a set of strong roots before final transplanting for fruiting. From the plant thus employed (called a stool plant), another set of shoots will grow, and at the proper time in summer it can be earthed up, and thus an annual crop of plants be produced.

Winter Protection.

I have not had a great deal of success in the cultivation of flowers and roses, but I have a very simple plan of protecting them: I lay down the rose and cover it with leaves, and when I uncover it in the spring I find that it is quite fresh. In some instances the buds have begun to shape before the leaves are taken off. One season a keen frost came and they were set back, and we had no roses that year. I now adopt the plan of driving a stick down alongside the bush. I then gather the branches together, tie them with a string, and put a hoop around the bottom. I put ordinary rye straw around the inside of that hoop and then put on another hoop around the top; and I find that there is sufficient protection to enable them to come out all right. My grapevines I cover with earth. Three years ago I took them up; they started very early; there was a late frost and I had no fruit that year. The next year I covered them with evergreens, and I had not much more success. Last year I allowed them to stay up on the trellises and take their chances, and I had a better crop before the frost came than I had had for the last three years. If you have a wet, warm season and protect them too much you injure them.—Parker.

The Farmer's Creed.

Prof. Irby of North Carolina State College, furnishes the following to the Progressive farmer:

We believe in small well-tilled farms; that the soil must be fed as well as the owner, so that the crops shall make the farm and the farmer rich.

We believe in thorough drainage, in deep plowing, and in labor saving implements.

We believe in good fences, barns conveniently arranged, good orchards and gardens, and plenty of home raised hog and hominy.

We believe in raising pure bred stock or in grading up the best to be gotten; they equal the thoroughbreds.

We believe in growing the best varieties of farm crops and saving the choicest for seed.

We believe in fertilizing the brain with phosphorus as well as applying it to the soil.

We believe in the proper care and application of barn-yard manure.

We believe that the best fertilizers are of little value unless accompanied by industry, enterprise and intelligence.

We believe in rotation, diversification and thorough cultivation of crops.

We believe that every farm should own a good farmer and that every good farmer will eventually own a good farm.

Believes in Summer Fallow.

Much has been written about cleaning land and keeping it clean without any summer fallowing; indeed, summer fallowing is looked upon by many as old-fashioned and out of date, but where a farm is dirty and foul with noxious weeds, thistles, charlock, couch, or any other weeds, we know of no method of cleaning it equal to a good thorough summer fallow. Besides cleaning the land, summer fallowing is the best preparation for a crop of wheat, and we have often observed how much better land that has been prepared and is in good manurial condition will withstand our usual summer droughts than other land of the same quality not prepared does. When that highly-favored people, the children of Israel, were promised a land (said to be one of the fairest and most fertile portions of the earth) God commanded them to allow the land to lie untill every seventh year, and on each occasion when the command is given or renewed, this idea, among others, is, "it is a year of rest unto the land," "then shall it rest and lie still," and because the chosen people disobeyed and neglected this command, they were carried into captivity "until the land had enjoyed her Sabbaths, because it did not rest in your Sabbath when ye dwelt in the land."—Walter Riddell.

Electrical Forcing of Lilies.—Experiments made this season in forcing Easter lilies with electric light prove that it will probably pay commercially to use electric light when the buds are an inch long in order to hasten their expansion and that the light must pass through glass to avoid burning the petals.

CYCLONE KILLS SEVEN.

Central Illinois Swept by a Tornado.

END OF A DAY OF AWFUL HEAT.

The House of A. C. McDowell, Near San Jose, Destroyed and Seven of Its Occupants Crushed to Death—Others Are Injured.

A cyclone of terrific energy swept across central Illinois at 7 o'clock Friday evening and left destruction and death in its wake. Seven deaths are reported and three persons were severely injured. Following are the names of killed: A. C. McDowell and his grandson, wife of Samuel Brownlee, three Brownlee children, Miss Jessie Graves.

The following were seriously injured:

SENATOR HANSBROUGH'S BRIDE ELECT.

United States Senator Henry C. Hansbrough of Devil's Lake, N. D., will be married in October to Miss Mary Berri Chapman, a beautiful and talented young woman of Washington. Senator Hansbrough met his future wife several months ago and lost no time in settling about winning her for his own. She is the only daughter of Mrs. E. S. Chapman of Kingman place, in the national capital. Her brother is employed in the geological survey, and is now in California, but will go east to attend the wedding, which will take place in New York. Miss Chapman is not only a beautiful girl, but is an adept in painting, an able writer and one of the

Mrs. A. C. McDowell, her son Charles and daughter Mary.

After a day of terrible heat the clouds began to pile up in fantastic forms at about 5 o'clock and the air grew thick and oppressive. About 7 o'clock darkness fell suddenly upon the earth, broken here and there by vivid lightning. Soon, with a rush and a roar, came a tornado from the north, carrying with it boiling and tossing clouds. San Jose escaped damage only because the storm rose north of the town and passed above it.

The cyclone also struck the farm of John McDowell and destroyed his barn and fine walnut grove. The house escaped, the tornado passing within a few yards of it. The storm was followed by a deluge resembling a cloudburst.

Men Supplanted by Machines.

Ball Brothers, the largest fruit jar manufacturers in Muncie, Ind., are sending out notices to non-resident blower that their services will not be needed during the coming season, and a sensation has been caused among the men, as their places are to be filled with the patent blowing machines which have just been perfected to blow glass for the first time in history.

Curious Dilemma in Iowa.

The Rev. E. L. Eaton of Des Moines, cannot run for the governorship on the Prohibition ticket this year. He was nominated, but the state constitution says no man shall be governor who has not been a resident of the state two years next preceding the election. Dr. Eaton has not.

Brazilian Troops Slaughtered.

A dispatch to the New York Herald from Rio Janeiro, Brazil, says that authentic information has reached the city to the effect that more than 3,000 soldiers have been killed in a big battle near the site of Canudor.

GALESBURG MAN ELECTED.

L. W. Sanborn President of League of Building and Loan Associations.

Business was resumed promptly Thursday morning by the United States League of Building and Loan Associations. A large number of papers were read by prominent men.

Omaha was selected by acclamation for the convention of 1898. The following officers were elected: President, L. W. Sanborn, Galesburg, Ill.; first vice-president, William L. Bloomer, Buffalo; second vice-president, Timothy R. Foster, Vicksburg, Miss.; third vice-president, Thomas J. Fitzmorris, Omaha; treasurer, William C. Shepard, Grand Rapids; secretary, Herman F. Cellerius, Cincinnati; assistant secretary, George F. Kostmayer, New Orleans.

Secretary Sherman's Health Improved.

Word comes to Washington from Secretary Sherman at Amagansett, L. I., that his health has improved since he arrived at that place. He is about to take a sea voyage.

ILLINOIS NEWSLETS.

RECORD OF MINOR DOINGS OF THE WEEK.

Seven Days' Happenings Condensed—Social, Religious, Political, Criminal, Obituary and Miscellaneous Events from Every Section of the State.

Mrs. Mary Van Vleck, one of the best known women in Joliet, celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday at her home. Mrs. Van Vleck has been sewing carpets for twenty-two years, and on her anniversary she sewed forty yards.

Dwight C. Morgan, of Dwight, who retires as consulting engineer to the State Board of Railroad and Warehouse Commissioners on August 11, will on that date succeed Richard Sloan as assistant chief engineer of the Illinois Central Railroad, Mr. Sloan becoming chief engineer, vice J. F. Wallace, resigned.

Victor Eckman was arrested Monday night in De Kalb, Ill., by Post Office Inspector Christian, charged with forging the name of B. F. McCray, of Eddyville, Iowa, to a money order. The prisoner was taken before United States Commissioner Pickard, and after he had waived examination was held in $1,000 bonds. He will be taken to Des Moines, Iowa, to be prosecuted.

As a pronounced indication of the feeling of confidence in the financial world as a result of the improved business conditions, it is announced that memberships in the Chicago Stock Exchange, which was compelled to close its doors for a long period last year on account of a lack of operations, have advanced within a week $250, the last sales being at $750 as against $500 six weeks ago.

Maggie Mulvieve of Cincinnati forwards a communication to the Chicago police at detective headquarters asking them to find Michael and Patrick Quinn, two cousins, whom she has not seen or heard from since 1887. In her communication the woman says both men were at one time connected with the Chicago police department, but Officer Patrick Quinn, who is stationed at the Fifth precinct station, says he is not one of the men sought.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad submits its report for the month of June, 1897, with comparative figures for the same month in 1896. The six months ending June 30, 1897, are also compared with the same period a year ago: Total expenses, June, 1896, $2,798,463.82; deficit, $73,886.04. June, 1897, expenses, $2,960,772.66; net earnings, $61,360.54. First half 1896, total expenses, $15,881,680.64; deficit, $289,562.82. First half 1897, total expenses, $16,003,153.63; net earnings, $938,694.46.

There is a strong probability that the Rockford council, at its meeting Monday evening, will vote to lengthen the hours which saloons may keep open from 10 until 11 o'clock. All of the fourteen members of the council were elected on license platforms, the first time in the history of the city, and it is believed that ten out of the fourteen will vote for the extension of the closing time one hour. Mayor Brown is a no-license man, and it is not known whether he will allow the ordinance to become a law without his signature, or veto it.

The McKenna Steel Working Company, a new industry in Joliet, began regular operations Monday after a series of successful tests. This company re-rolls old rails, making them as good as new, and it is the only concern of its kind in the world. It has erected and equipped a plant here costing $110,000, and has orders ahead sufficient to last several months. The general offices of the company are in Milwaukee. E. W. McKenna is the president and the superintendent in charge of the Joliet plant is D. H. Lentz. The invention of Mr. McKenna is regarded as the most important advance in the art of making rails which has been made for many years, and means a great saving to railroads. No process of renovating rails has been before discovered, and when a rail was worn out it was useless as a rail thereafter.

Chicago people may now rest assured of the truthfulness of the reports of the rich harvests of gold in Alaska. A Chicago woman has just returned from that cold country of mysteries. The woman is Mrs. Eli Gage, daughter of Portus B. Weare, of the North American Trading and Transportation Company. In glowing terms Mrs. Gage praises the people who are there, and says that the reports are not in the least exaggerated. Mrs. Gage went to Dawson three months ago to see her husband, who is a son of Secretary of the Treasury Lyman T. Gage, and the representative of Mr. Weare's company at Dawson. She investigated the Klondike region, and comes back to Chicago full of enthusiasm about the territory. During her stay she had every opportunity to see exactly what the situation was, and had it not been for her relatives and her baby, which she could not take with her on account of the intense severity of the climate, she would probably not have returned until next spring. She was happy in the strange land, and withstood the cold wonderfully well.

Young People's Alliance.

The first general convention of the Young People's Alliance of the Evangelical Church met at Pittsburg, Pa., with a large attendance of delegates from nearly every state, as well as from Germany, Japan and other foreign countries. Although one of the youngest of young people's societies the alliance it has nearly 15,000 members in its 2,000 branches.

Raises the Tax Assessments.

The Indiana state board of tax commissioners have completed the assessment of railroad, express, sleeping car, telephone and telegraph complaints, and, instead of reducing the assessments, have so fixed the basis of taxation that the aggregate will be in excess of the total for last year, when it stood at $155,000,000.

Result of the Urbana Riot.

Gov. Bushnell has directed Attorney-General Monnett to bring quo-warranto proceedings in the Supreme Court to have declared forfeited the offices now held by Mayor Charles H. Ganson of Urbana, Ohio, and Sheriff Lewis McLain of Champaign county. This is an outcome of the recent riot and lynching.

Iron Wage Scale Settled.

The differences between the iron manufacturers and the Amalgamated Association are practically at an end. A 10 per cent reduction for rollers and heaters of the finishing mills has been agreed upon and a 7½ per cent reduction for the roughers.

Anti-Scalper Bill Dead.

The anti-scalper bill which was agitated so strongly and so persistently during the special session of congress by the railroad and steamship companies throughout the country is apparently dead. There is little prospect of its revival next session.

One Way to Get News.

Berlin must be a pleasant place for people with views to live in, if a bit of news lately printed in the New York Telegram is correct. According to this item, there lately arrived in New York on the steamer Saale from Germany a man named Gingold Staerck, who had crossed the ocean, second cabin, under the assumed name of Max Gingold. This man Staerck was one of the leading witnesses at the trial of Von Tausch, commissioner of the secret police service of Berlin.

Gingold knew nearly as many ruinous secrets about the underground workings and plottings of political and social life in the German capital as Von Tausch himself did. It was therefore necessary to silence him, too, in some way. With that we have no concern.

The point which most interests American newspaper writers and readers is the manner in which this fellow Gingold Staerck obtained his information. He was a newspaper man and a capable one. Through the influence of Von Tausch he got the place of political editor of the Berliner Tageblatt, one of the leading journals of Germany. In this capacity he obtained interviews with important persons of every political school in the empire, Socialists, Clericals, Radicals and Conservatives alike. He knew what ideas they held and when and where they gave expression to them. Thus he knew who was the author of every important political document in the German empire.

That was nothing out of the way, if he maintained that secrecy as to the authorship of contributions which is the first duty of an editor of any kind.

But the real facts in the case can hardly be believed in this country. Staerck, the journalist, was all the while a tool of the secret police, working in their pay, and his place as editor was only a blind to get information for Von Tausch. Thus the emperor heard everything that was said about him. Directly an article with a political bearing was written Staerck carried the name of its author to his master, Von Tausch. Now he comes to America to grow up with the country under an assumed name. Nice sort of American citizen he will make! How proud the German editors of America will be of their compatriot!

New York city made so loud a howl against having the offscouring of Europe dumped upon her docks and left there that the federal authorities established the strictest possible supervision of emigrants arriving at that and other American ports from Europe. Now we receive few criminals and paupers from foreign lands, but the infliction New York city protested against with all her might in her own case she herself seems to be visiting upon her fellow citizens in the American Union. Having a spite at Kansas, New York city naturally chooses that state as the dumping ground for her slum children. At least that is what we infer from the indignant protests at present poured forth by Kansas. Two carloads of New York city waifs have lately been gathered up from the gutters and asylums and sent to Kansas to grow up with the country. A statement of opinion made at an indignation meeting held in Council Grove, Kan., declares that these slum children seldom make good citizens and that Kansas has enough young ones of her own to provide for.

One of the three cardinal doctrines of the theosophists is the cultivation of universal brotherhood. They are cultivating it with a hurrah at their camp at Onset, Mass. The way in which, first, Brother Foulke accused Brother Crane of stealing his little heathen image of Buddha and then the hair pulling, clawing, tongue lashing and fist fights that Brother Foulke and Brother Robinson had when they met in the street shortly afterward are enough to draw tears from the eyes of even an ugly little idol. This scrimmage at Onset only serves to divert attention for a little time from the spirited contest now on between the Tingleyite-Judge theosophists in America and the old reliable, only genuine Jacob theosophical society of England. How these brothers do love one another!

The United States is jealous of no other country because she herself is the greatest and most powerful of all.

MAKING GOOD ROADS.

ESSENTIALS TO BE CONSIDERED IN BUILDING HIGHWAYS.

Methods Suited to the Various Soils—Macadam and Telford Foundation Systems. Size and Form of Stone—Thickness of the Metalling and How It Should Be Laid.

At the beginning of the present century the highways of England were so bad and the rates for toll so heavy that public attention was attracted to the situation. The investigations which followed led to the formulation of rules for the construction of roads which have resulted in the splendid highways for which Great Britain has become famous. Macadam and Telford were the most prominent road engineers of that time, and the two different systems of roadbuilding which they advocated are still used, according to the requirements of the locality where roads are to be built.

In the United States most roads have natural beds, and the character of these beds is determined by the geology of the region in which they lie. Hence the roadbeds consist of clay, sand, loam, gravel, etc., or may occasionally be on the surface of the country rock. From this necessary relation between soil and road it usually happens that the poorest roads are in the regions of poor farms, where property values and consequently taxes are low and there is little money to spend on the roads. This is especially true in stony districts, for a stony soil is the most unmanageable material for a road.

Of the natural roads those on clay soil are best in dry weather, those on sand best in wet weather. When wet with a certain proportion of water fine sand becomes hard and elastic, as we see on the beaches of our Atlantic coast from Long Island southward.

Of the natural soils, the best for road purposes are those variable mixtures of sand and clay called loams. Loam roads average better through the year than those of clay or sand. A limestone gravel also makes a good road, as does a fine quartz gravel mixed with clay. From everyday experience it is clear that natural roadbeds are not fit for heavy traffic when under varying conditions of moisture.

The experience of over 2,000 years has shown conclusively that there are two essential points to be aimed at in the construction of a road:

UNDRAINED DIRT ROADWAY.

First, a hard, smooth, waterproof surface.

Second, a thoroughly dry foundation. These principles were known to the Romans 300 B. C. and used in the construction of their best highways.

The surface of a good road must be of sufficient strength to resist the wear and tear of traffic and smooth enough to prevent undue strain and wear on vehicles. In connection with this the soil beneath must be made dry and kept dry. Therefore the subject of road drainage is as important as that of road metalling.

The best road covering is composed of angular fragments of some stone grinding on the surface into a dust which, when wet, will bind or in a measure cement the fragments together, so that water will not penetrate. The angular form is essential to make the fragments interlock. The sizes should be quite uniform, except that the surface layer may consist of fragments different in size from those in the bottom course.

The total thickness of this metalling must be at least 6 inches on a natural soil foundation. The fragments should not exceed 2 1/4 inches in diameter and should be rolled in two separate courses with a heavy steam roller until the surface is absolutely firm. This is the macadam system.

Where the soil foundation is clay or for any reason difficult to drain the telford method is used. In this case a course of flat stones about six inches deep, set on edge and closely wedged together, is placed upon the soil, and the crushed stone is placed over this four inches thick and rolled solid. In good practice it is customary to roll the earth before the stone is laid upon it and then roll the stone foundation. The telford foundation forms a bridge which prevents the road from sinking in moist soil.

In some places tile drains, one on each side of the road, are necessary. After the road is built it must be kept constantly in repair, and the neglect of this principle is to a great extent responsible for the poor roads of the United States. The macadam and telford systems above described are necessary for roads designed for heavy traffic in all weathers, but roads for pleasure driving only do not need the same expensive preparation.

The cantata which the King's Daughters have been preparing is to be given on Friday and Saturday evenings, August 13th and 14th, in a tent on the grounds in front of the school building. The young ladies have been working most of the time during their vacation this summer drilling the children in order that the people of this village might have a treat which can seldom be seen or heard in a small town. There are twenty-five young misses in the cantata. They will be costumed as sea-rymths, fairies, miners, queen and attending sprites. The scenery will be new and unique. No pains will be spared to give everyone an interesting time.

Saturday at the Barrington Ball park the Independents crossed bats with the Unions. This was the second game of the Independents since their organization, and to say they are ball players is certified to by the way they played, considering the poor grounds they had to play on. At the close of the first five innings the Unions had the lead, the score standing 3 to 7, when in the sixth the Independents run in twelve scores, knocking the ball all over the field and the infielders fumbling it in elegant shape. The Unions thereafter tried to redeem themselves, but it was too late, and at the end of the ninth inning the score stood 14 to 16 in favor of the Independents. Another game will be played here today at Oaks' Ball park. A large attendance is expected. This will be the second of a series of three games between the Independents and the Unions.

Bought Harvard Lighting Plant.

The Chicago Engineering company, which is incorporated by Albert F. Philbrick, Judson S. Joslyn, H. E. Shedd and H. J. Brownell, has purchased the Harvard electric light plant of Carl E. Nelson.

It is the intention to incorporate as at Barrington, where it has a plant. In addition to this it will entirely reconstruct the Harvard plant and make it one of the best in the state. To do this will require some time. It will be the purpose to give a good service and the public is assured of this in advance. The gentlemen who comprise the company are experienced men. They know what is wanted and they propose in the quickest possible time to give to them good service and a first-class plant.—Elgin Courier.

Soldiers' Monument Executive Committee.

As recently mentioned in the REVIEW the Lake County Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument Association has placed all of its matters in the hands of an executive committee authorized to proceed with the work. This committee consists of Hon. G. R. Lyon, chairman; B. L. Flagg, secretary; Hon. C. A. Partridge, Capt. J. R. Bracher and Arthur Cooke.

Their first move has been to get the old subscription lists and books together. While all these documents have not reached them as yet, they have secured enough so that they have got matters fairly well in hand, after a half dozen long sessions. They find that there is in the hands of N. A. Steele, treasurer of the association, about $3,750. This includes the county appropriation of $2,000 and the fund of $602.50 raised by the Waukegan Woman's Relief Corps. There is a sum amounting to two or three hundred dollars in the hands of the committeemen. These amounts will shortly be called in. As soon as the lists can be checked up and verified, all unpaid subscriptions will be asked for.

The association has lain dormant so long that there will be some shrinkage in the list, owing to the death or removal of subscribers. There are several hundred dollars, however, that are collectable. In addition to this, a considerable subscription should be raised among patriotic citizens of the county to whom the matter has never been formally presented. When the association made its special effort five years ago, largely through the personal work of Major H. S. Vail, of Highland Park, a goodly number of people were given blanks and books and secured subscriptions of considerable amounts. Most of these were returned, but a few are still out. It is especially requested that any persons having any of these books or blanks return them to B. L. Flagg, secretary, Waukegan. It is also asked that all persons who still hold funds belonging to the association, or whose subscriptions are still unpaid, remit the amounts, whatever they may be, to N. A. Steele, treasurer, Waukegan.

THE EYE OF THE MIND.

BY HUGH CONWAY.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

Nevertheless, the young people had no doubts about their coming bliss. Everything was going smoothly and pleasantly for them. Carriston had at once spoken to Madeline's aunt, and obtained the old Scotchwoman's ready consent to their union. I was rather vexed at his still keeping to his absurd whim in concealing his true name. He said he was afraid of alarming the aunt by telling her he was passing under an alias, whilst if he gave Madeline his true reason for so doing she would be miserable. Moreover, I found he had formed the romantic plan of marrying her without telling her in what an enviable position she would be placed; so far as worldly gear went. A kind of Lord of Burleigh surprise no doubt commended itself to his imaginative brain.

The last day of my holiday came. I bade a long and sad farewell to lake and mountain, and, accompanied by Carriston, started for home. I did not see the parting proper between the young people—that was far too sacred a thing to be intruded upon—but even when that protracted affair was over, I waited many, many minutes whilst Carriston stood hand in hand with Madeline, comforting himself and her by reiterating, "Only six weeks—six short weeks! And then—and then!" It was the girl who at last tore herself away, and then Carriston mounted reluctantly by my side on the rough vehicle.

From Edinburgh we traveled by the night train. The greater part of the way we had the compartment to ourselves. Carriston, as a lover will, talked of nothing but coming bliss and his plans for the future. After a while I grew quite weary of the monotony of the subject, and at last dozed off, and for some little time slept. The shrill whistle which told us a tunnel was at hand aroused me. My companion was sitting opposite to me, and as I glanced across at him my attention was arrested by the same strange intense look which I had on a previous occasion at Bettws-y-Coed noticed in his eyes—the same fixed stare—the same obliviousness to all that was passing. Remembering his request, I shook him, somewhat roughly, back to his senses. He regarded me for a moment vacantly, then said:

"Now I have found out what was wanting to make the power I told you of complete. I could see her if I wished."

"Of course you can see her—in your mind's eye. All lovers can do that."

"If I tried I could see her bodily—know exactly what she is doing!" He spoke with an air of complete conviction.

"Then, I hope, for the sake of modesty, you won't try. It is now nearly three o'clock. She ought to be in bed and asleep."

I spoke lightly thinking it better to try and laugh him out of his folly. He took no notice of my sorry joke.

"No," he said quietly, "I am not going to try. But I know now what was wanting. Love—such love as mine—such love as hers—makes the connecting link, and enables sight or some other sense to cross over space, and pass through every material obstacle."

"Look here, Carriston," I said seriously, "you are talking as a madman talks. I don't want to frighten you, but I am bound both as a doctor and your sincere friend to tell you that unless you cure yourself of these absurd delusions, they will grow upon you, develop fresh forms, and you will probably end your days under restraint. Ask any doctor, he will tell you the same."

"Doctors are a clever race," answered my strange young friend, "but they don't know everything."

So saying he closed his eyes and appeared to sleep.

We parted on reaching London. Many kind words and wishes passed between us, and I gave some more well-meant and, I believed, needed warnings. He was going down to see his uncle, the baronet. Then he had some matters to arrange with his lawyers, and above all had to select a residence for himself and his wife. He would no doubt be in London for a short time. If possible he would come and see me. Any way he would write and let me know the exact date of his approaching marriage. If I could manage to come to it, so much the better. If not he would try, as they passed through town, to bring his bride to pay me a flying and friendly visit.

Some six weeks afterward—late at night—while I was deep in a new and clever treatise on zymotics, a man haggard, wild, unshorn, and unkempt, rushed past my startled servant, and entered the room in which I sat. He threw himself into a chair, and I was horrified to recognize in the intruder my clever and brilliant friend, Charles Carriston!

VI.

THE END has come sooner than I expected." These were the sad words I muttered to myself as, waving my frightened servant away, I closed the door and stood alone with the supposed maniac. He rose and wrung my hand, then without a word, sunk back into his chair and buried his face in his hands, as he said, as sane as I was.

"Thank heaven you can speak to me and look at me like this," I exclaimed. "You are satisfied then?" he said. "On this point, yes. Now tell me what is wrong?"

Now that he had set my doubts at rest his agitation and excitement seemed to return. He grasped my hand convulsively.

"Madeline!" he whispered. "Madeline—my love—she is gone."

"Gone!" I repeated. "Gone where?" "She is gone, I say—stolen from me by some black-hearted traitor—perhaps forever. Who can tell?"

"But, Carriston, surely in so short a time her love can not have been won by another. If so, all I can say is—"

"What!" he shouted. "You who have seen her! You in your wildest dreams to imagine that Madeline Rowan would leave me of her own free will! No, sir, she has been stolen from me—entrapped—carried away—hidden. But I have found her. A sort of nervous trembling seemed to run through his frame. Deeply distressed, I drew his hands from his face.

"Now, Carriston," I said as firmly as I could, "look up and tell me what all this means. Look up, I say, and speak to me."

He raised his eyes to mine and kept them there, whilst a ghastly smile—a phantom of humor—flickered across his white face. No doubt his native quickness told him what I suspected, so he looked me steadily in the face.

"No," he said, "not as you think. But let there be no mistake. Question me. Talk to me. Put me to any test. Satisfy yourself, once for all, that I am as sane as you are."

He spoke so rationally, his eyes met mine so unflinchingly, that I was rejoiced to know that my fears were as yet ungrounded. There was grief, excitement, want of rest in his appearance, but his general manner told me he would find her, or I will kill the black-hearted villain who has done this."

He rose and paced the room. His face was distorted with rage. He clinched and unclenched his long slender hands.

"My dear fellow," I said, "you are talking riddles. Sit down and tell me calmly what has happened. But, first of all, as you look utterly worn out, I will ring for my man to get you some food."

"No," he said, "I want nothing. Weary I am, for I have been to Scotland and back as fast as man can travel. I reached London a short time ago, and after seeing one man have come straight to you, my only friend, for help—it may be for protection. But I have eaten and I have drunk, knowing I must keep my health and strength."

However, I insisted upon some wine being brought. He drank a glass, and then with a strange enforced calm, told me what had taken place. His tale was this:

After we had parted company on our return from Scotland, Carriston went down to the family seat in Oxfordshire, and informed his uncle of the impending change in his life. The baronet, an extremely old man, infirm and all but childish, troubled little about the matter. Every acre of his large property was strictly entailed, so his pleasure or displeasure could make but little alteration in his nephew's prospects. Still he was the head of the family, and Carriston was in duty bound to make the important news known to him. The young man made no secret of his approaching marriage, so in a very short time every member of the family was aware that the heir and future head was about to ally himself to a nobody. Knowing nothing of Madeline Rowan's rare beauty and sweet nature, Carriston's kinsmen and kinswomen were sparing with their congratulations. Indeed, Mr. Ralph Carriston, the cousin whose name was coupled with the such absurd suspicions, went so far as to write a bitter, sarcastic letter, full of ironical felicitations. This, and Charles Carriston's haughty reply, did not make the affection between the cousins any stronger. Moreover, shortly afterward the younger man heard that inquiries were being made in the neighborhood of Madeline's home, as to her position and parentage. Feeling sure that only his cousin Ralph could have had the curiosity to institute such inquiries, he wrote and thanked him for the keen interest he was manifesting in his future welfare, but begged that hereafter Mr. Carriston would apply to him direct for any information he wanted. The two men were now no longer on speaking terms.

He wrote to Madeline, and told her he was going from home for a few days. He said he should be traveling the greater part of the time, so it would be no use for her writing to him until his return. He did not reveal the object of his journey. Were Madeline to know it was to choose a winter residence at Cannes, she would be filled with amazement, and the innocent deception he was still keeping up would not be carried through to the romantic end which he pictured to himself.

VII.

THE DAY before he started for France Madeline wrote that her aunt was very unwell, but said nothing as to her malady causing any alarm. Perhaps Carriston thought less about the old Scotch widow than her relationship and kindness to Miss Rowan merited. He started on his travels without any forebodings of evil.

His journey to Cannes and back was hurried—he wasted no time on the road, but was delayed for two days at the place itself before he could make final arrangements with the owner and the present occupier of the house. Thinking he was going to start every moment he did not write to Madeline—at the rate at which he meant to return a letter posted in England would reach her almost as quickly as if posted at Cannes.

He reached his home, which for the last few weeks had been Oxford, and found two letters waiting for him. The first, dated on the day he left England, was from Madeline. It told him that her aunt's illness had suddenly taken a fatal turn—that she had died that day, almost without warning. The second letter was anonymous.

It was written apparently by a woman, and advised Mr. Carr to look sharply after his lady-love or he would find himself left in the lurch. The writer would not be surprised to hear some fine day that she had eloped with a certain gentleman who should be nameless. This precious epistle, probably an emanation of feminine spite, Carriston treated as it deserved—he tore it up and threw the pieces to the wind.

But the thought of Madeline being alone at that lonely house troubled him greatly. The dead woman had no sons or daughters—all the anxiety and responsibility connected with her affairs would fall on the poor girl. The next day he threw himself into the Scotch Express, and started for her far-away home.

On arriving there he found it occupied only by the rough farm servants. They seemed in a state of wonderment, and volubly questioned Carriston as to the whereabouts of Madeline. The question sent a chill of fear to his heart. He answered their questions by others, and soon learnt all they had to communicate.

Little enough it was. On the morning after the old woman's funeral Madeline had gone to Callendar, to ask the advice of an old friend of her aunt's, as to what steps should now be taken. She had neither been to his friend, nor had she returned home. She had, however, sent a message that she must go to London at once, and would write from there. That was the last heard of her—all that was known about her.

Upon hearing this news Carriston became a prey to the acutest terror—an emotion which was quite inexplicable to the honest people, his informants. The girl had gone, but she had sent word whither she had gone. True, they did not know the reason for her departure, so sudden and without luggage of any description—true, she had not written as promised, but no doubt they would hear from her tomorrow. Carriston knew better. Without revealing the extent of his fears, he flew back to Callendar. Inquiries at the railway station informed him that she had gone, or had purposed going, to London, but whether she ever reached it, or whether any trace of her could be found there, was, at least, a matter of doubt. No good could be gained by remaining in Scotland, so he traveled back at once to town, half distracted, sleepless, and racking his brains to know where to look for her.

"She has been decoyed away," he said in conclusion. "She is hidden, imprisoned somewhere. And I know, as well as if he told me, who has done this thing. I can trace Ralph Carriston's cursed hand through it all."

I glanced at him askance. This morbid suspicion of his cousin amounted almost to monomania. He had told the tale of Madeline's disappearance clearly and tersely; but when he began to account for it his theory was a wild and untenable one. However much he suspected Ralph Carriston of longing to stand in his shoes, I could see no object for the crime of which he accused him, that of decoying away Madeline Rowan.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

J. R. DOOLITTLE DEAD.

THE NOTED EX-SENATOR DIES IN PROVIDENCE.

He Was One of the Founders of the Republican Party, but Afterwards Joined the Democrats, Becoming a Conspicuous Leader.

Ex-United States Senator Doolittle of Wisconsin died at the home of his daughter, at Edgewood, near Providence, of Bright's disease.

James Rood Doolittle has been a resident of Racine since 1851. While retaining his citizenship in Wisconsin, where his home was presided over by his widowed daughter, he for many years spent most of his time in Chicago, making his home there in the house of his deceased son and law partner.

Senator Doolittle was a native of New York. He was born on a farm in the town of Hampton, in the neighborhood of Lake Champlain, and not far from the Vermont line, on Jan. 3, 1815. The Doolittles were of English descent, but the first one in this country came over with the earliest settlers. Judge Doolittle was the sixth in line of descent from Abraham Doolittle, who was sheriff of New Haven county, Connecticut, in 1648. He attended Middlebury academy, in his native state, and in this preparatory school received the groundwork of his education. After finishing the academic course he entered Geneva college. This was in 1830, and he was graduated in 1834. Thereupon he decided to study law and did so at Rochester, N. Y. In 1837 he was admitted to the bar and began the practice of his profession in Rochester.

Met with Excellent Success.

Upon the creation of the new county of Wyoming, in 1841, he removed to Warsaw, where he met with excellent success from the start. Here he first took an active part in politics, and, though a Democrat, was elected district attorney in a Whig county.

In 1844 he supported Polk for President over Clay, but in 1847 he introduced into the Democratic convention the famous "cornerstone resolution" upon which the Free Soil party was formed in New York, and in 1849 he followed the fortunes of Martin Van Buren, the Free Soil candidate.

Both parties having pledged themselves after the admission of California as a free state that the slavery agitation should cease, he cordially supported Franklin Pierce in 1852. The repeal of the Missouri compromise, which followed Pierce's election, and the position assumed by Stephen A. Douglas toward the administration of Kansas and Nebraska, operated to drive anti-slavery Democrats out of the party.

The judge became one of the founders of the Republican party. He was elected to the United States senate as a Republican from Wisconsin, Jan. 23, 1857. In the year before he had championed the candidacy of Fremont for the presidency. In December, 1859, when the Republican national committee met in the city of New York to designate the time and place of holding the national convention of 1860, Judge Doolittle represented Mr. Stevens of Iowa. He wrote the call for the convention.

On Jan. 22, 1863, he was re-elected to the United States senate, but in 1865, immediately after the assassination of Lincoln, the radical change in the reconstruction policy of the Republican party, inaugurated by Thaddeus Stevens and other leaders, impelled him to leave the party. He sustained President Johnson in the great controversy between the chief executive and the Republican senators.

The legislature of Wisconsin, on May 28, 1866, adopted a resolution asking him to resign his seat in the senate. He delivered a powerful speech in the senate in reply to the resolution, and refused to resign. In 1868 he supported Horatio Seymour. In 1871 he was the Democratic candidate for governor of Wisconsin against the late C. C. Washburn, and he has been a Democrat since.

Immediately upon his retirement from the senate, Mr. Doolittle resumed the practice of his profession. He opened an office in Chicago and was in the city nearly every day until his sickness began recently. Formerly he was senior member of the firm of Doolittle, McKay & Tolman. Upon the death of Mr. McKay, John Mayo Palmer became a member of the firm. It was dissolved later, though Mr. Doolittle has continued to be a partner of Edgar B. Tolman. His office formerly was in the Chamber of Commerce building, but about a year ago he removed to the Marquette building.

Though he kept up his law practice, ex-Senator Doolittle did not engage in politics after he left the field of his activity at the national capital. He accepted no honorary offices offered him, but always was thoroughly conversant with municipal affairs in Chicago and politics in general. A few years ago he sought an election as judge of the Racine circuit, but was defeated.

Was in the Greeley Convention.

He was president of the Philadelphia Union convention, in 1866, and also of the Baltimore Democratic national convention of 1872, which adopted the nomination of Horace Greeley for the presidency. Judge Doolittle had been a trustee of the University of Chicago since its foundation, served one year as its president, and was for many years a professor in its law school.

The birth of the Republican party found Judge Doolittle one of the rising young Democrats of Wisconsin. That state then had for its senior senator the senior Dodge. (Iowa the junior Dodge—the only instance of father and son in the senate of the United States at the same time.) Both of the Dodes went with Douglas in support of the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and when Franklin Pierce signed it he virtually signed the political death warrant of both.

Wisconsin and Iowa, which had hitherto been Democratic, rallied with enthusiasm around the newly raised Republican standard, sending young men to the senate as soon as possible to take the places of the Dodes, Judge Doolittle being elected from the bench. Down to the time Andrew Johnson set up his individual policy above that of the party which elected him, Senator Doolittle was not only a consistent but a conspicuous leader in the party, but, unfortunately, Mr. Doolittle was in sympathy with the Johnson idea of reconstruction, and his political career was cut short. Events fully justified the Republican party and showed the error of Mr. Doolittle's opinion.

Retained His Powers Remarkably.

Judge Doolittle was a man of fine physical development. At the age of four score years he was a man of powerful build, with pleasing and expressive features, and at the time of his last speech, delivered in Milwaukee at the Bryan meeting, held in the Davidson theater, in the campaign of 1896, his voice was still strong and sonorous. Few men in the past half century have addressed larger masses of people on political subjects. He was a master of the art of rhetoric.

He was very happy in epigrams, as this incident illustrated. After Abraham Lincoln's second nomination for the presidency a cabal was formed in the state with the hope of forcing him to retire. At a mass meeting where one of the discontented men had been the first speaker and had deliberately hinted at the desirability of Mr. Lincoln's retirement, Judge Doolittle, who had listened with feeling more easily imagined than described, was called as the second speaker. There was a vast audience of probably 20,000 people who listened to the previous speaker in ominous silence. The judge rose, and in slow, distinct tones, and with his right hand raised to heaven, said:

"Fellow citizens, I believe in God Almighty, and, under him, I believe in Abraham Lincoln."

The spell was broken, and the vast audience cheered for fully half an hour. No more was heard of the opposition to Mr. Lincoln.

Ex-Senator Doolittle was a widower. Three children survive him. One son, J. W. Doolittle, Jr., is dead. His widow lives in Groveland Park, Chicago, and frequently was visited by her aged father-in-law. He spent a day with her just before going east. His living son, Colonel Doolittle, is a farmer in Iowa. His elder daughter is Mrs. W. J. Burge of Pawtucket, R. I., and the younger daughter, Mrs. Sarah Pease, lives at Racine.

Was a Consistent Baptist.

In his religious affiliations Judge Doolittle was a Baptist, and was active in that denomination. His devoutness and modesty are shown in a letter he wrote a friend several years ago, speaking of his capacity for continuous labor. He said: "It is so purely personal that I hardly dare tell the simple truth for fear of apparent boasting. So far from boasting, however, it is only with the most humble reverence and gratitude to Almighty God that I can now speak of the greatest of earthly blessings ever bestowed upon man, viz., perfect health in a strong constitution, derived from a hardy and long-lived ancestry."

WASHING A FINE ART.
"Ever since spinning was a type of womanly industry from age to age, it has been expected that beautiful apparel should clothe women. From the classic robes of Aspasia to the rich dresses of Elizabeth, and thence to the wedding gown of Puritan Friscella we see the attractiveness of dress." But at this time only has it become possible for all women to be becomingly attired at a small cost, the supply of beautiful inexpensive dress fabrics now to be had, making it an easy matter. Yet there are women who insist that the expense of having summer gowns laundered is greater than the original cost, and that in the end light woollens or summer silks are more economical. This is a mistaken idea, as washing pretty belongings is a fine art, which is very easy to learn. Any girl no matter how delicately reared can wash her own summer gowns. A bright day, plenty of water, and a little pure soap are the necessary aids in the work. To do it, fill a tub two-thirds full of warm water, dissolve a fourth of a cake of Ivory Soap, (which will not fade the most delicate colors), add it to the water, wash the garments carefully through it, rinse first in clear water, then in blue water, wring, dip in thin starch, hang on the line in the shade. When dry, sprinkle, and iron on the wrong side. Eliza R. Parker.

Diminished Power.
"I don't know what to do about that man," remarked the pugilist's manager. "Oh, he'll make a record as a heavyweight," was the assuring response. "I don't know about that. He caught cold so that he can't speak above a whisper and I'm afraid I'll have to enter him in the featherweight class if his voice doesn't get better."—Washington Star.

Edwin Forrest's Wit.
Lawrence Barrett's "Life of Edwin Forrest" contains many interesting anecdotes of the famous tragedian, but there still remain many which have never been printed. Once, when he was playing William Tell in Boston, Sarnem, Gessler's lieutenant, should have remarked: "I see you love a jest; but jest not now!" Imagine Forrest's feelings when that worthy declaimed: "I see you love a jest, but not jest now!" On another occasion, it matters not in what play, an official announced: "A courier from Rome!" Forrest glared upon him, convulsively shrugged his shoulders, and with a smothered snort, peculiar to himself alone, asked aside, but loud enough to be heard by those near the stage: "What is the price of leather?"—New York Telegram.

Try Grain-O.
Ask your grocer today to show you a package of GRAIN-O, the new food drink that takes the place of coffee. The children may drink it without injury as well as the adult. All who try it like it. GRAIN-O has that rich seal brown of Mocha or Java, but it is made from pure grains, and the most delicate stomach receives it without distress. 1/4 the price of coffee. 15 cents and 25 cents per package. Sold by all grocers. Tastes like coffee. Looks like coffee.

An Ancient Ostrich.
A specimen of the extinct bird with teeth, called the hesperornis, was recently discovered in Kansas, so perfect in preservation that its feathers were still in place. These feathers, Prof. Marsh, of Yale, says, are "the typical plumage of an ostrich." Remains of hesperornis were first discovered by Prof. Marsh about twenty-seven years ago, and he was led to assert that the bird was probably a "carnivorous swimming ostrich." The recent discovery confirms his original opinion, while showing what wonderful changes have occurred in the living forms inhabiting North America.

A HEALTHY WIFE Is a Husband's Inspiration.

A sickly, half-dead-and-alive woman, especially when she is the mother of a family, is a damper to all joyousness in the home. I sometimes marvel at the patience of some husbands.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging and that everything tires her, her sleep is disturbed by horrible dreams, and that she often wakes suddenly in the night with a feeling of suffocation and alarm, she must at once regain her strength. It matters not where she lives, she can write a letter. Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., will reply promptly and without charge. The following shows the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, accompanied with a letter of advice:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I have suffered for over two years with falling, enlargement and ulceration of the womb, and this spring, being in such a weakened condition, caused me to flow for nearly six months. Some time ago, urged by friends, I wrote to you for advice. After using the treatment which you advised for a short time, that terrible flow stopped. I am now gaining strength and flesh and have better health than I have had for the past ten years. I wish to say suffering women, do not suffer longer, when there is one so kind and willing to aid you."—Mrs. F. S. BENNETT, Westphalia, Kans.

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. A Remarkable Cure of Chronic Diarrhea.

In 1862, when I served my country as a private in Company A, 167th Pennsylvania Volunteers, I contracted chronic diarrhea. It has given me a great deal of trouble ever since. I have tried a dozen different medicines and several prominent doctors without any permanent relief. Not long ago a friend sent me a sample bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy, and after that I bought and took a 50-cent bottle; and now I can say that I am entirely cured. I cannot be thankful enough to you for this great remedy, and recommend it to all suffering veterans. If in doubt write me. Yours gratefully, HENRY STEINBERGER, Allentown, Pa. Sold by A. L. Waller, Barrington and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

The statement of Lake county agricultural statistics for the year 1896 has been completed by County Clerk A. L. Hendee, and from it we give some of the most important figures. There were 1,414,800 bushels of corn raised, from an acreage of 32,816; 1,397,522 bushels of oats, from 34,644 acres; 20,630 bushels of rye, from 722 acres; 105,268 bushels of potatoes, from 1,795 acres; there were 6,988 horses, 24,521 cattle, 13,528 sheep, and 18,448 hogs. There were sold 479,409 pounds of butter, 6,298 pounds of cheese, 151,098 gallons of cream, and 7,250,320 gallons of milk.

The Elgin Courier says: Elgin may send a colony to the gold fields of Klondyke. An attempt is being made to organize a company of twenty to leave as soon as navigation opens in that region in the spring, if not before. The craze has seized several people, who may go if the excitement does not subside before they complete arrangements.

The supreme tent, Knights of the Maccabees, recently concluded its amendments to the by-laws. The most important adopted was one whereby the several great camp jurisdictions that are issuing life benefits on their own account secure the option of discounting this department and turning all their risks and assets over to the supreme tent. The great camps of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois have been conducting life benefit departments of their own, but this internal competition is now believed to be unwise. A new departure in fraternal insurance was taken in the creation of a new endowment feature, establishing an annual installment policy. The supreme hive Ladies of the Maccabees concluded its work and adjourned. The principal change in the laws was the creation of a reserve. An extra assessment will be called each year to go into this fund.
