Our merchants should get together and protect themselves against those customers who patronize one place as long as they can and then change when they are refused further credit. The recent experience of some of them in this regard should show them the necessity of such a mutual proceeding.

Why not regulate our street lamp service so that the lamps will be lit on some of these dark nights which are not included in the time in the month when they are ordered lit?

The St. Patrick's dance held at the Oakland hall last Friday evening was not very well attended on account of the inclement weather. Only about 15 couples were present, but an elegant time was had and an elaborate supper served.

A rag-bee was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. Ham last Saturday afternoon. Invitations were extended to the members of the W. R. C. The bee proper continued until about 5 o'clock when supper was announced. After partaking of the same, preparations were made for the evening's entertainment. At this time those who were unable to attend in the afternoon began to arrive in goodly numbers, several members of the G. A. R. being included. The program, although informal, was fine, consisting of vocal selections, readings and recitations. At 10 o'clock all were invited to lunch, and after doing ample justice, declared they had had an excellent time and with "good night" they went to their respective homes.

PHANTOM SHIP

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"Good morning, my son," said the captain, taking his pipe out of his mouth for a moment. "We are detained by the supercargo, who appears not overwilling to come on board; the boat has been on shore this hour waiting for him, and we shall be last of the fleet under way. I wish the company would let us sail without these gentlemen, who are, in my opinion, a great hindrance to business; but they think otherwise on shore."

"What is their duty on board?" replied Philip.

"Their duty is to look after the cargo and the traffic, and if they kept to that it would not be so bad; but they interfere with everything else and everybody, studying little except their own comforts; in fact, they play the king on board, knowing that we dare not affront them, as a word from them would prejudice the vessel when again to be chartered. The company insist upon their being received with all honors. We salute them with five guns on their arrival on board."

"Do you know anything of this one whom you expect?"

"Nothing, but from report. A brother captain of mine (with whom he has sailed) told me that he is most fearful of the dangers of the sea, and much taken up with his own importance."

"I wish he would come," replied Philip. "I am most anxious that we should sail."

"You must be of a wandering disposition, my son; I hear that you leave a comfortable home, and a pretty wife to boot."

"I am most anxious to see the world," replied Philip; "and I must learn to sail a ship before I purchase one, and try to make the fortune that I covet." "Alas! how different from my real wishes, thought Philip, as he made this reply."

"Fortunes are made and fortunes are swallowed up, too, by the ocean," replied the captain. "If I could turn this good ship into a good house, with plenty of guilders to keep the house warm, you would not find me standing on this poop. I have doubled the Cape twice, which is often enough for any man; the third time may not be so lucky."

"How long do you expect your voyage may occupy us?"

"That's as may be; but I should say about two years; nay, if not detained by the factors, as I expect we shall be, for some hostile service, it may be less."

"Two years!" thought Philip. "Two years from Amine!" and he sighed deeply, for he felt that their separation might be forever."

"Nay, my son, two years is not so long," said Mynheer Kloots, who observed the passing cloud on Philip's brow. "I was once five years away, and was unfortunate, for I brought home nothing, not even my ship. But here he comes at last; they have hoisted the ensign on the staff in the boat; there—they have shoved off. Mynheer Hillebrant, see the gunners ready with their linstocks to salvo the supercargo."

"What duty do you wish me to perform?" observed Philip. "In what can I be useful?"

At present you can be of little use, except in those heavy gales in which every pair of hands is valuable. You must look and learn for some time yet; but you can make a fair copy of the journal kept for the inspection of the company, and may assist me in various ways, as soon as the unpleasant nausea felt by those who first embark has subsided. As a remedy, I should propose that you gird a handkerchief tight round your body so as to compress the stomach, and make frequent application of my bottle of schnapps, which you will find always at your service. But now to receive the factor of the most puissant company, Mynheer Hillebrant, let them discharge the cannon."

The guns were fired, and soon after the smoke had cleared away, the boat, with its long ensign trailing on the water, was pulled alongside. Philip watched the appearance of the supercargo; but he remained in the boat until several of the boxes with the initials and arms of the company were first handed on the deck; at last the supercargo appeared.

He was a small, spare, wizened-faced man, with a three-cornered cocked hat, bound with broad gold lace, upon his head, under which appeared a full-bottomed flowing wig, the curls of which descended low upon his shoulders. His coat was of crimson velvet with broad flaps; his waistcoat of white silk, worked in colored flowers, and descending half-way down to his knees. His breeches were of black satin, and his legs were covered with white silk stockings. Add to this, gold buckles at his knees and in his shoes, lace ruffles to his wrists, and a silver-mounted cane in his hand, and the reader has the entire dress of Mynheer Jacob Janz von Stroom, the supercargo of the Honorable Company, appointed to the good ship Ter Schilling.

Mynheer von Stroom did not appear very anxious to remain on deck. He requested to be shown into his cabin, and followed the captain aft, picking his way among the coils of ropes with which his path was encumbered. The door opened and the supercargo disappeared. The ship was then got under way, the man had left the windlass, the sails had been trimmed and they were securing the anchor on board when the bell of the poop cabin (appropriated to the supercargo) was pulled with great violence.

"What can that be?" said Mynheer Kloots (who was forward), taking his pipe out of his mouth. "Mynheer Vanderdecken, will you see what is the matter?"

Philip went aft, as the pealing of the bell continued, and opening the cabin door, discovered the supercargo perched upon the table and pulling the bell rope, which hung over its center, with every mark of fear in his countenance. His wig was off, and his bare skull gave him an appearance peculiarly ridiculous.

"What is the matter, sir?" inquired Philip.

"Matter!" spluttered Mynheer von Stroom; "call the troops in with their firelocks. Quick, sir. Am I to be murdered, torn to pieces and devoured? For mercy's sake, sir, don't stare, but do something—look, it's coming to the table! Oh, dear, oh, dear!" continued the supercargo, evidently terrified out of his wits.

Philip, whose eyes had been fixed on Mynheer von Stroom, turned them in the direction pointed out, and, much to his astonishment, perceived a small bear upon the deck, who was amusing himself with the supercargo's flowing wig, which he held in his paws, tossing it about, and now and then burying his muzzle in it. The unexpected sight of the animal was at first a shock to Philip; but at a moment's consideration assured him that the animal must be harmless, or it never would have been permitted to remain loose in the vessel.

Nevertheless, Philip had no wish to approach the animal, whose disposition he was unacquainted with, when the appearance of Mynheer Kloots put an end to his difficulty.

"What is the matter, mynheer?" said the captain. "Oh, I see! it is Johannes," continued the captain, going up to the bear, and saluting him with a kick, as he recovered the supercargo's wig. "Out of the cabin, Johannes!—out, sir!" cried Mynheer Kloots, kicking the breech of the bear till the animal had escaped through the door. "Mynheer von Stroom, I am very sorry—here is your wig. Shut the door, Mynheer Vanderdecken, or the beast may come back, for he is very fond of me."

As soon as the door was shut between Mynheer von Stroom and the object of his terror the little man slid off the table to the high-backed chair near it shook out the damaged curls of his wig, and replaced it on his head; pulled out his ruffles, and, assuming an air of magisterial importance, struck his cane on the deck, and then spoke: "Mynheer Kloots, what is the meaning of this disrespect to the supercargo of the puissant company?"

"God in heaven! no disrespect, mynheer; the animal is a bear, as you see; he is very tame, even with strangers. He belongs to me. I have had him ever since he was three months old. It was all a mistake. The mate, Mynheer Hillebrant, put him in the cabin, that he might be out of the way while the duty was carrying on, and he quite forgot that he was here. I am very sorry, Mynheer von Stroom; but he will not come here again, unless you wish to play with him."

"Play with him? I, supercargo to the company, play with a bear! Mynheer Kloots, the animal must be thrown overboard immediately."

"Nay, nay; I can't throw overboard an animal that I hold in much affection. Mynheer von Stroom, but he shall not trouble you."

"It must immediately be sent out of the ship, Mynheer Kloots. I order you to send it away—on your peril to refuse."

"Then we will drop the anchor again, Mynheer von Stroom, and send on shore to headquarters to decide the point. If the company insists that the brute be put on shore, be it so; but recollect, Mynheer von Stroom, we shall lose the protection of the fleet, and have to sail alone. Shall I drop the anchor, mynheer?"

This observation softened down the pertinacity of the supercargo; he had no wish to sail alone, and the fear of this contingency was more powerful than the fear of the bear.

"Mynheer Kloots, I will not be too severe; if the animal is chained, so that it does not approach me, I will consent to its remaining on board."

CHAPTER VIII.

We must allow the Indian fleet to pursue its way to the Cape with every variety of wind and weather. Some had parted company, but the rendezvous was Table Bay, from which they were again to start together.

Philip Vanderdecken was soon able to render some service on board. He studied his duty diligently, for employment prevented him from dwelling too much upon the cause for his embarkation, and he worked hard at the duties of the ship, for the exercise procured for him that sleep which otherwise would have been denied.

He was soon a favorite of the captain, and intimate with Hillebrant, the first mate; the second mate, Struys, was a morose young man, with whom he had little intercourse. As for the supercargo, Mynheer Jacob Janz von Stroom, he seldom ventured out of his cabin. The bear, Johannes, was not confined, and therefore Mynheer von Stroom confined himself; hardly a day passed that he did not look over a letter, which he had framed upon the subject, all ready to forward to the company; and each time that he perused it, he made some alteration, which he considered would give additional force to his complaint, and would prove still more injurious to the interests of Capt. Kloots.

In the meantime, in happy ignorance of all that was passing in the poop-cabin, Mynheer Kloots smoked, his pipe, drank his schnapps, and played with Johannes. The animal had also contracted a great affection for Philip, and used to walk the watch with him.

There was another party in the ship whom we must not lose sight of—the one-eyed pilot, Schriften, who appeared to have imbibed a great animosity toward our hero, as well as to his dumb favorite, the bear. As Philip held the rank of an officer, Schriften dared not openly affront, though he took every opportunity of annoying him, and was constantly inveighing against him before the ship's company. To the bear he was more openly inveterate, and seldom passed it without bestowing upon it a severe kick, accompanied with a horrid curse. Although no one on board appeared to be fond of this man, everybody appeared to be afraid of him, and he obtained a control over the seamen which appeared unaccountable.

Such was the state of affairs on board the good ship Ter Schilling when, in company with two others, she lay becalmed about two days' sail to the Cape. The weather was intensely hot, for it was the summer in those southern latitudes, and Philip, who had been laying down under the awning spread over the poop, was so overcome with the heat that he had fallen asleep. He awoke with a shivering sensation of cold over his whole body, particularly at his chest, and half opening his eyes, he perceived the pilot, Schriften, leaning over him and holding between his finger and his thumb a portion of the chain which had not been concealed, and to which was attached the sacred relic. Philip closed them again, to ascertain what were the man's intentions; he found that he gradually dragged out the chain, and, when the relic was clear, attempted to pass the whole over his head, evidently to gain possession of it. Upon this attempt Philip started up and seized him by the waist.

"Indeed!" cried Philip, with an indignant look, as he released the chain from the pilot's hand.

But Schriften appeared not in the least confused at being detected in his attempt; looking with his malicious one-eye at Philip, he mockingly observed:

"Does that chain hold her picture?—he! he!"

Vanderdecken rose, pushed his away, and folded his arms.

"I advise you not to be quite so curious, Master Pilot, or you may repent it."

"Or perhaps," continued the pilot, quite regardless of Philip's wrath, "it may be a child's caul, a sovereign remedy against drowning."

"Go forward to your duty, sir," cried Philip.

"Or, as you are a Catholic, the finger nail of a saint; or, yes, I have it—a piece of the holy cross."

Philip started.

"That's it! that's it!" cried Schriften, who now went forward to where the seamen were standing at the gangway.

"News for you, my lads!" said he; "we've a piece of the holy cross aboard, and so we may defy the devil."

MANY a dutiful daughter pays in pain for her mother's ignorance or perhaps neglect.

The mother suffered and she thinks her daughter must suffer also. This is true only to a limited extent. No excessive pain is healthy. Every mother should inform herself for her own sake and especially for the sake of her daughter. Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice about all matters concerning the ills of the feminine organs.

INDULGENT MOTHERS

Many a young girl's beauty is wasted by unnecessary pain at time of menstruation, and many indulgent mothers with mistaken kindness permit their daughters to grow careless about physical health.

MISS CARRIE M. LAMB, Big Beaver, Mich., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—A year ago I suffered from profuse and irregular menstruation and leucorrhœa. My appetite was variable, stomach sour and bowels were not regular, and was subject to pains like colic during menstruation. I wrote you and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used two packages of Sanative Wash. You can't imagine my relief. My courses are natural and general health improved."

MRS. NANNIE ADKINS, La Due, Mo., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to tell you of the good your Vegetable Compound has done my daughter. She suffered untold agony at time of menstruation before taking your medicine; but the Compound has relieved the pain, given her a better color, and she feels stronger, and has improved every way. I am very grateful to you for the benefit she has received. It is a great medicine for young girls."

A FAMOUS ROUGH RIDER.

Buck Taylor Says "Pe-ru-na is the Best Catarrh Cure on Earth—Cured Me."

Sergeant Buck Taylor, one of the famous Rough Riders, is a personal friend of Governor Roosevelt of New York. He accompanied Governor Roosevelt on his great stumping tour through upper New York state. He was promoted through gallantry in the field during the late war.

The Sergeant has the following to say of Pe-ru-na: "I think there is no better medicine on earth than Pe-ru-na, for catarrh. It has cured me. It would take a volume to tell you all the good it has done me. Pe-ru-na is the best catarrh cure on earth, and I know, for I have tried nearly all of them. Respectfully, Buck F. Taylor."

Winter weather causes catarrh. Everybody knows this. But everybody does not stop to think that winter weather delays the cure of catarrh. It takes longer to cure a case of catarrh in the winter generally, than in the warm season. Spring is here. Now is the time favorable to the treatment of old and especially stubborn cases of catarrh.

Voice Transmission.

In experiments with the compressed-air pipes of Westphalian coal mines, H. Schab has found that the greatest distance to which the sound of the voice could be conveyed in a straight pipe was between 1,500 and 1,700 feet. For moderate distances a pipe of about twenty inches in diameter gave the best results, a slightly larger one being better for long distances.

Taking Long Chances.

"These interesting widows seem to be all the rage," sighed the young girl. "True," he admitted. "And when a girl sets out to be an interesting widow if the fates will permit there's such an element of chance about it," she said and sighed again. Which was why he decided to postpone his proposal.

Losing Money on Two-Thirds of Our Mail

The United States lost, in 1897, about $26,000,000 in carrying second-class matter. This consists of magazines, newspapers and serial libraries, carried at 1 cent a pound, and copies of papers forwarded free to subscribers in the country. The cost to the government of transporting second-class matter is eight cents a pound; the revenue from it was but eight and a half mills. From two-thirds of the mail matter handled in 1897 the revenue was less than one-thirtieth of the cost of the mail service. No stamps appear on second-class matter. The money for postage is paid to the postmaster, and he gives a receipt for the amount to the publisher. The use of "newspaper stamps" has been discontinued. There are 9,378 postoffices sending second-class matter, and for 1898 there were sent 395,000,000 pounds; over 55 per cent of this bulk was sent from six centers—New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Philadelphia, Cincinnati.

Afraid of the Gallows.

Montreal Special New York Journal: The gallows on which Cordelia Poirier and her paramour, Sam Parslow, will be executed for the murder of the former's husband were shipped from here to St. Scholastique today. Two carpenters had to go along from the Montreal jail because not a man could be found in the entire county of Two Mountains who would touch the thing. Two years ago two brothers named Narbonne assisted in building a scaffold for an execution in that county and they have been outcasts ever since.

Generous Young Man.

"It is only right that I should tell you," she said, "that father has lost all." "Not all!" he exclaimed. "Yes, all," she asserted. "No," he said firmly, "not all. You are still left to him. I could not be so cruel as to add to his misfortunes. Tell him—tell him from me that my generosity impels me to leave him what little lies in my power."

Smallest Watch.

The smallest perfect watch ever made is owned by a Russian princess. It was first placed in an exquisite gold case, covered with the most minute but literally perfect Watteau scenes in enamel; then at the princess' desire the works were removed and placed inside a splendid diamond, scarcely two-fifths of an inch in diameter.

German Debt.

The German debt is growing constantly at the rate of about $36,000,000 a year. In 1888 it was $173,000,000. At the end of 1898 it was three times as great. These figures are from a German statistical paper. The total debt, $540,000,000 is very small, as debts go in this age.

Helen's Grief.

"What was Helen crying about, Polly?" asked Polly's mamma, as the little one came in from the playground. "She dug a great big hole in the garden and her mamma wouldn't let her take it into the house with her," said Polly. —The Rival.

The per capita money circulation of the United States is $25.42, the highest in the history of the nation.

THE pleasant method and beneficial effects of the well-known remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company, illustrate the value of obtaining the liquid laxative principles of plants known to be medicinally laxative and presenting them in the form most refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system. It is the one perfect strengthening laxative,

CLEANSING THE SYSTEM EFFECTUALLY. DISPELLING COLDS AND HEADACHES, PREVENTING FEVERS, OVERCOMING HABITUAL CONSTIPATION PERMANENTLY.

Its perfect freedom from every objectionable quality and substance, and its acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, gently yet promptly, without weakening or irritating them, make it the ideal laxative. In the process of manufacturing figs are used, as they are pleasant to the taste, but by a method known to the California Fig Syrup Company only. In order to get its beneficial effects, and to avoid imitations, please remember the full name of the Company printed on the front of every package. Consumers of the choicest products of modern commerce purchase at about the same price that others pay for cheap and worthless imitations. To come into universal demand and to be everywhere considered the best of its class, an article must be capable of satisfying the wants and tastes of the best informed purchasers. The California Fig Syrup Company having met with the highest success in the manufacture and sale of its excellent liquid laxative remedy, SYRUP OF FIGS, it has become important to all to have a knowledge of the Company and its product. The California Fig Syrup Company was organized more than fifteen years ago, for the special purpose of manufacturing and selling a laxative remedy which would be more pleasant to the taste and more beneficial in effect than any other known. The great value of the remedy, as a medicinal agent and of the Company's efforts, is attested by the sale of millions of bottles annually, and by the high approval of most eminent physicians. As the true and genuine remedy named SYRUP OF FIGS is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Company only, the knowledge of that fact will assist in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties.

A Great Triumph. Lord Curzon, the new viceroy of India has pointed out that the greatest blessing that the west has given to the east is medical science. This is probably an unimpeachable bit of truth. Medical science for some reason has stood still in all oriental countries. Diseases are treated with incantations and amulets in Turkey and Persia, just as they were in the days of Solomon, and the medical science of China stands just exactly where it did in the fourteenth century. It is not to be wondered at that India has been the breeding place of plagues that have ravaged the earth. It is to that fecund country that we owe the Asiatic cholera and the black death, just as we have for centuries owed the mortality that swept the Mediterranean to the foul cesspools and fouler pilgrimages of Bagdad and Medina. If England had done nothing else for India but to introduce rational medical science and the pharmacopoeia of the west, she would still be entitled to the name of savior. It was during the recent outbreak of the plague that science for the first time came face to face with the superstition and besotted ignorance that propagate disease, and a magnificent fight science made of it against caste and race prejudice and benighted frenzy. The result has been that the black death can never again ravage Europe so long as sanitary laws are enforced and men are compelled to observe the simplest rules of health and cleanliness. It has been proved that, given a few generations of intellectual development and rational living, men lose in a great measure the susceptibility to the plague. It was almost entirely shut in among the natives of India, and it now threatens to die out without extending into the temperate zone. Compare this fact with the record of the fifteenth century, when the population of Europe was 100,000,000 and in six years one-quarter of that number had perished by the scourge.

Some of the circumstances attending the illness of Kipling in New York were remarkable as indicating a condition of public interest wholly inexplicable. Hackmen, Chinese laundrymen and house servants joined in the trepidation, when the fact is they had never before heard of Kipling. The hotel where the invalid is confined was besieged not only by sincere friends of all kinds, but by a mob of people who were only keenly alive to some kind of suspense. Now that the distinguished author is out of danger it is quite allowable to offer congratulations. His misfortune has demonstrated his popularity, although it did not need any such demonstration, and his sickness is a personal experience that cannot help deepening and softening his remarkable genius.

J. Gratton Grey, writing from New Zealand, where female suffrage has been on trial for some time, rather discourages it in the United States. Suffrage, he says, was actually forced upon the women there against their will, and it is with great reluctance that the better class of New Zealand women go to the polls to exercise the privilege of voting. No advantages have resulted from the concession. The election rolls have been swelled and the costs of elections doubled without any compensating advantages. It has been found that in most cases the wife votes as the husband does, and if she does not there is a family ruction, brothers and sisters and mothers-in-law all coming into the scrimmage, and the household is divided against itself.

A new reason for the Nicaraguan canal is furnished by the Suez canal itself. Our government has been sending troops to Manila by the way of Suez, and the bills that are coming in astonish even the affluent Uncle Sam. In addition to the regular and enormous tonnage rate, a tax of $2 per capita was imposed for the troops, and as the transport Grant carried 1,691 soldiers there was a little bill of extras of $3,380, whereupon the war department began at once to consider the propriety and economy of sending all future troops by way of California. Might it not be well to agitate with England the question of an open door to the Suez canal?

A Very Hot Place. From all accounts the Red sea is the hottest place this side of hades. A recent statement made in England is to the effect that only one steamer in 20 passes through it without loss of life from the heat. Some of the accounts of tourists make the blood in the temperate zone boil. Bombay was for a long time reported to be the hottest place on earth, but that was before the Suez canal was opened. Now the travelers are glad to get there, so that they can cool off. It takes from five to six days to pass through the Red sea, and every captain looks forward to those days with horror. A writer in the London Times says that in passing through on the steamship Caledonia they buried six cabin and five steerage passengers, and the cook and two stewards jumped overboard, maddened by the heat. The thermometer stood at 125 degrees. There was not a drop of moisture in the air. Men's tongues hung out like those of dogs. A scorching breeze from the great desert of hot sand stung and smarted and withered. Very many Englishmen prefer to go slowly round the cape of Good Hope rather than endure this ordeal.

Lovers of haunted castles will read with zest the latest stories about Newstead abbey of Byronic notoriety. The place appears to be cursed, if the agent's reports are true. Ill luck attends its tenants. Nobody succeeds in it, and its list of deaths is gruesome. Besides all this, the place insists upon being haunted right down into this day of psychological societies and scientific exorcisms. The ghost walked in Byron's time and is still a pedestrian. But Byron with characteristic audacity obtained the skull of the reputed ghost and drank his health out of it with his boon companions in the abbey. During our own time the estate was bought by a famous sportsman, who was not supposed to care a continental about ghosts. But he has evidently not been comfortable there. Eerie stories are leaking out in the English papers. Fages have been seen, footsteps heard, which are supposed to be those of the original pedestrian, and although the tenant had the skull properly buried there are some indications that the wassail goes on just before midnight, especially when there is a northeast storm.

Italy's sudden appearance in the arena to take a hand in the Chinese problem has given rise to wide speculation. No one looked in that quarter for a manifesto. It is hardly believed in England that this move originated with Italy. There is a strong disposition to see the hand of Germany behind it all. The next manifesto is expected to come from Japan, but here the influences in the background will not be so discernible. One thing is very certain—China cannot hope to enact the role of Turkey for another quarter of a century and exist on sufferance simply because she can play one European power against another. China crumbles even while she hesitates. Concession means depletion if not dismemberment. For a long time the sultan was the world's example of a sick man. But attention is now shifted to the dowager empress, who is a far more graphic example of a crazy woman.

Adulteration and doctoring of every kind of food continue to excite public attention and disgust. Chemicals seem to enter into all the necessities of life from milk to mutton, and there is on record a prodigious commercial plea that borax in everything tends to prolong life and salicylate of soda has a moral influence on the rising generation. But there is still a strong old fashioned prejudice in favor of undoctored food, and some men are so far behind the age as to prefer sweet milk unpreserved and beer without glucose. When will man become advanced enough not to interfere with trade even if trade does upset his stomach?

A trust has actually been formed in New York to put up a brewery in the Klondike. The evidences of British-American enterprise in the northwest are in about this order: a brewery, a jail, a loving cup, a trolley line and then a church.

Smokeless powder brings a new peril into the world. It is liable to go off unexpectedly of its own accord. The awful explosion at Toulon, which killed 100 persons, is ascribed to the "spontaneous disintegration" of smokeless powder.

Electricity continues to put in its good work. A German savant has now discovered that an application of it kills the venom of bees and hornets and robs the sting of its pain.

WHAT TO READ.

Some Prominent Chicagoans Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:

"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper." CARTER H. HARRISON, Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.

The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically." WASHINGTON HESING, The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.

"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country." MARTIN J. RUSSELL, Editor-in-Chief Chicago Chronicle.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart of Groton, S. D.: "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs; cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at H. T. Abbott's drug store. Regular sizes 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.

Letter from J. C. Price.

CENTRAL POLICE STATION,
MANILA, P. I., Feb. 12.

DEAR FATHER AND FOLKS: Your letter of January 3rd at hand in due time. It found me in the best of health; my wound is entirely well and I am doing full duty again, go on guard for 24 hours every 3rd day. I am commander of the guard today, and it is not very hard work but I have to be here most of the time. There has been some pretty hard fighting here the past week as, of course, you have seen in the papers and lots of young men have felt the sting of steel and brass bullets. The morning's paper gives it as 66 killed and 250 wounded. It started last Saturday night by some insurgents trying to come past our lines and they were week upon. That started the ball and was kept up all night. In the morning our lines charged them and drove them back at all points 3 or 4 miles, burning their towns and capturing lots of prisoners. Wherever Dewey could reach them from the boats he simply raised hell with them. At one place they found 200 killed with one shell. There is no way of telling how many insurgents were killed, there has been estimates made by men who have been at the front, of all the way from 2,000 to 5,000, no telling how many are wounded and about 5,000 taken prisoners. They have all kinds of guns, some are Mausers with a 25 calibre steel ball, old Remingtons with a 45 calibre brass ball and lots of them only have knives. They are treacherous devils and can't stand open fighting. Some of our troops have charged ten times their number and drove them like sheep. If we try to pick up a wounded insurgent he is apt to stick a knife in us, so the order now is to take no prisoners and every body that is found has a bayonet run through it just to make sure it can't handle a knife.

Every regiment here has had more or less fighting except the Minnesota. Some of our companies have shot a few natives for acting in a suspicious way—signaling from house-tops and windows. Company C shot 7 one night; we shoot first and talk to them afterwards. In the walled city where our company and Company K are, we have had no trouble but keep a sharp look-out, do not allow anyone on top of houses or gather in groups in the streets. I don't expect we will see any fighting here and General Otis says we will stay here as we are acquainted with our work and the city better than any other regiment.

Yes, I called on Captain Gray about two weeks ago and found him very sociable. He is a large man, about 6 feet tall and about my age. He does not remember much about Lake county, as he was but six years old when he came away. I will wire you as soon as we land in Frisco, but I am thinking that will be long after May 1. If the niggers can keep up the scrap, I expect the regiment will be in Frisco in a week or ten days, then go to St. Paul or Minneapolis and it will take about two months there to muster out. No regulars have arrived here yet but they are expected any day. They will be needed to fight, not to relieve the volunteers.

Will write again soon, and try and keep you posted on the war. I sent you a map of Manila some time ago, did you get it?

I was hurt on corner of Colla (street) de Jaboneroes and Barcelona. Our quarters then were at Colla San Fernando and Asuntion in Binondo Distric, but now they are at the corner of Colla Rael and and Cabildo in the walled city and the Central police station is across the corner.

Yours as ever,
JAY C. PRICE.

Nearly Everybody Knows

That a poor harness is dear at any price. My business is strictly confined to the manufacturing of Harnesses and the sale of Horse Goods. My constant attention given in the handling of Leather Goods for a number of years has some significance in the selection of materials. You couldn't expect a man who has spent most of his life in a grocery store to be as good a judge of steel as a blacksmith, who has made a life study of that particular material.

I select personally all Leather used and the manufacturing of it into Harnesses is done by me or under my direction. I make Harnesses at as low a price as anyone.

HE WAS A GRAND CHARACTER.

The Late Joseph Medill the Last of the Self-Made Journalists—Lesson in His Career.

Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, died suddenly in San Antonio, Tex., Thursday morning. His death was caused by heart failure.

He went to San Antonio in the latter part of November in company with Dr. Sarkisian, and had been there ever since with the physician.

Sketch of Mr. Medill.

Joseph Medill was born in St. John, N. B., April 6, 1823. His father was a native of the north of Ireland and emigrated from a village near Belfast to the British colonies along the north Atlantic. Joseph Medill was eight years old when his father purchased a small farm in Stark county, Ohio, near Massillon, and his lot was that of the farmer boy. The family later moved to Pike county. From Pike county farm a wider horizon opened before the boy in an opportunity to spend two years in the academy at Massillon. In 1844 he became of age. He had a few hundred dollars and strong self-reliance. To one of his age, full of the controversial spirit of the day, there was but one gateway to the future—the law. He began his studies at Canton, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1846. He began the practice of law might have a larger constituency to address than his own paper singly afforded him he now effected a consolidation of the Forest City with the Cleveland free soil daily, the Free Democrat, that was edited by a South Carolina abolitionist, John C. Vaughn, who had previously made a reputation on the Emancipator at Louisville, Ky., and on the Cincinnati Gazette. The consolidated papers appeared under the name of the Leader, and thus was started the Cleveland Leader, which continues to this day. In 1855 he sold his interest in the Leader and came to Chicago, still seeking a larger field.

It was Mr. Medill who early saw in Abraham Lincoln those great qualities which the world now extols. The debates with Douglas had brought Lincoln into great prominence in the country, and Mr. Medill saw in him the one man above all others who was qualified to carry the party standard into the thick of a presidential battle. It was Mr. Medill, with the purpose of securing the nomination of Mr. Lincoln, who succeeded in having the republican nominating convention held in Chicago in 1860. He sustained the president during the civil war. He saw with clearness the inevitable result of at Canal Dover. Young Medill was not content to wait for clients and slowly climb the legal ladder to fame. His heart burned with the fires of the day. His vigorous pen was busy and newspapers sought his communications. He went on the lecture platform, and in village hall, country church and rural schoolhouse he poured out his intense convictions.

The following year he went to New Philadelphia, Ohio, and for two years was a law partner of G. W. McIlvaine, afterward chief justice of Ohio. The law, with its precedents and its drudgery of preparing briefs, was a heavy yoke upon the young man, whose active mind was impatient of restraint and longed for the field of discussion and the intellectual combat that was hurrying the nation toward its crisis. One day he left the law office and bought the Coshocton Whig, a paper in an adjoining county.

On taking charge of his paper he at once began writing and printing strong articles, advocating an organized revolt against the domination of the southern whigs in the party. To still further emphasize his radical views he changed the name of his paper to that of Republican. Hence the justice of his claim to have been one of the earliest pioneers of the republican party.

After two years he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and there started the Forest City newspaper, which he conducted with much vigor, and, for that time, much enterprise. In the presidential election of 1851 he supported the whig nominee, but scorned the pro-slavery platform upon which Gov. Scott was made to stand.

After the defeat of the whigs in that election Mr. Medill began in his journal an agitation for the union of the anti-slavery elements in both the whig and the democratic parties with the free soilers, under the name of the national republican party. That he the war, and prepared the people of the northwest for the announcement of the emancipation proclamation. With the peace element fighting the re-election of Mr. Lincoln, and the probability of their success admitted, it was Mr. Medill who demanded the right of the soldier in the field to cast his ballot. With his accustomed energy he prevailed upon the governors of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan to call a convention, which resulted in the northern states granting the right of suffrage to the soldiers, and Mr. Lincoln was triumphantly re-elected.

In 1866 Horace White, who was one of the editorial writers of the Tribune—the name of the Press having been dropped in 1860 from the paper's title—secured control of the stock of the paper and assumed the editor-in-chiefship. Mr. Medill retired from the direction of the paper, though retaining his stock. In 1874 he secured a controlling interest, which he held to his death, and resumed the practical direction of the paper.

In the spring of 1872 he was elected mayor of Chicago. During his term he established the public library of Chicago, and within a few months of the expiration of his term, worn out by its exacting duties, he went to Europe for rest.

He was in accord with his party on national questions, except that in later years he opposed a prohibitory tariff, though always supporting the party's nominee. He was foremost in demanding war with Spain and in the questions that grew out of the war he ranged himself on the side of the president. He never sought public office nor favor on account of the great influence he wielded as an editor and publisher.

There are over 6,000 known languages and dialects.

KIPLING IN 'FRISCO.

He Was Not a Success as a Newspaper Reporter.

"I see the papers are reviving the story of Rudyard Kipling's San Francisco experience in journalism," remarked a writer on the New Orleans Times-Democrat, who is familiar with the traditions of the coast, "but they have it all wrong. The facts were simply these: Kipling struck 'Frisco when he was overburdened with neither money nor fame, and applied at one of the morning papers for a job. The city editor was not much impressed with his appearance, but he happened to need help and he gave him a chance on the force. The first assignment he got was to write up a mercantile failure, which he did in his own peculiar style. He made no reference to the assets or liabilities or any of the other essential facts, but confined himself chiefly to a striking pen portrait of the bankrupt, whom he depicted as an oleaginous rascal, ripe for a cell. When the city editor read the copy he came near having a fit. 'Here, you man with spectacles!' he bawled, 'who ever told you you were a journalist must have been joking. Go and try shoe-making!' That was the way the creator of Mulvaney came to be fired, and I was never able to see where the joke came in. There are plenty of great literary artists who wouldn't be worth their salt on a daily paper, and Kipling belongs to that category. He was bounced, and ought to have been bounced, and would be bounced again if he turned up 'incog' and took a staff assignment. Robert Louis Stevenson had almost the same experience in San Francisco in his youthful days. He sent some of his manuscript to one of the papers, and it was promptly turned down as unmitigated rot. He used to say afterward that the episode gave him great respect for the sagacity of California editors."

After fighting had continued for some time reinforcements came up, consisting of two more companies of the Eighteenth infantry and four companies of Tennessee volunteers. The enemy was forced steadily back until darkness put an end to the fighting, and our troops returned to Jaro. Gen. Miller estimates the number of Filipinos killed and wounded at 200. ## FIFTEEN LOST THEIR LIVES.

Result of the Fire in the Windsor Hotel at New York.

ACTIVE SEARCH GOING ON.

Charred Remains of Five Bodies Taken from the Ruins—Identification Impossible—Rumors That the Disaster Was the Work of Incendiaries.

The Windsor hotel Fifth avenue and Forty-seventh street, New York, caught fire in some unknown way at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of March 17. Within an hour the building was a glowing shell of shattered walls.

The dead include many people of wealth and prominence and a large but unknown number of the employees of the hotel. The money loss is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Abner McKinley and his wife were in the hotel and were rescued unhurt.

Among the victims of the fire are Warren F. Leland, proprietor of the ill-fated Windsor hotel, and his wife, the former injured and the latter in the list of dead.

Three more bodies were recovered from the ruins of the Windsor hotel March 21. They were badly charred, and great difficulty is being experienced in the identification. There are now five bodies at the morgue, each tagged with a number, which, with the known dead, brings the list to fifteen. The list of missing is now twenty-eight. The injured at hospitals are all recovering.

A mass of testimony is accumulating tending to show that the fire horror was of incendiary origin; that the motive was robbery, and that in some cases, at least, the thieves were successful.
