Town Election.

The town election proved quite exciting, owing to the fact that the caucus ticket had opposition in the cases of commissioner of highways, and collector. There were 351 votes cast, resulting as follows:

Supervisor, M. L. Staples, 325.

Town clerk—Ira W. Frye, 324.

Assessor—J. H. Schierding, 324.

Collector—Ernest Prellberg, 269; H. F. Mundkenke, 46.

Commissioner of highways—John Kraft, 185; A. R. Baldwin, 145.

School trustee—C. E. Julian, 325.

There were 14 ballots thrown out and others showed that many people do not yet understand the proper way of marking a ballot. Others were careless enough to fail to mark their ballot after using a paster.

Farmers' Factory.

A number of dairy farmers have started some agitation for a cooperative creamery at Palatine and have already raised about $2,000—nearly half enough to put up a factory such as they would need. We have failed to find cause for complaint against the present factory owned by Mr. Richmond, unless it is on account of the testing done there. This method is in vogue in all first-class factories where farmers are getting proper dividends on their milk as it shuts out watered milk, thereby giving the producers of good milk the price they should receive.

The cooperative factory at Quentin's Corners has decided to adopt the testing system in order to protect good producers. This factory was built by the farmers and pays no better dividends than the Palatine factory and has never paid the stock-holders a dividend on the property. The farmers built a factory at Libertyville, but it is now closed. A cooperative factory is running in competition with a private concern at Wheeling and is not a decided success.

We would suggest that the farmers look into the matter thoroughly before they decide to build. Mr. Richmond has offered to rent his factory to the farmers for one year on trial, and if they wish to continue same they can do so. He also states that the farmers can watch the testing on the 10th, 20th and 30th of each month, or can appoint their own tester if they wish. THE REVIEW wishes to see the farmers prosper and get all they can out of their products, but does not want to see them put their money where it will not bring better returns.

PHANTOM SHIP

—OR—

The Flying Dutchman.

—BY CAPTAIN MARRYAT.

Where was Mynheer von Stroom during all this work of destruction? In his bed-place, covered up with the clothes, trembling in every limb, and vowing if ever again he put his foot on shore not all the companies in the world should induce him to trust to salt water again. It certainly was the best plan for the poor man.

The vessel, after running to the southward till past Table Bay, had, by the alteration made in her course, entered into False Bay, where, to a certain degree, she was sheltered from the violence of the winds and waves. But although the water was smoother, the waves were still more than sufficient to beat to pieces any vessel that might be driven on shore at the bottom of the bay, to which point the Ter Schilling was now running. The bay so far offered a fair chance of escape, as, instead of the rocky coast outside, against which had the vessel run, a few seconds would have insured her destruction, there was a shelving beach of loose sand. But of this Philip could, of course, have no knowledge, for the land at the entrance of the bay had been passed unperceived in the darkness of the night. About twenty minutes more had elapsed when Philip observed that the whole sea around them was one continued foam. He had hardly time for conjecture before the ship struck heavily on the sands, and the remaining masts fell by the board.

The crash of the falling masts, the heavy beating of the ship on the sands, which caused many of her timbers to part, with a whole sea which swept clean over the fatal vessel, checked the songs and drunken revelry of the crew. Another minute, and the vessel was swung round on her broadside to the sea, and lay on her beam ends. Philip, who was to windward, clung to the bulwark, while the intoxicated seamen floundered in the water to leeward and attempted to gain the other side of the ship. Much to Philip's horror, he perceived the body of Mynheer Kloots sink down in the water (which now was several feet deep on the lee side of the deck), without any apparent effort on the part of the captain to save himself. He was then gone, and there was no hopes for him. Philip thought of Hillebrant, and hastened down below; he found him still in his bed-place, lying against the side. He lifted him out, and with difficulty climbed with him on deck, and laid him in the long boat on the booms, as the best chance of saving his life. To this boat, the only one which could be made available, the crew had also repaired; but they repulsed Philip, who would have got into her; and, as the sea made clean breakers over them, they cast loose the lashings which confined her. With the assistance of another heavy sea, which lifted her from the chocks, she was borne clear of the booms and dashed over the gunwale into the water to leeward, which was comparatively smooth—not, however, without being filled nearly up to the throats. But this was little cared for by the intoxicated seamen, who, as soon as they were afloat, again raised their shouts and songs of revelry as they were borne away by the wind and sea toward the beach. Philip, who held on by the stump of the mainmast, watched them with an anxious eye, now perceiving them borne aloft on the foaming surf, now disappearing in the rough. More and more distant were the sounds of their mad voices, till at last he could hear them no more—he beheld the boat balanced on an enormous rolling sea, and then he saw it not again.

CHAPTER X.

Philip knew that now his only chance was to remain with the vessel, and attempt to save himself upon some fragment of the wreck. That the ship would long hold together he felt was impossible; already she had parted her upper decks, and each shock of the waves divided her more and more. At last, as he clung to the mast, he heard a noise abaft, and he then recollected that Mynheer von Stroom was still in his cabin. Philip crawled aft, and found that the poop ladder had been thrown against the cabin door, so as to prevent its being opened. He removed it, and entered the cabin, where he found Mynheer von Stroom clinging to windward with the grasp of death—but it was not death, but the paralysis of fear. He spoke to him, but could obtain no reply; he attempted to move him, but it was impossible to make him let go the part of the bulkhead that he grasped. A loud noise and the rush of a mass of water told Philip that the vessel had parted amidships, and he unwillingly abandoned the poor supercargo to his fate and went out of the cabin door. At the after hatchway he observed something struggling—it was Johannes the bear, who was swimming, but still fastened by a cord which prevented his escape. Philip took out his knife and released the poor animal, and hardly had he done this act of kindness when a heavy sea turned over the after part of the vessel, which separated in many places, and Philip found himself struggling in the waves. He seized upon a part of the deck which supported him, and was borne away by the surf toward the beach. In a few minutes he was near to the land, and shortly afterward the piece of plank to which he was clinging struck on the sand, and then, being turned over by the force of the running wave, Philip lost his hold, and was left to his own exertions. He struggled long, but although so near to the shore, could not gain a footing; the returning wave dragged him back, and thus was he hurled to and fro until his strength was gone. He was sinking under the wave to rise no more when he felt something touch his hand. He seized it with the grasp of death. It was the shaggy hide of the bear Johannes, who was making for the shore, and who soon dragged him clear of the surf, so that he could gain a footing. Philip crawled up the beach above the reach of the waves, and, exhausted with fatigue, sank down in a swoon.

When Philip was recalled from his state of lethargy, his first feeling was intense pain in his still closed eyes, arising from having been many hours exposed to the rays of an ardent sun. He opened them, but was obliged to close them immediately, for the light entered into them like the point of a knife. He turned over on his side, and, covering them with his hand, remained some time in that position, until, by degrees, he found that his eyesight was restored. He then rose, and after a few seconds could distinguish the scene around him. The sea was still rough, and tossed about in the surf fragments of the vessel; the whole sand was strewn with her cargo and content. Near him was the body of Hillebrant, and the other bodies which were scattered on the beach told him that those who had taken to the boat had all perished.

It was, by the height of the sun, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, as near as he could estimate; but Philip suffered such an oppression of mind, he felt so wearied and in such pain, that he took but a slight survey. His brain was whirling, and all he demanded was repose. He walked away from the scene of destruction, and, having found a sandhill, behind which he was defended from the burning rays of the sun, he again lay down, and sank into a deep sleep, from which he did not wake until the ensuing morning.

Philip was roused a second time by the sensation of something pricking him on the chest. He started up, and beheld a figure standing over him. His eyes were still feeble and his vision indistinct; he rubbed them for a time, for he first thought it was the bear Johannes, and, again, that it was the supercargo, Von Stroom, who had appeared before him. He looked again, and found that he was mistaken, although he had warrant for supposing it to be either or both. A Hottentot, with an assegai in his hand, stood by his side; over his shoulder he had thrown the fresh-severed skin of the poor bear, and on his head, with the curls descending to his waist, was one of the wigs of the supercargo, Von Stroom. Such was the gravity of the black's appearance in this strange costume (for in every other respect he was naked) that at any other time Philip would have been induced to laugh heartily; but his feelings were now too acute. He rose upon his feet and stood by the side of the Hottentot, who still continued immovable, but certainly without the slightest appearance of hostile intentions.

A sensation of overpowering thirst now seized upon Philip; and he made signs that he wished to drink. The Hottentot motioned him to follow, and led over the sandhills to the beach, where Philip discovered upward of fifty men, who were busy selecting various articles from the scattered stores of the vessel. It was evident by the respect paid to Philip's conductor that he was the chief of the kraal. A few words, uttered with the greatest solemnity, were sufficient to produce—though not exactly what Philip required—a small quantity of dirty water from a calabass, which, however, was to him delicious. His conductor then waved to him to take a seat on the sand.

After a time the Hottentots began to collect all the wood which appeared to have iron in it, made it up into several piles, and set them on fire. The chief then made a sign to Philip, to ask him if he was hungry. Philip replied in the affirmative, when his new acquaintance put his hand into a bag made of goatskin and pulled out a handful of very large beetles, and presented them to him. Philip refused them with marks of disgust, upon which the chief very sedately cracked and ate them; and, having finished the whole handful, rose and made a sign to Philip to follow him. As Philip rose he perceived floating in the surf his own chest. He hastened to it and made signs that it was his, took the key out of his pocket and opened it, and then made up a bundle of articles most useful, not forgetting a bag of guilders. His conductor made no objection, but, calling to one of the men near, pointed out the lock and hinges to him, and then set off, followed by Philip, across the sandhills. In about an hour they arrived at the kraal, consisting of low huts covered with skins, and were met by the women and children, who appeared to be in high admiration at their chief's new attire. They showed every kindness to Philip, bringing him milk, which he drank eagerly. Philip surveyed these daughters of Eve, and, as he turned from their offensive, greasy attire, their strange forms and hideous features, he sighed and thought of his charming Amine.

The sun was now setting, and Philip still felt fatigued. He made signs that he wished to repose. They led him into a hut, and, though surrounded as he was with filth, and his nose assailed by every variety of bad smell, attacked moreover by insects, he laid his head on his bundle, and, uttering a short prayer of thanksgiving, was soon in a sound sleep.

The next morning he was awakened by the chief of the kraal, accompanied by another man who spoke a little Dutch. He stated his wish to be taken to the settlement where the ships came and anchored, and was fully understood. But the man said that there were no ships in the bay at the time. Philip, nevertheless, requested he might be taken there, as he felt that his best chance of getting on board of any vessel would be by remaining at the settlement, and, at all events, he would be in the company of Europeans until a vessel arrived. The distance, he discovered, was but one day's march, or less. After some little conversation with the chief, the man who spoke Dutch desired Philip to follow him, and that he would take him there. Philip drank plentifully from a bowl of milk brought him by one of the women, and, again refusing a handful of beetles offered by the chief, he took up his bundle and followed his new acquaintance.

Toward evening they arrived at the hills, from which Philip had a view of Table Bay and the few houses erected by the Dutch. To his delight, he perceived that there was a vessel under sail in the offing. On his arrival at the beach, to which he hastened, he found that she had sent a boat on shore for fresh provisions. He accosted the people, told them who he was, told them also of the fatal wreck of the Ter Schilling, and of his wish to embark.

The officer in charge of the boat willingly consented to take him on board, and informed Philip that they were homeward bound. Philip's heart leaped at the intelligence. Had she been outward bound, he would have joined her; but now he had a prospect of again seeing his dear Amine before he re-embarked to follow out his peculiar destiny. He felt that there was still some happiness in store for him; that his life was to be checked with alternate privation and repose, and that his future prospect was not to be one continued chain of suffering and death.

He was kindly received by the captain of the vessel, who freely gave him a passage home; and in three months, without any events worth narrating, Philip Vanderdecken found himself once more at anchor before the town of Amsterdam.

Amine was both surprised and glad to welcome her husband home so much sooner than she expected. Philip remained at home for several months, during which his father-in-law, Mynheer Poots, died, leaving Amine a great fortune in gold and jewels, which he had accumulated.

Leaving his wife comfortably established, with two servants to wait on her, Philip again departed on his mission, this time as second mate on the Batavia, a fine vessel of 400 tons burden.

THREE STRINGS TO A CORSET.

How One Can Tell a Modish Piece of Underwear.

The modish corset is distinguished from its fellows by being laced with no less than three strings. This is to enable one to have a close fit over the hips and over the bust without pulling the garment in over the waist. An old-fashioned corsage was tightly drawn in at the waist and the displaced figure was pushed upward toward the chin, or outward and downward below the waist. But since high-waisted figures are hopelessly out of date, the Parisians do their best to extend the waist line downward, and unexpected success has crowned their efforts. The corselet is cut out in front to secure a decollete effect. There is no pushing up, but a drooping of the natural lines of the body. On trying on a corselet it is usual for a customer to place a row of pins at the top to indicate how far she wishes the corset cut down. This is done, and the top of the corset is then rebound before being sent home to the purchaser. If there is a separate corset lace used at the waist line for about four eyelet holes on each side it will be possible to leave the waist untightened when you draw the upper and lower laces in to secure a close fit over the hips, so the sheath skirt may fit smoothly here.

MINOR HAPPENINGS OF PAST SEVEN DAYS.

Operators Propose an Arbitration of the Scale.—"Coin" Harvey Has Been Succeeded as Manager of the Democratic Ways and Means Committee.

Texas Killed in Chicago.

Chicago, Ill.—James Kinahan, who was shot in a State street saloon early this morning, died tonight. He came here three years ago from Fort Worth, and, according to the police, was trying to introduce Texas methods on the "levee." Kinahan, before he died, refused to tell who shot him, but the police say he tried to rob a man of his watch in Gondorf's saloon, 50 Hubbard court, and was thrown out into the street. Kinahan returned twenty minutes later with a pistol. He dashed into the door and opened fire upon the crowd in the saloon. Some of those in the place made a rush for the back door, others slid under tables, while others went around the corner of the bar. The crowd finally drove Kinahan from the saloon at the point of their revolvers. Kinahan continued to fire until wounded and then he fled to the Olympia, at Wabash avenue and Hubbard court, the pursuers at his heels. "I'm shot," he said to Jack Berkeley, the bartender, and then staggered upstairs into a room and shut the door. Weak from loss of blood, he was found by Policeman Doyle. Five chambers in his revolver were empty. One bullet had entered the back near the spine and another had entered his right side. The identity of Kinahan's slayer is not yet ascertained.

Cook Succeeds Harvey.

Chicago, Ill.—W. H. Harvey, better known as "Coin Harvey," has lost his job as general manager of the ways and means committee of the Democratic national committee. His resignation was formally announced today. It is understood the members of the ways and means committee requested him to resign several months ago, and the excuse he gives for doing so now is that he could not induce the committee to adopt his ideas of "a practical, business-like and aggressive policy." Samuel B. Cook of Missouri was appointed as his successor. Mr. Cook has been for some time in charge of the headquarters in this city. There has been more or less friction ever since Mr. Harvey was appointed general manager, and his removal was nearly accomplished last October, when Chairman Jones was called here to take a hand in the row. Mr. Harvey's policy did not suit the committee, which is composed of John P. Altgeld of Illinois, Wm. J. Stone, Missouri; Charles A. Towne, Minnesota, and Senator Allen. The business of this committee is to collect funds for the next presidential campaign.

Fixing Mining Scale.

Springfield, Ill.—The coal operators of the Chicago & Alton sub-district will ask the State Board of Arbitration to fix the mining price for their mines, provided the miners will join them in the application. The mines affected are those at Chatham, Auburn, Virden, Girard, Green Ridge, Nilwood and Carlinville. The operators at those places, having withdrawn from the Illinois Coal Operators' Association before the new scale was fixed at the recent joint convention of operators and miners, contend that they are not bound by the new scale, which fixes the mining price at forty cents, the same as last year's scale. The operators, while admitting that they have been paying this scale for several months, claim that the fall in the price of coal, which will come during the summer months, will make it impracticable to continue paying forty cents a ton for mining. It is not known whether the miners will join in the proceeding.

Two Veterans Pass Away.

Mt. Vernon, Ill.—Coleman Post, G. A. R., of this city, lost two old members by death today. Capt. John Brooks, aged 72 years, died this afternoon at 3 o'clock, after a period of three months' illness. He enlisted early during the war of the rebellion, was commissioned lieutenant of company E, Forty-ninth Illinois Volunteer infantry, and served till the close of the war. He was one of the most highly esteemed citizens of Mt. Vernon. A few hours prior to death of Capt. Brooks, his companion in arms, James I. McBain, member of company C, Twenty-second Illinois volunteers, passed away, at the age of 63 years. Both veterans were buried under the auspices of the G. A. R.

Death of Mrs. Josiah Shuey.

An Italian has organized a party of industrial adventurers to explore the Amazon river and open up unknown regions of South America to trade. One hardly looked to Italy for this, but what surprises us is that it was left to Italy to do, while the wealthiest and most enterprising nations of the earth are wasting vast energies and many lives in trying to reach the north pole or to make the grass grow in the great Sahara. While the reward in the arctic circle is only ice and blubber, here is this most magnificent domain, the richest known, absolutely rotting in its own fecundity and wasting in its recesses a thousand unknown products. One would suppose that the whole energy of man would be directed to its exploration. But, no; we seem to care less for the limitless natural wealth of Brazil than we do for the open sea of the arctic circle, and men who risk their lives to hunt the disappearing tigers of India do not seem to know that here in America is nature's preserve, teeming with life and novelty and mystery.

The New York Tribune publishes an account of recent industrial combinations or trusts, and shows that the authorized capitalization of such companies in 1898 amounted to $1,000,000,000, a sum more than double the entire capitalization of new issues, municipal, governmental and industrial, offered in England during the same year. But, astonishing as this aggregate is, it appears to be unimportant beside the greater sum total that 1899 is to roll up. The Financial Chronicle prints a table of the industrial combinations incorporated in January and February of this year, and the figures reach the sum of $1,048,800,000 of stock and $57,500,000 of bonds, showing that the movement is proceeding at the rate of $6,000,000,000 a year.

Under our laws an immigrant arriving in this country with no visible means of support is liable to be sent back. This worked badly for unmarried women, but they have met it at the barge office recently by consenting, then and there, to marry somebody and thus escape the penalty. There have been three cases of good looking Italian women undergoing the operation of matrimony rather than return to their native vine-clad hills. No one ever thought of it before, but marriage appears to be one of the consequences of democracy.

California has passed the anticartoon bill, very much in the shape that it wore when it came up in New York. The law declares that no portrait of any living resident of the state shall be published without consent and that no caricature of any person living in the state shall be published if it reflects upon the honor, integrity or reputation of the person. Legal experts declare that the law violates the United States statutes, inasmuch as it gives special privileges to residents of California.

Congress passed the bill appropriating $500,000 for the Buffalo Pan-American exposition in 1901, but it occasioned some unusual irony. One member wanted to know when this show business was to stop. Another described the peripatations of the government exhibitions over the country with farcical effect and cautioned the Buffalo member to take good care of it as it would be needed later at Detroit, St. Louis and Toledo. Good humor, however, prevailed, and the bill was passed.

After a ten years fight against the sweatshops of New York, State Factory Inspector O'Leary said recently: "Yes, they are there yet, and they always will be there so long as there are ignorance and idleness, and immigration keeps the supply far above the demand. This is another evidence that some of the worst wrongs of society cannot be reached through legislation, but only through education and the moral redemption of the individual."

The emperor of Germany sent a personal telegram of congratulations to Kipling on his recovery. Another link in human brotherhood has been forged. But neither Queen Victoria nor the poet laureate said anything. That link seems to be broken.

Waning French Politeness.
Queen Victoria is preparing to visit the south of France, paying no sort of attention to the attacks of the French press, some of which are extremely coarse and entirely indefensible. One Parisian paper warns her majesty that her visit will be attended by as many dangers as the Maine encountered in Spanish waters. This looks as if the proverbial French politeness had been utterly extinguished. But her majesty does not read the papers. The trip will be an expensive one. No less than $12,000 a month is to be paid for the apartments she is to occupy with her suit of 60 persons. An amusing account is given in The Court Journal of the menage of pet donkeys, parrots, dogs, singing birds and cats that is sent ahead of her. It is also serenely stated that she never travels anywhere without taking her own bed with her, and has never in her life slept on any other than her own private mattress. What a curious example all this is of certain estimable peculiarities of the old lady who rules an empire.

The case of a sentimental schoolboy is engaging the painful attention of all the gossips in the town of Riverhead, N. Y. A lad of 14 fell in love with his comely schoolmistress, a young lady of 28. His 14-year-old sentiments appear to have got the best of him, and he went to the mistress' room at night to take extra lessons and began to act rather strangely, as sentimental boys will, and on one occasion made a valiant show of committing suicide. His relatives charged the teacher with being the cause of all the trouble and proceeded to lodge specific complaints against her with the school commissioners. During the examination that followed the relatives of the boy showed with what zeal and pertinacity they can pursue a case of this kind. One aged uncle of the boy, who lives in the house with the schoolteacher, bored gimlet holes in the floor and laid for hours on his stomach with his eye screwed to the gimlet hole, watching with intense interest the methods of the young lady in giving extra lessons. But his testimony does not seem to warrant so much self sacrifice, for, to his evident chagrin, the young lady adhered to established procedures. Taken altogether, the whole case appears to have been exaggerated into undue seriousness by the old women of both sexes in the town that was dying for something to talk about.

The Daughters of the American Revolution are looming up everywhere. They number about 30,000, and they recently took Washington by storm. Everything gave way to them—even the war department. These estimable women have been turning over the records of many families, restoring the most sacred traditions of the republic, freshening the quaintest legends and verifying half forgotten facts. They have really undertaken to preserve what is best and oldest in the history of the nation, and they deserve a great deal of praise because they are not exploiting themselves, but their mothers and fathers, and that is so unlike the general attitude of the present generation, which is thinking only of itself, that it excites universal respect and admiration.

Like everything else they take hold of, the new mission on behalf of animals has assumed something of the nature of a furore with the Parisians. The new journal L'Ami des Bêtes is the latest French novelty, and all the sentimentalists of the nation are sending their best wishes to it in the shape of epigrams. M. Lavisse sees in animals "une vague humanité." M. Mezieres is convinced that we have wasted too much time on men and not enough on dogs, and M. Coppee thinks that cats see more of heaven than we do. One of the writers declares that the animals ought to be tended in their last moments by sisters of charity. It was Lamartine who said his dogs were the only ones who read his thoughts and responded to them without criticism.

There is some danger that operations in the Philippines will become monotonous unless some leader better than Aguinaldo takes the field. The capture of Iloilo without the loss of a man lacks thrill. The attempt of the natives to burn the town was like a bad melodrama in which the red fire will not work.

A paper has been started in Paris to advocate kindness to animals. As anti-Dreyfus leaders, anti-Jews, anti-republicans and anti-imperialists have joined hands to write for it, a Paris comic paper suggests that it ought to have for its motto, "Kindness to Animals, but Death to Men."

WHAT TO READ.
Some Prominent Chicagoans
Express Opinions.

In these enlightened times every person who pretends to keep in touch with the progress of the world must read a first-class daily metropolitan newspaper. They who would select the best should be guided by the opinions of prominent newspaper-men who know. Read the following:
"There is no question as to the position occupied by The Chicago Tribune. Its enterprise has been too often demonstrated. As a local and American news-gathering institution it has no superior and few equals. In the matter of foreign cables, no other paper west of New York can be compared to it. These are the things, of course, that go to make a complete and great newspaper."
CARTER H. HARRISON,
Now Mayor of Chicago, formerly publisher Chicago Times.
"The Chicago Tribune is the best newspaper in the world. I consider its make up and facilities for gathering news unequalled, although I do not agree with it politically."
"WASHINGTON HESING."
The late Postmaster, Chicago, and publisher Staats Zeitung.
"The Chicago Tribune is beyond question the greatest newspaper in the West, if not in the country."

Many old soldiers now feel the effects of the hard service they endured during the war. Mr. Geo. S. Anderson of Rossville, York county, Penn., who saw the hardest kind of service at the front, is now frequently troubled with rheumatism. "I had a severe attack lately," he says, "and procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It did so much good that I would like to know what you would charge me for one dozen bottles." Mr. Anderson wanted it both for his own use and to supply it to his friends and neighbors, as every family should have a bottle of it in their home, not only for rheumatism, but lame backs, sprains, swellings, cuts, bruises and burns, for which it is unequalled. For sale by A. S. Olms, Palatine and A. L. Waller, Barrington.

My lungs became hardened. I was so weak I could not even get up in bed. Nothing helped me. I expected to soon die of consumption when I heard of Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle gave great relief. I continued to use it and now am well and strong. I can't say too much in its praise." Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ILLINOIS LEGISLATURE.

Condensed Report of Week's Proceedings in Both Houses.

POOL-SELLING BILL IS UP.

Measure Advanced to Third Reading in the House—To Amend Buttermine Law—Election Causes an Adjournment of Both Houses Three Days.

Thursday, March 29.

The house sent to third reading the bill compelling payment of wages in lawful money; passed bill ordering University of Illinois trustees to divert to no other use money set aside for teaching of agricultural science; sent to third reading bill ordering establishment of polling places in grounds of any state institution whose inmates are entitled to vote, after amending it by limiting its operation to Soldiers' and Sailors' home at Quincy. Postponed to Wednesday consideration of bill raising salary of members of general assembly to $1,500. Passed committee bill enabling boards of education of school trustees to establish truant schools. Adopted conference report on bill for extermination of San Jose scale, reducing appropriation from $10,000 to $8,000 and eliminating emergency clause.

The senate passed the bill appropriating $65,398.02 to pay expenses incidental to mobilization of Illinois troops for recent war. Sent to third reading bill removing disfranchisement of persons who have been confined in Pontiac reformatory; also bill providing for monuments to Illinois troops on battlefield of Shiloh after cutting appropriation from $75,000 to $65,000.

Friday, March 31.

The pool-selling bill, prepared by the committee on miscellaneous subjects, was called up in the house on second reading. It was amended on motion of Mr. Ross so as to provide more specifically for the collection of fines and forfeitures and was then advanced to third reading.

A bill to amend the buttermine law passed at the last session of the assembly, was read a second time and was advanced to a third reading. The bill provides for the stamping of all butterine as such and also requires that the packages containing it shall be labeled, but it does away with the provision against the coloring of butterine so that it will resemble butter.

The legislature went home to stay until after election. On reassembling both houses will run at high pressure so as to wind up the session April 14.

Was Willing to Split.

There is a Pittsburg life insurance agent of whom it is said he can talk a stone statue into buying a policy in his company, "the most liberal on earth." He wrote a policy for a Chinaman a few weeks ago, the first ever written for a man of the race in Pittsburg. How he did it he alone knows. The Chinaman has no clear idea of it. He understood that by paying the premiums promptly he would be entitled to $5,000 some time. He began bothering the agent for money after a couple of weeks had passed, and the agent tried to explain to him that he would have to die before he could get it. The Chinaman fell down a cellarway on Grant street and was badly hurt. His friends tried to attend to him without calling in a doctor. When they did call one in two days later the doctor was angry. "Why didn't you call me sooner?" he asked. "The man is half dead now." Next day the injured man's brother was at the insurance office with a claim for $2,500. "You're not entitled to anything on this," said the insurance man, "until the man is dead." "Doctor say him half dead," answered the brother. "Why he no glet lat half?"—Pittsburg News.

Evidence Sustains Miles.

Chicago Record: The evidence thus far secured seems to fit together with the story of mismanagement for which the administrative branch of the war department has been responsible. It serves to sustain the previous charges to the effect that the contracts for the beef were unwisely made in the first place, that the system of inspection was lax and that much bad beef was served to the soldiers, while some good beef was allowed to spoil through carelessness in arranging for transportation. Evidently Gen. Miles and his partisans have not been complaining without cause.

Oldest Man in Europe.

Vienna Tagblatt: Maurice Kohn, oldest man in Europe, died recently at the age of 113. He was born in 1786, in Frankirchen, Hungary, and was formerly a butcher. I feel quite young, and could enjoy another century."

"He Who Pursues Two Hares Catches Neither."

Said a well known young man about town, "I tried for years to burn the candle at both ends, in the pursuit of pleasure while trying to attend to business. My blood, stomach and kidneys got into a wretched state and it seemed that I could not carry the burden any longer.

But now my rheumatism has gone, my courage has returned, and all on account of that marvel, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has made me a picture of health. Now I'm in for business pure and simple."

THAT ILLINOIS NEWSPAPER BILL.

George C. Rankin of Monmouth, Ill., author of the forty-first general assembly's "newspaper bill," is about 45 years of age, and has lived in Warren county most of his life. He is a man of considerable prominence there. He runs a newspaper, is president of the Twilight club, and has served Warren county many years as circuit clerk. His present seat in the legislature is the first state office he has ever held. Mr. Rankin has been asked many times if there is not some Democratic editor in his section who is more a master of vituperation than himself. The inquirers are seeking a reason for his newspaper bill requiring all articles and editorial statements which might "blacken the character" to be signed with the true name of the writer. The corporation newspapers of Chicago are objecting strenuously to the bill: Its passage would show up the corrupt influences that are behind most of the big dailies. It could not in any way affect the country press.

A SENSIBLE LETTER.

A Western Canadian Settler Writes to an Illinois Friend.

In writing to Mr. T. Hawkyard, of Rockford, Ill., Mr. G. Simpkins, of Leduc, Alberta, Western Canada (and to which points especially low rates are being quoted over all lines of railway), says:

Dear Sir:—Rec'd your letter the 14th inst. We have had no snow till after Christmas and the cattle have been able to live out, and are all in good condition. It is snowing now. That is what we want; have about 6 inches now. The old settlers say when we have lots of snow it means a good crop the coming season. It never drifts here. The weather is calm and bright. We do not have to dress any heavier than in Illinois, and the horses never shiver with the cold when we take them from the warm stables, as they do in Illinois. It has not frozen in the stable this winter. The most of the stock runs out, but there is no need of it, for timber is plentiful and there is no expense to build good stables and houses. We have good log houses and they are very warm. Two men can put up a house 16x24 in two days. There are good rails for fences. We live ten miles from the coal district, the price being from 50 cents up to $2.00. The land is a very rich, loamy soil, from 6 inches to several feet in depth; the hills have the deepest. It is a rolling country, and excellent for stock of all kinds. Sheep do well, and there are plenty of small lakes where the cattle can get good water. The cattle got out of grass last year, about the middle of April, and run at large; unless in charge of a herdsman, we have to fence against them. Wheat goes from 35 to 60 bushels per acre, oats 80 to 90, very often over a hundred. As to potatoes, a neighbor planted 7 bushels and dug 226 bushels and no bugs. Roots of all kinds do well. There are lots of strawberries and lots of red raspberries, black and red currants, and gooseberries, where the fire has not burnt them. Cattle are scarce. I have been trying to buy some for 8 months and have got only three two-year-old, and paid $30 each. Hogs are scarce, but can be got. They sell for 6 cents dressed, and cost more for stockers. Wheat 50 cents per bu., oats 25 cents, eggs 30 cents a dozen, butter 15 and 20 cents, poultry was 10 and 11 cents dressed. Sheep are scarce. If you come, bring your farm tools, but bring no seeders; we use drills. Bring cows, but do not bring horses unless you are an experienced hand in shipping them, for so many of them are hurt in shipping. There will be plenty of work for a binder. Two good horses will break, but three lighter are better. The horses you get here can work without grain, but are better with it. It will be hard to tell what prices horses will be, for the immigration will be very large the coming spring. They could be had last spring at one time. They claim the best time to break is June, but my experience is to break in the spring and work it. You can break till the middle of July.

LADY RANDOLPH CHURCHILL.

Lady Randolph Churchill, whose plan to publish the Anglo-Saxon, a quarterly magazine, is now the leading literary topic, is one of the three daughters of Leonard Jerome, all of whom were noted in English aristocracy twenty years ago for their wit and their beauty. Lady Randolph when she allied herself with the Churchills became a relative by marriage of the Duke of Marlborough. She married Lord Randolph in 1874.

The political success of her husband has been in large measure due to her tact and natural ability for swaying men to her own way of thinking. The queen paid special honor to Lady Randolph by conferring on her the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, just after the death of Lord Randolph Churchill. Lady Randolph was one of the moving spirits of the famous Primrose league. Her elder sister was married in 1879 to Moreton Frewea, the celebrated champion of bi-metalism.

BARRINGTON.

Nearly Everybody Knows

That a poor harness is dear at any price. My business is strictly confined to the manufacturing of Harnesses and the sale of Horse Goods. My constant attention given in the handling of Leather Goods for a number of years has some significance in the selection of materials. You couldn't expect a man who has spent most of his life in a grocery store to be as good a judge of steel as a blacksmith, who has made a life study of that particular material.

I select personally all Leather used and the manufacturing of it into Harnesses is done by me or under by direction. I make Harnesses at as low a price as anyone.

AN EASY VICTORY.

Candidates Nominated at the Caucuses Elected.

GOOD-SIZED VOTE CAST.

Town of Cuba Votes a Special Gravel Tax.

No special interest was manifested in the elections held in the towns of Cuba and Barrington Tuesday except for the office of collector for the town of Barrington for which office there were three candidates in the field viz., R. C. Comstock, W. N. Miller, and Wm. Dawson. Mr. Comstock was an easy winner, receiving a majority over the other two candidates. 254 votes were cast.

In the town of Cuba there was but one ticket in the field. The question of raising a special tax for gravel roads brought out a pretty good vote there being 130 ballots cast. There were 89 votes cast for proposition and only 24 against. The officers elected for both townships are as follows:

Town of Barrington.

Supervisor, A. H. Boehmer. Assessor, John C. Plagge. Town Clerk, Leroy Powers. Collector, R. C. Comstock. Commissioner of Highways, Fred Homuth. School Trustee, W. N. Miller.
