Gone to Her Reward.

Mrs. Elizabeth Garlip died at her home in Palatine Friday, September 7, after an illness of several months. She was taken seriously ill last May and lingered on until her death, which was due to heart disease and dropsy.

Elizabeth Gears was born in Hannover, Germany, March 6, 1825. She was married to Mr. Garlip in 1856. They came to America four years later, settling at Elk Grove and sixteen years ago they came to Palatine and moved into the house they now occupy. Mr. Garlip kept a shoe shop at the house until his death, six years ago.

The funeral services were private and held at the house Monday, Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister preaching a short funeral sermon. The deceased leaves three daughters to mourn her death; Mrs. Carrie Greenberg of Arlington Heights, Mrs. Sophia Eggert of Chicago and Miss Meta Garlip of this place.

William Huenerberg.

William Huenerberg died at his residence in Palatine last Monday morning of cancer of the throat. Deceased was one of Palatine's well known citizens, having lived here for many years. He was born in Germany in 1844 and came to America with his parents when six months old, settling in Schaumburg. He was married to Elizabeth Bergman April 11, 1869, and to them were born five children two of whom are living, Mrs. Emma Stroker and Frederick. He was driver and conductor for the Chicago Street R'y. company for some time before the big fire, after which time he came to Palatine where he has since resided. He started a hotel here several years ago, and although he made money rapidly his generosity prevented his keeping the wealth he might have accumulated. He leaves beside the widow and two children, one brother and two sisters. The funeral services were held at St. Paul's church Wednesday afternoon, Rev. J. C. Hoffmeister conducting the service. The church was crowded with the many friends of the deceased. Burial took place in the German cemetery.

A Terrific Gale.

Tuesday, September 12, will be remembered by residents of Barrington and vicinity as the date when they viewed with apprehension the gathering clouds and made arrangements to occupy their cellars. The story of storm ravaged Texas was the sole topic of conversation when threatening clouds came from the southwest and formed a funeral-like pall. The wind increased in velocity until it blew a small hurricane. Substantial buildings rocked like cradles and the dust was carried in blinding sheets driving pedestrians to shelter. The rain descended in torrents at noon but the wind did not abate but switched completely around into the northwest bringing a cold wave.

Reports received show that but little damage was done in this immediate vicinity except the uprooting of shrubbery, leveling of fences and razing of light outbuildings, but the people were alarmed and the scare was by no means confined to the members of the gentler sex.

Lake County Democrats.

The Democracy of Lake county is not in the least disheartened because of the fact that it has a hard road to travel. Party organization must be kept up, so the adherents to democratic principles called a county convention at Libertyville Thursday and placed in nomination the following ticket, which is a good one, but will be as lonesome in the campaign as a prohibitionist at a meeting of the brewery trust. Lake county has a habit of going republican, and it is about as certain as death and taxes that it will follow in the old way this year. However the nominees will poll the party vote:

Circuit clerk, W. E. Miller of Libertyville.

State's attorney, W. F. Arnold of Waukegan.

Surveyor, Edward Lansing of Highland Park.

Coroner, J. J. Morley of Antioch.

There was a lively tussle over the reorganization of the county committee. The Grady faction was defeated and J. K. Orvis of Waukegan was elected chairman of the committee.

A Family Necessity.

We feel sorry for the man who does not read his home paper. He is no better than the man without a country, says an exchange. He is like a homeless cow that has no regular pasture, but grazes around promiscuously on weeds and thistles. No matter what others papers he may read, the solid, safe and straightforward citizen always insists upon having his home paper. THE REVIEW will give you the home news in bright, entertaining paragraphs. There is room on our subscription register for additional names. You cannot afford to be without it.

About the Boys.

Here is a composition on "Boys" the authoress being a Miss of 13 years:

The boy is not an animal, yet he can be heard quite a distance. When a boy hollers he opens his big mouth like frogs, but girls hold their tongue till spoken to and then they answer respectable and tell just how it was. A boy thinks he's clever because he can wade where the water is deep. When a boy grows up he's called a husband but the grown-up girl is a widow and keeps house.

Wanted to "Lick the Spoon."

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 16, '99.

PEPSIN SYRUP CO.
DEAR SIR:—We have been keeping house for five years and are never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. We find nothing to equal it for stomach troubles and my children like it as well as candy. One night recently my wife was giving a dose to our baby (14 years old) and Nelda (our little girl 4 years old) cried for some, too. Her mamma told her she didn't need it and then she said: "Can't I lick the spoon?" It is so pleasant to take, the effects are so good, we hate to be without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Yours truly,

LOCAL PERSPIRATION.

Simple Suggestions for Its Treatment and Cure.

Though the sweat glands are distributed very generally over the body, local excess of perspiration is not uncommon. Some people perspire freely about the angle of the jaw while eating; in others, beads of perspiration may be seen standing in and near the eyebrows while the rest of the face is quite dry, and attacks of neuralgia are frequently accompanied by increased moisture over the painful area. The parts most frequently and most unpleasantly affected with local sweating are the hands and the feet. The condition may vary from simple moisture to a state in which the hands or face are constantly wet, or even actually dripping. The greatest distress is caused by profuse sweating of the feet, for this may really incapacitate the sufferer. In extreme cases, the skin of the feet is sodden and the epidermis peels off, leaving the soles raw and tender. In addition, there is often a disagreeable odor, which is not due to want of cleanliness, but which is sometimes thought to be, and so mental distress is added to physical. The treatment of perspiring feet is difficult, but by no means hopeless; for while the condition is not often cured, it can usually be ameliorated. Too much warm local bathing is not advisable, and when the odor is not marked, once a day is often enough to wash the feet. Sometimes salt baths help. The feet should be patted—not rubbed—with a damp cloth, and then with a dry one several times a day, the stockings being changed at the same time and the skin dusted with fuller's earth, oxide of zinc and magnesia, boric acid and bismuth, Venetian tile, or some other smooth powder. The stockings may be dipped in a solution of boric acid after being washed, so that they are constantly impregnated with this antiseptic. Sometimes better results are reached by using zinc bismuth, or boric acid in the form of an ointment. Sometimes lotions of tannin in solution, or brandy, or some other astringent will give relief. If these simple measures do not suffice, more severe ones must be tried, but these should be undertaken only under the physician's care.—Youth's Companion.

COLD STORAGE FOOD.

How Frozen Meat and Eggs Deteriorate.

Meats frozen and kept in cold storage for long periods do not undergo organic changes in the ordinary sense—that is, they do not putrefy, soften or smell bad, but they certainly do deteriorate in some intangible way, says the Sanitary Record. After a certain time frozen meat loses some life principle essential to its nourishing quality. Such meat lacks flavor; it is not well digested or assimilated. Its savorless condition cannot be remedied or successfully disguised by the use of sauces and condiments. Those who eat cold storage food for any length of time develop diarrhoeal disorders, lose in weight, and would eventually lapse to death unless a change of diet was made. The same reasoning applies to tinned fruits and vegetables. They should not be used after a certain period has elapsed. Especially should people be warned against using stale eggs and old milk and cream. Milk and cream are kept for days, rancid butter is washed and treated chemically, but all food, and especially cold storage food, is damaged by long keeping, and will not nourish the body properly. There is the greatest abundance of food, but it does not satisfy.

History of Chautauqua System.

The Chautauqua system of summer education was inaugurated in 1874. Its originators were Lewis Miller, of Akron, Ohio, and Rev. John H. Vincent, now a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church. These gentlemen, in August, 1873, selected a site for a summer school on the northern shore of Chautauqua lake. Here an attractive city of more than 500 artistic and attractive cottages has been built. There is a well-equipped hotel and various buildings for public exercises, lectures and recitations. The first assembly began on the first Tuesday in August, 1874, and lasted three weeks. Since then an assembly has been held every year. The Chautauqua Library and Scientific Circle was organized in 1878, and comprises a system of some reading circles, whose members pursue courses of reading laid out by the officers in books and magazine articles approved by the board of counselors. The total enrollment of the C. L. S. C. since its organization has been more than 230,000, over 9,000 local reading circles have been organized in that time, and the present number of readers is fully 25,000.

DR. NANSEN IS OUTDONE

Duke of Abruzzi Goes Nearest to North Pole.

TRIP OCCUPIED 15 MONTHS.

Duke and Companions Were Icebound for Nearly a Year and Suffered Great Hardship—Duke Is Cousin of Italy's King.

Dr. Nansen has been outdone. Prince Luigi of Savoy, duke of Abruzzi and first cousin of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, is returning from his polar expedition, in which he has broken all records.

This news comes in a telegram from Christiania, which says that word has been received from Tromsø to this effect, with the added information that Prince Luigi and his ship reached 86 degrees 33 minutes north latitude, which is 19 minutes farther north than the point attained by Nansen.

The ship was caught in the ice, where it remained fast for eleven months. Great suffering was endured by the members of the expedition, three of whom died. Of these one was a Norwegian and two were Italians.

When the duke's ship passed Ham-

MUTINY NEARLY SUCCESSFUL.

Outbreak in Bilibid Prison in Which Four Are Killed.

Manila newspapers just received at the war department give details of a desperate mutiny among the native prisoners in Bilibid prison, which resulted in the death of four and the wounding of fifteen of them. The report states that the outbreak came without the slightest warning. The commandant and other officials of the prison were going about their duties on a hot summer afternoon, July 16, when a little, wizened Filipino, serving a life term, assumed a crouching attitude and began to creep up behind the native foreman, giving utterance to a low growl like a wild beast. The effect was electrical on the other convicts. In an instant the muttering had grown to a wild roar, and every prisoner was making for the keepers with murder in his eye. The senior captain of the native guard, when he commanded the little mob to disperse, was slashed across the back of the head with a bolo. Then the infuriated men started for the gateway of the prison to overpower the guard and escape. They were met by Maj. Rogers, the commandant, and a small portion of the guard, who fired a volley into the ranks of the fugitives. Three men fell, and this seemed to check the prisoners for an instant, but their leader,

WESTWARD THE COURSE OF POPULATION TAKES ITS WAY.

Since the establishment of the government there have been taken twelve censuses. With each census the center of population has steadily moved westward, diverging but slightly, either to the north or to the south, from a straight line. The variations brought about by each decade display a remarkable regularity in point of the distance separating the successive centers. It has taken only 110 years for the center of population to jump from the Atlantic seaboard, near Baltimore, far towards the setting sun to the neighborhood of Indianapolis, where the compilation of the figures of the current census places it. Returns from the present census show that the population of the country has increased nearly 13,000,000 since 1890, or more than 20 per cent.

merfest the news of King Humbert's assassination was conveyed to him, but he did not stop at that place or communicate with the shore. The Stella Polare was injured by the ice.

The Duke of Abruzzi sailed for the north on June 12, 1899. The departure was made from Christiania, in Norway, and the then Crown Prince and Princess of Italy, now King Victor and Queen Helene, accompanied their adventurous cousin on his ship, the Stella Polare, as far as the North Cape. Some time before he sailed it was said that the prince announced that he would go farther north than Nansen or perish in the attempt. These stories the explorer indignantly denied, denouncing such a boast as altogether unworthy a scientific man. He said that he thoroughly appreciated the dangers before him, the mighty risks, and the uncertainty of all polar expeditions. The explorers suffered great hardships and when ice-bound ate their sledge dogs.

Kill 100 Out of 120 Filipinos.

a Filipino of the most desperate type, urged them on. Though already wounded by the first fire, his spirit was unbroken, and four volleys were fired from the rifles before he fell. Then, like rats in a trap, the prisoners tried first one gateway and then another, and probably would have overpowered the small guard and made their escape had not American prisoners themselves come to the rescue and helped to capture the fugitives. A few more volleys from their reinforced pursuers, and the prisoners scurried to their quarters in abject terror.

Dawson news advices are: Americans residing in the Klondike are reported to be indignant over an insult alleged to have been offered United States Consul McCook during the recent visit to the city of Gov.-Gen. Minto. It is said that Consul McCook was not invited to attend the reception tendered Lord Minto and was so obviously ignored that Lord Minto noticed the fact and insisted on Consul McCook's presence. The latter was informed of Lord Minto's wish, and came to the gathering. Lord Minto and Consul McCook are reported to have talked long and earnestly together concerning various government matters of high importance. Lord Minto is said to have inquired particularly into the number of Americans residing in the Klondike, their business operations, success or failure, etc., and to have professed great astonishment on learning the facts from the consul.

Takes a Sall with a Maniac.

Robert Weiskittel of Cincinnati, general agent of the New York Life Insurance company, who has been staying on Les Cheneaux islands, near Mackinaw City, had a thrilling experience which nearly cost him his life. Mr. Weiskittel made many friends at the hotel where he was stopping, among them being a physician from Flint, Mich. One day the doctor extended an invitation to the insurance man to accompany him in a sail on the lake. The only occupants of the vessel were Wieskittel, his host and the sailor who managed the boat. When the boat was out in the lake the doctor suddenly jumped from his seat. In each hand he held a revolver, and in his eye there was the unmistakable glare of the maniac. He declared he was going to kill the other two men. The sailor, unnoticed by the maniac, turned the boat toward land and the prow touched the sand while the doctor was still talking and flourishing his weapons. Then Wieskittel and the sailor jumped out and ran for life.

The town of Atlin, B. C., was almost wiped out of existence by a disastrous fire, which destroyed ten of the largest and best business blocks in the town. THOUSANDS DIE BY FLOOD AND WIND.

Coast Cities of Texas Visited by West Indian Hurricane.

With each succeeding hour reports grow more alarming of the loss of life and damage to property in the storm-swept district of Texas. Outside of the cities of Galveston and Houston, the greatest suffering will take place between Houston and East Lake, inland, and on the coast to the Brazos river. People who are in immediate need of relief are those of the Colorado and Brazos river bottoms. The planters in that section had everything swept away last year, and the flood this year devastated their crops, leaving materially in destroying the wreckage and disposing of the bodies. Many of the bodies lodged in the wreckage of buildings were burned with the debris, as they were too badly decomposed to be moved.

Railroads' Loss Is Heavy.

Owing to a bad freight wreck on the Cleveland Pittsburg railroad near East Liverpool, the section gang from Smith's Ferry, Pa., was called out. James Colone and Thomas Cochran were so badly burned by the explosion of a car of gasoline that they will die; port in the United States. Its foreign and domestic trade is large. Its total trade in 1892 exceeded $70,000,000, and since then has largely increased. It shipped to domestic and foreign ports more than 1,000,000 bales of cotton in 1893, and these figures have since been greatly exceeded. According to the census of 1890 it had a population of almost 30,000 and contained 187 manufacturing establishments, representing a capital of almost $5,000,000, and an annual product of about the same amount. The population in 1900 is 37,789.

Suffer Very Heavily.

At Brookshire also four deaths are reported, and there four houses are still standing.

Towns further north add to the stories of horror. Cypress, Hockley, Waller and Hempstead are thought to have lost about 20 per cent of their buildings.

At Taylor the Missouri, Kansas and Texas depot was destroyed and several lives are reported lost.

Bastrop, Smithville and Temple also suffered very heavily, both in lives and property.

W. S. Wall of Houston, who has a summer home at Morgan's Point, relates the escape of Mrs. Wall during Saturday night's tidal wave:

STRAND STREET, GALVESTON.

"My wife had not been long at the hotel, where she was taking supper," said he. "James Black, a merchant, rushed into the dining room and called upon all to flee for their lives. The tidal wave was on them in an instant, and almost before they could leave the hotel to go to a higher point, the rushing waters were all about them more than three feet deep. Mr. Black, struggling against the elements, bore my wife in safety to the Vincent home.

"Returning immediately to the hotel, Mr. Black in a like manner brought safely to the Vincent home his aged father and mother. His next act of heroism was to rescue Mrs. Rushmore, her two daughters, two grandchildren, and a woman whose name I cannot recall.

"Louis Braquet, manager of the Black hotel, was engulfed in the waves and gave his life up in the successful rescue of his wife and a colored servant girl."

Among the refugees which the Galveston, Houston & Henderson train picked up at Lamarque, four and one-half miles south of Virginia Point, was Pat Joyce, who lived in the west end of Galveston.

"It began raining in Galveston Saturday morning early," said he. "About 9 o'clock work was discontinued by the company and I left for home. I got there about 11 o'clock and found about three inches of water in the yard. The water rose and the wind grew stronger until it was almost as bad as the gulf itself. Finally the house was taken off its foundation and entirely demolished. People all around me were scurrying to and fro, endeavoring to find places of safety and making the air hideous with their cries. There were nine families in the house, which was a large two-story frame, and of the fifty people residing there myself and niece were the only ones who could get fifteen others were injured. Nine cars were wrecked.

Sweep of the Hurricane.

From the Red river on the north to the gulf on the south and throughout the central part of the state, Texas was storm-swept for thirty hours by a West Indian hurricane, which laid waste property, caused great loss of life, and effectually stopped all telegraphic and telephone communication south of Austin, while the operation of trains was seriously handicapped. Starting with the hurricane which visited Galveston and the coast Saturday noon, and which prevailed there to such an extent that no communication was had with the island to ascertain what the loss to life and property were, the hurricane made rapid inroads into the center of the state, stopping long enough Saturday night at Houston to get the buildings of the city and to cause much loss to property interests there. Advancing inland the storm swept into the towns of Hempstead, 50 miles above Houston, thence to Chappell Hill, 20 miles further; thence to Brenham, 30 miles further, wrecking all three towns and terrorizing the people beyond expression. The storm was so destructive at those points as to blow over quite a number of houses and several persons were killed.

BRIDGE OVER GALVESTON BAY.

But many other towns and villages and cities have suffered as well as Galveston, and, in proportion to their size, suffered almost as severely.

The situation for all of southern Texas is a terrible one, but for Galveston it is one of horror.

The only serious railroad accident reported as due to the storm occurred south of Houston Saturday night. A Santa Fe train was lifted bodily and blown off the tracks about two miles north of Alvin. Mrs. Prather of Rosenberg, Texas, was killed and half a dozen people were injured.

Not a House Standing.

Among other towns south of Houston, Hitchcock is reported to have suffered severely, while Alta Loma, a little village, is said to be without a single house still standing. Pearland met the same fate.

At Seabrooke four persons are known to have been killed, but as only two houses are still standing there it is supposed that the loss of life was greater than this. Seventeen persons are missing. A Laporte relief train that got as far as Seabrooke picked up three bodies on the way.

Galveston a Beautiful City.

Galveston, the second largest city in Texas and the commercial metropolis of that state, is situated at the northeast extremity of Galveston island, at mouth of the bay of the same name. It is a beautiful city, laid out with wide and straight streets, bordered with numerous flower gardens, magnolias, flowering shrubs and trees. The streets are only a few feet above the sea and have been frequently swept by surging waves stirred up by cyclones and tornadoes.

The city is the third cotton shipping away."

AGED PERSONS.

Lives That Stretched Over Longer Terms Than Seventy Years.

A generation is commonly reckoned as thirty-three and one-third years, but sometimes two or three lives will stretch over several ordinary generations. A grandmother of C. J. Monk, a member of parliament, was born 153 years ago, that is, in 1747, the year after the battle of Culloden, and the very year in which Garrick and Lacey took a lease of Drury Lane theater. Gen. Francis Vinton Greene's grandfather was born 123 years ago, when Napoleon was a baby entering upon his third year, and Sir Walter Scott was entering upon his second. He was a year old when Watt built his steam engine and the tea was thrown overboard in Boston Harbor. The general's father, Gen. George Sears Greene, died last year at an advanced age. Therefore the lives of General George Sears Greene and his father Caleb extended for an interval of 127 years, nearly four ordinary generations. A relative of the general, Mary Ann Greene of Rhode Island, died a few years ago at the age of 105, having in her single life bridged more than three generations. Sir Stephen Fox, grandfather of Charles James Fox, the distinguished statesman, was married in 1654, and in the following year his wife bore him a daughter, who died in infancy. Sir Stephen marrying a second time late in life, another daughter was born to him in 1727. She died in 1820 at the age of 93 years, no fewer than 170 years after the death of her elder sister! In other words, a lady who might have seen Queen Victoria had a sister whom Oliver Cromwell might have looked upon! The fact that seventy-two years elapsed between the birth of Sir Stephen's first and last daughter proves that he must have been married very early for the first time, and that he became a father for the last time remarkably late in life. Indeed, perhaps, this is the most wonderful part of the story. The grandfather of the present British secretary of state for war, the old Marquis of Lansdowne, who died in 1857 at the age of 90 years, told Lord John Russell (who relates the incident in his life of the poet Moore), that he was intimate with Sir Henry Bayton, who knew the before mentioned Sir Stephen Fox. As Sir Stephen was the page in attendance on Charles I. when he was executed in 1649, the three lives named—Fox, Bayton, Lansdowne—extended over a period considerably over two centuries.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

Make Note of Only the Cheerful Things in Life.

Happy is the man who forms, early in life (or if not early, then late), the habit of taking all the light and warmth and cheer he can get with a fine glow of appreciation, looking, meanwhile, somewhat sideway at those opposite experiences he cannot escape. Let him squint a little or look the other way. He will be a happier man, as well as more popular, writes Daniel Gregory Mason in Scribner's Magazine, than the self-appointed devil's advocate who sedulously notes the mugginess of the weather, the feebleness of his pulse, or the fact that he is "tired" (which, God help us, we are all—until we get rested). He will be a happier man, moreover, for two reasons and by virtue of two distinct forces that his act of attention enlists in his behalf. In the first place, by removing the constant irritation to his mere body his viscera and nerves and muscles, that has resulted from his morbid attention, he leaves a clear stage for the benign action of the tendency to health. A man's body is not the normal object of his attention. Just as the normal focus of a sense-organ is an external object (of the eye, a sight; of the ear, a sound), so the normal focus of the mind as a whole is the breathing, colored world outside itself, and particularly the absorbing world of other people. The very insidiousness of sickness is that it tends to seclude the mind from this wholesome outlook, and concentrate it upon inner sensations. The process, once begun, proceeds apace, and soon the healthy activity of the body is still further deranged by the meddling attention, precisely as clearness of execution on the piano, for example, is deranged by particularized notice of fingering or other mechanical processes that should be automatic. Conscious thought always bungles the delicate acts properly cared by the subconscious mind. The remedy is in both cases to direct the attention elsewhere.

England Follows United States.

Red, white and blue, though the colors of the union jack, were not used generally in England as marks of patriotism before the queen's diamond jubilee, three years ago. The old colors were red and white, and the innovation is said to be due to some dealer's importing a large stock of French decorations left over from the French national fetes. Englishmen are cheering the three colors now, however, as vigorously as though they were Americans or Frenchmen.

LATEST ILLINOIS NEWS.

Killed by Rock Island Train.

John Lovekin, 50 years old, and his son, John, 19, of Midlothian, were instantly killed at a crossing south of the Chicago city limits by a through Joliet train on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad which left Chicago at 5 p. m. The accident happened at the Midlothian station. The Lovekins were driving over the tracks. A number of men were on the station platform and a scuffle was in progress. It is thought the farmer's attention was directed toward the scuffle and he did not notice the train. The team crossed the track and the wagon was just upon it when the train struck it. The men were picked up dead. The younger Lovekin boys serve as caddies at the Midlothian golf links. At this crossing Charles Schiffer, a station agent, was killed last June.

Big Union of Catholics.

A resolution proposing a federation of all the Catholic societies in America will be presented in the convention of the German Catholic Central Verein in session at Peoria. Such a federation is looked upon as a highly plausible idea, and if organized it will possess a membership of more than 1,000,000. Its purpose will be the protection of the rights of Catholics everywhere. The reorganization of the widows' and orphans' beneficiary fund has been placed in the hands of a committee of fifteen. Louis Arnold, a delegate from Newburg, Wis., died from the effects of a sunstroke received while in the street parade.

Killing Follows a Fight.

At Macedonia church, eight miles north of Albion, Henry Kunst and Henry Hess quarreled over the possession of a whip and fought. After they had ceased fighting, and while they were standing, facing each other, Kunst drew a revolver and sent four shots through Hess' body, killing him instantly. Kunst attempted to escape to the Little Wabash river bottoms, but was pursued by Deputy Sheriff George W. Bailey and a posse, and was captured and taken to Albion and placed in jail. Kunst and Hess were of about equal age and had been good friends until within a short time of the shooting.

Derrails Train in Station.

Passenger train No. 5, west bound on the Vandalia road, was wrecked at the east end of the passenger depot in Effingham. The towerman in the interlocking switch tower gave the right of way to the train and as he saw an Illinois Central train approaching the crossing he suddenly threw the derail and derailed the Vandalia train. Engineer William Idler sustained several cuts about the head, but the fireman, John Peters, escaped by jumping. No passengers were hurt, though severely shaken up. The engine and one car left the track.

Labor Convention in Peoria.

The annual convention of the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen opened in Peoria Monday. The session will continue for five days. Fifty delegates are present, representing all the middle and eastern states and Canada. President Joseph W. Morton of Chicago is presiding. An effort is being made by the brotherhood to get a decision from President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor forcing the mine workers and the brewery workers to recognize the brotherhood card.

Bank Sneaks Get $3,500.

John C. Terhune, who knew Jesse and Frank James personally, and who for fifteen years, as cashier of the First National bank at Marysville, Mo., waited with a gun for a raid from the famous robbers, lost $3,500 Monday to two everyday Chicago bank "sneaks." A man with a bandaged leg drove to the bank at Evanston in a buggy, and while Mr. Terhune and the fellow talked the stranger's accomplice entered the bank from the rear and stole seven $500 packages of bills from one of the drawers of the counter, escaping unnoticed.

Will Erect Statue to Goethe.

The Swabian society of Chicago, which has celebrated another "Can-statter volksfest," has raised $6,000, with which it proposes to erect a statue of Goethe opposite the Schiller monument in Lincoln park. The second last day of the "volksfest" was celebrated in Ogden's grove Monday, with an attendance as large as that of Sunday. Fully $2,000 was realized in the two days.

Hurt in a Gas Explosion.

President L. H. Bissell of Illinois College of Photography sustained severe injuries at Effingham by an explosion of gas while delivering a lecture before his class. His face, hands and arms were badly burned, while the force of the ignited gas threw him fifteen feet across the room. His left hand will be permanently crippled.

The applications for "government by injunction" seem to be extending. A Chicago candidate for office has been enjoined against conducting a campaign and a Cleveland lover has been legally restrained against wooing the girl of his choice.

A steamship has made the trip across the Atlantic ocean in less than five and a half days. If this thing keeps up there will soon be no need for the long talked of and thoroughly impracticable railroad under the Atlantic ocean.

It is reported that the Turks have just massacred 200 more Armenians. It appears that those Krupp guns which the sultan purchased in Germany some time ago were all they were recommended to be.

Now some town that has never been able heretofore to get itself put on the map will become prominent by announcing itself as satisfied with the census.

In the matter of standing off creditors the sultan of Turkey can give points to the whole deadbeat fraternity.

The city of Syracuse, N. Y., conducts a municipal lodging house, and the experiment is regarded as a complete success. Persons without money are allowed to work on the streets in return for bed and meal tickets. The cost of the institution for six months was $2,700, and the city received in payment 12,000 hours of street sweeping and snow shoveling.

If it is true, as stated by some persons, that the Chinese civilization is more advanced than ours, is it not time for us to begin to go backward? We certainly never could stand that strenuous Chinese life, with its decapitations, its extortion, and, worst of all, its opium and chop suey.

The Count von Waldersee, who has been chosen commander in chief of the allied armies in China, has an American wife who had $7,000,000 when he married her. Why in the world does a man in such circumstances want to run risks in that heathen country?

It is stated that Admiral Remy refused to allow Hobson to go to China. Possibly he felt that the dowager empress was entitled to some protection notwithstanding all she had done.

New England towns are showing up well in the census. The increase of 32 per cent in the steady going old city of Providence speaks well for Little Rhody.

Being a simple and somewhat unlettered people the Boers keep right on capturing British garrisons in blissful ignorance that the South African war is over.

The sultan will notice that a concert of the powers in which the United States does business loses no time in getting down to work.

The postoffice department reports that 50 of the largest offices in the country show an aggregate gain for July of $253,392, over the corresponding month in 1899. This is another indication of steady growth and general prosperity.

The Berkshire Historical society of Lenox, Mass., proposes to make a public park of the large maple grove wherein, until 1890, stood the "little red house" where Nathaniel Hawthorne lived in 1850-2.

The shirt waist discussion was started too late for the insertion of a shirt waist plank in the platform of either of the great parties. The shirt waist might have been a paramount issue if it had started sooner.

General Miles has been photographed in his new uniform. To the credit of the United States army be it said that he looks just as handsome and gallant as ever.

If the grade crossing could be introduced as a factor of war it would prove as effective as shot and shell.

Millionaire Leeds paid his wife $1,000,000 to give him up so that he could marry another woman. She evidently got the best of the bargain and received $999,999.70 more than he was worth.

Three people have been killed by eating toadstools in Chicago recently. The toadstool seems to be running a pretty close race with the naphtha launch this season.

As between the shirt waist man and the tailor made girl most persons will prefer the latter.

According to the kaiser's speech Germany's policy is to "take no prisoners." That was Spain's policy in the late misunderstanding with this country. At least she took no prisoners.

They are trying to stop street music in New York. Evidently the municipal authorities don't get as much out of street music as they do out of prize-fighting.

The fact is being impressed upon Great Britain that it is mighty hard to conquer a nation that don't know when it is whipped.

He Remembered Them.
"By the way," said the man who had stopped at a farmhouse to water his horse, "15 years ago a poor boy came this way, and you took him in."

"Yes?" queried the farmer, somewhat surprised.

"You were kind to him," went on the stranger; "you fed him, gave him words of encouragement and an old suit of clothes, put a dollar in his pocket and sent him on his way rejoicing. He told you at the time that he never would forget your kindness. Am I right?"

"I reckon you are," replied the farmer.

"He said that if he prospered he would see that you never had occasion to regret your kindness to a poor, struggling lad."

"Land's sakes!" exclaimed the farmer's wife excitedly. "It sounds almost like a fairy tale, don't it? Why, you must have seen him."

"I have," said the stranger, "and he sent a message to you."

"What is it?" they both asked expectantly.

"He told me to tell you that he is still poor."

As the stranger drove away the farmer went out and kicked the pump viciously, while his wife threw a rolling pin at the chickens.—New York World.

What They Deserved.

Not very long since an exceedingly well dressed man about 35 was charged in a north London court with being drunk. He promptly paid his 10 shillings' fine and went away. A fortnight later a stylishly dressed woman was charged with a similar offense. As she gave the same name and address I concluded they were husband and wife. So I called on them, and my visit was repeated several times. They had a very nice home, kept two servants and had four children. I noticed a bonny lad of 8, as I saw him several times. Some months later I got a letter as follows:

Dear Mr. Holmes—You know my Jack, the 8-year-old. I am sorry to say that he has got into bad ways—steals money from us, skips out late and is very disobedient. Can you get him into any training home or institution of any kind, where his evil propensities will be cured? Kindly oblige us in this.

I could not resist the temptation to reply as follows:

Dear Sir—I know of but one cure for Jack's evil propensities, and that is a thorough application of the horsewhip to both parents.

Conscience the Coward.

Murderers uncaught suffer awful agonies of fear when alone with their consciences, but when apprehended, tried, convicted, sentenced and incarcerated they become callous to fear. Jailers tell me this is the general rule. There is an acquitted murderer in this city, once a leading politician, who has not been able to sleep alone in a dark room these 20 years. A light must be kept burning and an attendant is constantly on guard. A Wall street broker, who has "done" every one of his most faithful friends, dares not go to bed in the dark. He keeps a light burning in his room and one in the hall, leaving the door open. In the small hours of the morning he awakens his family with pitiful cries. The city man who is not afraid of the darkest alleys, who will brave thugs and stable gangs at any hour of the night, is in a panic when alone in a forest.—New York Press.

Pulpit and Pew.

In his "Lighter Moments" the late Bishop Walsham How tells of a lady, a great admirer of a certain preacher, who took Bishop Magee with her to hear him and asked him afterward what he thought of the sermon.

"It was very long," the bishop said.

"Yes," said the lady, "but there was a saint in the pulpit."

"And a martyr in the pew," rejoined the bishop.

A Minister's Good Work.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic; got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured," says Rev. A. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week; had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for three or four days without relief then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I went over to see him next morning. He said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said 'No.' I went home and brought him my bottle and gave him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured. I think it the best medicine I have ever tried." For sale by Chas. E. Churchill, Barrington, and A. S. Olms, Palatine.

The Chicago Tribune

is a newspaper for bright and intelligent people. It is made up to attract people who think.

Is not neutral or colorless, constantly trimming in an endeavor to please both sides, but it is independent in the best sense of the word. It has pronounced opinions and is fearless in expressing them, but it is always fair to its opponents.

Matters of national or vital public interest get more space in THE TRIBUNE than in any other paper in the West.

For these reasons it is the newspaper you should read during the forthcoming political campaign.

THE TRIBUNE'S financial columns never mislead the public.

Its facilities for gathering news, both local and foreign, are far superior to those of any other newspaper in the West.

It presents the news in as fair a way as possible, and lets its readers form their opinions.

While it publishes the most comprehensive articles on all news features, if you are busy the "Summary of THE DAILY TRIBUNE" published daily on the first page gives you briefly all the news of the day within one column.

Its sporting news is always the best, and its Sunday Pink Sporting Section is better than any sporting paper in the country.

It is the "cleanest" daily printed in the West.

The death of Mrs. Addie F. Loomis occurred at her home, about two miles east of this village, Monday evening, September 10. She had been sickly for some time but her case was not considered serious until death came to her relief. The funeral was held from the M. E. church, Wednesday, at 2 o'clock, Rev. D. C. Dutton officiating, the remains being interred in the Wauconda cemetery. Mrs. Loomis was born at Smyrna, Chenango county N. Y., July 1, 1858. For 42 years she was spared to do her work, which she tried faithfully to do. She was united in marriage to A. D. Loomis, Nov. 16, 1875, in New York state. In 1885 they moved west and settled at Gilmer. In 1892 she, with her companion, united with the Fairfield Methodist church in which faith she lived and died. She was the mother of seven children, six of whom are left to cheer the bereaved father to whom sincere sympathy is extended.

Passed Resolutions.

As an expression against the manifest attitude of Cook county with reference to the taxation of that county, the board of review of Lake county passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, according to the reports of the press of the city of Chicago, the board of review of the county of Cook has undertaken to equalize and reduce the valuation of real estate in said county, for the year 1900, which we believe to be contrary to the letter and spirit of the law, and unjust to the balance of the state; therefore,

Resolved, that the board of review of the county of Lake request the state board of equalization to adhere to the law as interpreted by the attorney general, that real property is to be equalized but once every four years, and further

Resolved, that the members of the state board from this district (No. 7), be urgently requested to use all honorable means to protect the interests of this county in all matters relating to taxation purposes, and against any discrimination in the matter of property values, in favor of Cook county, against the balance of the state.

Curious African Customs.

Among the human sacrifices of the delta of the Niger, says Count de Cardi, young girls occupy the most honored place. They are at regular periods offered up to the gods, and instead of shrinking from this horrible doom they accept it with pride and gratitude. Nothing is refused to these girls while they are alive. If one of them sees a handsome dress or ornament on a woman and expresses a desire to have it, the woman must give it to her. Men are also sacrificed, though not for religious reasons, and they welcome death as eagerly as the girls. Count de Cardi once tried to save one of these victims, but instead of thanking him, the man reviled him so bitterly for interfering and scolded the bystanders so heartily for delaying to carry out the sentence that they promptly stopped his mouth by killing him.

The worst insult which one woman can offer to another is to hold out the right hand in front of her with the index and middle finger forming the letter V. This means, "You will become the mother of twins." When twins are born in this region, they and their mothers are killed, as a rule, and when a mother dies in giving birth to a child the latter is also killed and buried with her. It is not superstition which impels the negroes to dispose of motherless infants in this heartless fashion, but the great difficulty of rearing them. Altogether, the information which Count de Cardi has gathered during his residence of many years in this portion of Africa is of rare value, especially to anthropologists.

Her Prospects Good.

"Do you think he can support you in good style after you are married, dear? I hear he is worth nothing."

"I know Harold isn't rich, mamma, but he has his life insured for $20,000, and I could get along quite comfortably on that."—Chicago Tribune.

Giving Them the Slip.

An impetuous man in Kansas City practically lives on bananas. When he eats them, he throws the peels just outside his office door. That's the way he gives his creditors the slip.—Kansas City Star.

Horses in Battle.

One of the most curious sights to be seen in a cavalry charge is the various riderless horses galloping in the line in perfect order. At the charge of Bala-klava the front rank of one regiment was composed to a great extent of riderless animals, their masters having dropped one by one. It would seem that in the excitement of the moment the horses lose all conception of what is happening around them and probably fail to notice the fall of their riders.

The return of riderless horses to camp is an almost certain sign of defeat. When a cavalry charge is successful, the horses will, as I have said, all keep up together, even though they have lost their riders, but when a force is routed the first news of ill omen to those in the rear will be the return of the horses with empty saddles and stirrups dangling free. No more sorry sight can be imagined. To illustrate the callous feeling these animals have under fire a case which happened at Ladysmith during the siege may be cited. A farrier sergeant was engaged in shoeing an officer's horse in the open ground behind the stables of a hotel and had already put one or two nails into the shoe when a shell came screaming through the air. The next moment the missile burst five or six yards away from where the sergeant and the horse were standing, and the splinters flew around both, but failed to touch either. When the smoke had cleared, the horse was to be seen with its foot still in the man's apron, quite undisturbed by the incident.—Pearson's Magazine.

Buying a Fan in Spain.

This is how a Spanish senorita bargains for her fan, according to Miss Katharine Lee Bates, who spent some time in Spain studying the people and customs of that sunny clime:

There is nothing sordid about it. Her haggling is a social condescension that at once puts the black eyed young salesman at her mercy.

"But the fan seems to me the least bit dear, senor!"

He shrugs his shoulders and flings out his arm in protest.

"Ah, senorita! You do not see how beautiful the work is. I am giving it away at 6 pesetas."

She lifts her eyebrows half incredulously, all bewitchingly.

"At 5 pesetas, senor."

He runs his hand through his black hair in chivalrous distress.

"But the peerless work, senorita! And this other too. I sacrifice it at 4 pesetas."

She touches both fans lightly.

"You will let us have the two at 7 pesetas, senor?"

Her eyes dance over his confusion.

He catches the gleam, laughs back, throws up his hands.

"Bueno, senorita! At what you please!"

And the senorita trips away contented with a sharp bargain, although—for Spanish gallantry, even when genuine, goes farther on the lips than otherwise—the price was probably not much more remote from what pleased the smooth tongued clerk than from what she pleased.—Youth's Companion.

In the Desert...

A Story Illustrating the Horrors of War

By H. B. WELSH...

The newcomer was a man of about Cleland's height, but more slender in build, with the erect bearing of a soldier. His hair, of a light brown, was cropped short; his face, though regular enough in features, was not a pleasant one. The cold, hard blue eyes, straight, narrow mouth and sharp chin, gave it an expression which made many people declare "It was better to give Paul Rayburn a wide berth."

He shook hands with his hostess, and an unpleasant expression drew his brows together as he glanced at Cleland, then acknowledged the other's salutation with a curt bow.

"Let me give you a cup of tea, Major," said the lady of the house presently. She poured it out and Rayburn watched her, a passionate expression in his cold eyes, as they devoured her face. "Any more news from Atbara?" she asked, as she handed him the dainty little cup, skillfully evading the touch of his fingers.

"Just what we expected. The der-vishes are gathering fast and furiously. I expect we may receive marching orders any day," said Rayburn. "Let them come. I don't care, for my part, how soon."

In a few minutes Cleland rose to take his leave. Mrs. Breynton and Rayburn were alone.

"Is that fellow your shadow?" the latter asked, suddenly turning to his hostess, who had parted from Cleland at the room door. "He is with you everywhere now. I wonder what he thinks he is?"

"A gentleman," answered Mrs. Breynton, quietly, "though a little gleam came into her soft eyes. 'I am afraid you have forgotten you are one, Major Rayburn. I am not accustomed to that tone from those who lay claim to the title.'"

"I beg your pardon," said Rayburn, half sullenly, half passionately. He placed his cup on a little table near, and, coming to Mrs. Breynton's side, suddenly knelt at her feet, and put his lips to the lace which hung over her delicate waist. "You have made me mad—mad! I love you with a passion that will not let me rest night or day! Every moment I am away from you I feel as if there were a chain of iron about my feet dragging me back. It makes me furious when I see another man near you, touching your hand, and you smiling upon him, as you smile on Cleland!"

The beautiful face hardened and grew paler at the last words.

"Major Rayburn, I have told you before that I have no love to give you, that we can never, by any possibility, be more to each other than friends. Why do you persistently introduce the subject, and persecute me with your entreaties? You must know that it pains me, and that it cannot do yourself any good. Let me repeat once more what I have already told you. I do not and never can love you; it is impossible now and forever."

"Then there is someone who makes it impossible?" exclaimed Rayburn, with sudden fierceness. He caught her wrist in a strong grasp, and his cold eyes, now burning with a fierce light, tried to read the depths of hers. "You love some one else! You cannot deny it!" he exclaimed, hoarsely.

"Why should I acknowledge or deny it to you, Major Rayburn?" said Adrienne, with cold displeasure. "You have absolutely no claim on me, that you should demand my confidence. If you cannot be content with what I have to give you, then the only other possible footing for us is that of complete strangers."

"Yes, you can throw me over like that, calmly telling me we can be complete strangers to each other, while you know that my very life is in your hands!" exclaimed Rayburn, hoarsely. "You were friendly enough with me once—you can't deny that! It is that"—he checked himself as he was just about to utter a fierce oath—"that fellow who has just left to whom I am indebted for this. But, by Heaven! I will show him he cannot cross my path with impunity! He does not know the kind of man he has to reckon with!"

"Major Rayburn, you go beyond all bounds!" exclaimed Adrienne. She rose from her seat, her face deathly pale, and put her hand on the bell-pull. "After this I do not see how we can be anything but strangers to each other," she said, coldly. "I am not in the habit of counting among my friends those who utter threats, of that kind in my presence!"

She had pulled the bell before she had finished speaking. Rayburn stood before her, a cold grey hue spreading slowly over his face, an expression in his eyes that might have vaguely alarmed Adrienne had she seen it, but she did not.

When the servant appeared she said quietly: "See Major Rayburn to the door, Mahomed." And the native servant, bowing low, held the door open for the "Excellency."

Rayburn turned away with a bow, almost as low as Mahomed's. At the door he turned for a moment.

"Good-by," he said in the same hoarse tones. "Whatever may happen after this, you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have driven me to it!"

Adrienne made no answer, merely bowing slightly as she made a gesture with her hand to Mahomed, indicating that he was to go.

But when the door had closed on the figures of the two men she remained standing where she was, her hand resting on the little inlaid table before her, an expression of strange fear and apprehension creeping slowly over her beautiful face.

"He cannot harm him—he cannot!" she murmured, as if trying to convince herself of the truth of the words. Then a sudden quiver ran through her, and she covered her face with her hands. "I cannot hide the truth from myself now—I love him!"

CHAPTER VI.

A march in the desert. A march over that waste of pathless, yellow sand, under a burning, torrid sun, with a sky above of quivering, palpitating, passionate, blazing heat; with burning, sand-blistered feet, blood-shot, sand-filled eyes, clothes soaked to a wet pulp with perspiration, limbs that almost refused to drag their weary weight over the way.

It was Paul Cleland's first experience of the desert. Most of the long line of human beings, creeping like a black snake across the white waste, had been there before, some of them for many years, during preceding campaigns, but Cleland had no experience of the Sudan, and he suffered in proportion, as all newcomers do.

Still, he was tough and strong, and had all a Scotchman's dogged endurance; he would never own himself beaten where others did not.

They were marching from Berber to Atbara, and had as yet heard nothing of the enemy.

Cleland had already found his services required. One or two of the new recruits among the British had been attacked by such diseases as only the desert knows. These he had treated, to his own immense satisfaction, successfully. It was good to know that he was a necessary factor to the well-being of the army.

Coming out of a blinding sandstorm one day they halted at a ruined village, destroyed by the Mahdi's cruel decree, and remained there overnight. Cleland found a ruined hut, in which he established himself, with his two native "boys" to keep guard. He was dead tired, and, making himself as comfortable as he could, he rolled himself in his rug and was soon fast asleep, though the far-off screams of jackals prowling in the outskirts of the camp, sometimes mingled with the hoarse laugh of the hyena, might have kept him awake under other circumstances.

Suddenly, however, he was awakened, and that effectually. Something was moving in the hut.

He started up in bed and looked around. The moon—a desert moon, white and clear almost as daylight—was shining into the tent. By its light he could see his two "boys" asleep on the sun-baked turf that formed the floor in a far corner of the hut.

He saw something else, though—a smooth, round, dark head and two glaring eyes, looking like balls of fire, fixed on his face.

He could not tell what the animal was at that distance. It might be a jackal, a panther, or—most terrible of all—a hyena, watching its opportunity for a spring. But, whatever it was, Cleland had no doubt about one thing—his only safety lay in perfect self-possession at this awful moment.

He was usually cool and self-possessed enough; but there are not many men who can wake up at the dead of night, to find a bloodthirsty beast of prey within a few feet of them, and experience no sensation of fear. Cleland knew that his heart was beating in strong, heavy throbs, like the strokes of a sledge hammer, and that his forehead was wet with perspiration, not altogether brought there by the heat and closeness of the night.

He dared not move his eyes from those glaring balls fixed upon them.

He knew that to do so would mean an instant spring on the part of the creature. He could not call his boys. In all probability they would howl with terror, and rouse the animal to greater fury.

His rifle was on a camp stool not five feet away, but almost beside that crouching dark form. If he had but put it underneath his head! But it was no time for regrets, it was a time for action. He must make up his mind at once what he was to do; at any moment the animal might spring.

He cautiously put out his arm, still keeping his eyes fixed on the creature's. Then, without once turning his glance aside, he tried to creep stealthily across towards the camp-stool. The creature uttered a low, threatening sound, something between a bark and a howl.

But Cleland was now desperate. He felt that, whatever happened, he must get at the rifle. He made a sudden dart forward. As he did so he heard another low, threatening growl. The next instant he had his rifle in his hand.

It was a short-range one, fortunately. He lifted it and fired. The animal—he could see now it was a hyena, whose movements are slower and less agile than those of the feline tribe of carnivorous animals—rushed at him, and he saw its gleaming teeth. Crack, crack! went the rifle. A bullet passed right through the beast's skull, and, with a horrid sound—half laugh, half yell—it dropped at his feet and rolled over, dead.

The native boys, awakened by the crack of the rifle, started to their feet, howling, and made a rush for the door, made of thick brushwood thickly tied together, which had only been kept secure by the kit, which had been rolled close to it from the inside.

"Here boys! come back!" cried Cleland loudly. But seeing that the "boys" were already through the doorway, he rushed to it and followed.

Outside, the moonlight flooded the scene; the great stretch of brownish-yellow sand looked white beneath it; the tents of the officers and the roughly-constructed zareba of the soldiers stretched between Cleland's hut and the river, distant about a hundred yards from them. All was the silence and desolation of the desert.

But as Cleland looked out a tall, dark figure strode hastily from its position in a pool of moonlight right behind Cleland's hut. Cleland stood still in his amazement at seeing another of the camp out at that hour besides himself.

His first impulse was to follow the figure, and tell of the terrible experience through which he had just passed. His second was to pause and think, a vague feeling of uneasiness coming over him.

He felt sure he had recognized the figure as that of Major Rayburn.

For some reason he knew Rayburn disliked him. He had noticed it several times—whenever he came in contact with him. Once or twice he had caught Rayburn looking at him in a way that puzzled himself.

Cleland could not guess the reason. He had never dreamt Adrienne Breynton regarded him in any other than a friendly way, and, even had he done so, he had no idea of Rayburn's feelings towards Adrienne.

On second thoughts he gave up the idea of following Rayburn. He got hold of his boys, told them all danger was passed, and returned to his hut, the boys carrying the body of the hyena to the door, but not outside it, for fear of attracting other wild animals.

Cleland had just thrown himself down on his roughly-improvised couch again when a loud knock came at the door.

"Are you awake, doctor? I want you at once," said a hurried voice—the voice of Philip Rayburn.

"I am awake. Open, Abdullah, quickly!" cried Cleland.

The boy did so, with the leisureliness of a true Arab, and Rayburn rushed in, looking ghastly white in the moonlight.

"For God's sake, doctor, come quickly!" he said, as Cleland sprang up. "There's a man bleeding to death about a mile away from here! Are you ready? Come with me. Bring bandages and your instruments, and I'll tell you about the affair as we go."

In a moment Cleland had gathered his things together. It struck him as he did so that he had suspected Rayburn without cause. Here was the man's reason probably for being out at that hour.

Deep Hole in the Ocean.

An ocean depth of about six miles has been found by the United States steamer Nero, which has lately been engaged in making soundings for a submarine cable between Guam and Manila.

"My dear," said Mr. Pritchard, "I do wish you would keep the kids quiet while I am writing." "What are you writing, dear?" "An article on 'How to Control Children.'"

ACCEPTS RENOMINATION.

McKinley's Letter a Long Document.

DISCUSSES ALL THE ISSUES.

But Imperialism in Particular—Indorses Philadelphia Platform—Silver Still an Issue—Mentions Tariff and Currency—Volume of Money.

President McKinley's formal acceptance of his renomination by the Republican national convention is now in the hands of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, chairman of the notification committee.

The letter is nine newspaper columns in length, and was finished, dated, and forwarded to Senator Lodge Saturday. The president's letter is a careful analysis of all the issues of the day.

The money question, the trust problem, the tariff, the gold reserves, the Isthmian canal, and the merit system are discussed in turn.

The question of imperialism is the last issue discussed by the president. Although placed as last in importance among the issues now before the people, President McKinley devotes more space to the subject than for all the others combined.

The policy of the administration in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines is defended at great length.

Imperialism Charges Unfounded.

On the charge of "imperialism" the president declares that the opponents of the administration have failed to bring evidence to support their allegation. In other words, he asserts that the anti-expansionists have "failed to make a case."

The president begins his letter by a hearty endorsement of the Philadelphia platform. He charges the Democratic party with forcing upon the people a second battle upon the same lines that resulted four years ago in a triumphant victory for the gold standard and sound currency. In alluding to the issue which is declared to be res adjudicated, the president makes use of the title of Mr. Bryan's book, and terms the last presidential campaign as "the first battle."

Silver Still an Issue.

On this question he says:

"While regretting the reopening of this question, which can only disturb the present satisfactory financial condition of the government, and visit uncertainty upon our great business enterprises, we accept the issue and again invite the sound money forces to join in winning another and, we hope, a permanent triumph for an honest financial system which will continue inviolable the public faith."

"As in 1896, the three silver parties are united under the same leader, who immediately after the election of that year, in an address to the bimetallicists, said:

"The friends of bimetallicism have not been vanquished; they have simply been overcome. They believe that the gold standard is a conspiracy of the money-changers against the welfare of the human race—and they will continue the warfare against it."

President McKinley declares that the re-affirmation of the silver plank in the Chicago platform by the Kansas City convention makes the silver question the dominant issue in the campaign. He says:

"Nothing has been omitted or recalled; so that all the perils then threatened are presented anew, with the added force of a deliberate reaffirmation. Four years ago the people refused to place the seal of their approval upon these dangerous and revolutionary policies, and this year they will not fail to record again their earnest dissent."

Brief on Tariff Question.

One short paragraph is devoted to the tariff question, in which the president declares that the Republican party "remains faithful to its principles of a tariff which supplies sufficient revenues for the government and adequate protection to our enterprises and producers. The time-honored principles of protection and reciprocity were the first pledges of Republican victory to be written into public law."

In taking up the currency question the president insinuates that Mr. Bryan is a false prophet in the following quotation:

"Instead of diminishing, as was predicted four years ago, the volume of our currency is greater per capita than it has ever been. It was $21.10 in 1896. It had increased to $26.50 on July 1, 1900, and was $26.85 on Sept. 1, 1900. Our total money on July 1, 1896, was $1,506,434,966; on July 1, 1900, it was $2,062,425,490, and $2,096,633,042 on Sept. 1, 1900."

The Weekly Panorama.

Reducing Prices of Steel.

Pittsburg is only a few miles from the great coke producing region of Pennsylvania. It is a thousand miles from the Lake Superior iron ranges where it gets most of the ore it uses. Fifty years ago the cost of assembling the ore, coke, and limestone for a ton of pig iron made up half the total cost of production. At that time it would have been out of the question to use Lake Superior ores at Pittsburg, so heavy would have been the transportation expenses. Since then the cost of carrying ore by water and by rail has been so much cheapened and the time required so much lessened that it is said it is possible to convert into steel plate at Pittsburg ore mined only ten days before near Lake Superior. Furthermore that steel can be sold at a profit for a price lower than foreign manufacturers can afford to accept.

Turkish Minister's Wife.

Mutcheba Ali Gerrouh is the name that Ali Ferrouh Bey, the Turkish Minister, has given the youngster that was born recently at the Turkish legation at Washington. Mme. Ferrouh Bey, who came to this country with her husband last winter, is the first Turkish woman of her rank ever permitted to come to the United States, it being a special favor of the Sultan to allow her to accompany her husband in his last return to Washington, where he has represented his government since 1898.

Heir to Sir Francis Drake.

John H. Daniels, a lawyer of La Crosse, Wis., is about to start for England to press his claim to an estate of $150,000,000, the unclaimed accumulations from the wealth left years ago by Sir Francis Drake, discoverer and privateer, of whom Mr. Daniels avers he is an heir. The millions of the Drake estate, according to the claimant, have John A. Daniels, been lying in the English court of chancery until they reached their present enormous proportions. The riches left by the noted English sailor were the results of a trip to the West Indies during the war with Spain. At the head of a small squadron he captured and sacked the town of Nombre de Dios.

Mr. Daniels has been busily engaged for many months in gathering the evidence he will carry to England. His mother was a Drake, who lived in Orange county, New York. The exact line of descent by which the lawyer expects to prove his claim is a secret which Mr. Daniels is guarding lest publicity defeat his plans.

Endowing an Iowa College.

The news that $300,000 of the proposed $500,000 endowment for Cornell college at Mount Vernon, Ia., has been subscribed will give great satisfaction to Iowa Methodists, many of whom received their higher education at the institution. The $300,000 has been subscribed within the last three years in small sums, the largest contribution being $20,000, and the trustees now announce that the remaining $200,000 is assured.

The school board at Trenton, Mo., held ten meetings and took 700 ballots before a superintendent could be selected. The county papers repeatedly and in all seriousness suggested that the contest be settled by a game of seven-up, but the board regarded such a procedure as lacking in dignity.

Starvation Wages for Teachers.

With the beginning of the summer vacation nearly 100 substitute teachers in the Vienna public schools were threatened with starvation. Their pay, miserably inadequate at the best, ceases entirely with the closing of the schools. For the last three years the central committee of the Vienna Teachers' association has appealed for public contributions to aid their unfortunate colleagues. This year a similar appeal was made through the press. The lot of what the committee's appeal calls "the pedagogical day laborers," is not at any time a happy one, compelled as they are to travel from district to district, from school to school, and from class to class. The average monthly sum paid to the substitute for such work usually ranges from 15 to 20 guildens ($6 to $8).—Robert Atter in Chicago Record.

"With Rod and Gun in Arkansas" and "Enroute to the Southland," are the titles of two new booklets just issued by the General Passenger Department of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad for free distribution. The first deals with hunting and fishing on the St. Francis river in Northeastern Arkansas, a region abundantly supplied with game fish, wild fowl, wild turkey, deer and bear. The second booklet contains a description of the points of interest, Chicago to Nashville, historical matter of the early days and many Indian legends common throughout Illinois, Indiana and Tennessee years ago. Both booklets are embellished with many fine half tone cuts and are most interesting. If you desire a copy of either send your address to C. L. Stone, G. P. & T. A., C. & E. I. R. R., Chicago.

The Bishop's Retort.

Many years ago two bishops were entertained by a hostess, who, after dinner, caused to be handed to them a box of cigars. The first bishop considered smoking a device of the evil one. With scant civility he declined the proffered cigar, and, with more force than politeness, denounced the villainous habit of smoking. The other bishop, being a lover of the weed, contrived to reprove his reverend brother's narrow-mindedness by putting to him the following question: "Now, which do you think is most to be condemned, the use or the abuse of a thing?" The other promptly replied: "The abuse of course!" "Then," responded the genial bishop, "you see that I use tobacco, while you abuse it!"

The Sense of Taste.

The tip of the tongue is chiefly sensible to pungent and acid tastes, the middle portion to sweets and bitters, while the back is confined entirely to the flavors of roast meats and fatty substances.

How Soot Is Utilized.

Experiments in France have shown that chimney soot is valuable both as a fertilizer and as an insecticide. Its fertilizing properties are particularly noted in gardens and meadows. M. Dasserre, a wine grower in southern France, avers that "chimney soot kills the phylloxera with the rapidity of a stroke of lightning, and at the same time endows the vines with extraordinary energy of growth." Other experimenters, however, have not found it effective in the case of phylloxera, although it kills many kinds of larvae.

On Tuesday during the great storm Dr. and Mrs. Robinson were having an outing in Lincoln park. At one o'clock when the wind was 72 miles an hour, the rain began to fall and they were hurrying across the park to the street cars, two-thirds of a tree fell within ten or fifteen feet of them. That tree did not render their heels a bit sluggish, it only added to the thrilling interest of the day. This Chicago end of the storm was only the angry tailswitching of the Texas cyclone.

A Good Exhibition.

The 47th annual exhibition of the Lake County Agricultural society opened Tuesday at Libertyville. The day was given up to entering exhibits and getting in shape. The management carried out their promises and Wednesday found the grounds and buildings in first-class condition for the crowds that came to patronize the best exhibition the society has given in many years.

The weather throughout the three days of the fair was perfect; the attractions were as advertised and the exhibits in many departments much better than had been anticipated, especially in the poultry and sheep departments. Of course, the great attraction was the speed program. The liberal purses offered brought together a fine string of speeders and gave admirers of turf events ample opportunity to make selections and a number of favorites were substantially backed.

Thursday was the big day and the grounds swarmed with people from all sections of Lake and neighboring counties. It was also children's day and hundreds of them were in attendance. It might have justly been termed Barrington Day judging from the large number of Barringtonians who took possession of the grounds. The big band of M. W. A. Camp 809 of Barrington was a stellar attraction and added much to its enviable popularity by entertaining all lovers of good music with a wagon load of selections.

There are attractions about a county fair which never grow old. It is the occasion of a reunion of those interests which make a county prosperous. To be sure there is not that old-time rivalry as to agricultural exhibits. Balloon ascensions and horse racing heads the list now-a-days, but the old settler and the rustic beauty attend just the same. The management of the exhibition just closed labored diligently to please the public and were repaid by the largest attendance in many years.

They Played Ball.

The managers of league base ball aggregations have evidently neglected to look over the field of talent hidden away in this corner of earth. Full many a base ball player is born to play unseen and waste his ability on country diamond.

The Volunteer Fire Department of Barrington contains 18 men who, while having no aspirations to enter the National or American league teams, can give the professionals a run for their money and mob an umpire in metropolitan style.

The department divided into two teams—separated the sheep from the goats—married men vs. those aching to get married—went forth to Heise's field Saturday afternoon and gave a performance, that for prominent features, has never been equalled in this or any other country. The following fire quenchers participated in the exhibition, and it will be noticed that nothing but stars appeared:

THE AGGREGATION.

SINGLE	MARRIED
H. Landwer	Ed Peters
Albert Kampert	August Miller
John Donlea	George Otis
Max Lines	William Shales
William Solt	H. Myers
Fred Stott	N. Stenger
F. Searies	Wm. Krahn
Henry Schroeder	Fred Meister
Steve Palmer	Geo. Stiefenhofer

Drafted from married contingents. Charley Downing officiated as umpire while Attorney Wallace France acted as prompter. A representative of THE REVIEW was concerned in the preliminary skirmish, but the rules of 1900 having been suspended, the newspaper man was called out of the game. It was a small matter to arrange the battle and at 2:34 the circus was in full swing.

George Otis converted his anatomy into contortions that would put Little Egypt to shame, and the sphere cut down the grass like a lawn mower. As the ball came through the second trip John Donlea got a rap at it and it was found near the belt line railway. John went around the diamond like a racer. Steve Palmer pushed back the flounces in his shirt waist, took a pleat in his waistband and whacked the ball and it went over to Lake Zurich on a vacation. Fred Stott braced himself, took an extra hitch in the bosom of his knickerbockers and awaited results. He struck at it—that's all he did.

The married men pranced to the batting plate and swung into action. Ed Peters took the stick and mauled the ball and then somebody said "go" and the rotund form of Mr. Peters made its flight. It was a sight. Nick Stenger put on his white gaunts made a bow to the admiring audience and requested that they watch him 'swat' it. He did 'swat' it but the white-robed "Moody" Searies was over in the left corner and took the sky scraper. He didn't intend to do so. It was a pretty play. Fred Meister took a sweep of the diamond and made a sweep at the ball several times. He didn't hit it but it was time for him to go and he proved his powers as a sprinter. Geo. Stiefenhofer made a two base hit that threw the singles into a convulsion. His luck was with him and he was successfully coached to home.

Al Kampert played with the single men because he forgot he was married. He took the stick, looked lovingly over to where the feminine contingent was ranged, hit the ball and went around the bases at a gait that surprised the married men.

Henry Schroeder fanned the air in an attempt to connect with Otis' curves and Henry Landwer was careful not to strike the ball. Wm. Shales proved an excellent backstop, taking Otis' delivery in professional manner.

Max Lines pitched good ball and the fringe of humanity near the home plate seemed to feel a little safer when he was in the box. Otis was in good form but somehow or other he wasn't very particular whether he killed one or a dozen at a shot.

August Miller did some acrobatic acts as are seldom witnessed on the diamond while Billie Krahn ran the bases as unconcerned as though he was out on the milk route. Henry Myers didn't hit the ball every time he went to bat, neither did anyone in the game, but like the rest of 'em he made some astonishing attempts.

The game was full of sport and when the contest closed it was found that 31 runs had come in, 16 for the single men and 15 for the married men. Among the prominent features of the game were the errors.

Stories of The Town.

It is stated that a certain Barrington housewife noted for her economy was deeply affected by the bargains as announced by Chicago department stores. She went thither, made her purchases and returned to find she could have saved $1.96 by patronizing the local merchant. Now she is vexed.

Now the depot platform has been turned into a political forum. It's cheaper than hiring a hall.

We are informed that when the leaves have turned to the golden hue a sweet faced young man of Barrington's 200, will lead to the altar a waxen colored beauty who is domiciled in a pretty village on the North shore of Lake Michigan.

Wouldn't it jar you to hear a man tell his wife that he couldn't afford to buy fruit jars for to put up a half bushel of peaches and then notice him send $4 to bet on a horse race at the county fair?

There was a watermelon eating contest in the village Monday evening. Tuesday morning an order was telephoned to Chicago for two cases of Jamaica ginger. In this expansion ginger naturally follows the melon.

The Chicago department of health suggested wearing a strip of flannel 6 inches wide about the stomach to ward off trouble, and keep that organ at a proper temperature. A married man was seen making tracks up Main street as though 16 to 1 was after him. He was pale and trembling like a reed in a Texas cyclone. "What, it is?" we asked. "My Lord, man, don't intercept my progress," he replied, "I have forgotten my stomach flannel."

We overheard a man, who is not overburdened with a desire to work, say, "The world owes every man a living." That's true, but a great many don't take the trouble to collect the debt.

A Grove avenue lady was complaining about the condition of her health when a neighbor asked, "are you not troubled about the result?" "For a woman who has been a wife as long as I have death has no terrors," she replied.

Two little urchins asked us the question "it's nice to be editor, ain't it?" Yes, indeed, children. Grow up and be editors. Of course, it would be much pleasanter if you could be hock-carriers or dray horses, but as that is impossible, by all means be editors.

That marriage is a failure, in one case at least, was strikingly illustrated Wednesday when a husband on the south side of the village knocked his bosom companion flat with a chair, and she, who had promised to love, honor and obey, retaliated by chasing the old man out of the yard with an axe.

A Factional Fight.

That element of the democratic party in this the Eighth senatorial district, who were opposed to Johnny Donnelly and his crew of politicians, held a convention at Harvard, last Saturday, and launched an independent movement. Four candidates were in the field; William Desmond of McHenry county, J. Fox of Boone, and Maiman and Arnold of Lake county. Mr. Maiman of Watconda, was well supported as was also W. F. Arnold of Waukegan, but both withdrew in favor of William Desmond of Hartland, [McHenry county, who was declared the unanimous choice of the convention. There is a chance for Mr. Desmond to win as Boone county democrats are bitterly opposed to the candidacy of Con V. O'Connor of that county, nominated at the first convention by what is claimed to be the Donnelley-Pierce element who also claim to be the regular organization. Two years ago the same kind of a contest was presented and the district judges, sitting en banc, were called upon to decide which faction was the regulars, and which candidate entitled to place on the ballot. History repeats itself.

Game Warden for Lake County.

James VanDeusen, secretary of the Waukegan Gun club, has been appointed deputy game warden for this, Lake county. He has received his commission and is on the trail of violators of the law, and will see that game is protected and laws strictly enforced. He announces that prairie chickens can be shot only during the month of September and that the law must be more strictly observed than it has been in the past.

Plain English.

J. W. Hardy, who published the Capron Sentinel for some time, tired of the work, disposed of the plant and bade a fond adieu to his patrons in the following choice bit of original prose: "After nearly four years in the business, we have kicked out the traces of newspaperdom and are henceforth (and forever, we believe) free from the thankless job of a doggasted country editor. We are thankful to those who have been our true friends, but don't care a cuss for those who claimed to be our friends and lied. Hereafter we hope to engage in a business where our patrons expect to pay for what they get, and where we can make them do so if they try not to. Pay my successor, and he will give you a good paper. So long"
