Horace Hutching Hart and June Julian were married at the home of the bride's parents Saturday, May 4, at 2 o'clock. It was a simple, pretty ceremony, witnessed by only the immediate relatives and a few invited guests. Rev. W. H. Smith of Nunda officiated.

The house was tastefully decorated with carnations and potted plants. The wedding march, Mendelssohn's, was played by Mrs. Frederiek Smith, and the bride and groom stood in an alcove surrounded by flowers.

After the ceremony luncheon was served by Misses Mildred Hicks and Lora V. Marthens and at 5 o'clock the younger portion of Palatine's population was at the depot burdened with rice, old shoes and good wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Hart. The happy couple left for Indianapolis for a short stay and on returning will complete their honeymoon with a carriage trip through the lake region of Northern Illinois. They will occupy R. M. Putnam's house on their return.

IN REGULAR SESSION

The Village Board of Trustees Transact Important Business.

The first regular meeting of the new board of village trustees held Monday evening proved of unusual interest and the amount of business transacted shows that the administration will be an active one. The feature of interest to the trustees was the appointment of the standing committees by President Lamey. The committees as now constituted, give general satisfaction to the members and public.

The reappointment of Marshal John Donlea and Night Watchman Henderson was expected and deserved, as was also the unanimous reelection of A. L. Robertson as village treasurer and collector, and Frank Robertson as village attorney. The selection of Dr. C. H. Kendall as health officer is commended by all. The doctor has the proper idea of correct sanitary conditions and will see that the ordinances are strictly observed. ### TO RESTORE ILLINOIS SOIL.

Problem Now Interesting the Agricultural Experiment Station.

The agricultural experiment station of the University of Illinois at Urbana, is making elaborate plans for a partial survey of Illinois for the purpose of discovering the condition of its soil with regard to its fertility. The appropriation of $10,000 for this work makes its consummation a certainty.

The condition of Illinois soil is considered serious by men who have spent several years in the study of its composition. From all parts of the state reports come in to the experiment station of the failure of land which has heretofore been of high productivity. These exhausted soils occupy considerable acres. Often they have been in cultivation for a half century with nothing done to restore their fertility. Naturally almost their entire stock of such essential elements of plant food as phosphorus and nitrogen has been removed.

To prevent Illinois soil from degenerating to the condition of much of the eastern land, where $40,000,000 is annually expended for commercial fertilizers, is one of the tasks of the department of soil physics.

Plan a Beautiful New Station.

Preliminary plans and sketches are being made for a new Northwestern railway station in Chicago—not for an addition to the old one, but for an entirely new building to take the place of the old. Secrecy is being maintained by the officials of the company concerning their plans and they decline to discuss the matter, but it can be stated positively that the firm of Frost & Granger, architects for the railway company, is working on the preliminary drawings.

The annual meeting of the Northwestern railway officials will be held June 7, and on that occasion the plans will be presented to the board of directors. The drawings now being made contemplate a six-story brick and stone building on the site at Wells and Kinzie streets and will cost nearly $1,000,000.

Didn't Investigate Dowie's Bank.

The legislature has adjourned sine die, and John Alexander Dowie may breathe easy and continue to run his affairs just as he always has—to suit himself. Not only did the investigation of John Alexander's bank prove an abortion, but the many bills proposed to place private banks under state supervision also were buried. It was predicted that the hubbalooboo of the legislators would amount to nothing but an advertisement for the head of the Christian Catholic church and it proved true.

Price of Food Stuffs Increased.

So far as the price of food goes just now, it is better to be a cow than a man. Low grades of mill products, the kinds that are fed to the cows, are down in price. Corn, oats, and wheat, which, after a few processes are fit for human consumption, cost more than they did. Vegetarians have to pay more for their food, and even fried mush—that foundation of homely simplicity—is taking on airs and has advanced in price. Here you have an example of what a trust can do. Has anyone noticed an advance in the wage scale?

Northern Wisconsin Railway Farm Lands for Sale.

The North-Western line has for sale in Northern Wisconsin, at low prices and easy terms of payment, about 350,000 acres of choice farm lands.

Early buyers will secure the advantage of locations on the many beautiful streams and lakes, which abound with fish and furnish a never-ending and most excellent water supply, both for family use and for stock.

Land is generally well timbered, the soil fertile and easy of cultivation, and this is rapidly developing into one of the greatest sheep and cattle raising regions in the Northwest.

Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Superior, Ashland and other towns on the North-Western line furnish good markets for stock and farm product. For further particulars address George W. Bell, land commissioner, Hudson, Wis., or G. H. MacRae, assistant general passenger agent, St. Paul, Minn. 6-23

PAN-AMERICAN STAMPS.

Series Commemorative of the Great Buffalo Exposition.

One of the most striking illustrations of the intimate relations existing between American railroads and all other commercial interests, is set forth in the "Pan-American Series" of postage stamps just issued by the postmaster general. One stamp of this series is a compliment to the New York Central and is a proof of the fact that it is in touch with and an integral part of the commerce of the world. The Pan-American series of postage stamps consists of six beautiful steel engravings printed in two colors producing the effect of a framed picture. Each of these stamps represents what is styled an "aid to commerce," and, curiously enough, and without any design on the part of those who planned the series, each subject is associated with the New York Central. The stamps are as follows: The one-cent stamp represents "Fast Lake Navigation." Steamers of this character on each of the great lakes of America run in connection with the trains of the New York Central lines. The two-cent stamp, a reproduction of which appears herewith, is a picture of the New York Central's "Empire State Express," from a photograph by A. P. Yates of Syracuse, taken when the train was running sixty-four miles an hour—a very appropriate "aid to commerce." The four-cent stamp represents an automobile of the same style as those used in the New York Central Cab Service at Grand Central Station, New York. The five-cent stamp gives a beautiful picture of the steel arch bridge over the Niagara river at Niagara Falls.

To Control Big Coal Mines.

From an authority which seems indisputable there comes the information to Athens, O., that almost the entire coal industry of the Hocking and Sunday Creek valleys will come under the management of the gigantic combination of capital of which J. P. Morgan is the head. According to the information it is the intention of the syndicate to get control of all the mines now in operation and to secure as many acres as possible of undeveloped coal lands. This deal will practically include all the coal lands and mines in the three counties of Athens, Perry and Hocking. Conservatively estimating the amount of the deal it can be approximately placed at from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000. The total daily output of all the mines in the three counties when they are operated at their full capacity is conservatively placed at 30,000 tons.

Glass Workers' Wages Raised.

As the result of a national conference of window glass interests in Indianapolis it was decided to close down nearly all co-operative factories in the United States on May 11 and give all employes an advance of wages of 15 per cent. The conference was attended by representatives of all the co-operative glass factories in the country, including President Cole of Lancaster, O., who is at the head of an independent combination, and Simon Burns, president of the L. A. 300. There were also present members of the Wage Workers' committee and President Chambers of the American Window Glass company, commonly called the trust. The result of the conference affects 2,750 glass blowers and 15,000 other employes, all of whose wages will be increased 15 per cent.

Despoilers Are Punished.

John Buckles, James Caldo, Fred Elliott, and Frank Rhoden, who recently ruined Indiana's monument to Thomas A. Hendricks by despoiling it of the scales of justice and other bronze pieces, which they sold for junk, were convicted in the police court at Indianapolis. The following sentences were imposed: Caldo was fined $150 and costs and given 180 days for malicious trespass, $100 and costs and thirty days for loitering, and $150 and costs for petit larceny; Elliott, $150 and costs and 180 days for malicious trespass, and $100 and costs and thirty days for loitering; Rhoden, $150 for petit larceny, and $100 and costs and thirty days for loitering; Buckles, $100 and costs and thirty days for loitering.

Rev. W. V. Wheeler performed the ceremony. Later Wynegar was taken to Michigan City,

KILLS HIS FOUR CHILDREN

Evidence of the Terrible Crime of William Rosenfield.

BODY OF ONE VICTIM FOUND.

Search for Other Little Ones Prosecuted Along the Mississippi Near Fort Snelling—Father Supposed to Have Drowned Himself After Committing Deed.

The finding of the body of 9-year-old Joseph Rosenfield in the river near Fort Snelling is regarded by the police of St. Paul as almost positive evidence that William Rosenfield drowned his four small children and himself a week ago. Rosenfield had been separated from his wife for some time. She had been living in Minneapolis, while he lived in St. Paul. The children were being kept by a relative. A week ago Rosenfield took the children from the house of the relative. At the same time he tried to persuade his wife to go along. When she refused he told her that the next time she saw either him or any of the children she "would be wearing crape." The next morning the horse which Rosenfield had driven the day before was found near the Marshall avenue bridge over the Mississippi, the children's pet dog still in the buggy. No trace of either the father or the children could be found until today, when the watchman of the St. Paul Broom Company found the child's body floating in the river half a mile this side of Fort Snelling. The appearance of the remains indicated murder. The nose was broken, the forehead was caved in, resulting from a blow against some heavy substance. Both injuries were such as would be sustained by a fall over a bridge. The lad was fully dressed with the exception of hat and overcoat. The search for the other bodies will be pushed rapidly. The missing children are Mary, aged 7; William, aged 4, and Samuel, aged 2.

American Cavalry Leaves Peking.

The American cavalry, which has been ordered to leave China, left Peking Sunday morning for Tientsin. The men will march to that place carrying two days' concentrated rations, which it is intended to test. The cavalrymen were extremely popular there, and the cleanliness and order of the camp arrangements were much praised. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaslee and other British generals, with their staffs, were present, and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchis, who escorted the Americans outside the city wall.

Filipinos to Be Set Free.

Nearly all the Filipinos who were to be liberated upon the occasion of Aguinaldo's proclamation have been given their freedom and this week the announcement was made that the occasion of the surrender of General Tinio would be made the occasion for the liberation of 1,000 more. This will begin this week. The Filipino officers who have surrendered have petitioned to be allowed to proceed against the ladrones, and it is thought that the department will use this means to drive the bands of robbers out of the islands.

THE FARMER'S COMMENT ON STOCK EXCHANGE BOOMS.

"So They're Getting Rich in Wall Street, Are They? Well, if it Weren't for Me They Wouldn't Make Much Money!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Whole Church Takes the Pledge.

A thousand people—men, women and children, the entire congregation of the Holy Savior church of Wilkesbarre, Pa., marched to the church Sunday, and there took the pledge to abstain for the rest of life from spirituous liquors.

Plasterers of Cleveland, O., Strike.

The union plasterers of Cleveland have struck to enforce a new scale of wages. They demand $3.50 instead of $3 a day, and also a weekly payday.

Follows Ross in Resigning.

One more professor of Stanford university in California has revolted over the treatment of Professor Ross and has resigned to preserve what he regards as "academic freedom." This time it is Professor Arthur O. Lovejoy, associate professor of philosophy. In his letter of resignation to President Jordan Professor Lovejoy says, after referring to the examination of the documentary evidence in the Ross case: "I am forced to the conclusion that the dismissal of Professor Ross for the reasons assigned, after the president had declared he was a fit person to retain, involves an abridgment of the liberties which any university professor should demand."

Girl Rescues Her Sisters.

Lottie Wangburg, 16 years old, made a heroic rescue of her two little sisters, 3 and 5 years old, at Marinette, Wis., in a fire which totally destroyed her home. She was awakened by the smoke pouring into her room. She opened a door leading down stairs and the flames shot in. She closed the door, raised a window, and jumped to the ground, twenty-five feet below. With her foot sprained she ran for a ladder on the other side of the house, placed it in position, and ascended into the burning dwelling, and carried the children down the ladder. They were safe when the neighbors arrived. The girl had to be attended by a physician.

Heirs of Estate Defeated.

A decision was rendered by Judge Fish of the circuit court at Racine, Wis., in favor of the purchasers of what was known as the Perkins land track in the city of Burlington. F. W. Perkins, before his death in 1865, gave a title to certain land in Burlington, now valued at over $200,000, to business associates and the property was to be sold and the money paid to the heirs. Two years ago the heirs claimed that the title was illegal and brought ejectment suits against manufacturers and others who had erected buildings on the land. In his decision rendered today Judge Fish stated that he believed the cases would be carried to the supreme court of this state.

Perish on a Sinking Tug.

The steamer Germanic reports at Little Current, Great Mountain Island, Ont., that when off Gore bay light the tug Tecumseh was sighted in a disabled condition. The captain of the tug asked that he be towed to Gore bay and the Germanic gave her a line. After proceeding some distance the captain of the Tecumseh hailed the steamer, saying they were sinking. The tug was brought alongside and two men and a woman were taken off, when the tug suddenly lurched and sank, carrying down with it the captain, whose name was not ascertained; his sister and a Toronto man named Forbes.

Four Perish in Flames.

Four little children were burned to death in a farmhouse six miles from Muskegon, Mich. The victims were Thomas and John Wertman, aged 3 and 4 years respectively, and Jennie and Hennehey Kool, aged 4 years and 8 months respectively. Mrs. Wertman had gone out of the house to get a pail of water, and when she returned the building was on fire and the children were beyond help.

FARM AND GARDEN

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Rape and Its Cultivation.

J. H. Skinner, assistant agriculturist of the Indiana Experiment Station, sends out a press bulletin on rape growing. We believe this plant to be very valuable to the farmer and would advise its more general growing. The bulletin referred to is as follows: Rape is a succulent plant belonging to the cabbage family. It grows rapidly, making a large amount of green food, upon which pigs and sheep grow well. To make a success of rape, select a rich piece of land free from weeds. Plow deep, then roll—if not too moist, and harrow till the soil is finely pulverized and well firmed down. Finish the preparation by running a plank drag over it. Such a seed bed will germinate the seed quickly and enable the plants to withstand dry weather. I prefer to have the plowing done just before sowing. This will give the rape an even start with the weeds.

Sow with garden seed-drill, three pounds, or five pounds broadcast per acre. When drilled the rows should not be more than 20 to 24 inches apart. Drill sowing will permit cultivation, which will keep down weeds; conserve moisture and increase the yield. Where drilled the animals destroy less as they walk, and lie down between the rows. If sown broadcast cover with harrow or weeder and roll. In many cases it is well to roll the drill-sowing also.

The season will control time of seeding. Do not sow until the ground has become warm enough to quickly germinate the seed, as it comes up better and grows more rapidly. Usually it should not be sown before the middle of April—in this latitude of north central Indiana. It is best to sow at intervals of ten days to two weeks. By the use of low hurdles, this will give fresh pasture throughout the season, as the early sowing can be grazed off a second time. This also makes less waste as the stock does not run over it so much. Rape may be sown in the corn just before the last cultivation. If the soil is not too dry, it will grow well unless the corn is very large and thick. Where thus sown it makes splendid pasture for lambs from September till cold weather. Some men have had success in sowing rape with oats. This however is not a sure way as the season will have much to do with it.

It is a good plan to have the rape patch near the barn and alongside of the pasture. This brings the animals under the stockman's eye, and if a lamb "bloats" he is there to give it attention. If the stock can go freely back and forth between the pasture and rape, it will save trouble, time, labor and even loss. Rape thus supplements the pasture, making fat lambs and good pigs. Where sheep have access to both rape and grass, they should not be turned on the rape until the middle of the day when the animals are not hungry enough to gorge themselves, and the rape is free from dew. If they do not have the run of the pasture, turn them on the rape for an hour a day gradually increasing the time, until they become accustomed to it. Then keep them on it continuously till the end of the season.

Some Clover Facts.

Clovers are among our most valuable forage plants, but they will not withstand the extremes of drouth and heat that prevail over large sections of the west every year and in other sections of the same region some years. Being soil renovators they can be grown in rotation with other crops to advantage. On account of the large amount of protein they contain they have a high feeding value. There are several varieties of clovers grown in this country, among which are the following: Red clover (Trifolium pratense).—This is the most common variety, and is grown successfully in the north wherever the supply of moisture is sufficient. In dry sections it becomes uncertain. Some call it a perennial, but it is scarcely more than a biennial, its perennial character being often assumed by new plants springing up from seeds dropped by the plants each year. It makes a good hay, but is unsuited for permanent pasture. When it is desired to use it for pasture, as a single plant, it is necessary to rotate, keeping the clover pasture in one place for not more than two years. Mammoth clover (trifolium medium) resembles red clover, but has no spots on the leaves. It is adapted to more moist land than is red clover, and under favorable conditions will give a larger yield. Alsike clover is a perennial clover whose appearance suggests a hybrid between red and white clover, but it is not a hybrid. It will thrive on soil too wet for red clover, but on ordinary soil is probably not to be so highly recommended. A writer says that it should be sown with grasses to get the best results. White clover (trifolium repens) is a low-growing perennial, spreading by creeping stems. The flowers are white, the older ones more or less purplish tinged. It is of little value for hay owing to its small growth, but is very useful for beautifying lawns, and has some value as a pasture plant. Some farmers sow white clover seed with bluegrass and consider it an assistant to the bluegrass pasture. It stands drouth fairly well, and will grow on soil too poor to give good yields of some other pasture plants. In Ireland it is called the shamrock.

Crimson clover (trifolium incarnatum) is an erect annual a foot or two high. It bears scarlet flowers in oblong heads. It was highly spoken of some years ago as a soil renovator, but of recent years has been quite generally ignored in the north. In the south it is proving valuable in some localities.

Treat Oats for Smut.

A communication from the Illinois Experiment Station says that the average per cent of smut in Illinois oat fields as determined by several careful counts in over sixty counties of the state last year, was 14 per cent. Illinois produces the largest amount of oats of any state in the union; about 164,000,000 bushels for 1900. Making liberal allowances for variation in estimates of yield and per cent of smut the loss to the farmers of our state from smut was not far from $5,000,000 or about $45 for every forty acre oat field. This loss can be entirely prevented at a very slight expense by the hot water or formalin treatment of the seed.

Hot Water Treatment.—The apparatus needed for this treatment consists of an ordinary scalding kettle or any arrangement for heating water, a barrel, several gunny sacks and an accurate thermometer.

The kettle should be partly filled with 35 to 60 gallons of water and heated until the temperature of the water reaches 137 degrees F. The gunny sacks should be about half filled with one bushel of seed oats after they have been fanned and cleaned. Dip the sack of oats into the hot water, taking care to keep the sack completely under water and stirring it gently to keep the water circulating through every part of the sack. Treat for five minutes at from between 132 and 137 degrees F. After treating dip immediately into the barrel filled with cold water. This will cool the oats off quickly and prevent over heating in the center of the sack.

About two pecks by measure of the wet oats should be added to the amount desired to be sown per acre, to make up for the swollen seed. The wet oats cannot be dried and should be sown immediately after treating; by hand or with a force seed drill. The treating process quickens germination and makes a more vigorous plant, thus increasing the yield independent of the destruction of the smut. It is advisable to treat a part of the seed this year, sow it apart from the general crop, thresh separately and save this seed for the general seeding the following year. The treatment need not be repeated oftener than once in three years at most.

Cultivating the Orchard.

H. L. Dean of Illinois says: I consider good and thorough culture of the utmost importance in growing fruits successfully. First getting your ground in the best possible condition before setting out your plants or vines and then frequently stirring and loosening the ground during the growing season. Now this is not only necessary during the growing season before your trees and vines come into bearing but especially it is true that during their fruiting the ground must be frequently stirred and kept pulverized, in order to have the best results when gathering your fruits. By thus keeping your ground in a loose, pliable condition you counteract, in a measure, the effect of drouths and enable your fruit to keep on growing and to some extent prevent their dropping. Another condition also noticed, between orchards cultivated and those not cultivated the last few years, and one I think the fruit grower will fully appreciate is this; the orchards that have been down to grass for a number of years and have been bearing fairly good crops of fruit as their owners say, without any cultivation, are running down noticeably while those which have been thoroughly cultivated are improving every year. This is gratifying to the orchardist and looking at his orchard he knows he has been well repaid for all work put on it. The fruit grower must watch his trees and ought to be able to tell whether his trees or vines are thriving as well as the stock man who goes around amongst his stock, can tell how his stock is growing. If your trees are not doing as well as you think they ought you can improve their condition by judicious fertilizing, and especially will it do wonders on young trees.

Holstein-Friesian Records.

(First two weeks of April, 1901.) The size of the records and the number received during these two weeks are very remarkable. The number is thirty-two, eight of which average 20 lbs. 1.9 oz. equivalent butter of 80 per cent fat. The full-age cows, seven in number, average 18 lbs. 10.8 oz.; and the average of the eight four-year-olds is 17 lbs. 12.6 oz.; of the three-year-old class only three reports were received, the average product of which is 14 lbs. 12 oz.; of the two-year-old class fourteen were received, of which the average product is 12 lbs. 9.4 oz., the average of the seven highest of this class is 14 lbs. 15.2 oz.—S. Hoxie, in Farmers' Review.

Property owners in the Fox lake region of Wisconsin have banded to drive German carp out of the waters in that vicinity, and it is intended to seine the Niagara river for the same purpose. The carp are making havoc among game fish and hence the contemplated warfare.

By means of the dairy cow we are enabled to make use of the great yields of grass, which grows so luxuriantly wherever the conditions of sunshine and moisture are right. Green grass rightly used has made many a people rich.

Mildred A Trevanion

BY THE DUCHESS.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

"I suppose it must be that I do not care to do so," she answered coldly, almost insolently, with an intonation that cut him to the quick; and then he stepped aside and she passed through. As the last of her dress disappeared through an opposite door, the young man turned away, clinched his hands, and muttered to himself:

"What a fool I am—what a mad fool—to wait all my life up to this, only to fall in love with a woman who scarcely cares to remember my existence!"

With this self-congratulatory address, he strode down the steps and into the pony carriage, in which shortly afterward he drove his sister and "the queen" to the Grange.

All things considered, the poor pomes would have preferred any other driver that day, and the girls a more lively companion; but she sara, sara, and so all parties had to put up with Denzil. Once applying the whip too sharply to the well-cared-for back of Gill, the far-off pony, she thought proper to make a bolt of it for half a mile or so, and persuaded Jack to accompany her, until a steep hill and Denzil's firm hand had once more reduced them to a kindly frame of mind. During this rather trying half mile, Miss Younge, as loudly as she well could, had taken particular pains to express her consternation at and her disapproval of her brother's mode of driving, until Denzil, provoked beyond bounds by more than one cause that day, turned and advised her, in no very tender terms, to restrain her excitement; after which Rachael set her thin lips tightly together, and determined to have her revenge as speedily as possible; so when the Grange had been reached, and they all stood round the phaeton, waiting for Eddie's knock at the door to be answered, she said, sweetly:

"What is the matter with you today, Denzil, dear? You are a little out of sorts, are you not?"

"Am I?" asked Denzil. "I don't know—most people are at times, I suppose. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, for nothing, dearest"—if possible, spoken more sweetly still—"I was only anxious; and, by the bye, your persuasive powers failed to bring Miss Trevanion with us, did they not?"

"Oh, you serpent!" thought Frances Sylverton, indignantly, as she saw Denzil's handsome face contract and flush painfully; but all she said was, "Mr. Younge, will you come here and see what Eddie has done to my stirrup? The boy grows more intolerably stupid every day. What—is there nothing really the matter with it? Well, I wonder then what makes it feel so queer;" and then the door was opened, and Denzil helping her from her saddle, they all went into the house.

Here they spent a long half hour with the master of the Grange—a half hour that worked wonders, as Frances obtained her request, and a ball was promised within a fortnight to celebrate her delivery from Uncle Carden's grasp—"strictly on the condition," said old Dick Blount, "that you give me the first quadrille, Miss Frank;" and she having promised the desired dance willingly enough, they all turned once more homeward.

Frances Sylverton discovered two things during her ride that morning. One was, that the chestnut thoroughbred rode that day went easier in its stride than the little gray mare, her more constant companion; the other, that Denzil Younge was, without doubt, very desperately in love with beautiful Mildred Trevanion.

CHAPTER IV.

When the Deverills made their appearance at King's Abbott on Monday evening, just ten minutes before the dinner-bell rang, they brought in their train, uninvited, a cousin of their own, a certain Lord Lyndon, who had most unexpectedly arrived at their place that morning.

"I knew you would make him welcome, my dear," the honorable Mrs. Deverill whispered to her old friend, Lady Caroline, as they seated themselves on the soft cushions of a lounge; "and really we did not know in the least what to do with him."

After which little introduction, the young lord was made welcome and civilly entertained forthwith. He was a middle-sized young man of from twenty-six to thirty, rather stout than otherwise, with nondescript features, and hair slightly inclined toward the "celestial rosy." His mouth, too, was an inch, more or less, too large for his face, and his eyes might have been a degree bluer, but, for all that, they had a pleasant, genial expression lurking in their light depths, while his smile alone would have redeemed an uglier man.

He was a general favorite with most of his acquaintances, and a particular one with his cousins, the Deverills, who looked upon him fondly enough in the light of a brotherly relation, time having convinced them that their chances were not of that order that would change his position from friend to husband. The elder Miss Deverill was a tall girl, gawkiily inclined, possessed of a very pronounced nose, a talent for listening, and a bright, clever expression, while her sister was particularly ugly. There were no two opinions on the latter point, either in Clifton or elsewhere; and indeed charity embodied would have found it difficult to indicate one passable feature in the younger Miss Deverill's face.

Miss Trevanion, in a demi-toilette of black and gold, scarcely improved Miss Jane's homely appearance this evening, as, with her calm, self-possessed manner, she sallied down the long drawing room to receive her parents' guests.

Then she was introduced to Lord Lyndon, and executed a little half-bow for his especial benefit, which had the effect of reducing that amiable young nobleman to a hopeless state of imbecility for the ensuing five minutes. After that time had elapsed he gradually recovered his wonted composure, and, summoning back his departed pluck, took to staring at Miss Trevanion every alternate five seconds, with such unmistakable admiration in his eyes as caused Denzil Younge in the background to utter curses not loud, but deep.

Miss Trevanion was smiling very sweetly at the new arrival—far more sweetly than she had ever smiled at him—Denzil; and he, the newcomer, was evidently enjoying to the full the commonplace conversation he was holding with her.

Seeing this, Denzil fairly gnashed his teeth with excess of jealousy, and consigned this harmless young lord to all sorts of dreadful places, while telling Miss Sylverton, with his tenderest smile, how dear to his heart was a crimson rose in masses of fair brown hair.

"Who was it told me you preferred 'great wealth of golden hair?'" she rejoined, mischievously, while she laughed good-naturedly enough, albeit slightly mockingly, as Denzil colored and flashed a glance at her, half-earnest, half reproachful, from his beautiful dark-blue eyes.

"Never mind," she whispered, laying her hand with a gentle pressure on his arm as he took her in to dinner—"never mind; I am your friend, you know—so trust me."

Whereupon Denzil returned the pressure very gratefully indeed; after which these two felt that they had sworn a bond of mutual good fellowship.

All through dinner Lyndon devoted himself exclusively to Miss Trevanion, while she—from what motive was a mystery—came out from her habitual coldness, and laughed and sparkled, and dazzled her companion, until Denzil—watching from the other end of the table—felt his heart ache oppressively, and a dull sense of the emptiness of things in general creep over him.

Perhaps, had she vouchsafed him even one gracious glance, even one smile, not at him, but in his direction, it would have dulled the pain, but her eyes sedulously avoided that side of the room, while she coquetted with and charmed her new admirer with an assiduity that made Frances Sylverton fairly wonder.

Once only, before she left the apartment, did Denzil meet her glance, and then but for an instant, as he held the door open for the ladies to pass through. Mildred, who happened to be last, having caught her light dress in a slightly projecting corner of the wainscoting, he stooped to release her, and as he rose again, their eyes met.

In hers lay nothing but mute, cold thanks; while in his—whatever it was she saw in his, it caused Miss Trevanion to bow hurriedly and move away down the long hall, after the others, with quickened, petulant steps.

"Mildred, darling, how pale you look!" Lady Caroline said, anxiously, as she joined the ladies in the drawing room. "Are you cold, child, or ill?" Come over there to the fire and warm yourself. These sudden chills are very dangerous."

But Miss Trevanion would neither acknowledge to cold or go near the pleasant, inviting blaze, choosing rather to wander away vaguely toward a distant, heavily curtained window, where she hid herself from the watchful, reading eyes of Rachael Younge.

Outside the window ran a balcony, gleaming marble white in the brilliant moonshine. It looked so soft, so sweet, so lonely, that Mildred, whose cheeks had changed from palest white to warmest crimson, felt a sudden intense longing to pass out and bathe her flushed face in the cool pure light.

With noiseless touch she pushed open the yielding sash, and found herself part of the silent, star-lit night, with a faint wind fanning her and the deadness of sleeping nature all around. A tall, slight, dark-robed figure, she stood with one hand—scarcely less white than the rays that covered it—resting on the balustrade, her eyes wandering restlessly over the shadowy landscape. A perfect queen of night she seemed, or very fitting Juliet, had there but been a Romeo.

Presently, with steady, eager steps, came Denzil Younge toward her, and took up his position by her side.

"Dreaming, Miss Trevanion?" he said.

Mildred started perceptibly. Perhaps her thoughts—whatever they were—had been far away—perhaps too near. Whichever it was, she roused herself with a visible effort before she answered him.

"Almost," she said, "although the night is somewhat chilly for such a romantic nonsense. However, you have shown me my folly, so there is little danger of my repeating it. Shall we return to the drawing-room?"

"In one moment," he answered, hurriedly; whereupon Miss Trevanion turned back once more, and, pausing with wondering eyes, laid her hand again on the balustrade.

Denzil appeared a little pale—a little nervous perhaps—in the moonlight, but that was all; and his voice, when he spoke, though low, was quite distinct.

"Why will you not be friends with me?" he asked.

"Friends with you!" Mildred repeated, with calmest, most open-eyed astonishment, raising her face to his. "Why, what can you mean? Have I offended you in any way? If so, I am sorry, and, believe me, I did not mean to do so. I fancied I was treating you as I treat all my other acquaintances."

"No, you do not," he rejoined, with an odd repressed vehemence asserting itself in his tone; "you treat me very differently, as it seems to me. Why, on all others you bestow a few smiles, a few kind words at least, while on me—Miss Trevanion, I wonder—I wonder, if you could only guess how much your simplest words are to me, would the revelation make you a little less chary of them?"

"I do not understand you," she said, coldly, closing and unclosing her hand with angry rapidity; "and I believe you yourself do not know of what you are speaking."

"Yes, I do," he affirmed, passionately. "I know I would rather have your most careless friendship than the love of any other woman. I would almost rather have your hatred than what I now fear—your indifference."

The moon had disappeared behind a sullen dark gray cloud, and for a few moments they were left in comparative darkness. Miss Trevanion's heart was beating loud and fast; the cloudy drapery that partially concealed, but scarcely hid her delicate neck and shoulders was strangely agitated. She could not see her companion's face, but felt that he was trying to pierce the momentary gloom to gain some insight into her soul. He should read no thoughts of hers, she told herself, with proud reliance on her own strength; he should not learn from her face how deeply his words had vexed her.

When once more the moon asserted herself and shone forth with redoubled brilliancy, Denzil gazed only on a calm statuesque figure and haughty unmoved features that gave no index to the heart beneath. She seemed a beautiful being, a piece of nature's most perfect work—but a being hard, unsympathetic, incapable of any divine feeling.

He gazed at her in silence, wondering how so fair a creature could be so devoid of all tender characteristics, and, as he gazed, a man's step sounded lightly on the gravel beneath them. As she heard it, Miss Trevanion's whole expression changed, her face was lit up with sudden animation, and took an eager expectant look that rendered her ten times more lovely than he had ever seen her. She moved lightly to the top of the stone steps that led to the grounds, and watched with pretty impatience until a gray-colored figure emerged from the darkness, and, seeing her, he gladly lit in his arms.

"Charlie," she said, rapturously, and, when he had half pushed her from his embrace, she put up her hands and smoothed back his sunny brown hair from his forehead, and kissed him three times fondly; after which she suddenly recollected Denzil's presence, and, drawing back, pushed Charlie gently toward him.

Business Before Pleasure.

An English commercial traveler, for whose pushing Americanism a Liverpool paper vouches with great enthusiasm, started out after a country order. Happening to arrive at the village on the day of a festival, he found the shop of his customer closed, and learned that the man himself was at the celebration a mile out of town. At once he set out for the spot, and reached the ground just in time to see his shopkeeper climb into a balloon procured for special ascensions. The man of trade was equal to the occasion. He stepped forward, paid his fare and climbed into the car. Away went the balloon, and was hardly above the tree-tops when the commercial traveler turned to his astonished victim, and said persuasively but triumphantly: "And now, sir, what can I do for you in calicoes?"—Youth's Companion.

Ricciotti Garibaldi.

Ricciotti Garibaldi, who will attend the unveiling of the Garibaldi monument in Chicago on September 20, is a lieutenant in the Italian navy. In 1866, when his father commanded a body of volunteers, Ricciotti had a minor commission. He marched against Rome with the soldiers who won the battle of Monterotondo, took part in the battle of Mentona, and was captured. He fought with France against Germany in 1870 and after that war made his home in Rome, where he has been a member of the Italian parliament.—Chicago Tribune.

Vast Industries at the "Soo."

Vast industries are rapidly developing at Sault Ste. Marie. Millions have already been invested, and the projects already under way will, it is said, cost $20,000,000 to complete. These include blast furnaces, pulp mills, rolling mills, etc. But not the least of the great undertakings at this point is the construction of a railroad from the Soo to Hudson bay, a distance of 500 miles north. The road is already chartered and subsidized, and 150 miles will be completed next year.

TO REFORM MARRIAGE CUSTOMS

The Mexican government has just begun a task of tremendous proportions and of an exceedingly delicate nature, that of suppressing the practice of polygamy and of promoting marriages. In many parts of the Republic there is little or no observance of the laws relating to plural marriages and in some districts there is practically no such thing as the marital tie. For some time the authorities have been investigating domestic relations in the smaller pueblos and settlements and they have discovered a state of affairs that is appalling. The recent taking of the census in particular served to bring to light many instances where the natives in the mountainous regions lived more like animals than human beings. In some of the pueblos there has not been a marriage in years. In the mining camps of southern Chihuahua, not more than 200 miles from the city of Chihuahua, a hamlet was found where, in the twelve families composing the population, there had been no marriage from the oldest generation to the youngest. Neither had kinship been regarded and families had intermarried until the people showed marked signs of degeneration. This settlement, known as San Felix, is reputed to be the most lawless in the State of Chihuahua and nearly all the serious crimes in the region can be traced to this pueblo. The efforts of the Catholic priests toward correcting this condition of affairs in San Felix and in many other places have been unavailing. So isolated are many of the settlements that communication with the outer world is difficult and infrequent. President Diaz is personally interested in the reform movement and it is at his earnest request that the strictest measures are to be taken to check the evil practices. Not alone in Mexico do these evils exist. Across the line in the Mexican colonies in southern Arizona similar conditions are to be found and the authorities of this territory are just awakening to the fact. Territorial officials are making wholesale arrests and forced marriages. One of the largest colonies, where marriage is not generally practiced, is near the town of Tempe, only a few miles from Phoenix. Last week officers raided the villages and since then fifty marriages have taken place among the inhabitants of the village.

A SOLDIER'S INDIAN WARD.

Little Zintka Lanuni, the little Unc-Papas Sioux waif found by the side of a dead squaw after the battle of Wounded Knee in 1890, and adopted by General Colby, who led the troops against the Indians, is developing into a beautiful woman, says the Omaha World-Herald. Four days after the battle, in which 100 warriors and 120 women and children were killed, the little girl, then five months old, was found partly frozen and covered with snow in her mother's papoose frame. She was the only live thing on the battlefield. The Unc-Papas called her "Great Bird," the Sioux "Child of the Battlefield."

When we enter a home, among the first things to attract our attention are the pictures, and from them we can read the taste—or lack of it—of the lady of the house, for they give us the keynote to her character. If we find gaudy chromos, and cheap oil paintings made by "lightning artists," we know at once that refinement is lacking in that home. Pictures should be selected always with an eye to the surroundings in which they will be placed, says the Woman's Home Companion. If the house is very large and handsome, and money of no consideration, then, of course, oil paintings by the best artists are preferable. People of moderate incomes who wish tasteful homes should choose water colors, engravings or etchings if they can be afforded. Artists' signed proofs are most desirable, but no better than good copies, with the exception of the signature, which is supposed to add value.

FIRE IN EAST ST. LOUIS.

Two frame houses on Fifth avenue, just outside the city limits of East St. Louis, were completely destroyed by fire. They were owned and occupied by William Brewer and John Gray. The fire was started by the explosion of a lamp. Mrs. Brewer had gone out to the woodshed carrying a lamp. While returning she stumbled, dropping the lamp, which exploded, the flames igniting the shed and from there quickly communicating to the two houses. Both families were able to save nearly all their furniture. The loss to each house is about $1,000.

LATEST ILLINOIS NEWS.

Sherman Is Out of Danger.

The condition of Speaker Sherman is much improved, the alarming symptoms apparent having disappeared. It is the belief of the physicians that the speaker will recover rapidly and can complete all work left for him by the legislature in ample time to comply with the law. Mr. Sherman has no fever and neuralgic pains, which gave him so much trouble, have largely disappeared, and there are signs of general improvement. The speaker has been able to transact some business, and signed a number of bills that were passed by the legislature. Drs. McFatrach and Kridler said the speaker was gaining ground slowly. They think in a week or ten days he will be able to leave his bed. He is always sparing as regards his eating, and the physicians experience difficulty in giving him proper nourishment.

Items from Mattoon.

The new Board of Education, at its first meeting, held in Mattoon, elected 35 new teachers for the coming term. They retained Principal Wilkinson at a salary of $1,800 per year, and Prof. Will Marlowe, principal of the Mattoon high school, at a salary of $1,000. The Mattoon Heat, Light and Power company has increased the capital stock of the company to $100,000. The company has purchased additional machinery and will erect a new fire-proof brick building on the site of the old structure. The new building will be built around the present structure, which will then be removed, thus enabling the company to run their plant continually while repairs are being made.

An Apparent Failure of Justice.

There appears to have been a flagrant miscarriage of justice in Omaha in the acquittal of James Callahan, whom young Edward Cudahy identified as "the dark man" by whom and his associates the boy was kidnaped and held for ransom. Unfortunately the statutes of Nebraska make no provision for the crime of kidnaping, and the prisoner was arraigned on the charge of grand larceny in obtaining as a result of the abduction at least a portion of the $25,000 paid as ransom. Upon this charge the jury acquitted Callahan, claiming, it is said, that whatever evidence there might have been of abduction there was no direct evidence of grand larceny or that the prisoner participated in the fruits of the crime. Had the law permitted the direct charge of kidnaping the result might have been different, but evidently Judge Baker, who presided, was of the opinion that the outcome of the trial would have been the same, judging from the severe condemnation he visited upon the jurors in dismissing them. In almost so many words he said that the jury had refused to punish a man clearly guilty of an atrocious crime, and in his irritation he practically told Callahan that the latter was free to continue his profitable career as a stealer of the children of the wealthy.

It must be remembered, however, that the case was a peculiar one, in that an enormous reward was offered for the conviction of the person or persons who kidnaped the Cudahy boy, and the credibility of the evidence was doubtless seriously affected by the fact that the conviction of anybody meant the collection of such reward. This circumstance does not seem to have made the judge distrust the testimony presented, but it doubtless had a certain amount of weight even with him. The Omaha police recognized the existence of a feeling of this sort, but Chief Donohue also asserted that the jurymen took the outrageous ground that the victim of the blackmaling plot was an immensely wealthy man and consequently able to bear the loss imposed upon him by his paternal apprehensions.

If the facts are as intimated by Judge Baker and Chief Donohue, it is a serious situation, and the case deserves careful and searching investigation.

In the life of the late Henry George recently published by his son one of the most interesting and withal touching passages is the record of his early struggles with poverty in San Francisco. When things were at their worst, he made some good resolutions, among them this: "To endeavor to make an acquaintance and friend of every one with whom I am brought in contact." No better rule could be conceived, either from the standpoint of practical expediency or personal and moral improvement. What Henry George proposed to do was merely to develop the social instinct, which is to say, develop his manliness, since man is essentially social and cannot come to his own save in so far as he unfolds his nature as a social animal. After all, the true riches are the riches of friendship. The man who has the greatest number of friends—true friends, not cronies or sycophants—is the wealthiest man in the community, and he who has none is a social pauper on his way to potter's field, even though he may have his check honored for a million.

"Banker Morgan is no doubt very rich, but he can make himself feel a good deal richer if he will make a small investment with a press clipping bureau and learn what the papers are saying about his enterprises. He could doubtless borrow money on the fabulous stories told of his transactions if he needed it to complete any purchases he may have in view. There doesn't seem much left for him to buy on this side of the Atlantic, but he might be able to work the scheme in Europe, as it seems to be his purpose to gather in about everything desirable in sight over there.

The "divine Sarah" has sailed away from our hospitable shores with a whole bagful of good American dollars. Before she went she expressed the hope that it would not be her last visit. While it is possible that Sarah in her innermost heart regards us as barbarians, she doubtless recognizes the fact that nowhere in the world can she gather in more shekels than here on a short theatrical tour.

Agricultural experts who have visited Alaska think the farming prospects as good there as in Finland, where 34,000,000 bushels of cereals are raised annually and a population of 2,500,000 lives in comfort. Alaska's area of farming lands is estimated at 100,000 square miles. Only five states are as large as that.

The Sovereignty of the Seas.

The commercial world had its breath well nigh taken away by the magnitude of certain railway combinations recently made by J. Pierpont Morgan and his associates. Vastly more important and of more far-reaching consequence is Mr. Morgan's latest deal in London by which he and the men interested with him assume control of the largest of the British steamship lines, that of the Leylands. The purchase of this great line is evidently the opening wedge in the movement of American capital for the supremacy of the seas.

The Leyland line, which Mr. Morgan has just acquired, owns 54 steamers of 245,000 tons. The Wilson line, which belongs to the Leylands, has 87 steamers of 189,193 tons. The Atlantic Transport line, which is already in American hands and which, according to current reports, is to be consolidated with the Leyland system, has 23 steamers of 11,548 tons. It is further intimated that the American line of 26 steamers and 187,000 tons is to be part of the combination. That would make in all 190 vessels of 702,738 tons, or more than twice the entire present registered steam tonnage of the United States. It is stated, however, that the present English head of the Leyland line has stipulated that the Mediterranean, Portugal and Montreal feet of the line are to be sold to him, but this deduction will probably be balanced by the gigantic new building programme of the American combination.

At all events, the purchase of the Leyland line and the contemplated "community of interests" in ocean traffic will make the American company the greatest steamship owner in the world and will place the merchant marine flying the stars and stripes well up toward the head of the list of maritime powers.

The principal of one of the public schools of Chicago has just published a book in which is set forth the value of conversational powers as a commercial asset. He points out that large salaries are paid to men who have conversational gifts and that a young man will find few things of more value than the ability to express himself fluently and forcefully. Incidentally the professor sets forth the methods which he has adopted in teaching his pupils in the public schools to converse. There can be no question that the ability to express one's thoughts easily and convincingly is a valuable accomplishment. It is probable also that to an extent the ability to converse well may be acquired, but the able talkers, like the great poets, are born and not made. The "gift of the gab" is with some men a birthright. They begin when they are children to argue with and convince their fellows, and when they grow up they become successful lawyers, book agents or confidence operators. With no amount of special training can the average man ever hope to meet them in a conversational contest, whether the subject be the sale of a book or a gold brick or the winning of a lawsuit. If in the public schools the pupils are taught the fundamentals of the correct, not to say elegant, use of the English language, it is perhaps just as well to leave the niceties of conversation as a fine art or a "commercial asset" for subsequent acquirement.

Dr. J. H. Taylor of Philadelphia has recently started a crusade against the habit of kissing, which he declares to be one of the chief factors of the present day in the spread of contagious diseases. This contention is neither new nor startling, but it will be given increased emphasis by reason of the circumstances under which it is reaffirmed at this time. Dr. Taylor is one of the members of the Philadelphia board of health and is well known in professional circles throughout the north and east. Speaking with special reference to consumption, Dr. Taylor says that tuberculosis germs are frequently communicated from one person to another in kissing, and he advises people who wish to enjoy good health to proceed cautiously in using this sign of affectionate endearment. Dr. Taylor disclaims any desire whatever to subtract from the sum of man's happiness by making war on affection's favorite token, but he considers that the welfare of the race will be best subserved by exercising the habit with extreme caution and reserve.

The city of Washington has inaugurated a crusade against the wicked theatrical posters, which are hereafter to be censored. This is a rather surprising spasm of virtue. What we should have fancied Washington would do was rather to make the shows live up to the posters.

Unless certain men announce pretty soon that they are going duck shooting, lion hunting or something of that sort there will be reason to entertain fears of a very dull summer.

Some of Minister Wu's compatriots would be scandalized if they knew to what extent he is hobnobbing with "foreign devils" in this country.

The German kaiser is now opening his spring line of oratory.

Opening of the Bicycle Season.

The bicycle season has opened throughout the country, and it is pleasant to note that it has opened up strong. There promises to be more wheeling this year than in several years before. While the bicycle as a fad is happily a thing of the past, wheeling is more than ever in vogue. It has, however, struck its pace and found its level, that level being neither so high or so low as had been predicted. It was the craze for a couple of three years, and its more enthusiastic devotees thought that nothing was too good for it or themselves. They chestily assumed proprietorship of the major portion of the earth. They broke into politics in many cities and towns and noisily interrogated candidates. They demanded the construction of cindered paths and asphalted streets and macadamized highways for their special benefit, though it must be admitted that their insistence, selfish though it was, has been a most important and beneficent factor in the making and maintaining of better roads. In those days, when the craze was at its height, a large proportion of wheelmen essayed to be "scorchers" and went tearing at breakneck speed through city streets and over country roads, quite regardless of the rights of those insignificant persons who, either from choice or necessity, elected to walk quietly around on the face of the earth. In gregarious masses the uniformed and ununiformed clubs rode whooping through the Sabbath quiet of suburban and country villages and took noisy possession of wayside inns and peaceful retreats. Those were the strenuous days of the "bicycle face."

It is gratifying to note that the "bicycle face" has disappeared and with it the days of which it was characteristic. Nowadays wheelmen are wheelmen because they like the sport and because they want to see the country rather than because it is the fad. Instead of doubling themselves up over the handle bars and working the pedals with might and main in an effort made almost solely in the direction of registering miles on the cyclometer, as was the case with many wheelmen in the days of the craze, they now sit up straighter on their machines and take a more leisurely pace, thus infusing into their lungs more invigorating country air and seeing more of the beauties of the country landscape, while by more normal processes and without exhaustion they pump good red blood into their veins.

The bicycle has found its legitimate place, and the bicyclist has found that the legitimate way to use it is not essentially for century runs and record breaking speed performances, but as an easy and economical vehicle of transportation and the means of healthful and invigorating recreation and exercise, while affording the opportunity to visit numberless sightly, attractive and historic neighborhoods, which many persons must see a wheel if at all. In all these respects the bicycle will continue to hold its place, and neither the saddle nor driving horse nor the automobile can supplant it.

Minister Wu Ting Fang has lately been talking to southern manufacturers at Charlotte, N. C., of the importance of building up our cotton trade with the ancient empire which he represents at Washington. "There is no reason," he declares—and his words apply to New England cotton men as well as their rivals in the south—"why American cotton goods cannot find as ready a market in the provinces of central and southern China as they have already found in the north. Present importations are not nearly sufficient to meet the requirements of the people." Incidentally Minister Wu spoke in behalf of peace in China. He noted that in the midst of warlike operations trade and commerce cannot continue to flourish. The Chinese minister is not only an astute and ingenious diplomatist, but he seems to have a pretty comprehensive grasp of the practical affairs of business and talks good common sense.

Rev. Dr. Rainsford of New York is reported as saying, "There is some moral tone in every business and every profession I know anything about except the profession of journalism." This comes very naturally from the clergyman who uses in a public address the phrase "damned rot" in referring to the missionary troubles in China. Dr. Rainsford's pulpit must be fairly reeking with "moral tone" of a peculiarly interesting variety.

The Missouri river is constantly changing its course and is taking away hundreds of acres from Kansas and giving them to Missouri. The Kansans may presently invade the latter state and demand an indemnity.

There are many poetic associations clustering about Craig-y-Nos, Mme. Patti's magnificent Welsh villa, which is soon to be sold at auction. It is safe to conclude, however, that the man who buys it will not be a poet.

Count Tolstol still continues to be a bigger man in point of influence than the czar in certain not unimportant circles in Russia.

The shirt waist man now begins to practice the golf limp for the summer.

Nassau's Lake of Fire.
 "I doubt if many persons realize the fascination to be derived from a winter spent in the Bahamas," said a visitor just returned from there the other day. "Down near Nassau, for example, there is a curious sheet of water known as the Lake of Fire that is worth going far to see. It is simply a phosphorescent lake, but its weird effects cling to one's recollection in an uncanny way. It is about three miles from the hotel. You drive through quaint and narrow streets, with only here and there a lamppost shedding a dim light, and past the open doors of huts whose occupants seem to fill every space in the abodes to overflowing.
 "The gates of the old estate of Waterloo have long since disappeared, and the house is in ruins, but you drive between the posts which still mark the entrance down a grass grown roadway to the edge of this wonderful pond. The water is only a few feet deep, and the pond is scarcely a quarter of a mile long. We stepped into a rowboat with the dim light of a lantern, and in a moment, as the boat pushed off and the oars broke the water into ripples, we were surrounded by a sea of flame. The divers who swam about seemed literally merged in blue smoke, for the effect of this phosphorescence is more like smoke than water. It reminds one of the butterfly dance seen on the stage. The form of the diver is surrounded by a luminous glow, and the fishes take fright and dart away like little flames into the dark and quiet waters. It is a beautiful sight."—New York Sun.

An Early Georgia Monster.
 In the fore part of August, 1812, a party of hunters found in a mountainous region now known as Rabun county, Ga., a being nearly eight feet high covered with bluish hair and having a human face adorned with immense ears resembling those of an ass. The creature was stone deaf and on that account seemed wholly unconscious of the approach of the men. This monster seems, from old accounts, to have been seen upon several occasions during the next four years.
 In 1816 a number of adventurers from Virginia, most of them surveyors working up the unexplored portions of Georgia and the Carolinas, formed themselves into a party for the express purpose of capturing the uncanny being if possible. They scoured the hills and valleys for several days and at last returned unsuccessful to the starting point.
 The many tales told of this extraordinary being seem to have created quite a stir all along the Atlantic coast. A printed circular issued by a land company in 1815 says, "The climate of Georgia is exceedingly mild, the soil productive, and the danger of attack from uncouth beasts which are represented as being half beast and half man are fairy tales not worthy of consideration."

Barrymore and Modjeska.
 Maurice Barrymore earned a reputation as a wit and really deserved it. His style could be less successfully transferred to the stage, as his efforts at comic writing showed, but in its spontaneous phases its effect always told. One of the stories told was about his experiences with Mme. Modjeska, with whom he acted for several years. He had been as careless as he often was on the stage, and Mme. Modjeska, with all the conscientiousness of a great artist, protested that he had no right to take his calling so lightly and that if he did not owe it to his reputation to do his best he at least owed it to her, because she had done so much in his behalf and had put him before the public in a dignified and serious line of parts.
 "Why, madam," he said, "it is not you who brought me before the public and made me known. People had heard of me all over the United States when they thought that Modjeska was only the name of a tooth wash."

A Crushed Lawyer.
 Some time ago a well known San Francisco attorney, who prides himself upon his handling of Chinese witnesses, was defending a railway damage case. Instead of following the usual questions as to name, residence, if the nature of an oath were understood, etc., he began: "What is your name?" "Kee Lung." "You live in San Francisco?" "Yes." "You sabbie God?" "Mr. Attorney, if you mean 'Do I understand the entity of our Creator?' I will simply say that Thursday evening next I shall address the State Ministerial association on the subject of the 'Divinity of Christ' and shall be pleased to have you attend."
 Needless to say, a general roar of laughter swept over the courtroom at this clever rally, and it was some minutes, much to the discomfiture of the lawyer for the defense, before order was restored and the examination proceeded upon ordinary lines.—Argonaut.

Dosing an Elephant.
 A difficult operation was performed the other day at the zoological gardens at Hanover. An elephant was suffering great pain from a growth on the lower part of one of its hind feet, and it was deemed necessary to cut this malformation away. In order to render the animal insensible a dose of 600 grains of morphia in six bottles of rum was administered. This dose took about an hour before any visible effect was produced. The elephant then fell over in a kind of sleep, and the operation was successfully carried out without any further ado. The operation lasted in all three days.—London Globe.

Why Buchanan Never Married.
 "Mr. Buchanan, who was the first bachelor elected to the presidency, was 65 years of age when elected and had deliberately given himself to a life of celibacy," writes William Perrine in 'The Ladies' Home-Journal.'
 "In the days when he was a young lawyer of Lancaster, Pa., he had loved Miss Coleman, a beautiful daughter of a citizen of that town. They had been engaged to be married, when one day he was surprised to receive from her a request to release her from the promise. According to Mr. George Ticknor Curtis, the separation originated in a misunderstanding on the part of the lady, who was unusually sensitive, over some small matter exaggerated by giddy and indiscreet tongues. Soon after the estrangement she was sent to Philadelphia and there died suddenly.
 "Throughout the rest of his life, or for nearly half a century, Mr. Buchanan is not known to have revealed to anybody the circumstances of this romantic tragedy. He would only say that it had changed his hopes and plans and had led him more deeply than ever into politics as a distraction from his grief. In his old age, long after he had retired permanently to private life, he called attention to a package containing, he said, the papers and relics which would explain the causes of his youthful sorrow and which he preserved evidently with the idea of revealing them before his death. But when he died and his will was read it was found that he had directed that the package should be burned without being opened, and his injunction was obeyed."

Irish Laccemaking.
 After the famine of 1847 laccemaking was revived in Ireland. Limerick, the most successful Irish lace, is not really a lace at all. It is tambour work upon net and muslin.
 The Irish point, so called, is the ancient cut work, being made in quite the same way.
 Net was first made by machinery in 1768. The machine was an adaptation of the stocking loom to laccemaking and was cumbersome and not very effective. In 1809 John Heathcote, a farmer's son, evolved from consciousness and experience the first machine to make true bobbinet with perfect six sided holes. If brought a great hue and cry about his ears from laceworkers, who fancied they saw themselves thus reduced to beggary.
 The Luddites broke into the factory where the machines were first set up and made scrap iron and kindling wood of them. The only result was to drive the new manufacture to other and safer quarters. For long the secret of the machine's construction was most jealously guarded by English manufacturers. Not satisfied with letters patent they kept up a coast patrol to make sure that nobody took model or drawings to France.
 At last, though, they were outwitted. A discharged workman who had the plan of it in his mind managed to get safe over sea and build a machine in France.
 An old farmer for many years got his dinner on market days at a small hotel kept by a widow.
 She had long suspected that he ate more than the price (1s. 6d.) warranted, so she determined to test him. She accordingly arranged matters so that there was no room for him at table, but she took him into a private room the table of which was graced by a steaming leg of mutton. He set to in good earnest, and soon nothing was left but the bones.
 Highly delighted with his cheap feed, on passing the bar he tendered 2 shillings for his dinner and a quart of ale.
 The widow declined to take any payment on the ground of having inconvenienced him so much.
 Chuckling to himself, the farmer lifted down his market basket from a hook, and finding it rather light, he tore off the covering and shouted:
 "Here, Mrs. Brown, where's my leg of mutton?"
 "Why, ye old silly," said the widow, "ye have ate your leg for your dinner!"
 —London Answers.

Conversion Through Pork.
 An old Cambridge friend of mine who had a good deal of the wisdom of the serpent in him had a farmer in his parish in Norfolk whom he could not get to church. Whenever he pressed upon him his neglect or his bad example he was always met with the same excuse, "You be too young and do not know enough to teach such as I." At last he gave up the farmer in despair. But one day he happened to pass by the farm while his parishioner was engaged in killing a fine pig. My friend said: "What a pig! Why, he weighs 84 stone!" "What dost thou know of pigs?" replied the farmer. "I only wish he weighed as much." When they next met, the farmer, to his surprise, told my friend that the pig had been found to weigh just 84 stone. He added, much to my friend's gratification, "And thou wilt see me at church next Sunday, parson."—Manchester Guardian.

What Are We Coming To?
 The fond mother had just killed 10 of her 12 children.
 She was a happy wife, and her husband came home early every night.
 "Now," she said, with a contented sigh, "John can close with the agent for that house."
 This was 20 years from now, when no landlord would accept a tenant with more than two children.—New York Sun.

The Best Blood Purifier.
 The blood is constantly being purified by the lungs, liver and kidneys. Keep these organs in a healthy condition and the bowels regular and you will have no need of a blood purifier. For this purpose there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, one dose of them will do you more good than a dollar bottle of the best blood purifier. Price, 25 cents. Samples free at Chas. E. Churchill's drug store.

Maddened by Solitude.
 The Canadian northwest is a probationary haven for wealthy young Englishmen of nomadic instincts. Numbers of them annually purchase hunting and camping outfits from the Hudson Bay company and strike into the barren lands to prospect for minerals or take up land on the prairies. But most often they return to the civilization of the towns with nothing but hard words for the wilderness.
 The construction of the Temiscaming railroad induced the younger son of one wealthy English family to take a trip into that outlandish district. He returned to Ottawa a disappointed man. "It's the most desolate country you can imagine," he said to his friends. "I have been out prospecting sometimes for a whole day without seeing a sign of animal life. Once the only living thing I came across was a bird, and it was so disgusted that it was trying to knock its brains out against a tree."
 He had seen a woodpecker.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Old Gooseberry For New Ships.
 It may be ungenerous to dispel a popular delusion, but there is no one among the thousands who witness a ship launch who does not believe that the beautifully garlanded bottle of wine broken against the stem of a ship is anything but the choicest brand of champagne drawn from the admiral's cellar. Whenever a ship is launched in a dockyard, the admiralty generously allow $40 as the cost of the jubilation, and included in this sum of $40 is the item of 3 shillings for wine. Hence it follows that not only is the wine not drawn from the admiral's cellar, but it certainly is not champagne of foreign vintage.—English Navy and Military Record.

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It relieves the condition which produces so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its terror.

The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:
Aug. 6, 1898.
 "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."—Mrs. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 19, 1899.
 "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble."
 "I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well."
 "I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."—Mrs. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.
 "I saw your medicine so highly recommended, I thought I would write you for advice.
 "My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from sick headache and backache all the time, especially if there is anything about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills, as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation."

tite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.
 "I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."—Miss MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

April 23, 1900.
 "Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."—Miss MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhoea. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."—EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianapolis, Ill.

PRISONERS FOR 25 YEARS.

Before They Can Be Released the Board of Pardons Must Pass Upon the Recommendation of the Prison Board—One Died in Prison.

The Minnesota board of prison managers has unanimously recommended the parole of Coleman and James Younger, the celebrated bandits, who have been in prison here twenty-five years. Before they can be released, however, the board of pardons must pass upon the recommendation of the prison board. The report will be submitted to the pardon board immediately, but it is not known whether it will convene in special session. The first regular meeting comes in July and the Youngers may have to remain in prison until that time. Before the parole becomes effective it must be approved in writing by all of the members of the board of pardons, Governor Van Sant, Attorney-General Douglass and Chief Justice Start.

Cole, James and Bob Younger were imprisoned for their raid on the Bank of Northfield in September, 1876. The James brothers, Jesse and Frank, escaped to Missouri. Two members of the gang were killed and Bob Younger died in prison. For six years attempts have been made during every session of the legislature to secure the enactment of a law permitting the parole of life prisoners. At one session the bill was introduced, but was allowed to die. Two years ago it was passed by the senate. This winter it passed both houses and went to the governor. Before it was signed it was recalled, reconsidered and killed. The following day it was reconsidered, passed and became a law. The bill was passed with special reference to the Younger brothers, as there is but one other "lifer" who comes within the requirements of a twenty-five year imprisonment before action can be taken.

One Has Died in Prison.
 There were six Younger brothers, one of whom died in childhood. They were the sons of Colonel Henry W. Younger, a wealthy southerner, who moved to Cass county, Missouri, in 1830. When the war broke out the Younger property was raided first by one side and then the other. The boys, in revenge for the injuries inflicted upon their father, became guerrillas and created so many political enemies that pardon was denied them at the close of the war. They then joined with the James brothers and began a long series of bank and train robberies. The most famous detectives were sent to hunt them, and were in turn hunted themselves. In one of these fights John Younger was killed, but after he had fallen from his saddle he rallied and killed the detective who had shot him. At the time of the Northfield robbery the Youngers might have escaped had they not stopped to assist a wounded companion. The James boys wanted to kill the wounded man, but the Youngers would not listen to the proposition. The James boys then pushed on and escaped, while the Youngers, in trying to get the wounded man away, were surrounded and captured. Their prison record is excellent.

He announces the first dividend of 25 per cent in favor of the creditors of the First National Bank of Niles, Mich., amounting to $358,144.12; the second dividend of 25 per cent in favor of the creditors of the First National Bank of White Pigeon, Mich., making in all 75 per cent of claims proved amounting to $44,730.83, and a final dividend of 3-4-10 per cent in favor of the creditors of the Citizens' National Bank of Hillsboro, O., making 68 4-10 per cent on claims proved amounting to $358,055.06.

To Purify Kansas Politics.
 Mrs. Nation's crusade against the saloon has resulted in a movement to purify Kansas politics that promises to be more far-reaching than anything of the kind ever before attempted in the Sunflower State. A permanent organization of the Grand Chapter of the Law Enforcement League of Kansas has been effected at Topeka, whose object is to purify the politics of the state and to promote its interests.

Prussian Cabinet Is Formed.
 The new ministry at Berlin is gazetted as follows: Baron Rheinbaben, minister of finance; General Podbielski, minister of agriculture; Baron von Hammerstein, district president of Metz, takes the portfolio of the interior; Herr Moller, minister of commerce; Herr Kraetke, director of the imperial postoffice, becomes secretary of state of that department.

Editor Ordered from Court.
 The managing editor and staff correspondent of a Cleveland newspaper were ordered removed from court at the opening in Upper Sandusky, O., of the trial of the Johnson murder case. Judge Young's action was provoked by the publication of testimony presented in court. Judge Smalley, counsel for defense, asked the court to revoke its order restraining the publication of testimony, but Judge Young curtly replied that the order would stand, and ordered the trial to proceed.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Thanks Peruna For His Rapid Recovery From Catarrh.

EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.

Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than the directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their sickness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.
 Hon. J. F. Crooker of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16, writes:

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh, as my case is complete."

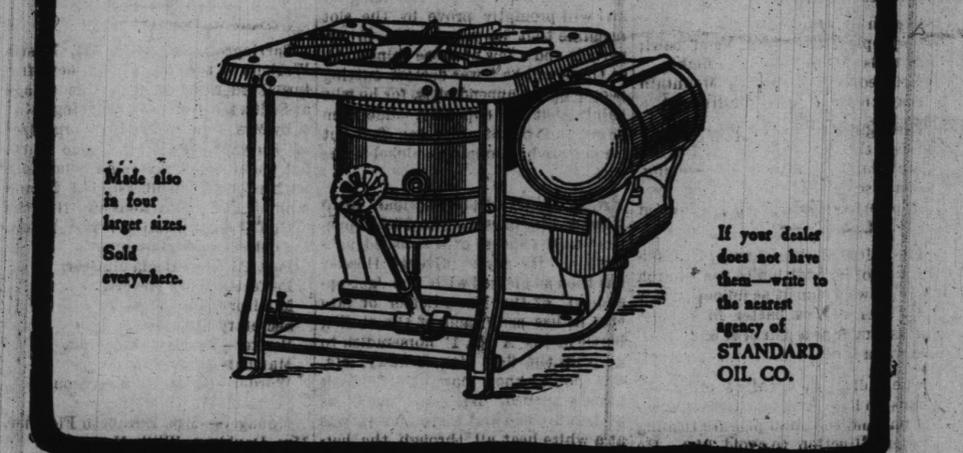

Hon. B. B. Dvornik, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:
 "I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."
 Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane, thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
 Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

DOUGLAS FACTORY

To Be Enlarged Before the First of July. Will Make 6,000 Pairs Daily.
 Advertising pays.
 W. L. Douglas is going to increase the capacity of his factory to 6,000 pairs of shoes per day. The addition will add 16,000 square feet of space for manufacturing purposes. At the same time a new 400-horse-power engine and an additional 150-horse-power boiler will be installed, which will afford adequate power for the present and which will no doubt be necessary later on.

When the factory starts up the first of July it will be an output of 500 dozen or 6,000 pairs of shoes per day, and the weekly pay roll, exclusive of office help, superintendent, foremen, etc., will be $22,000 per week. The Douglas salesman on the road are selling 25 per cent more goods than last season. The increased sales is the direct result of good shoe-making and extensive advertising. The advertising expenditure of Mr. Douglas is now larger than at any period of his business, and this is to be still further increased. Beginning this week half-page advertisements of the Douglas shoe will appear in all the principal newspapers of the large cities, as well as such papers as the Youth's Companion.—Brockton, Mass. The latest development of the slot machine is one by which the man who drops in the requisite coin may get an X-ray picture of any part of his body. When the rejected suitor declares that his heart is broken the haughty girl will promptly prove by the slot machine that he is indulging in hyperbole and a few of those things. Also there will be fewer doctors cutting people up for appendicitis, for he who thinks that his appendix, addendum or errata is out of order can find out for certain by dropping a nickel in the slot.

A. E. Dorsey of the Sheridan Road News-Letter has sharpened his appetite at the expense of a satisfied subscriber. He says: "George Hessler has been so pleased with the 'get-up-and-get' of the News-Letter of late that he has sent each of the staff a bottle of his 'A No. 1' horseshadish to keep up the fire, vim, honesty, etc. We don't know how the other's bottles opened, but ours made us scream fire the first taste and it was at a white heat all through the bottle." That's a new invigorator for "fire, vim, honesty, etc."

The new reform administration of Waukegan, Sunday gave the city its first dry Lord's day in several years. Mayor Finer had warned saloon keepers that hereafter the laws must be strictly observed, and they closed their places tight; shades being thrown back so their vacant interiors could be seen. Bowling alleys, billiard and pool rooms were likewise locked up. The police found it unnecessary to notify the keepers, as they knew well what would result did they disobey. Waukegan used to be quite a resort for Sunday excursionists from Chicago, Milwaukee, Kenosha and the smaller towns along the lake shore, and restaurants, hotels, saloons, etc., reaped a harvest. Now all that is a thing of the past. The capitol of Lake county will be as quiet on Sunday as a country cemetery.

Here is a blunder of more than ordinary interest. Governor Yates was educated for the bar and has occupied a seat on the bench and it would seem ought to be familiar with the constitution of this state, and especially the section which reads: "No person elected to the general assembly shall receive any civil appointment within this state from the governor." The legislature made an appropriation of $250,000 in aid of the St. Louis fair and provided for the appointment of a board of state commissioners to superintend the disbursement of the money and attend to the Illinois display at the fair. The governor appointed five members of the legislature on the board. The appointments are unconstitutional and invalid. Even governors make mistakes.

Long Needed Improvement.

It is a pleasure to note that the village board of trustees have acted on the suggestion of this paper and will endeavor to, in a measure, beautify that piece of ground, termed by some, public square. From a general dumping ground for ashes, waste paper, etc., the committee who have the matter in charge propose to transform it into at least a pleasing spot to look upon. A fountain of neat design will be placed where the pump now stands, the ground graded, the wooden catch basin removed and an iron one put in, and we hope a portion of the plot seeded down. To the casual observer and railway sight-seeer the most conspicuous corner in the village does not present a pleasing view—quite the opposite and in striking contrast to the handsome lawns and shaded door yards so numerous in the village. But that little spot can be made an ornament instead of an eyesore if the committee will use the same amount of good judgment in transforming it as they have used on their residence property. Let it no longer be said that the main corner in Barrington is the most desolate looking waste to be seen in any village between Harvard and Chicago. This proposed improvement is one for which every resident of Barrington will thank the committee who will carry it forward.

Chance to Invest.

There is an urgent need of dwelling houses at Chicago Highlands. The manager of the association says "that not less than 100 and probably 200 will be required for the force of workmen, and their families, who will be employed in the factories now building and those it is proposed to build. Our architect has prepared plans for neat and pretty four and six room cottages which can be built at a moderate cost and rented at a rate that will net at least eight per cent on the investment." If there is idle capital in Barrington or surrounding country awaiting investment an opportunity is here offered. Liberal arrangements can be made for the purchase of lots near the factory site.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a remarkable record. It has been in use for nearly thirty years, during which time many million bottles have been sold and used. It has long been the standard and main reliance in the treatment of croup in thousands of homes, yet during all this time no case has ever been reported to the manufacturers in which it failed to effect a cure. When given as soon as the child becomes hoarse or even as soon as the croupy cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It is pleasant to take, many children like it. It contains no opium or other harmful substance, and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Chas. E. Churchill.
